can close the case to the viewpoint of the court of first instance.
In his remarks, however, he did not fail to emphasize, that he deeply regretted the legal situation and the wish Muspressure was exerted to change the laws in favor of the Jews should be abandoned'), One understands this attitude from Lord Campbell all the more so if one speaks from his own experience Munde in the House of Lords hears that he is proud of Solomon's to be able to call him his friend.

In 1854, Salomon submitted a Writ of Error – a Art Revision – at the House of Lords as the final judicial instance
One. However, it should not be brought to trial immediately.
come. Neither in 1855 nor in 1856 was there a De-Divorce. On July 21, 1857, Lord Campbell asked in the House of

5) Times from January 7th and 20th. Morning Herald from January 27th and 29th, 1852.
e) Henriques: p. 276. ;

77

Lords, whether and if so, when the revision should be negotiated. A decision is more than urgent necessary, since the public remained engaged until very recently with the anti-Semitic attitude of the majority of the Lords=
He would have understood and explained it. Now, however, a change has taken place.
to provide, especially in the former anti-Semitic conservative Circles. This remark by the friend of the Jews is very interesting.
Therefore, in his opinion, the people until at least July 1857
He had been against the Jews. Lord Campbell demanded in his Further details will be provided as soon as possible. The case will be resolved.
Miller against Solomon. The Lord Chancellor answered him there-that it would be at the discretion of the parties whether negotiations would take place Should or shouldn't. The parties have agreed so far.

A motion for postponement was unanimously approved – as was recently the case from The meeting, originally scheduled for June 15th, has been postponed to August 15th.

We will remember that the sensational verdict
The decision was first announced by the court on April 19, 1852. Thus, until this judgment is overturned, the entire existence of Solomon questioned, as this would give him an even worse legal position received what is now considered a legally incapacitated adult. It was therefore said,
To take rescue measures for him.

Already on May 4th, just two weeks later, Lord Lyndhurst introduced a draft law. The law followed from this.
after which Solomon's conviction was overturned and a new ver= be dismissed. In this case, only a fine should be imposed for Such violations are threatened, but not the other significant disadvantages for a convicted person.

Lord Lyndhurst's proposal was very warmly received by Lord Campbell supports this, as the punishment under the old law is "a disgrace".
of the age in which we lived, and remnants of barbaric Prejudices of earlier times are."

At that time, there was a conservative government for a short period of time.
under the leadership of Lord Derby. It is quite a
It is an irony of fate that the latter, who until then had always opposed who had spoken out against the Jews, as leader of a conservative
The government supported this request. His [statement/action] also changed that.
There was no objection that he still needed to consult with the other colleagues.
The cabinet must maintain its structure. After Lord Campbell had also requested that the law be made retroactive to January 1, 1851
To be considered valid, the draft law was presented in its first reading.
taken. The two already took place on May 7th and 17th.
necessary readings in the House of Lords.

The first two readings in the House of Commons were without debate.
Assumed. The third reading was attempted so late in the
to do at night so that no one would have any interest in it anymore= would bring. However, one member of parliament protested against it. such a procedure. Mr. Newdegate joined him and gave his Intention expressed to vote against the motion. "Mr. Salomon's have," he explains, "the risk of committing a crime, with open eyes and in full knowledge of the consequences."

78

"taken." Finally, it was decided, because of the advanced
The meeting is to be postponed until June 21st.

At the start of this session, Mr. Newdegate rose once again.

and vehemently opposed the new law. "According to his
In view, it is clear that Mr. Miller's lawsuit against Salomon's It's a rigged game. Besides, everyone here is welcome to...
"Vote in the house night after night without punishment." At the end He requests that the processing of the law be postponed by three months.
to postpone. This was practically equivalent to a motion to dismiss.
Mr. Roundell Palmer, another MP, then recalled
Mr. Newdegate pointed out that the draft law was indeed from a
It was introduced by conservative MPs. Newdegate understood.
this appeal to one's duty as a conservative member of parliament and and his associated sense of solidarity towards his party. He therefore accepted the motion, visibly very reluctantly.
back. The law was then passed without Difficulties.

(Since the law had expressly entered into force retroactively),
The verdict against Solomon was only valid with the proviso that that the monetary penalty alone was applied. We see what
What was possible in the days of Sampson Gideon was all the more true.
A hundred years later. Better proof of the subservience to Jews=
It can hardly be the case that the leading English circles at the time give.

7) Statutes of the United Kingdom, Vol. 92, p. 107.

79

New battle in parliament

The legislatures were therefore opposed to emancipation.
Bodies and even the completely impartial judiciary
The situation was described. Public opinion remained opposed to the Jews.
It is truly astonishing that despite everything the Jewish Be= renewed their efforts, with the help of their powerful patrons to reach the goal. New attacks should follow soon. In=
In between, the cabinet of Lord Derby was that of that Lord Aberdeen was replaced. Lord John Nuffel was in Auker-minister and as such he submitted a request in February 1853 in parliament. Following this, a committee should be formed.
with the task of addressing and clarifying the question of to comply with Jewish restrictions.

After the debate, the vote took place, which narrowly passed.
The decision was in favor of the applicant by a vote of 234 to 205.

The drafting of the law was then entrusted to a commission. transferred. The first one took place as early as March 1, 1853, and on

The second reading took place on May 11, 1853. Again, during the the latter led to interesting, but also heated, arguments. between the two opposing directions. The Jews= Opponents were initially met by the Member of Parliament Sir Frederick Thesiger and Mr. B. Osborne were represented. The former also pointed out= pointed out that the Jews, as a special nation, were not granted any Seats in parliament could be granted. The latter believed not being able to conceal the fact that the Jews were already under Cromwell had made inappropriate demands. The MP Mr. Drummond warned that "the Jews were already preparing for the Times rejoiced when they attacked those of other faiths= They could trample as if on the ashes beneath their feet. They didn't care much about principles, but they cared all the more about... Interest." |

"Although they are all bound together for better or for worse but their center, around which everything revolves, is the Stock exchange, and the talisman that controlled it, not 'the credo', fundern 'the credit'. The word credo would no longer exist. Never= Mand said more "credo," meaning "I believe in something," but only... nor the word "credit," meaning he believed someone else. The draft legislation now to be presented is based on this attitude.

born!). The rabble of London elected a Jew.

This happened for various reasons, partly due to the slope. the pure causation of damage, partly due to disregard of the opposite the House of Commons, and finally, because they wished to to deliver a slap in the face to Christianity."

1) The subtlety of the enaltide BER cannot be fully captured in the translation: aute be given. He t: rue we were still bound together. But our centre was the stock-exchange and the talisman, which governed us, was not 'credo', but 'credit'. It is not credo, – no one says I believe in anything, – but credit: he believes someone else

80

The MP Herbert, speaking in favor of the motion, criticizes the anti-Semites for their evidence against the Jews are a separate nation with bad characteristics= permitted.

"Therefore," he argues, "if one continually speaks of an innate nationality of the Jews and their race, then But surely one couldn't allow a baptized Jew. His Race, origin, and blood are the same. Based on this. On what principle would one then allow a baptized Jew to do so? to have been a member of parliament for several years. Unfortunately, it has not been possible to deny that the Jews are a separate nation within the state, But the English themselves are to blame for that, since they always "They were treated badly."

These latter statements are very interesting, since they refer to... This actually contradicts our current views. The line of reasoning used by the anti-Semites is recognizable.

The debate dragged on for two days and two nights. During the ab-

The mood remained positive in the second reading, with the friends of the Jews remaining a majority of 41 votes. The government took over, as before, for the third reading, refuge in a typical parliamentary maneuver, quick and smooth to pass a law. Just before Easter, she suddenly... removed the discussion of a law from the agenda and brought Surprisingly, the anti-Jewish law was brought before parliament. The majority of members of parliament, and probably especially the The anti-Semite had already gone on Easter vacation. But the The few members of parliament in the house objected rather strongly. Courageously opposed to such a tactic by the government. Especially the The energetic protest by MP Vansittard prompted the Government, from the third reading on this day, distance to take.

The third reading took place on April 15, 1853. Contrary to the usual parliamentary proceedings, lengthy discussions ensued once again and heated arguments ensued. Representative Bruce expressed that negation is never such a thing who would have dared to take a position on this issue, if the Duke of Wellington had still been alive.

Later in the debate, a presentation with consideration The current events in Palestine are very interesting. It was about... about Representative Kirk, who was in favor of the anti-Jewish law took the following position:

"One should not disregard the words of God in the choice of Abraham as Forgotten the ancestors of the Jews: "I will bless those who bless you, and curse those who curse you... He knew that the Jews returned to their homeland with the help of England= hoped to come. He supported these efforts. One should try everything to bring them back to the Holy Land so that the Englishmen are the best friends of the Jews. For friendship with such a resurrected people would be for the

 It would be of the greatest advantage to the English nation. The Jews should be... not merely the possession of Palestine from the time of David and Solomon's, but the whole land that they have once promised, namely the territory in its entirety Extent between the Euphrates and Nile and from the Mediterranean Sea to the Indian Ocean. That land which came into the possession of the
 If Jews were to gain access, it would become the richest and most desirable. It would create part of the sea route from Great Britain to its colonies and Australia. The Jews, however, would in possession of this country undoubtedly one of the most important Nations of the earth will be. Therefore, one must consider the Jews for England commit, and first and foremost the law= accept the template...

It is at least noteworthy that already in the year
 In 1853, an English deputy advocated for the return of Palestine and He spoke of allocating larger areas of land to the Jews.

At the end of the debate, Sir Robert Peel increased his stance once again.
 The position on all these events is as follows:

"There are two kinds of countries in Europe, one where the Jews Restrictions are imposed, and one where they are completely Enjoy equal rights. He should be allowed to first... to deal with one, then the other. It should be just the news about a decree issued by the Tsar of Russia
 A law was passed granting representation to the Jews there. Christian businesses and trading houses were forbidden. His
 In my opinion, the behavior of Tsar Nicholas would not have been too to criticize. But assuming it were indeed the case: what if one wanted to Take a moment to look around your own country. Here we see the world's most extensive trading community, which includes a part their political rights to a wealthy citizen of the Jewish entrusted to race – a kind of Goliath. He knew, of course, that the City of London, constitutionally speaking, could elect, whomever she wanted. Perhaps one should remember that The constituency of Sudbury during the reigns of George II and George III. It was publicly offered for sale to the highest bidder. Nevertheless, it would never be possible to convince him that Trade, commerce and influence of the City of London more reasonable= knowledge that could be entrusted to this Mr. de Rothschild. He I highly doubt whether it would be possible to achieve the English to convince the people that the powers of the representative of The City of London, which had long been the bulwark of freedom is, an Austrian Consul General, the wealthy Ver-

the footsteps of a wealthy family, which were to be transferred,
Certainly more than any other family in the world for that.
What he would have done was to gag and stifle freedom. He was one

82

those who hold the view that the City of London is represented by a great political character
He should. He didn't believe the City was a wiser choice than the could have been met by the noble lord sitting opposite him
However, he did not hesitate to claim that Rothschild's election as a representative of the economic influence of the City of London
In his opinion, the biggest stain on character and Honor of the city fet. (Shouts: Oho!) He said, in his opinion
'After' and repeat it. (Laughter.) Yes, in his opinion.
Afterwards, it was a great disgrace to the character and the Integrity of trade and commerce in the city of London, to have made such a choice."

"And now he wanted to turn to the other case he had mentioned."
to turn to where Jews were granted full equality had been. In the state of the Prince of Meiningen, one would have The Jews were granted complete equality. And what about the
What was the consequence of that? This princely ruler was over-He was inundated with petitions from his subjects, who begged him to... swore to oppose what its representatives had approved would have. He didn't know if the house was interested in hearing, what happened next; but what – he asked – would become of the request sought from our country? He would have determined that requests with 35,000 signatures against the law after its second reading Such requests, he claimed,
They would have the greatest claim to consideration. How many such Were there any requests from the other side? Indeed, only...
Very few. But considering the mainpoints of the case.
Did he ever want to submit one petition in favor of the Jews and one for their Remove the disadvantage, namely the corporation's request.
the City of London for that, and that of the University of Oxford.
On the other hand, the first one is from the "Times," the recognized organ.
public opinion, as 'of the scandal and the plague of the Metropole', the latter, on the other hand, as 'of the most learned and up-to-date' clarified community of the empire coming designated wor-the..." Despite all the efforts of the opponents of the Jews, the
The law was adopted by a majority of 288 to 230 votes.

The law passed by parliament went through as usual.
to the House of Lords. This time, the friends of the Jews were able to They expect to find a majority there as well. The one that The Minister-President in office at that time was the Count of Aberdeen. In earlier years he had been a member of the Oberhouse voted against the respective anti-Jewish laws. Since he now Even when the law was brought before the House of Lords, it was hoped that his personal followers there follow his example and would have been sufficient.

to finally pass the law. The upper house voted After lengthy negotiations, the vote was again 164 to 115.
against the law.

6* 83

It is also interesting here to learn about the stance of the press in both countries.
The "Times" has a barely comprehensible View on the true reasons of the anti-Semites'). After that, namely "the true and only reason for the opposition on "attributable to religious reasons." Apparently, the "Times"
I haven't heard anything about the speeches of those around Newdegate. Because these Their position was by no means solely based on religious reasons.
The take, as we have heard. Only once does the "Times" with the opposing side's claim that the Jews are international. She believes that the English actually export more-wander like the Jews and let no one claim that the English are international'). You can see, an unfair confrontation with the question, since the Englishman almost exclusively thinks in his own colonies emigrate and it is therefore a completely different matter
The process is treated as if it were the Jews.

The "Morning Paper!" is outraged that the Jewish question
It's on the parliamentary agenda again and again.
The sole reason for this is that Rothschild, with all
He wanted to use violence to enter parliament, and the government wanted him support in this.

"If any little man, like Mr. Moses, seller of new clothes, or Mr. Isaacs, seller of old clothes, on The basis of his rights as an English citizen is a seat in Parliament.
Had the demand been made, the leader of parliament would have heaven and have set the earth in motion to help him do so?
We don't think so. The little Jew would give a hint of the place he has occupied among his fellow citizens= have to hold on. But because the Croesus of the day, the welcome Agent of continental governments, the mediator of enormous state power= bonds, the refuge of exhausted finance ministers who hold the keys who holds half of all European cash reserves, the
Those who have the ambition to sit in parliament will be the top priority= Sentences of our constitution were thrown overboard in order to give him
"Pleasingly too refined..."

The "Standard" expresses its displeasure in a similar manner.
to express this. He accuses Lord John Nussell of being an un=
A clean deal had been entered into with Rothschild. The latter under= Support Lord John Russell's elections with money, and the Jewish voters would give their votes in his favor. Lord John Russell then introduced one law after another. (for the Jews)). There must be some truth in it. These accusations may have been based on something else, because there is in no way any basis for something against the "Standard" for defamation, etc. under the law have been nominated.

2) Times of February 26, March 14, April 18, 1858.

3) Times of April 18, 1853, i

4) Morning Post dated 16th May 1853.

) Standard of 21 and 25 February 1853.

84

But it was not only the press that considered the wishes of the Jews partly to be completely misguided, but also the broad masses. They expressed their dislike through supplications. This shows without further ado, occasional spot checks. Thus we find among the Negotiations on the latest law in March involved numerous petitions. Requests from individuals and entire communities. To whom (There is not a single one in favor of the Jews). The month of April (?) is an even better proof of this. In response to almost countless petitions with many signatures, submitted by individuals, as well as by cities, towns and municipalities. Only a few municipalities can be found that favor the Indians. This became very clear in July, when 1055 applications with 34595 sub-Writings against the Jews, a total of 7 with 450 signatures in support of their Favorable conditions are present. As you can see, the people still want the Jews were excluded from the legislative bodies.

This anti-Jewish sentiment among the people is probably to be understood. Thank you that the great friend of Germany, Thomas Carlyle, contributed to this. Feder grabbed a pen and turned against the Jews.

Already the following year, on February 6, 1854, Lord John Russell is bringing a new bill before Parliament. This time He changed his tactics. It was not a law for general Lifting of the Jewish restrictions, but merely to Amendment of the oath of abjuration to be taken. The Law The proposal was therefore called "Law concerning the parliamentary oath". The application contained the three oaths already mentioned.

to be replaced by a single, comprehensive oath. Furthermore, it should through him, the special law of 1829 for Catholics Certain oaths could be revoked. It was therefore the case for all British subjects intended to take a common oath.

It seems that plans had been made for these envisaged nde-
There are two reasons. Firstly, they probably wanted to protect the people.
opinion does not explicitly indicate that in the case of the
The law granting Jews access to parliament was passed.
would. On the other hand, they probably also wanted to... in parliament gaining seated Catholic members because of their sub= Support made the adoption of the law seem more secure.

The first reading took place without any debate, indeed, without any names being called.
A vote was pending. In the second reading, the already [unclear] was Sir Frederick Thesiger, who frequently appeared in public, was particularly active.
and led the debate more fiercely than ever. Among other things, he did not refrain from...
to point out to the house that only the Jews were allowed behind again this law stands, and one should not be deceived by it.
to ensure that Catholics are also mentioned in this law.
The newly proposed oath gives the Protestant Government of England because of the change to the Catholic oath Not enough security. One shouldn't forget that especially in N Times of March 9th and 10th, 1853.

7) Times of April 15 and 30, 1853.

The very latest time of the Pope with demands for all Catholics emerged which is not aligned with the national and protest movement.
to agree on England's table goals.

As the debate progressed, the opposition suddenly emerged.
s0ition a support she never expected. Disraeli led suddenly some of the former supporters for the repeal the Jewish restrictions against Lord John Russell. He led that, in view of the recently emerged concerns, he Sayings of the Pope regarding the draft legislation, insofar as they relate to the Catholics would have to withhold their consent. But since the
The proposed law is inseparable, he regrets, and they vote against it.
to have to.

Furthermore, he did not think it right that the word Jew should not appear in the law at all. For the masses
It would therefore by no means be clear from the draft that with Ver=
The passage of the law also finally brought the Jew his deserved justice.
full equality is coming. The Jews have a right to...
Slogan for full and publicly visible emancipation.
This was missing from Lord John Russell's proposal. The Jews
They could, moreover, calmly establish their equal status in public life.
look forward to a life of grace, as they are under the protection of the Almighty.

would be supported by someone who has never left them.

Disraeli most likely caused this through his statement.
numerous former supporters of Lord John Russell of the Oppo= brought about by the situation. That's how the friends of emancipation experienced it.
To their surprise, the law didn't even pass the House of Commons.
happened. Rather, it was done, albeit with only a slight effect.
Rejected by a majority of 251 to 247 votes in parliament.

The Jewish press was, of course, once again disappointed by the failure. deeply saddened and believed that it was solely due to that Yes, that the enemies of the Yudens and Papists are together this time!
gone free?). When the law appeared, the "Times" not even shying away from suggesting, in the event of a
A renewed rejection in the upper house raises the possibility of dissolution.
of parliament and the appointment of one hundred new, the to target peers favorably disposed towards Jews. The intention was to thus an unconditional majority of lords who were friendly to Jews to work in the upper house. The Times therefore recommended someone who was hardly there.
a revolutionary legislative act that changed domestic political life
It should have shaken me to my core. And all for thirty!
A thousand Jews in a nation of thirty million!

Lord John Nussell had certainly made a tactical error, the law in the form he drafted, after it became known to bring the Pope's claims before Parliament. To=
At the very least, he would probably have done better after learning of the Disraeli's direction to change or abolish the law

4 Times from May 25th and 26th, 1851.

86

to let. It may have been added that probably in the English public the memory of the outrageous Incidents in Parliament on the occasion of Solomon's incursion was still too alive. It was precisely because of these latter events that... the Jews the aura of the poor, unjustly persecuted Jew have lost. This realization of the English nation is a
A factor not to be underestimated.

87

Advance and Resistance

The latest events in the struggle for emancipation were for the Jews despite all the support from their powerful patrons. The outcome was quite unfortunate for the patrons. The public was outraged. who are more hostile to the Jews than ever before. One can therefore It is clearly evident that the Jewish movement is taking a break. needed to recover from the recent setbacks. Because Contrary to previous practice, neither in the same year Another new action was undertaken in parliament in the next session. Nevertheless, the Jews had further partial successes. record.

The universities were closed to Jews for a long time Various laws under Queen Elizabeth'), King Jacob I.2) and George I.) forbade this, in particular, Here, the oath on the New Testament is required. Initially, they employed Oxford University deals with the Jewish question, insofar as it was affected by this regarding the admission. In 1854 The Oxford University Reform Act was passed. According to this act, It is true that "it is no longer possible to enroll in the A university is necessary, regardless of its law or statutes, to make and sign a declaration or take an oath to afford)." This granted Jews access to the university= The University of Oxford made this possible. This example was soon followed in the Years 1856, the University of Cambridge'). The other universities as well. States joined this step a short time later.

In 1871, a uniform regulation was established in Erft. It may be briefly mentioned here that the Jews were accused of... This law also granted complete academic freedom.

The profession of educator and teacher was long considered unacceptable to Jews. It had been closed. Here too, the main obstacle was the... Performing oath. In addition, there was another law, the so-called Act of Uniformity of 1662). Among other things, The agreement contained the provision that all Professors, lecturers and teachers were held to make a statement. to sign, which contained the promise to "employ themselves in the to insert into the framework of the Church of England, as it is now defined by "The law is established." In accordance with this law, they also had Educators and teachers in private homes require a license to practice to obtain their professional credentials, specifically from the bishop of their parish. Circs. Failure to comply was punishable by imprisonment of up to three months. punished?). Of course, only the members of the English 34 and 35 Victoria c. 26.

13 and 14 Car. II c. 4.

3

4

i 19 u. 20 Bictorta c. 88

7

) Henriques: p. 180.

88

Church such a license. The Indians were thus exempt from this Occupation excluded. This condition was first established in 1846) amended by the so-called Religious Disabilities Act. Following this, Jews were initially allowed to work as private tutors. to be active. The last restriction regarding full teaching= Freedom was abolished by the aforementioned law.

The City of London should once again strongly support the Jewish community. Advocate for interests. She elected David Salomon on September 30th. September 1855 to Lord Mayor. Only those who speak English... Knowing the circumstances, one can appreciate what honor and at the same time what Power thus fell to the Jews. The jubilation of the Indians and their Friends who were happy about this success, however, something went wrong in everything. fibertinenden Rausch über die Nehmen Sebastopol unters).

On November 9, 1855, he was installed in his office with the entire [unclear] World-renowned splendor was introduced. A grand feast was held in his honor. in honor of the Queen in the town hall (n). Also the Queen's husband Victoria, Prince Consort Albert, was present. One of the åa- The former highest dignitary of the church was also present as a guest. He was so delighted by the great event that he didn't was able to restrain himself and follow the royal guest- he turned to the words: "Thank God, Your Royal Highness, finally We finally have a gentleman for the mayor's chair. found." "Yes, my Lord," replied the Prince, "but we We had to look for something outside of Christian circles."

Solomon's three Jewish successors were still to be established in the 19th century. successors in this office, namely Sir Benjamin Philipps from 1865-1866, Sir Henry Isaaes from 1889-1890 and Sir George Fandel Philipps from 1897-1898.

This new success and the fall of the so-called coalition- The government under Lord Aberdeen caused the Jews and their Friends to new attacks.

The new cabinet was formed by Lord Palmerston, who was favorably disposed towards Jewish emancipation. However This government, too, initially had no [problems], contrary to expectations. Inclination to formally act on behalf of the Jews in parliament to stand out. The preceding 25 years of failures They issued warnings to be cautious. Whether the government or the Jews now the Member of Parliament Milner Gibson on February 22, 1856⁶ allowed a new corresponding motion to be submitted to Parliament. Whether that's the case can remain undecided. But the fact is that... this Member of Parliament in the first week of the parliamentary term introduced a draft law containing the content of the Oath of Abjuration to abolish.

This motion also cleverly avoided speaking of Jewish restrictions. It was also cleverly justified by the fact that

) 9 and 10 Viet. c. 59.

Morning Chronicle, October 1, 1855.

11) Morning Chronicle of October 10, 1855.

89

that even in the opinion of the anti-Semites the Oath of Abjuration is outdated and therefore nothing stands in the way of its abolition could stand.

This oath, as is well known, required the subjects of the English royal house to refuse all allegiance to the
To summon pretenders or fine offspring. But since fiberhaupt no more offspring were present, consisted of
There is no longer any objective need for the oath to be taken.

There should be little doubt that the government and The applicants cooperated closely. This is evident from the fact that... that the government immediately took up the bill and fully implemented it and fully supported. Lord Palmerston and besides – how Lord John Russell was always the spokesman for the Jews.
friends. They led to the reasons already mentioned.
The law also states that at the time of the introduction of the oath of Abjuration there were hardly any Jews residing in England, so that the will of the legislator is reflected in the measure taken I couldn't relate it to the Indians. In any case, the
The overall situation is such that the oath is an obstacle to the legitimate
The claims of the Jews should be considered and therefore overturned.

Once again, there were days of debate, discussing all the reasons of both sides.
Directions. The vote on June 23rd brought the Jewish-friends in parliament celebrate the victory at the second reading 230 to 195 votes. The spokesman for the anti-Semites, Sir Frederick Thesiger, once again in the third reading, sought a to bring about a turnaround in favor of his direction. He stated the proposal to include the words "By the faithful to use the faith of a Christian. All his efforts were Unsuccessfully. His motion was defeated by a vote of 159 to 110.

rejected.

Once again it was the House of Lords that refused to recognize the bill, by a vote of 110 to 78

The anger of the Jews and their friends was boundless.
was directed mainly against Lord Derby, under whose leadership (even this attack was rejected in the upper house!).

Rothschild's court newspaper almost surpassed itself in its...
Insults. In his view, Lord's attitude was
The derby was simply incredible. "That nobleman," that's what we hear.
Blatt rages, "has taken an irresponsible challenge against public opinion and an insult against committed against the representatives of the people." It would probably be Such a statement has very serious consequences between the two legislative houses).

As you can see, disappointment is once again combined with...
new threats against the anti-Semites.

--

u) Times of June 23 and 24, 1856.
1) Morning Chronicle of June 25, 1856

90

It was certainly not without influence on the government's participation in the bill that, according to the
The Crimean War was marked by severe financial difficulties. As is often the case in such
In some cases, Rothschild had appeared and had, without hesitation, iber-nommen, the bond to cover the debts of etma five to accommodate millions of pounds. No reasonable person would seriously deny that the draft legislation and the cinema
The government is required to provide, among other things, a reciprocal service in return.
has been portrayed.

One would think that the Sudetenland had once lost its courage or courage. In particular, one must wonder that it always cabinets were again found that under- the emancipation laws supported themselves and suffered one defeat after another.

In the spring of the following year, 1857, a new election took place. Parliament was meeting. Now seemed the time for the end. valid success of the Jihad endeavors has come to be. Lord Palmerston not only had his old majority in Parliament not only rediscovered, but on the contrary, significantly increased their size. could. Rothschild, too, had once again moved from the City to Parliament. was elected. Initially, there had been great reservations. whether he was successful despite all the means he employed would be – because the election took place on a Saturday, which March 28, ftatt –, and it was feared that strictly observant Jews would refuse to go to the ballot box. On their under- Rothschild could not entirely do without support, however. In the In the morning hours, voter turnout was also very low. However, this improved considerably around noon, as they had meanwhile had left their synagogues; afterwards, however, the Jews were seen in large numbers, especially since the rabbis have a corresponding had issued a motto. In their view, the The exercise of a public right is not incompatible with the Commandments given to them by God.

To everyone's surprise, Rothschild was even able to do more this time. Voices unite as Lord John Nuffen. The joy The re-election of these two to parliament was of course especially in Jewish circles!).

Already six weeks after the elections and immediately after The Jewish question was addressed when the new parliament convened. The issue was raised again. This time it was the Prime Minister. Lord Palmerston personally, probably trusting his great success in the elections and his strong following felt strong enough in the lower house to open the fight himself. His draft legislation proposed replacing the three different oaths with to replace just one. He had asked himself all the questions like that. so much so that he took it upon himself to appear before Parliament. was guilty of having taken over the treatment from Lord John Nuffel. I have taken over the matter. He further pointed out that

1) Times of March 28 and 30, 1857.

that the acceptance of the Gefebes would allow the Jews to enter Parliament. However, under no circumstances would the The special oath for Catholics from 1829 has been amended. See, he had learned from previous years and let the Catholic

Question unaffected. The new one proposed by Lord Palmerston Eid omitted the closing remarks, which had been contested for years.

Sir Frederick Thesiger gave a summary account about the entire fight so far. He considered this necessary= agile, because a large number of new members of parliament are entering parliament.
that may have come about, which perhaps wasn't so clear about the individual phases would have been fully informed. He was content with this and kept to himself.
He intends to later state his reasons for being in opposition.
In this way, the first reading took place without any resistance.

To everyone's surprise, there was also a second
The reading contained no opposition speeches. Rather, Sir Frederick gave a reading.
Thesiger only offered the explanation that the opponents of the Jews had their own
There would be support for the bill if it were in be= would be complemented in a more appropriate manner. He therefore requested the following:
Addendum: "And I give this oath of abjuration... truly in
"The true faith of a Christian." His motion against The friends of the Jews spoke most emphatically, since this would mean the Jews will continue to be banned from entering parliament.
its nature. The ensuing debate lacked any of the intensity.
The nature and length of the earlier disputes have been lost.
However, the situation was soon resolved to the detriment of the opposition.
when a leading conservative, Sir John Pakington, spoke out against issued the supplementary motion. In all the previous years
He had previously sided with the anti-Semites. Now he believed, no longer speak out against the admission of Jews can. Although he would have preferred to see that in the new oaths through the familiar words of the Christian character the oath was upheld and the Jews were given a special treatment.
whose addition would allow the omission of words. But he could no longer rely on the Jewish evidence for their Close the entrance.

You can see the conservative party is starting to criticize the Jews
The question becomes indecisive and divided. This had to lead to victory.
the Jews lead.

It is not surprising that Sir Frederick's supplementary motion
It was rejected by a vote of 341 to 201. Thus, the Anti-Semites suffer defeat with a result not seen for years=
The majority suffered. Therefore, there could be no doubt under=
The third reading is only in favor of emancipation.
could be cancelled, which was also due to the relevant vote.
was confirmed.

Again, everything depended on the attitude of the upper house.
It was hoped in government circles that this would finally change there as well a majority would be found, since the anti-Semites were entirely absent this time.

had been significantly defeated in Parliament. Furthermore, the government campaigned very strongly for its adoption. Lord Derby, the leader of the fovorous opposition in the House of Lords proposed reopening the debate on the matter proposed by Parliament to postpone the passed law for six months. It is clear that this in the event of a successful rejection of the threat- The draft was equivalent. In a fine speech to justify his Lord Derby believed he could not deny that the application Jews possess certain good qualities and are looking forward to a long future. They could look back on the development. But he couldn't be happy about the to disregard the fact they themselves have claimed, that they still referred to themselves as a nation and sought.

The already elderly Lord Lyndhurst then spoke at great length in favor of emancipation. Again, the final result was the House of Lords, which on July 10, 1857, voted 171 to 139 spoke out against the law.

All this did little to bother the Jews and their friends.

So we can't be surprised that already a week has passed After rejection by the upper house, Parliament is again being asked to... to deal with the old question that has been discussed so often. However, the government under Lord Palmerston openly admitted to it= know that they are not currently available for further prosecution of the was inclined towards Jewish endeavors, since they involved the introduction of the law recently rejected by the House of Lords= I have done enough with the design.

Meanwhile, Rothschild had resigned his seat in parliament. sights, but in the now necessary new election He ran again. He was re-elected. His resignation was probably only for some tactical reasons for the further Measures were taken. Presumably, they wanted to immerse themselves in the The following battles are based on the unchanging will of the people of the City. called for the admission of a Jew to parliament.

Rothschild was elected by shout at a public meeting He was elected because no other candidate was nominated. The election meeting consisted, as usual, of a colorful mix of people. a randomly drawn group consisting almost exclusively of members of the Jewish community.

The opposing press described the election as a farce and got upset that one was dealing with this unimportant The question of Jewish elections occupied him, since, with regard to the Despite the serious unrest in India, there are completely different interests at play. Games were suspended. It was therefore completely incomprehensible that the population to bother you with that.

South and Lords

The public remained very divided about the development of things.

The Times, as always, couldn't get enough of the To criticize the narrow-mindedness of the lords. For ten years now. Rothschild was already elected by the City, and still is. He was unable to take his seat. But finally... Perhaps the high lords will finally succumb to their resistance. zichten. Parliament should really summon the courage to... Rothschild, contrary to jurisprudence and the constitution, to grant a seat. One could then wait and see which The stance the upper house would take). And yet they believe, still far from their goal. This is evident in their Article from July 20th expresses the following words:

"There is absolutely no prospect that the Lords will give in, and we also believe that no one should give in to liberalism. The party is expected to be involved in the struggle. Over the next twenty years A Jewish member will always be lawfully elected, However, he may be unable to take his seat if the Parliament does not decide the matter on the basis of its to regulate one's own power. Well, necessity knows no law. Unbearable! Legal injustices must be eliminated, and this can only be achieved through A special action by parliament will take place.

As you can see, all this contains nothing more and nothing less than an incitement to violate the constitution. And Eng had... The country is struggling to fight for the survival of its empire, since in A dangerous uprising had broken out in India, which threatened the An= It required the full exertion of all forces to subdue him.

Meanwhile, the "Daily Telegraph" had been founded. His attitude at that time also differs from today's attitude among Jews. Don't ask different questions. In his editorials, he rages about the Years of resistance by the Lords: .

"The conservative aristocracy and priestly rule now takes hold their true character is revealed. They are the most dangerous. and the most rebellious classes in the country... A clique of Counts and prelates, like ghosts in a pagan ruin haunting prevents progressive and beneficial measures= took... |

The "Morning Post", on the other hand, rightly takes a different approach in its articles. It draws attention to the fact that the necessary measures for the lowering= suppressing the Indian uprising was far more important than the Satisfying the ambition of a Jewish millionaire and the (Playing out one legislative house against another).

E from August 16th, 20th and 24th 1919 and August 4th 1857.

Daily Telegraph, 11.3 July 1857.

3) Morning Post from July 21st, 22nd and 29th, 1857.

94

It was believed that the year would bring no new battles, since it was unlikely that Parliament would even be able to convene again would meet again. Special circumstances required it. However, the extraordinary conscription in late autumn 1857. That However, Parliament did not convene until December of the year in question. together. It was only intended that measures regarding to discuss how to resolve the economic crisis that has occurred should. However, Lord John Russell used the opportunity to... On December 10, 1857, a new indentured guild law was presented to Parliament. bring. This template again contained the three oaths. to replace it with a single one. The version was similar to the- those who, in the spring of that same year, were appointed by Parliament- accepted, but was rejected by the House of Lords. All- However, the fatal closing words were contained here. These However, this version was not intended to apply to Jews; rather, it was intended for This is contained in a special passage in the draft law. 11 a folte den Juden erlaubt fein, die diese letzten Worte aus= ate.

The renewed final hearing before Parliament was prevented by the fall of Lord Palmerston's cabinet hesitates.

Now the conservative party, led by Lord Derby, came to power. At first, the friends of the Jews gave up their hope to be able to achieve their goal in the near future. Lord Derby As is well known, the anti-Semites had only a few months earlier in The upper house was led. However, the Jews drew new hope when Lord Derby was one of the greatest supporters of the Jewish movement. as minister in his cabinet. Among them was his own son, Lord Stanley, Sir Fitzroy Kelly, the Crown Counsel, and finally Disraeli, who has meanwhile become the leader of the Parla= ments had risen. These men now practiced a great influence on Lord Derby, because after a short time he was able to One can see that he too is willing to compromise on the entire issue.

was not averse to the question.

Thus, on March 18, 1858, the debate in the House of Commons came to a head once again. plot about the one brought in by Lord John Russell and still Unfinished law. The former eloquent anti-Semite Sir Frederick Thesiger was Lord Chancellor under the new government. He became Lord Chelmsford. As such, he was no longer a member of Parliament, but of the House of Lords. Mr. Newdegate was now faced with the task of managing these difficult days. to lead the final battle solely against the Jews in the lower house. He introduced the one already by Sir Frederick Thesiger in the— The supplementary motion announced during the previous session. Here— This was followed by the special paragraph in the draft law, according to which The Jews were permitted to omit the concluding words of the oath. should be deleted.

95

Already in the course of the conflicts it became apparent that the opponents of the Jews had considerably merged. This was confirmed by the vote. The decision was passed by a large majority. Newdegate's application was rejected, and shortly afterwards the second one was rejected. The reading has concluded. The final third reading will take place on April 12th. It didn't even result in a vote by name.

The law was passed with completely unusual speed. brought to the House of Lords. Apparently, they wanted to avoid un—the lasting impact of the devastating defeat of Exploiting anti-Semites, because already the day after the third The law was first read in parliament. The upper house is debating. As in most cases, the debate also took place— No discussion took place during the first reading.

The second reading should follow very quickly, as the government everything was done to accelerate the process. The very next week, it took place. the eagerly awaited discussion about the second reading The House of Lords looked in particular to the statement by Lord Derby is eagerly anticipated. Under general He informed those present of their sympathy that he welcomed it. would, if the outdated parts of the various oaths the would be adapted to current times. But because of the He would have addressed the Jewish question despite the opposing views of three colleagues They maintain their old position within the government. He would be more than willing to change his mind if... I could only give reasonable reasons for it. The situation was It had gradually become very annoying. After all that, he had to go to his Express regret that he will not be able to attend the current session. He must stick to his earlier statement.

At the meeting held on April 27, the former Sir Frederick Thesiger, now Lord Chelmsford, had the last word. All The reasons put forward again could have him, who had been there for so long. Englishmen fighting against Jewish emancipation, not from to convince the opposing side of the correctness of their evidence. This was not about individual Jewish people against whom, according to in his view nothing further could be put forward, but rather to the Jewish people as a whole. He harbors no personal animosity. against the Jews, but "I only feel," we hear, "the seriousness= a strong desire to support a principle that upholds I consider it necessary to ensure welfare and even the CHa- "To preserve the character of our country." Consequently, he introduced the Proposal to amend the special paragraph for Jews, according to which they are entitled to Omission of the fateful closing words is permitted, from to delete the law passed by parliament.

Lord Lyndhurst objected to this version. However, he could nothing changes the fact that the vote in favor of Lord The Chelmsford-led opposition ended.

It continues to be evident that despite all the propaganda and the The influence of powerful Englishmen meant nothing to the majority of the people.

96

with the Jews in mind. This speaks to the sound attitude and tenacious resistance of the English at that time The body politic against the looming threat of foreign infiltration. In the first In months of 1858, the overwhelming majority still still opposed to allowing Jews in parliament. This results from samples of the documents submitted to the upper and lower houses Requests from voters. A very large number were received in March. which were submitted by cities, municipalities and private individuals= who are. Thus we find numerous petitions against the Jews= law during the negotiations of March 17 and 22 in Parliament, but not a single one in favor of the Hebrews. This rejection by the people becomes even more apparent during the debates in the House of Lords. It seems almost ironic. that Lord Lyndhurst, upon a formal request for a second reading –

Imagine – a single plea on behalf of the Jews

could hand over, while a large number of individual= persons and around 60 cities, towns and municipalities continue They demanded the exclusion of the Jews. A similar picture is at to be determined on April 27th, on which Count Granville made a single appearance ...which is handed over in favor of the Jews. It is downright depressing. but the majority the next day, when the friends of the Jews were indeed have submitted 50 applications with 2793 signatures – the Jews= Opponents, on the other hand, submitted 224 applications with 11,359 signatures. to express the true will of the people.

That the "Times" wasn't too concerned about how things were developing
It can be imagined what it was built of. We want to focus on that for now.
to stop, to tell us about their further outbursts of anger and merely to tell us on their confrontations with the reasons of the anti-Semites to restrict. The latter were becoming increasingly dominant in the Parliament and the press pointed out that the Jews– Do not ask solely from a religious standpoint, but from it depended on many other considerations. For example, there were fears that... the immorality of the Jews, which is evident in all their teachings and writings, as, for example, in the Talmud. At the same time, the Jews are to be rejected, because they are strangers in the body politic.
The Times is very indignant about this latter view. It says:
clarified that these claims are not acceptable to a modern Jew more would apply. These would already have all such disadvantages eliminated.
laid. Moreover, it would be monstrous for the English nation, to criticize the Jewish race.

"...It's quite a fine thing for a nation of upstarts."
just like ours, barely 1000 years old, in this corner of the world following in the footsteps of stubborn, old pharaohs, great, un-Shameful Philistines, Assyrians, Babylonians and a thousand other kings= to find imperial and imperial persecutors. The persecutions are always of an unruly, capricious and almost childish character have been)"

Times of March 18 and 23, 1858.

7 97

We are quite used to a lot from the pro-Jewish press, but the "Times", then and now the leading newspaper in England, is not even ashamed to criticize her own nation in relation to the Jewish to portray it as inferior!

Once again, the upper house was insurmountable for the Jews.
It remained a bulwark. According to the English constitution, the amended law returned to parliament for explicit consideration.
to be accepted in its amended form. Lord John Russell, in impassioned speeches, made the House of Commons aware of this.
attentive that the amended law will not be adopted could, since this in turn would allow Jews admission to Parliament= ment would have failed.

On May 13th, Parliament decided to...
to empower members to hold a conference with members of the

to hold a House of Lords to address the whole issue with the ultimate goal of bringing about a solution. Under Rothschild was among the designated members. One be= I think what an affront this election represents to the members of the upper house. It is therefore almost surprising that the The upper house agreed to the proposal of parliament and just= if the appointment of a corresponding committee was promised.

A few days later the conference took place, at which self-determination was discussed. Understandably, Rothschild was not absent. They talked about the... points were decided. Apparently, the relevant participants gave The upper house made the promise to resolve the matter. to discuss it again in their house and, if necessary, his to change one's mind. In any case, the Count of Lucan gave on On May 31st, he gave a short report in the House of Lords and proposed that to allow the final words, so fatal for the Jews, to continue. One should The people's petitions against the admission did not receive much attention. not to measure interpretation, but rather to take into account that meanwhile the majority of the press was on the side of the Jews.

Lord Lucan was until recently one of the leading Jews= opponents in the upper house. Therefore, one was on his side. former party colleagues were quite unpleasantly surprised that he suddenly, without any outwardly apparent reasons for who employed Jews.

The house had not yet recovered from its surprise at the Lord Lucan's statement has recovered, as another leading member also left the ranks of the anti-Semites, namely Count Stanhope. He was the one who, in 1856, Opposition against the motion proposed by MP Gibson The law had led to his entry into the House of Lords. He justified the camp of the friends of the Jews by arguing that the latter were in Parliament has tripled in size within the last two years. This was a far better sign for him than the repeated ones. led by the anti-Semites and perhaps actually a majority existing in the country, but unproven by anything, of Opposition. Because there would be no reliable standard for this, unlike the vote in parliament. Furthermore, the Admission is not un-Christian, since meanwhile bishops and Other leading clergymen have spoken out in favor of emancipation. would have. Finally, he couldn't understand why the Jews weren't... Access to parliament should be granted, since one should be able to would have had no qualms about appointing a Jew as mayor- to become master of London. "Furthermore," he continued, "the leaders of all major political parties would have contacted the Society-" That gentleman participated and received compliments and

98

"Exchanged pleasantries with him." With consideration for all the previous... For the reasons he had given, he felt compelled to deny the admission of Jews. to recommend.

One cannot help but have a slight doubt that the speaker has also been a frequent guest at Jewish gatherings in recent years institutions were there and exchanged compliments. This This incident clearly demonstrates the validity of the principle that in There must be no exceptions or concessions regarding the Jewish question. because otherwise the principle will gradually be undermined.

But it was to remain a truly surprising day. Immediately after Count Stanhope finished his speech, he- He was the Count of Clancarty. He had, in contrast to In earlier years, he joined the anti-Semites. His superiors He justifies his departure by stating that, as a result of the whole inner= political life dominated by the Jewish question, very thoroughly dealt with the I have been involved in the entire matter. In his previous role... He said his statement was guided by the fact that it was unfair. be, to deny Jews certain rights as English citizens. But he now has very strong concerns about whether it is right to deal with to explain this reasoning in favor of the Jewish cause. He had namely, to gain insight into the history of the Hebrews, and this showed him "that the Jews never gave up weapons for England." They had seized land. They had merely presented themselves as money. Lenders are active. Not only in England, but in every country. It was determined that they were a special nation, foreign in blood, Religion and social interests. He is completely certain, that to this day nothing has been said about Jewish An= would have heard the sayings if Rothschild hadn't been there with his own Wishes, . . supported by great wealth, behind which lay. He did not know Rothschild personally, and he certainly wanted to That he is an honorable man. That is what it's about. not in this fight..., but one must focus on the The principle should become clear, and a decision should be made accordingly. After After long and careful consideration, he realized that in the Allowing Jews would pose a danger to the state and the church. Therefore, he must now oppose Jewish emancipation. to express... |

7. | 99

As you can see, the Count of Clancarty has adopted the tactics of the Jews. to detach the contentious issue from the principle, clearly recognized and comes from his current knowledge of true Jewish ab= Views and actions leading to a negative attitude towards the Jews. But another sensation was yet to come.

Lord Derby now indicated that he too was prepared to cooperate. To find a compromise to resolve the issue. It's probably time to take the majority in the House of Commons into account. wear. Therefore, it would probably be advisable to form your own opinion. to give up. One could only distance oneself from this if one enjoys the full support of the people. But it will probably have to It can be determined that the mood in the country towards the The Jewish question would be irrelevant. Perhaps the proposal of Lord Lucan could be a solution, but one would first have to... Above all, consider it carefully. The best thing would probably be to... to bring thanks from Lord Lucan into a special law. Until However, he would not be able to discuss this proposal in detail. recommend maintaining the current position. N

Now Lord Lyndhurst led the friends of the Jews and conceived in in a long speech the compelling reasons for the admission of Jews together. In the end, he made the request that had previously been made. supplementary motion submitted regarding the matter already decided by Parliament= to repeal the enacted law, in other words according to the law passed by parliament, the Jews to parliament to allow.

The Lordfangler, Lord Chelmsford, vehemently opposed this request. He addressed the nine ver= in a factual manner The parliament split for various reasons and came to the conclusion that The conclusion was that none of them were convincing enough to justify the one= The stance taken by the House of Lords is to be marked as wrong. The upper house then agreed to first consider its They are to remain silent on the matter. However, an agreement has already been reached to to undertake a further investigation into the question of whether a A compromise might be possible.

This decision of the House of Lords, in turn, was a masterpiece of parliamentarism.

In the week following this sensational debate, Two bills were introduced. One of them came from Lord Lyndhurst, the other by Lord Lucan. The first intended, to replace the three oaths with a single one and certain needs= to create swift relief measures for the Jews. The second pursued the same purpose and is known as the "Lord Lucan Law". known. However, it had a different form. According to the two before= The existing paragraph stipulated that the two laws= each donating house allows a Jewish member to to omit fatal closing remarks. Furthermore, it was planned to every given similar case a general such er= to grant permission.

However, due to the absence of the Minister President, no discussion of these two laws took place initially drafts.

On July 1, 1858, the eagerly awaited great debate took place in the House of Lords. The Minister's final position The president was still unknown to the public. Quickly However, this uncertainty was resolved when the Prime Minister as the first to speak. He gave another overview. about the numerous laws that had not passed in the House of Lords= can be brought about. Finally, he admitted to it. that his attitude regarding the admission of Jews that hasn't changed at all. On the other hand, it finally needs to happen. a settlement of the dispute between the two houses will come= men, who gradually became a serious danger to the entire political life would have developed. This thought—and only this one. alone — would have guided him, one of the introduced laws — and He did, however, give preference to Lord Lucan's — to support.

Although the Prime Minister's position had long been uncertain, the House was nevertheless moved by his statement on= He rushed. Lord Lucan then spoke at length about his He proposed that, in his view, there was "complete apathy and Indifference in the country" regarding the admission of Jews to Parliament. The upper house could therefore decide what, according to its The opinion is good for the country.

All the efforts of the opposition were also in this case in The House of Lords was in vain. For the first time, the friends of the Jews were denied po in the House of Lords, they had the upper hand, with 143 to 97 Stim= men. The Prime Minister's change of heart had its effect. not missed.

The vote had resolved to read Lord Lucan's bill for a second time and to be dealt with subsequently in a committee. The commission He added two more paragraphs. According to these, the Jews continued to be subjected to, among other things, exclusion by the leadership of the Offices of Lord Chancellor and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland (Governor of Ireland) be excluded. The second, added paragraph remains in use to this day.

Power. This stipulates that the right of representation of ecclesiastical benefices to the Archbishop of Canterbury over= will wear if it comes to any office within the Crown belongs, which is practiced by a Jew. This amended draft law was presented to the [relevant authority] on July 12th.

Diefer fo abgeänderte Gefetzentwurf wurde am 12. Juli dem The bill was submitted to the House of Lords for its third reading. The opposition seemed not at all discouraged.

The Earl of Harrington was the most passionate this time Speaker of the anti-Semites. He gave various reasons for his statement:

101

"One fine reason," he explained in the course of his fine speech went on, "is that the Jews are great moneylenders, indeed, the greatest The world's moneylenders celebrated. They lent money to anyone who They just wanted it. They didn't care whether they spent their money to give for a good or bad cause, and whether they thereby gain freedom or supported despotism. It was all the same to them whether they by donating funds to promote the interests of their host country
Whether they were or not, or whether they finally lent the money to a state, who was hostile to him. Thus, they would have inflicted great damage on Russia.
Funds provided... With the help of their wealth
They would have complete freedom in Poland, Germany, Hungary, Italy and destroyed other countries. The great Jewish moneylenders but they are not only located in England, but in every other country Land. It is precisely such millionaires and moneylenders who... who stood on the British public election stages and sweet Speeches in favor of freedom were given where they actually always were and everywhere they have been the greatest enemies of freedom..."

He then addresses the question of why Jews had been elected in some electoral districts. He could not decide, after the development of all these matters, to To trust Jews.

"He remembers well that only a few years ago no less
as sixty electoral districts for criminal election interference=
They had been sued. Many election committees had spent months on this.
The matter was investigated and various findings were made during its inquiries.
Proposed remedies for the future... Should it happen again Will the floodgates of election manipulation be opened? He be=
I maintain that a moneylender should not seek great honors for the seat in parliament. He would much rather have a
To see Muslims or Hindus in the lower house as a Jewish moneylenders. This would, incidentally, add much more to the discussion.
to be more right-wing, in order to protect the 180 million British subjects of this F a representative in the House of Commons
give

There have rarely been men in a large state who possessed such powerful influence as the Jews in this one Wait a minute. Had they not a considerable part of this house Did she win, the one who voted for her? Shouldn't she have had one long ago?
A majority in the House of Commons? To that, one would then need a Part of the press – the most powerful political element ever existed – calculate. And everyone supported them."

"All decent circles in England are against the admission" of the Jews to parliament. He could not help but say it again. to warn against the Jews. They would have caused great harm to all countries. This resulted in national debt, which caused suffering for the entire world. For all these reasons, the Jews did not deserve to have their power would be further increased by admission to parliament."

Lord Derby believed these sharp statements.

102

to have to step forward, pointing out in particular that there were also Christian money-givers

The Earl of Harrington responded very excitedly that He has long been the result of this entire parliamentary process He had foreseen the battle. He reminded Lord Derby and the Haus believes that enormous sums were spent during the Crimean War. Money had been sent to Holland by the Jews. Could such moneylenders be the soul of the pro-Jewish Party, as ordinary citizens sitting in parliament?

An equally vehement speech by the Earl of Galloway followed. He explained that he was quite certain and saw the time coming. and quite soon, that a wicked prime minister of England would receive a large bribe for the proposal, to appoint a Jew as a peer. This house certainly had power. Enough to reject an unwanted peer, but how easy could the current sentiment against the admission of a Jewish Peers will be changed by adding more Lords to the list. The Jews' release must be won!

All the efforts of the anti-Semites were in vain. Even the The third reading resulted in a majority in favor of the bill. And with that, the victory of the Jews was practically achieved.

The whole situation is not entirely easy to understand. It is supposed to Therefore, it will be briefly summarized.

As is well known, Parliament first passed a law- departs, which omits the fatal conclusion for the Jews= The words of the oath provided for. This was rejected by the House of Lords and modified insofar as the closing words were reinserted had. The law in this new version had to be amended after the ber- version was approved by parliament and was considered to be Time again there. A parliamentary committee had in the be- Nine points rejected this addition and with representatives The upper house discussed the various objections. Further pursuit of this question was made possible by the fact that it was meanwhile in th

The bill passed by the House of Representatives has stalled because... the interest of both houses in the aforementioned advantages had finished the corridors in the House of Lords. were, one had to deal in parliament with both the earlier – amended law, as well as the new one passed by the House of Lords dismissed. Regarding the former, it had already been discussed in It was negotiated before a special committee. Surprisingly, it had the upper house did not withdraw its opposition to the first law drawn, but still insisted on the insertion of the ver- concluding remarks sufficed.

Parliament was to proceed with astonishing speed now examine both laws.

As early as July 16, 1858, that is, four days after the farewell. The Lucan Law in the House of Lords led to the discussion of the The Jewish Question.

108

Lord John Nuffel first proposed the second reading of Lucan's Law. It was surely one of the greatest days in his parliamentary career. Finally, he had his The goal, the admission of Jews, has been achieved. That even those in Par- lament necessary majority for the adoption of the House of The law already passed by the Lords would be in place, was There is no doubt about it. Nevertheless, the anti-Semites resisted until to the extreme. The main burden of the fight rested on their shoulders. by Mr. Newdegate. "He is," he continued immediately after The submission of the application by Lord John Russell, "more than ever before completely convinced that the friends of the Jews were not knew the people's attitude towards this question. He had until For a long time, the people had no satisfaction regarding the probable He was able to observe changes to the constitution. He therefore regretted it. extraordinarily, that the decision in this matter is not "Left to the people."

The disgraced Spooner supported Mr. Newdegate and pointed out, among other things, that Parliament had already been asked to make a request. Applications with signatures of 11808 persons against admission the Jews.

All resistance was in vain, and with 156 to The Lucan text received 65 votes in the second reading. taken.

The third reading of the law of July 21, 1858, could no longer be uncertain. However, resistance persisted here as well even the anti-Semites with the last vestiges of desperation.

The anti-Semitic Mr. Warren reminded the house that the laws were made against the overwhelming majority of the people would. By the day of the third reading, only 400 people in favor of acceptance, but 14,500 against acceptance of the law. This should be clear proof.

for the mood of the people. Furthermore, he had no doubt whatsoever, that with the admission of Jews to parliament, the morality of the latter would suffer a loss.

Mr. Newdegate also intervened in the debate again.

He did not want to, he continues in the course of his speech, adopt the stance defending the Prime Minister, Lord Derby. He did, however,

he gave his consent to a measure which, according to his Words contrary to his own principles would be. In a

In such a case, he would have had to make an appeal to the people.

But if a storm of confusion arises because of this omission...

If wishes had been raised against him, one should not be involved.

He forgot his difficult situation. Who is the real one then?

Who was the mastermind? No doubt about it: the finance minister!

(Disraeli.) They all knew that the latter was himself a Jewish ab= of Jewish descent. He harbors particular prejudices against the Jewish race. Feelings that can be found in almost every one of his works. Be= rather, this inclination of his is completely open in his biography about

104

Lord George Bentinck emerged. Here he had as a right of the Jewish race the all-surpassing dominion over the explained to other races of mankind. But such a man was He was a proponent of emancipation!

But even this renewed reference from Newdegate to the

The true intentions of the Jews could no longer be concealed by the farewell. to prevent the law. They lost by a vote of 129 to 55.

Anti-Semites again. With that, the real fight of the Jewish emancipation is complete.

105

Suda has flown

Immediately after the vote, Lord John Russell rose and reminded the house that one could still connect with the original—to examine the original law, according to which the Lords insisted on retaining the final words that were fatal for the Jews. would have. “The Lords would have,” he continued, “given the House their all—to base reasons that led them to the Jews to exclude him from parliament under all circumstances. At the same time However, they would have made a different legislative proposal, according to which provided for the admission of Jews. Consequently It would of course be unnecessary for this house to undergo the modifications. to oppose the lords, since they are acting on their own grounds “It is therefore sufficient if with consideration Due to this contradiction, the matter was considered settled. and would be decided accordingly.

Representative Spooner also held the view that the single— The walls of the lords had become inert. He introduced the Request to express this clearly as follows: “The be= said the law is in direct contradiction to the clear and unambiguous For the reasons of the Lords against the admission of Jews to Parliament ...

This motion was rejected, however. Probably, they did not want to make the high lords' undignified attitude too obvious demonstrate this through a corresponding resolution of parliament.

It was finally agreed that, in the opinion of the Par— laments no longer allow for addressing the opposing arguments of the Lords necessary free, “since the Lords by a law at the moment— lichen session period, entitled ‘Law to create Er— concessions for the subjects of Her Majesty's Jewish “Faith” pathways for the admission of Jews to seats in the have provided for the legislative body.”

The content was practically the same as the application from Mr. Spooner, but the opposition wasn't so clearly expressed in it. The verdict of the individual actions of the lords was established.

With this decision, the 28-year struggle between the To consider the conflict between Jews and their opponents as over.

As early as July 23, 1858, the Queen gave the necessary approval. Vote in favor of the Lucan law, and thus legal validity entered.

A few days later, R.Nothschild appeared and took the oath now possible for him. With that, he was for the first time a lawful and became a full member of parliament.

As you may recall, the second and in most cases the

In these cases, a decisive reading of Lucan's Law is performed.
Those opposed to Jews knew then that the struggle in the legislative process
The decision was practically unfavorable to the bodies.
Their last hope was only Queen Victoria, who...

106

to give their consent to the law to be passed in the next few days.
according to old English constitutional law
Did every Englishman have the opportunity to visit the Queen in a Request to be granted their consent.

Consequently, many barristers voted on July 19th to...
A carefully worded petition addressed to the queen. It had the following content:

"To Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen.

The most humble petition of the undersigned members of the
The Barrifters' Association proves: .

That every Jew who sincerely follows the faith of his ancestors is devoted to Christianity because of its connection with must be averse to the laws of England.

We do not consider a Jew to be a suitable legislator in the Realms of Your Majesty and therefore request Your Majesty under= competent, the law enacted in the House of Lords for the purpose of the
The Jewish complaint was brought before parliament, the royal to refuse consent ..."

The application was submitted early in the morning on Tuesday, July 20th, to the Post abandoned and had to wait under normal circumstances until no later than the afternoon of the same day to the person responsible for it Interior Ministry delivered fine').

The English authorities were and still are well known today.
for the fact that they at least on the same day receive a confirm a specific document. This general rule
However, this was deviated from in this case. It wasn't until the morning of July 23rd,
The applicants were informed "that every request to the Queen, that correctly and respectfully worded and befitting this office-will be served, would be presented to Her Majesty."

The answer, or rather the rejection, arrived on the day of the royal approval of the Jewish law.

Edison rightly points out that it is exceptional, that the applicants in particular, barristers by profession, and therefore in
To learn about such matters, they would not have the correct form should meet.

Furthermore, one could absolutely have expected that this announcement would have been made no later than July 21. In such a case the applicants could have asked a peer to do that. The request should be presented directly to the Queen in an audience. The Queen had already taken steps in this regard, in case that the Interior Ministry was expected to cause difficulties, and it did. There is no doubt that among the highest peers, there is only too much willingness that Lords would have been found for the intended purpose. These had, namely, generally on the basis of established rights, the possibility, namely, such a request to be submitted to the Queen no later than July 22nd to transmit. f ) Edition: The Question, pp. 14–15ff.

107

In addition, one could have, with a timely statement from the Interior Ministry with this consultation about the allegedly unacceptable proper form and make a corresponding change, could have taken. With goodwill, all of this could have been achieved by July 22nd. It can be completed by July 22nd.

One cannot help but get the impression that in any case it should be avoided to present the request to the queen before the... to submit a statement of opinion on the Jewish Law. Otherwise, it is inexplicable that until the day of final legal effect, the completeness of the law would have waited for the answer, especially since the transfer was rejected due to alleged formal errors. The responsible authorities were aware that... the queen as quickly as possible by her signature that the law should be recognized. The ministry's obligation for a corresponding immediate notification of the applicants was. Therefore, it is all the more necessary, especially since the purpose of the request is clear as was evident from the content.

The 28-year struggle for the emancipation of the Jews had come to an end. How shamefully the resistance of the anti-Jews collapsed. But before we comment on everything, let's first listen. once public opinion and the attitude of the press against about the entire process.

It should be more than obvious that the press of the Jews. The opponent was desperate about the outcome of the fight. in recent months the "Morning Paper" had been dealing with all Bitterness against the Jews was sown... She still saw The Jews were a danger to all of English life. "Civil and religious freedoms," she argued,

"have nothing to do with this matter; rather, it turns out that..."
"It all amounts to nothing more than a worship of money." Similarly She explained in her article of April 23 that "the masses of The people do not assume that the law is even in the slightest by taking into account civil or religious freedoms was caused."

In the preceding section, we have frequently discussed the view of the "Morning Post" regarding the stance of the House of Lords with= shared. She repeatedly welcomed the rejection there of the Jewish attacks. But now she no longer had the slightest chance.
Sympathy for the Lords. "The House of Lords," she writes in one of the aforementioned articles, "has transformed itself into an extraordinary=
It has brought about a shameful and disgraceful situation, and it is a cowardly act on his Submission..."

In her article of July 6, she once again unleashes all her Anger at the way things are turning out:

"Rothschild will take his seat," we hear. "Then We will witness the spectacle of a man who... through

2) Morning Poft from March 11th and 18th, April 19th, 23rd, 28th and 20th, Mat 12th, 2nd, and July 14, 1858.

108

the tradition of fine fathers is obliged to the non-Jewish world as a kind of dog and the Christians as something even
To consider worse, which is in a decidedly Christian context
The community makes laws that concern Christianity.
Lord Nuffel will look smugly and explain that it
the legal and natural development of the English Union Version. Truly, that is progress! And progress through ee hand of a federal ministry and through its Help."

"Never has anything been more inexplicable than the energy that the Conserv= Vatives have mustered to enforce liberal laws, abandoning all their previous principles, which they had set for themselves
The security of the country and for the maintenance of an honorable-have deemed legislation indispensable..."

At least the "Morning Paper" published it on July 14th.
another article on the same matter. Their anger and their outrage had to be vented once again.

The "Daily Telegraph" was, during its short existence, to one of the greatest voices in the struggle for the Jewish cause became. When, in March 1858, the prospects for the Jews were still Since they were not in a very good position, their anger was directed mainly against Mr. Newdegate. In his view, it is not proper "that Mr. Newdegate, who is intellectually unworthy of a seat in the Parliament is defeated year after year ..).

When victory gradually turned out to be on the side of the Jews As they inclined, they continued to pour the cup of their scorn over her. Newdegate, while simultaneously glorifying Jewish people Race out)).

"The ten-year dispute is over," he exclaims triumphantly out. "The peers have given in to the House of Commons. Mr. Newdegate will therefore be forced to share a roof with Baron Rothschild to sit, unless his sincerity compels him to to resign |

There is no apparent reason why a Jewish member of parliament should not serve his country with the same amount of freedom drawing and serving with greater sincerity than some Leading liberals or die-hard conservatives. In any case, it is It is not the business of conservatives to denigrate the intellect, who warms the blood of the Hebrew nation...

No one can claim ignorance of the fact that Disraeli lived until the the last fiber of his being is Jewish and a born Jew, that he was consecrated as a Jew and is still a Jew, Despite his transgression. In any case, he belongs to those who after They should be cursed in the sight of Mr. Newdegate. Nevertheless. The conservatives follow his leadership because their own minds is exhausted and because he could remedy the intellectual shortcomings of their party...

2) Daily Telegraph of March 24, 1858.

\ Daily Telegraph from May 11th and 15th, July 2nd and 3rd, 1858.

109

But at all times the Jewish spirit has possessed superior abilities. possessed of qualities ..."

The Daily News and the Spectator were overflowing with stories. their praise for what had been achieved. It would now certainly It won't be long before there's also a Jewish peer in the The upper house would have. They too had a say in the course of action. of the lords who alone had made the victory possible, almost only words the disapproval of their contradictory stance").

The Times naturally welcomes the development of things, but She also has only contempt for the behavior of the lords. and the conservative government. In their opinion, "for the implementation of any liberal legislative measures" a liberal in the opposition and a conservative in office fine'), but no article can better denigrate the Lords to show as the one of July 21st. It should therefore essentially= can be reproduced as follows:

"The Lords gave the Jews equal rights and the parliament honored with certain "reasons" why they honored their They have always rejected equality and will continue to reject it. would... They did not say it with the contempt of a lord: "Well, let these noisy bourgeois have their way; it It is hardly proper for us to continue arguing with them any longer." They themselves started doing something they abhor. The Jewish law is a law of the lords, voluntarily enacted by them. offered and dismissed. The position of Lord Derby and His peers are not those of the tolerant Muslim who... Christians are allowed to eat pork in his presence, and merely holds his nose and averts his gaze from such He turns away from the shameful act. His attitude is rather that of a groveling one. Muslims who themselves get the pork and give it to their Christ= offers a gentleman, while at the same time constantly shouting that 23 The Prophet will severely punish all those who eat pork. efen...

Had the Lords lasted five more years, they would not have caused their class as much harm as through this Surrender. We English have a great admiration for Dignity, ... we have a strong sense of the ridiculous. But surely there can be nothing more ridiculous than the sword= He grabbed to present and simultaneously exclaim: "No er= "giving!" Unfortunately, they worked under the courage of people, who do not have the true dignity of an English gentleman to consider it incompatible to say one thing and another to do...

) Daily News of 11 March, 1 June, 2 July 1858. Spectator of 1 and 15 March, June 5, July 3, 1858.

e) Times of June 11 and 14, 1858,

110

There should be no doubt that the success of the Jews in 1858 was mainly due to two men, namely to Disraeli and Lord Derby, is attributable to this. It should therefore not be This will be neglected, including the attitude of the press towards these issues. to restore both.

When the Jews were apparently attacked again in the spring of 1858 were, according to the pro-Jewish press, only Disraeli was responsible for the failure. The Spectator of May 1st criticized Disraeli for "doing so little". had for the law that he had been obliged to support ..."

Even the Times of April 28th found only the bitterest words. for him, if she takes a position as follows:

"Regarding the behavior of Lord Derby and the Lord Chancellor (Lord Had the country been prepared (Chelmsford), perhaps it would have been. What about? But our complaining is weakness and political cowardice. another member of the cabinet. Disraeli has himself He identified with the cause of Jewish emancipation. He wrote about the Jewish nose, he not only protected it taken, but rather glorified her beyond all races ..."

How completely different the "Times" was two months later when it spoke about... the Jew Disraeli. She not only congratulates him on the Victory, but hailed him as a "political genius". It is probably There is no need to say anything about this change of heart. to conduct tours, as it is even for a newspaper like the It's likely that "Times" is quite unique to have someone within to go from "coward" to "political genius" in a few weeks-clarify).

In contrast, the entire press, both pro-Jewish and anti-Jewish, with the exception of the "Daily News" and "Times", had a fairly unanimous view on Lord's actions Derby. We don't want to go into the details of the statements and the Labels for him in the hitherto anti-Semitic press That these are the most serious accusations against him That it was raised is surely beyond question. Rather, we want to to communicate the opinion of the pro-Jewish press, which is nevertheless true for everyone He would have had reason to be grateful to him in particular. That's exactly what... The opposite was true, however. There was only contempt for this prototype of a parliamentary system and gave it the well-earned wage.

The Daily Telegraph can't stop trying to protect him from the to expose to public contempt, in his article From July 2nd onwards, he launches the most vehement attacks against him and leads as follows:

"Lord Derby did penance last night, putting his neck in the liberal halter... Perhaps never before has a minister of Crown so humiliated before the legislative bodies and

7) Times of July 3, 1858.

) Daily News and Times, July 2, 1858.

stood before public opinion. In reality, he recanted the politics of his life. He openly abandoned something sacred to him Principle, in order to retain his office. He called for a split among to his own followers in order to reassure his opponents. In fact, he endured the bitterest humiliations in order to achieve political goals. Overcoming difficulties

...For ten years, Lord Derby has been fighting for the approval of the Jews resisted, supported by his followers. Mr. New Degate wasn't any more heated about it. And again and again it was Parliament was implored not by abandoning the principle that Righteousness exalts a nation, bringing forth divine wrath. to demand. But now bread and fish have worked a miracle, and the head of the House Stanley appears like a coat of arms On stiff linen, having become orthodox out of fear, the penitential law in one hand holds the reasons for its acceptance, the other hand Lord John Russell's principles were branded on his forehead, during Lord Chelmsford's appeal, at his feet Lying down, awaiting burning by the public executioner..."

This brief overview of the opinion of the leading press has already largely confirmed our criticism of the last We have rendered conflicts and their cessation meaningless. There is hardly anything to add to the judgment on Lord Derby. Welch It's a twist of fate that he spent years in a leading position Place fought against the Jews and defeated them in the decisive that moment helped him to victory. And all this after he had only a few months before the Jews' final success He rebuffed attacks by referring to his principles. had. Even in the days of his collapse, he had allegedly been looking for in his own words, he has still maintained his principles. But how can one do something that completely contradicts the principles? which contradicts the idea? The only explanation is probably that, that it is not at all a prototype of the parliamentary system was able to recognize his contradictory behavior.

These 28 years of struggle in England are, incidentally, proof. for how the Jews were persecuted by every legal and illegal means They achieved equality and thus power. The end. could not be far off when the principle was first established. left. The Jew will always seize the smallest opportunity, in order to consolidate his position and thus increase his influence. It may seem harsh to some to make every compromise rejects this on the Jewish question. But history teaches us more.

than once, that there is only one alternative: either the Jew
To tolerate it completely or not at all. Any deviation This rule is the beginning of the end, and the consequence is the Rule of the Jews.

Finally, we would like to thank our English friends once again=
call out: Do you want to rid your country of Jews again?

112

You must do it like them: namely, from London the way leads to victory

Even the Jewish barrister and writer Henriques must to admit "that the regulation of every principle and every logic lacking." He believes, however, that this is due to considerations of the in-accepting the unbearable internal political situation to take, especially since one would not have dared to ask the question to let the English people decide. We too are the
The view that this would have been very dangerous. Because the English
The people of 1858 would have overwhelmingly approved the Jewish emancipation failed. At least he mentioned... and calls England then and now a particularly
A good democracy. Perhaps it will one day be the task of an engineer.
Länders, to answer the question of what the meaning and purpose still is A democracy is one where the opinion of the people doesn't count.
and is even frequently decided against his wishes and goals.

The Jew would soon further consolidate his position.

As is well known, Lucan's law was fundamentally against the Jews.
permitted to omit the closing remarks, however, each time a Special permission from the house is required. This was, of course, Uncomfortable for Jews and friends of Jews, since through some political circumstances once again brought the old opposition to new heights Life could have awakened. This danger had to be averted forever.
They were banned. This could only be achieved through a new law.
that this authorization is not subject to the approval of the
The majority of a house would be made dependent. Already in In 1860, such a draft law was introduced, which was passed without any difficulties. – The Anti-Semites were by then – just think, in two years! –
It had faded so much that hardly any debate took place.

As early as 1866, Parliament had again dealt with to deal with the Jewish question. Jews and friends of Jews introduced a new law which aimed to establish a to create a new oath for Parliament and the House of Lords. That The most striking feature of this draft law was that the fundamental=

the remaining closing words: "In the faithful faith
The phrase "of a Christian" should be omitted. The intention was to make this clear to all Members of Parliament and the House of Lords – regardless of which Religion – create a unified oath.

It is also strange that hardly any Opposition existed against this law. Disraeli led the entire action and justified the actions in a very long speech.
Justification for the adoption of the law. On completely lost ground Despite his position, the old champion of the Anti-Semite Mr. Newdegate, a long and heated speech against the acceptance. He accused Disraeli in particular of the law he proposed aims to allow even greater bureaucracy–

) Henriques: Jews, pp. 297–800.

118

parts for fine race comrades to achieve. These should be created by gradually, imperceptibly, – and so that they would be introduced in a less unpleasant way for the people, because that they were not clear about the true intentions.

But the power of the anti-Semites had grown so much in just eight years completely shattered, that only five were elected in the vote 298 votes were counted.

The bill went to the House of Lords as usual, and one
I also had to find here that only a shadow of the former remained.
Opposition against the Jews existed. It is also mentioned here.
the same powerful influence of interested circles may have been there, who, after such a short period of time, has already embittered even the former ones= had silenced his last opponent. And yet, he surprised everyone.
that the former champion in political life for the cause of the people, Sir Frederick Thesiger, later Lord Chelmsford, did not maintain his resistance. He justified his actions.
He changed his stance by stating that he previously viewed the fight "only from "Principle, and solely on principle," I have led.
The law was passed in 1858 through the well-known compromise.
was separated. This made the principle so clear to him.
He argues that it is no longer worth considering the draft legislation.
to oppose this. Previous laws had already prohibited all restrictions.
The Jews' [unclear] have been removed. Furthermore, a
To view opposition as an insult to the crown. It is There would also no longer be any practical obstacle to allowing Jews access.
to refuse entry to the House of Lords. Under these circumstances
There would be nothing left to fight for. The principle, for which he himself had previously firmly and confidently admitted, free.
He had been sacrificed and therefore he saw no further reason to oppose it.

to approve the reading of the draft law."

Perhaps Lord Chelmsford did not achieve the desired result with this speech. to explain his previous position. One must Rather, they should probably be seen as a resignation, which is characterized by the The realization that nothing more can be saved has been brought about. The idiom is particularly interesting in that it means "a current Opposition is an insult to the crown." What a transformation! within eight years in public English life!

As you can see, the Jews had broken all resistance. How The Count of Clancarty was absolutely right in his speech at the last debate in the House of Lords in 1858, when he then pointed out that "principles tolerate no compromise and never..." changed."

One might have thought that, given the circumstances, no opposition would have been heard on the law. The Marquis However, Lord Chelmsford and Lord Derby of Bath made the The accusation was that they had betrayed their principles. Each of them They should one day be included in the official collection of Hansard. Read it. From this, one can understand the reasons of these two men.

114

against the Jews in many of their speeches. Earlier, Lord Derby had called upon the majority of the House to even speak out against the Indies to exclude from parliament, the foreigner in race and Religion. Now neither of them were ashamed to call the Jews. support.

But the Marquis of Bath was pretty much alone, and there wasn't even a vote by name, which suggests that there is no longer any significant opposition was present. The Jew had finally triumphed in England.

What a change in the press as well! The over— The vast majority of newspapers didn't even include the the slightest note of the related proceedings in the laws= giving houses. Only the former leading newspaper of the Jewish— The opponent had published an article on March 9, 1866. But She too had fundamentally changed her mind in the meantime. She probably only felt obliged to make statements because she wanted to sufficiently demonstrate her change of sides to the public. She goes so far as to call the upright Newdegate "and his half "Dozen followers" ridiculed for their attitude Many may have agreed with this, — but no one will be able to deny that he was a man!

Overview

With the implementation of Jewish wishes in parliament and In the upper house, the Jewish struggle for emancipation had been on the rise. The political side has at least formally reached a conclusion. The railway was free for new and now truly decisive and to the core the ongoing developments.

The preceding enumeration and registration may also all the various attempts by the Jews to enter parliament and to penetrate the administration of England, initially tiring he= appear to be due to the uniformity of the arguments on both sides. and through the stereotypical repetition of the same method, as you know but precisely this uniformity has a completely consistent political impact Jewish will formation and utmost determination, the political to gain emancipation. In these events, which are associated with the Collapse of the superior officer, who had resisted until the very end. The end of the house proves how important these keys are to the Jews= maintained their position. On the other hand, we can recognize from these Facts about how deeply England, the England of the past, has changed. He was hit and defeated. The way was not only clear for the last Jewish emancipation, but also beyond that to the Jewish= şian rule over England. The key was in the hand of the Judaism, which opened all doors and gates – the last bulwark a pure race had fallen.

The following chapters will now reveal themselves to us in an almost frighteningly clear v to show the shocking extent to which Judaism has this He recognized and, above all, used this key position. "Jews "Rule England" was thus achieved in one fell swoop– word about the most dangerous reality; to point out this reality and to mark them in all their depravity is the task the next chapters.

116

Part II. The Rule of the Jews Prime Minister Disraeli, or Politics and Character

In the preceding chapters we saw how the Jews in England understood that they could not only gradually not just full equality, but already the first prerequisites. to create a dominant position.

The coming years will clearly show that almost simultaneously with the complete final victory of the emancipation of the Tomorrow for the advance of the Jews into the highest positions It has begun. This will be best and most obviously evident first. in the person of Benjamin Disraeli, the later Lord Beaconsfield. 1

Already in the course of the previous chapter, we had the opportunity to discuss it in connection with the battles for the To mention equality. After all, he was primarily concerned with-being who, through his policies together with Lord Derby, the emancipation and had helped Judaism achieve victory.

When Lord Derby was removed from the post of First in February 1868

When the minister resigned due to illness, the Jew Disraeli was appointed to this post by Queen Victoria. Even if his reign was short-lived, However, he was supposed to take up this post at the beginning of 1874. return, which he had continuously until 1880 held. In the meantime, Disraeli was the leader of the Conservatives have emerged in all political matters. Thus, we find his influence everywhere. Disraeli now stands with the overwhelming majority of the narrow-of the people in grateful memory, and he is granted the He gained a reputation as one of the greatest statesmen. This is based on the idea that... this with his domestic policy measures, which proved to be a blessing of the British people and their fruits up to the They would have worn them today. But above all, people believe him. He should not withhold recognition for his foreign policy successes. to be able to do so, as it significantly contributes to strengthening Britain's reputation have contributed to the world.

Thus, in 1876 he acquired a considerable amount of land. Parts of Suez Canal = shares the basis for control fchung dies so wichtig Wasserweg und Agyptens legen. Furthermore, in 1878, through the Berlin Conference, he established the could incorporate the island of Cyprus into the British Empire, which This again marked the beginning of English dominance in the Middle East.

117

Often depicted. Moreover, immediately afterwards, through his victory over Afghanistan, he created the necessary strategic Borders on the famous northwest border of India to the Ab= defended against the Russian threat and finally strengthened in the south of Africa after the Zulu War, the rule of England in this Part of the Earth.

Let us now begin the critical review in an equally open and objective manner—debate about whether Disraeli really was such a gain for Great Britain was, or whether it might have had its dark sides. to at least reverse external successes. This sub-Search is all the more necessary as leading fonfer—to claim volative circles for themselves, to lead the party according to the to be guided by the "eternal principles of that great man". One can These principles can only be understood if one has a brief overview. provides an overview of his domestic and foreign policy actions.

In 1832, Disraeli already tried his luck in the Politics. He had wholeheartedly dedicated himself to the Radical Party. deported and registered in the electoral district of High Wycombe to nominate as a candidate in an election to parliament. He was unsuccessful, and another attempt took place shortly afterwards. Finding an election in the same district did not bring him into House of Commons.

When a new election for Marylebone was imminent in 1833 It seemed he published a pamphlet with radical ideas to in Taking into account a possible candidacy itself, the voters with its to publicize political views. Contrary to expectations, however, it turned out that No new election will take place.

However, during that year and the next, the following occurred first signs that the Tory party under leadership the future would belong to Sir Robert Peel. Furthermore, It is no secret that the agricultural circles that have mainly in the same party, a new leader needed. In any case, Disraeli discovered shortly after the Publication of his pamphlet full of radical ideas, that His place is in the Conservative Party. That's how we find him. in 1834 as a very zealous conservative, who already Member of a committee for the composition of farmers= economic grievances and necessary corrective measures ge— had been.

But even his defection to the Tories would not bring him into Parliament in the next years

In May 1839, he married the wealthy widow of his Colleague Lewis. Disraeli was 35 years old, while his wife was already in his 50th year. There is pretty much a consensus on this—about the fact that it was not a love match, but rather Disraeli got the money to his wife to pay off his increasingly oppressive debt wanted to use the debt.

Meanwhile, Disraeli had increasingly consolidated his fine position in the party. Over all these years, he had never grown tired of the leader Sir Robert Peel with the most tedious praise in to overwhelm newspapers, books, and public speeches. Everywhere he sang the praises of "this great man in a "great position" and described himself to him as ("humble but ardent followers"). Sir Robert replied Not only did he not suppress these feelings, but Disraeli openly expressed his to recognize aversion. He hated all people, "of whom he could never assume were at the head of a would face attack." This stance of Sir Robert is about This becomes more understandable when one hears about the Duke of Wellington. that Peel was "the most genuine person he had ever known".

In 1841, Peel was appointed head of government. When the list of ministers was published, Disraeli had to go to his great disappointment that he couldn't even with He had been appointed to the post of Undersecretary of State. But he knew how to hide his disappointment and about it Furthermore, to continue praising the fine leader in public and to defend. But that this disappointment is the cause of his The fact that there was hostility towards Peel can hardly be taken seriously. It is doubtful, even if the first signs of this only appear later. should show much later.

There was a reason between the Tories and Whigs back then= Legends differ on economic issues. The former were in favor of so-called protection, while the latter were in favor of Free trade. A special role in this area was played by the debate about the grain laws.

In 1815 and 1822, the import of [items] was restricted by law. Grain is prohibited as long as the price on the domestic market does not had reached a certain level. Through another law from In 1828 the general prohibition was lifted and replaced by a customs duty, up to a certain minimum= The price was set at a considerable level. If this price was exceeded, So the customs duty decreased in line with the further increase. But This situation also protected agriculture and ensured a fair price for their grain. The Liberals had now intends for a long time to lower the guaranteed price—to add and more or less allow free import. They always faced the fiercest resistance from the Tories. pushed. | ,

It was therefore a sensation when Peel was appointed to the board of directors in 1852. Parliament presented a plan to amend the grain laws, which did stipulate a minimum price, but was considerably lower. which was previously fixed. Furthermore, he wanted the sliding one.

Abolish customs duties and replace them with a scheme that replicates the previous one.

1) O'Connor: Vol. I, pp. 346, 457, 490, 692 ff.

119

reduced protective tariffs by practically half. Equally surprising was his explanation that he would reduce tariffs on 750 types of He wanted to know that food prices were reduced. This was therefore a... This represents a significant departure from Peel's earlier principles. after which he had always advocated for protective tariffs. It was the- after only one step towards the one represented by the Liberals Free trade. This also seems to have been Peel's position. to be, when he in his speech to justify his law= The draft stated that the government had considered including all Protective tariffs in accordance with the general principle of free trade to lift.

Disraeli was not among the party members who, in word or deed, expressed their dissatisfaction with the measures of their expressed by the leader. On the contrary, he was one of the Most ardent, who defended Peel against the attacks of his adversaries= defended themselves. He was primarily the one who addressed the accusations of the Liberals, Peel had stolen their ideas, the opposite to be said wisely tried, although he was also aware that The non-peel measures are based on free trade principles. dealt with those who had been fought by the Tories for years and . Law described by liberals as their ideology were. |

In vain, however, did Disraeli wait in the following time to be appointed by Peel to some important post will. As a result, problems arose during the course of the year. The first open attacks against Peel took place in 1843, albeit still in... in a very moderate form. In the following years, however, it occurred his hostility towards Peel became increasingly apparent.

In 1845 there was once again a great famine in Ireland. To reduce these, Peel proposed to the members his government the opening of the ports for unhindered entry= Von Korn drove up. Everyone was aware that this was the beginning. would be a genuine free trade. Various participants Members of the government rejected such a far-reaching measure. Peel consequently resigned along with his cabinet. But when Lord John Russell was unable to form a new government, Peel was once again entrusted with the management of the business.

Meanwhile, a large number of conservatives had taken hold. Outrage spread. Protest rallies took place in throughout the entire country. The Duke of Buckingham, who had previously Peel's opposition to domestic policy led to= together with the Duke of Richmond, the furious opposition.

In 1846, Peel had received approval for his measure= to obtain votes in parliament. Even if it was over the years before that, increasingly heated arguments between him and Disraeli had come, but hardly anyone could have known predict the following events.

120

When the speakers who supported Peel had finished their statements, Disraeli began to give his opinion

He clearly stated that he was fully committed to implement protective tariffs. "Men must stand by their principles." "persist," he calls out to Peel and his followers, "through the They grew up. Regardless of whether they are right or wrong. I make no exceptions. If you are in the wrong, "One must resign." In the whole story, it would be difficult to argue against this. find a similar case of such behavior as Peels. The latter would have caused them to lose their position as a party, But they would still have their voters, whom they did not would have betrayed. Before a man like Peel, who had led his own banner Had he merely followed the prevailing winds, he would have lost respect. "My "View," he continues, "of a great statesman is, that he embodies a great idea, an idea which leads him to Power leads, an idea with which he identifies, . . . an idea, with which he can fill a nation. That, sir, is after In my view, the prerequisites that make a person a "Make a great statesman."

In the following days, Disraeli also made it clear that he did not- to believe in the correctness of the principles of free trade could, since they would inevitably lead to the ruin of the country.

Disraeli was warmly received by Lord George Bentinck under= nevertheless, Peel retained his position with a majority of 97 votes prevail.

But the fight continued, and to the surprise of the public= Disraeli and his followers succeeded in capturing Peel in the Inn of the same year, during the vote on a law that did nothing had to do with the preceding area, to fall.

Peel's introduction of free trade had the effect that

A split had occurred among the Tories. The majority remained with the original party, emphasizing its interest in the protective tariffs. These members were initially formally led by Lord George Bentinck, but entirely under the influence of Disraeli. The former in December 1847 The party leadership because of differences over religious issues Disraeli's resignation also outwardly paved the way for... Unrestricted control of the Conservatives has been freed.

From then on, Disraeli did everything he could to rebuild the lives of those who had fallen the newly formed party formerly led by Peel, with to implement his ideas and principles. Above all, he wrote one will apply the principle of protective tariffs to one's [products] in the coming years. Flagg and therefore called themselves protectionists. f

In parliament, a new coalition was formed after Peel's downfall. tion was founded, which successfully opposed free trade against the Storm defended Disraeli and his followers.

The fight for free trade continued even outside parliament. and protective tariffs. The public outcry caused partly bloody clashes between the followers of both sides

12¹

When Parliament opened in 1849, it also brought Disraeli once again expressed his confidence in protective tariffs. "In my view," he explained, "the new economic system, ... that has a reasonable probationary period behind it had failed." Even in the years 1850 and 1851, the Conservative Party led by Disraeli occasionally An expression that they still adhere to the principles of protective tariffs attached. a

In the spring of 1852, a Conservative government was formed. Lord Derby First~~er~~ was in this cabinet minister and Disraeli finance minister. Now it had to be resolved. to determine whether the latter and his followers were inclined to their the to put promises made to farmers into action and to abolish the free trade introduced by Sir Robert Peel. Disraeli gave evasive answers in Parliament. Lord John Russell condemned this attitude in harsh terms. Apparently If one wants to uphold the principle of free trade, for which he is associated with his government had to resign, maintained in order to participate to remain in power.

General elections were held in August of that same year. out. The new parliament convened for the first time in November.

Together: Everyone knew that Disraeli was no longer one was able to evade an official statement.

For three days and three nights, the speeches went back and forth. Despite
The efforts of the supporters of both sides could be seen Don't force Disraeli to give a clear answer right away. More
And it became increasingly clear that he had long championed his cause.
Principle, protective tariffs, not to be implemented. The Bor:
The reactions to such behavior were harsh and went up to and including accusations of dishonorable conduct. Last night
But the intensity of the accusations reached its peak.
Mr. Sidney Herbert reminded Disraeli of his stance in the Years from 1846–1852. "Was the country peaceful?" he asked.
"Was there no fuss about this question? I'm not suing him."
to have forgotten what he said or what happened in those years believed. I only accuse him of having now forgotten what he wanted to make people believe back then."

He then continues and lists everything he has done in favor of the who proposed the introduction of protective tariffs. It might be too strong to have the courage to declare: "I am never advocated for the reintroduction of protective tariffs." What a There would be a contrast between Sir Robert Peel and Disraeli!
No one would have given the former—not even his finest adversaries—Unfair motives were suspected. But "if someone humiliates to see what, God knows, is always a pitiful sight.
"If, — he only needed to look there." At these words he pointed

122

he with outstretched arm at the man sitting on the minister's bench Disraeli,

Another MP stated that he hadn't even been in
I saw a man in a theater who had the forehead to tell the house that neither he nor Lord Derby ever had attempted to abolish free trade.

Disraeli offered his apology for his contradictory statements.
The attitude is that the course of time is based on free goods—
Exchange urges and no statesman without harm to the mind
He could disregard the era in which he lived.
The Marquis of Granby replied that in such a
A reparation for the memory of Sir Robert Peel had to happen').

Since Disraeli maintained free trade, his earlier
no reason for his political opponents, whom he fought so vehemently, to vote against him. She and part of his party declared agreed with his policies. Only the upright fellow citizens—

Members of the Conservative Party, 53 in number, gave their Vote against him.

However, another incident from 1852 had already occurred in The public gave rise to derogatory criticism of the attitude. Disraeli was given.

In November 1852, the funeral of the Duke of Wellington took place. It fell to Disraeli as the leader of the Under Houses is tasked with delivering his eulogy. This Cr- Disraeli also complied with the demands in a flowery speech, although he had previously expressed his dislike for the in various ways had publicly expressed this view of the great general. had also left no doubt that he was a great (He had a general aversion to professional soldiers).

The day after this state celebration, the following appeared in the newspaper "Globe" published an article entitled: "New Curiosities in the Literature." This referred to the content of Disraeli's speech. and in agreement with the obituary that Thiers wrote on the occasion= The funeral ceremonies of the Marshal of France, Gouvion de St. Cyr, had held. Attention was drawn to this- fam, that a print of the latter in a French The magazine was published in 1829. A translation of this was in the London newspaper "Morning Chronicle" in 1848 published. There was no doubt that Disracchi had published his speech. had copied from this, since not only the same thoughts, but whole sentences and a full half page of the Nede of Thiers were adopted verbatim.

The English people were outraged. Their indignation air themselves in the fiercest attacks against Disraeli, since it with He was quite bitter about the fact that one of his greatest sons had been...

s) MacColl: p. 1005.

3) Raymond: p. 196.

to have caused such a disgrace and not even to Disraeli for the had considered it worthwhile to express his own words of thanks and appreciation. Praise can be found at the passing of the Duke of Wellington.

Another sensational case did not help either. to strengthen confidence in the party led by Disraeli. It was revealed that the Minister of War, who was also a Member of the Crown Council, directly involved in a major bribery scandal= was wrapped. | |

After the death of Lord Palmerston in 1865, Lord John Nuffell came to power again.

The Rufet government was then voted out in a vote.
She was struck and had to resign. She was immediately... replaced by a cabinet under Lord Derby and Disraeli.

In the following, we will only briefly discuss the already mentioned-to take a position on the interpreted extra-political events have, which are linked to the person of Disraeli.

On November 26, 1875, it was publicly announced that the British government 176,602 shares of the Suez Canal Company Prices of £3,976,582,- would have been acquired. The announcement murder mostly greeted with joyful surprise, especially regarding These shares were at risk of a price crash, due to which has harmed, among others, the holders of such shares in England would be. The idea of buying the shares did not arise, as is generally assumed, by Disraeli, but non a certain Mr. J. Greenwood, the editor of the "Pall Mall Gazette." He had mentioned this at a dinner.
Spoke with Mr. Oppenheim, a Jew, who had this idea= Disraeli immediately proposed a proposal. The latter had immediately agreed and contacted Roth to arrange the purchase=
The sign was connected. The latter is also said to have already been Disraeli.
have drawn attention to the possibility of acquisition.
It was agreed that Rothschild would pay the aforementioned sum.
paid to the seller, the Khedive of Egypt.

"In recognition of the efforts and risks of the house
Rothschild declared that the government had agreed to grant him a
A sum of £99,414,- as a commission of 2½ on the
(to pay purchase money).."

The public, including Gladstone, was partly satisfied with the claim= Rothschild's position was not agreed with. He pointed out that that the government has, at least in the last 60 years, the Ge= had been the custom in such transactions to use the official to use a banking institution, namely the Bank of England.
Nothing has yet emerged to explain why mediation by This private company is being established. Furthermore, one would have to consider that at
I do not have any guarantee that the government's intentions
The details of the purchase would have been kept secret. On the contrary, ) Accounts and Papers 11876): Vol. 49, p. 649.

The whole situation indicated that other circles had also learned of the government's plan in time and had acted accordingly if they had acquired shares in the channel.

Furthermore, one could not see why the commission of 2.25%⁵ a reasonable remuneration for the activity and the risk was Rothschild's. The activity was very minor. The second factor did not apply, as the British government intended for a loan of four million, and it's a matter of honor to refund this amount. It would therefore be this amounts to the Commission imposing interest on the loan from Rothschild may reimburse the money advanced. Since the amount is at most three months in debt, Rothschild would have had the almost unbelievable receive a fixed interest rate of 10% per year. In addition to this... He received an additional 5% of that amount, which went to the Khedive of Egypt. would have to pay. Therefore, Rothschild would have owed a total of [amount missing]. Received interest of 15%. This is the price for which in years 1875 British credit available on the British market would be cash. | |

The finance minister had to— after Gladstone's speech. However, it was something very extraordinary. It would be better to consult Rothschild and not the Bank of England. But there were fears that the latter would not have been fast enough. They could act, and they should not have been subjected to the risk. want. Furthermore, he had to admit that Rothschild, besides his commission still received the aforementioned 5%. This, however, is... unimportant, because they are not paid by the British government. be.

The English people should continue to be preoccupied with problems of the Middle East in the coming years

125

Disraeli's Foreign Policy

England had long protected Türkiye's interests in foreign policy, especially towards Russia. England could not and would not tolerate Russia in the Mediterranean. However, the interests of the English finance also played a role. and to perceive the city.

The Turkish government had been in power for about 20 years. London readily received bonds. The conditions were very favorable for the investor. For example, in 1858... Government bonds worth five million pounds at a price of 62% with an interest rate of 6%, another of eight millions in 1862 at a rate of 68% with the same interest rate was set. Then more bonds followed with similar conditions, such as in 1865, when almost 100 million pounds at 5% at a price of about 50% below were brought.

At the end of 1875 or the beginning of 1876, Turkey declared itself unable to meet their financial obligations in the prior-to comply with the seen manner. The dismay in England, in- especially small savers who have invested all or part of their money The amount invested in Turkish government bonds was, of course, large.

Meanwhile, further worrying reports have emerged from the Türkiye. The Christian population of the Balkans was in more or less open rebellion and demanded self-administration. All major powers on the continent under-supported this in the so-called Berlin Memorandum Wishes. Only England under Disraeli had assumed that-closed.

In the summer of 1876, the first news of the horrific massacres in Bulgaria became known. The over-A large majority of the people in England condemned the hand-lungs of Türkiye in the strongest terms. One of the few who here-Disraeli was not moved at all. He called the whole thing is just "café gossip", although official reports from The documents were submitted to the consuls in question. Gladstone condemned He condemned the actions of the Turks and demanded redress. The City's finances, however, were entirely on Disraeli's side. Consequently, it even went so far as to allocate any amounts for a To reject the collection in favor of the Bulgarians. Especially Rothschild expressed agreement with Disraeli's position. "Mammon had taken his side," says Raymond!) out.

The continental powers, especially Russia, set temporary conditions for Turkey to remedy all the conditions in the Balkans. England exerted no influence whatsoever.

1) Naymond: pp. 321-822.

126

invoked against Turkey in order to make the request successful help. Turkey inferred from this passive behavior that it that he could possibly count on help from England. That's how it came about. It led to war between Turkey and Russia in April 1877.

The English cabinet was not happy about the-decisive steps were agreed upon. Disraeli stood entirely on the side of the Turks, while Lord Derby was Foreign Minister and those in the opposition The established Liberal Party will do everything in its power to provide assistance. to prevent this from happening to the Turks. They were able, encouraged by the The government party's stance in parliament, to continue to focus on a

They hoped for an alliance with England and therefore did nothing to secure one. Russia to achieve peace. In addition, Disraeli did not hesitate to act for the integrity of the Turkish Empire to enter. aa Turkey was completely defeated in the war. This led to...

Peace of San Stefano.

Disraeli upheld the territorial arrangements laid down therein on the Balkans and Asia are unacceptable for Turkey and also for England. He left Russia in no doubt that he was now going to intervene in favor of Türkiye, and accordingly making war preparations in full public view. Lord Derby resigned as foreign minister, as he had meanwhile been appointed First Minister. The minister had received the assurance that he would outwardly represent the integrity of Türkiye was achieved, but in reality, even at the intended to participate in the division of this country. To play this game Not having decided to participate, he had taken his leave.

The English government formally granted the Russian government its position. The statement was made public, and it then came up during the course of the proceedings. Among others, to the Congress of Berlin.

But the world was unaware of the secret discussions between the hidden from the English government and the Russian ambassador remained. Already on May 30, 1879, two weeks before the At the opening of the Congress, England and Russia were already agreed. One of the main points of the secret. The agreement stipulated that Russia would align itself with England. had agreed to no further expansion efforts in the future to have towards Turkey in Asia.

Nevertheless, Lord Salisbury had already on the same day instructed the British ambassador in Constantinople to the Turks a defensive alliance against further attack plans in the to offer to Asian Türkiye. At the same time, the Turks were offered Clearly, this protection from England is not without something in return.

The following would follow: the cession of the island was demanded in return. Cyprus. |

The Turks only agreed to this reluctantly, since they had just been informed that England would withdraw its consent to the Russians conquests in the last war, such as the area around was. With regard to the future threat of attacks by The Russians nevertheless accepted England's offer. The contract was officially signed on June 4th.

The congress showed that Disraeli had kept his promise. He did not adhere to his agreement with Greece. He gave his consent quite soon. Efforts to establish Crete, Thessaly and Epirus for this country demanded, when the Turks began to encounter difficulties again to make a decision regarding the cession of the island of Cyprus. In this way Greece, which relied entirely on the support of English, went left the country and consequently did not go to war against the Türkiye, which had intervened, came away empty-handed.

The Romanians found more favor in the eyes of Disraeli, when, in response to his demand, they solemnly agreed to the protection of the contract Jews had promised protection from attacks by the population.

This success of the Jews was initially due to secret arrangements. actions preceded this by more than ten years, which from a document published by the English government from the year 1877.

One can see from this that for years now a= outgoing correspondence between representatives of world Jewry and the English government on the treatment of the Jews in Romania and Serbia. The Foreign Office was met with reports and telegrams about the persecution of Jews showered with gifts. Representative of world Jewry, Baron Rothschild, Sir F. Goldsmid, Sir M. Montefiore, the Chief Rabbi and Other influential Jews insisted that foreign powers should be involved. The office issued instructions to its representatives in the states concerned. went to make it clear to the local authorities, indeed even to the rulers, that the previous treatment of the Jews violated the rules of civilized world and as long as the freedom is protected= could not support the exercises of the Romanians and Serbs until The Jews were not treated kindly. But it wasn't only leading Jews in England, who were granted a [recognition] by their government They demanded intervention on behalf of their fellow race members, but also the president of the Alliance Ysraélite Universelle, based in France approached the Aus with the same wishes= Foreign Office in London. It is advisable for every Englishman to... to read this official collection of letters, so that he might one day to begin to understand how much the English direction of that time was influenced by Engli rung without the existence of an English interest in the Jews deployed. Likewise, a study of this blue book will reveal let what a long time has been wasted on directing= The necessary measures of conduct in Romania and Serbia= To issue rules for the treatment of Jews. Consuls, Generals Consuls and other diplomatic representatives had to wait a long time. They prepared a sentence, and the envoys had temporarily the rulers to warn them most personally and, in case of refusal, to threaten them. All this was not done to protect British interest, but only to satisfy the desires of the world Jew.

 The extent of these interventions results from the fact that the Blue Book contains no less than approximately 400 printed pages. Contains 357 letters, reports, telegrams, etc.

The events in Disraeli's foreign policy that led to the war relations with Afghanistan and later with the Zulus should no longer exist. These events must be addressed. Because these events are in contrast to the one just described is unimportant, and the above statements are irrelevant. suffice to now begin an appreciation of Disraeli's deeds as a step.

Retrospective: Disraeli's Work and Impact

These brief hints must suffice. They amount to, in all clarity that Disraeli only upheld principles where they were appropriate to him and served his personal benefit. Perhaps it was Disraeli's main principle was to have no principle. One might think about This behavior should be challenged where the overriding good of the The guiding principle of unprincipledness governs the nation and the state as a whole. Perhaps, but only perhaps, it could justify it. But how? Little of this applies to Disraeli, if one looks at the basics. goes back to his character and his actions and the the true, often hidden background of his actions uncovers. A few key points summarizing the facts may suffice. To bring the image of Disraelis back to mind:

Disraeli was a champion of protective tariffs, along with Peel. He changed his mind in 1842. But by 1846 he was more passionate again. A proponent of the protectionist tariff idea – he overthrew Peel. But in 1852, during his reign, he not only suddenly becomes a loser not only a staunch opponent of the free trade idea, but he even declares, never having advocated for protective tariff policies.

Is there anything more definitive than this change? Nothing else. was it with the reform law which we did not discuss further.
 The movement, which he praised in 1832, was described in Parliament in 1866 as Americanized and branded, a few months after the fall of the The government, as a government representative, itself introduces a draft law. to reach far beyond the government he overthrew went beyond the proposed reform measures.

Or how quickly praise and condemnation alternated between Peel and...

about, when, despite all the flattery, he was turned away by Peel, who had led him through Did he look like he couldn't expect a position? Or something else:
Undoubtedly, the acquisition of the Suez Canal shares was a significant investment for Eng to their advantage. Disraeli, Rothschild, and Oppenheim, however, made the business. At least the latter two were right.
Information received early enough earned and the Roth=
The granted interest rate of 15% was more than acceptable.
measured. . 5 zz

The same wonderful game is being played in foreign policy.
It offers parallels to the events of our time.

But let's leave that aside: England must deal with these figures and to come to terms with this historical past itself. We are The Disraeli type as a Jew is not important and characteristic not only for his era, but also for the fate of Eng= Lands, plain and simple.

Because Disraeli is the founder of today's ruling coalition.
servative partet. With Peel's departure from the Tory-
A new entity emerged within the party, one that incorporated the ideas of Disraeli was fulfilled and built up. He succeeded in 180

in a short time, to sweep the majority of his fine followers along to all the dishonorable job changes, even though he was Jewish and his party, which he led, had been the one that gave Rothschild the
The way to parliament was blocked year after year.

It remains almost inexplicable how this political adventurer – so
He is not rarely mentioned –, who has managed to complete the conservatoire – to lead the alternative party. It may be that after the departure Peel said that the conservatives had no one better than Disraeli.
She could be their spokesperson in parliament. It may also be that as O'Connor) believes that he through fine novellas, and into= especially through his viography of Lord George Bentinck, the
The Tories had proven that the Jews were by nature
They had always belonged to their party. Furthermore, the Jews
They have always been the best in politics, art, and religion.
Because we will learn from the points discussed in the previous chapter.
The divided speeches remind us that, according to Disraeli, the Jews actually who are the true Christians. Be that as it may: One will not can deny that the Conservative Party has ideas of a Jew represented, who proclaimed until his last breath that he was and would remain a Jew. In other words, he was a stranger who, like Raymond points out, "then always made big mistakes when He tried to 'think in English'. We therefore believe with O'Connor), that the conservatives under Disraeli were "far from the 'national ideals of the true Englishman' removed and neither

"They were neither English nor conservative, but purely disraelitist."

But it wasn't just the foundations of the Conservatives.
Not only the party changed, but also those of England. The entirety Social conditions were undergoing a transformation. Through The abolition of grain tariffs transformed agriculture to the point of... ruined today, as we will see below.
Before the days of free trade, farmers meant everything.
—and the factory owners nothing. A healthy peasantry, as long as The pride of England was gone. From now on, the England's entire life viewed solely from the perspective of money governs.

All this is, not least, the deed of the Jew Disraeli, who chose a man like Bolingbroke as a model of an English statesman and the father of modern conservatism."
Bolingbroke was undoubtedly a brilliant orator, but morally Completely inferior and without principles. Disraeli would probably agree.
to have been the one who coined the slogan of perfidious England in which had made it a permanent fixture in history.

His ideas and principles did not go to the grave with him.
gone.

-) O'Connor: Vol. II, pp. 150, 641–642, 463–466.
- 2) O'Connor: Vol. II, pp. 617–622, 642, 653–654

9* 131

JB Firth, a well-known scholar, recently explained in the "Daily Telegraph" that "the Genius Disraeli's 'his tradition made it eternal and that every conservative conference would bear witness of the viability of the seed he sowed in the hearts of his political followers' fate".

Even former Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin calls himself even a student of Disraeli, "that great man." In his
He best summarizes his attitude towards Disraeli in the following speeches.
Sentence in summary: "I have tried to change my policies, my speeches and the policies of my Conservative Party according to the basic principles—
To form Disraeli's principles. These principles will last forever!

-) Jewish Chronicle from 15th Mar 1936,

Leading Jews as Shapers of English Life

Just like Disraeli, not only during his lifetime, but far beyond Furthermore, it influenced the political principles of Great Britain.
The spirit of the Jew Georg still lives on today, even though it has flowed throughout the Jessel in English legal science.

He was born in 1824 as the son of a wealthy merchant in Born in London. After being educated at a Jewish school...
He sought out university and took exams in the fields of Mathematics and natural sciences. Later he turned to
He studied law and soon became a well-known barrister.
In the best of times, he earned £20,000–23,000 per year.

In 1868 he was elected as a member of parliament for the Liberal Party.
elected to parliament. Here he was soon considered one of the most knowledgeable—most knowledgeable members were presented with legal matters. Already In 1871 he was appointed Solicitor General, i.e. a high-ranking official.
legal officials of the Crown without a seat in Parliament, made.
Two years later he became Master of the Rolls, a kind of Head of certain archives, and simultaneously a member of the Ge-appointed to the State Council.

This period saw fundamental changes in English.
Judicial system. The Courts Constitution Act, the Code of Civil Procedure and the patent law was significantly amended.
were the first steps towards transitioning from the old habit-law and existing legal provisions into a
The only legal system. Jesse was very heavily involved in everything.
worked.

Under the new laws, Jesse, as Master of the Rolls, was simultaneously President of one of the senates at the Court of Appeals. Still Today, subtle interpretations of laws, regulations, and Customary law is considered the best in English jurisprudence.
These are referred to as such. In English law, these are of far greater importance—interpretation as in German, since decisions by recognized Over time, judges gain practical experience in understanding the nature of laws.
assume. Therefore, Jesse is also referred to as "a legislative judge", whose authority is still undisputed today.

Besides his duties as a judge, Jesse had considerable other responsibilities.
other duties. He was the head of the patent office and on-Visible in the register for trademarks. Finally.
He also oversaw the documents and manuscripts relating to-compiled state historical publications, the so-called-They called it Rolls-Series. He was also vice president on a voluntary basis.

the University of London and the Anglo-Jewish Association.
As you can see, he had no shortage of positions.

His bust is not only found in a prime location in the Law Society, but also in the arcades of the King-court in London.

138

He had already been knighted in 1872.
His death came eleven years later. His son Charles James
The title of Baron was bestowed upon the father after his death. ≠
The same occurred in 1917 concerning his second son.
Herbert Merton Jessel, the high post in the government and in held a position in the administration. His son, in turn, has been in the administration since Years. 1935 with the daughter of the famous Marquis of Londonderry Derry married.

The year 1885 was to be the culmination of the Jewish power grab exercises bring. Nathaniel Meyer Rothschild was appointed peer.
made by England and moved as such into the House of Lords
one. Furthermore, in 1902 he became a member of the Ge-Home Councillor. At Trinity College, Cambridge, was he became a friend of the later King Edward VII, who who repeatedly honored him with his favor. His positions in The economic sector is almost too numerous to list; its most significant was Certainly the one who served as Governor of the Bank of England.

Among the Jews who, at the end of the 19th century, were not Farrer Herschell also played a minor role in politics.
He was originally a barrister and in 1874 entered the Parliament was elected. During the term of office of Gladstone became Solicitor General, simultaneously
He was promoted by the award of the title of knight. In 1886 he was
He was elevated to the nobility and made Lord Chancellor. Thus
The Jews had also provided the speaker in the upper house.

Lord Herschell's daughter is married to the Brigadier General
RM Yorke married. Two daughters were born from this marriage.
They left. Whether and, if so, to whom they are married, could not be determined.

His grandson is the present-day Baron Herschell. He has, among other things, the very held the honorable position of page to the king.

The exemplary description of these Jews as the Be-Knowing this might suffice to show what influence and which highest positions Jews in Great Britain have already held un-had achieved this indirectly after their emancipation. In politics, They exerted a significant influence on law and economics. river out, – areas that are among the most powerful in a state.

184

The Jews in Scandal: Honduran Bonds

The influence of the Jews is also evident from a financial scandal this period.

At the beginning of the seventies, England and France in particular were flooded with foreign loans. Already A few years later, most of them were more or less than worthless, since no interest accrues on it anymore paid and the securities on the stock exchanges only after break-even= parts of their nominal value were listed.

By 1875, this situation had become untenable. (From) State bonds up to a total amount of 240 million Pound was in arrears with its interest payments. A whole lot of it= A significant portion of the aforementioned sum was in British hands. Foreign nationals. Many were completely ruined. Officers and officials had to resign their posts because they lost their entire They lost assets and incurred debts as a result of their They had made bad investments. Widows and old people who had lost their Those who had invested money in it found themselves without means and didn't know what to not how they were to live from now on. The misery was unimaginable. in writing.

On 23 February 1875, Sir Henry James proposed in Parliament that a special committee be established as soon as possible to address the circumstances that led to this disaster= to have it covered. The proposal met with no opposition and It was agreed to focus on only one sub-area of this question. complex to deal with, namely the bonds of Honduras, Costa= Rica, San Domingo and Paraguay. The total value of this investment The loan amounted to approximately ten million pounds and was therefore in relation to the total sum of 240 million pounds only slightly. However, it was believed that, even after the investigation... in these cases sufficient knowledge of such trans= to have actions because they are probably more or less the same= would be stored. The result of the investigations has then this assumption was also confirmed.

Parliament appointed a commission of 17 members= the committee was established, which already held its first meeting in March. It It is now quite impossible to provide a detailed description of the events up to the to hold meetings lasting until July. The information regarding these meetings will be avai

The issued official documents contain no less than 6680 recorded questions and answers from participating witnesses and experts. Minutes, annexes and report of the commission. Mission comprises 700 large, densely printed pages. The newspapers They dealt daily with the results of the investigations, so that the very interested public was kept informed.

We simply want to use the findings about the lending the state of Honduras an insight into the machinations to throw the financial wheeler-dealer.

135

The state of Honduras in 1867 was more or less a wilderness and it lacked an orderly financial economy No question. How small the state revenues were can be seen from this. from this, it can be seen that the state in question is charging interest on an old A bond of approximately £120,000,- with annual interest of £1632,- had not can pay and have been working on settling the debt for quite some time. was backward).

This did not deter a clique of unscrupulous persons-held, in the years 1867 to 1871 bonds of over 6 million to place lion's pounds in public. The interest, including amortization payments, amounted to annually £700,000.

The main parties involved in this transaction were the representative the Government of Honduras in England, Don Carlos Gutierrez, a certain Lefevre and the company Bischofsheim & Goldschmidt. The owners of the latter were Jews, while we also be- Regarding Lefevre, there is hardly any doubt. He was already Sentenced to two years in these courts in France for breach of trust He was sentenced to prison. After that, he was suddenly in London. appeared and had two small, insignificant companies-founded a company whose purpose and goal were more than opaque. Soon he joined forces with the well-known Jewish firm Bischofsheim & Gold-Schmidt in business dealings, and from then on he took a rapid rise. He lived a life of immense luxury. When he the situation in England because of the investigations is too unacceptable- Once it had been approved, he returned to France and withdrew He thus submitted to questioning by the committee. The official representative Honduras insisted on its extraterritoriality and appeared also not for evidentiary purposes. The third member of the group, Henry Louis Bischofsheim, through a representative, appointed a physician Testimony of Sir James Paget and Dr. JD Chepmell - an seen doctors - presenting evidence that fine health is not permitted to be questioned.

Thus, the parliamentary committee faced great difficulties-to fight for opportunities, and the Times notes in longer articles of September 23 and 24, 1875, rightly so, that one can thereby and by withholding important documents, as also stated by the The committee points out in its final report, among other things, that by no means the full was able to establish the truth.

The overall result revealed the most blatant manipulations, in including an employee of the company Bischofsheim & Goldschmidt, the Jew of David, as so-called trustee of the public-lichkeit had occurred.

The first bond was issued in the amount of one million pounds. The aforementioned Jewish company had undertaken to establish this in England to accommodate the country and France. Which commission should you appoint for this?

) Accounts and Papers (1875): Vol. XI, pp. IV–V ff.

136

what had been promised could not be directly determined from the documents however, the conclusion could be inferred indirectly without any doubt to claim that it was no less than £82,000. Offer The bond was intended to be used for the construction of a railway that would connect the It should connect the Atlantic Ocean with the Pacific Ocean. As a safeguard These were the future net surpluses from the revenues this company is pledged and an alleged first Hypothek on the state's domains and mahogany forests led.

But the public initially wanted nothing to do with the bond and despite all efforts, after months there was still no no more than £10,000,– accommodated by the Jewish The company itself had been taken over. Now Lefevre has reappeared. He got up and committed himself to selling the rest. However, he did not acquire the securities at 73% of their nominal value. not only were the FIC issues released, but 68%. Apparently But even he was unable to raise more than about £175,000. cieren. A new contract with more favorable conditions for the The firm Bischofsheim & Goldschmidt and Lefevre was dissolved. closed, and now buyers could finally be found for the rest. the bond. This was only possible because Lefevre accused various brokers of using illegal business practices. misled them. For example, he provided them with papers under the heading "Edition". price of 73% available and committed to in a no further securities will be placed on the market during a certain period. throw. As soon as the prices for the shares fell on the stock exchange, The fraudulent consortium had another broker handle the paperwork. buy back, so that through the artificially induced after The prices rose again. In this way, it was possible to...

to drive the shares up to 94%.

In May 1869, a new loan of approximately £2,500,000 was issued. designed for Honduras, as otherwise differs from the first at most a small part had been sold. With the help of the above-mentioned This bond was also placed using their methods.

In the spring of 1870, these same people had already decided to a new issue of securities. The public was had already become suspicious, since this new amount was also allegedly It should still be used for the construction of the railway. therefore decided to stabilize the faltering situation by inducing further dizziness. to restore trust.

As is well known, according to the terms of the bond from the Years 1867, among others, the state's mahogany forests were used as security pledged. Furthermore, it was stipulated that the company Bischofsheim & Goldschmidt simultaneously the entire distribution of the The products obtained from it would be transferred. It was now allowed a notice in the "Times" of June 11, 1870, containing the following: to use that two ships with mahogany wood from Honduras in arrived in London and handed over to the bond trustee for payment.

137

provision made. In fact, these and later three more shiploads had arrived in London. It was concealed However, that these shipments do not originate from state forests= ten, but bought from private owners in Honduras and also They were of very poor quality. The Bischofsheim company Goldschmidt, or one of the other accomplices, had this Purchases made by myself and from the funds of the previous Bond paid. | | | Ä This restored public trust. here, since this involves the payment of interest and repayments by Sales of timber were considered secure. This was exploited as follows: from the fact that the public must be informed about the conditions of the new announced the bond issue. The amount was again approximately £2,500,000. The previously pledged counter= Stands were offered. Now, however, they went so far as to say that everything was... like and income of the state of Honduras for the An= They were arrested. Honduras was obligated to pay the company Bischofsheim & Goldschmidt in London all products made from the state assets were intended for export, to sell and the The proceeds will be deposited into the fund for repayment. In other words, the entire state of Honduras was devoted to the Jews It was pawned and he could no longer conduct business without it. The money raised from the bond issue also followed to be allocated to a fund. The trustees consisted of five persons, – one was appointed by the state of Honduras.

The other four are from the aforementioned Jewish company. Bishop's Heim & Goldschmidt were further entitled, but not obligated, to in the event of non-fulfillment of the state's obligations Honduras, whose total assets at home and abroad as to seize and to seize the trustees of the securities holders manage. | | l

Once again, it was the same individuals who used fraudulent methods. Methods that placed the bond. At times, up to 100 people connected to each other who bought the papers, when prices threatened to plummet, and sold when the The market for the bond was tight. A single jobber bought it and sold the entire bond once. If you compare the prices with Since such methods could not be maintained, others were used. Deception maneuvers. | ne E |

Thus, on April 1, 1871, it was declared that £50,000 would be contributed by the Bonds issued and purchased by the state of Honduras at parity. would be resolved. Since the papers were not badly valued at this time, But since they were far from equal, this provided a new incentive for the buying public. Furthermore, the draw should show, that the financial situation of the government in Honduras is very healthy It had to be that way if one could carry out such transactions. In fact, of the documents drawn, only those... for the amount of approximately £17,000,- in the hands of those not related to the company persons belonging to the plot. Only this sum was paid out to the bes appropriate. However, it was not paid out by the state made available to Honduras, but rather to the yield of the last Bond withdrawn. Also the interest and amortization service. was only made possible in this way.

188

Such manipulations naturally involved uninterrupted monitoring. A series of new bonds is possible and necessary, since one can afford the low interest rate The costs of the bonds can only be covered by income from new [issues]. could cover.

When attempts in this regard proved unsuccessful in England in late autumn 1871 and in France in summer 1872, the whole thing collapsed fraudulent structures, since the state of Honduras was unable to was to assume even a single penny of debt service. The All the papers fell into the attic in 1872. It was listed at about 6% in July 1875 and in September 1875 only 3%. A respectable country priest, who also... He hadn't been able to let speculation stop him, believing an earthquake "would have "Swallowed up all the valuable space."

The extent of the fraud is determined by the findings of Commission, according to which the State of Honduras owes approximately £60,000, -, the Contractors for the construction of the railway approximately E 700,000, - er-had held. The remainder of the million-dollar bonds was for purposes used which have nothing to do with those mentioned in the bond had to do. Thus, no less than about one million Pound to Lefevre to settle alleged commissions and propaganda funds.

The victims were the state of Honduras and the Hoffentlichkeit. The former had an abandoned, half-developed railway line. a line of approximately 80 kilometers and an annual interest burden of approximately 2,700,000,—, which he could never pay, since he was known. He had not even been able to raise the sum of £1632. can. We already witnessed the misery of those affected at the beginning of the month. The course of our considerations has been described.

The investigating commission established for the other states the The same frauds were discovered, only the people involved sometimes changed. Jews were also influential there. Among other things, we also find... the well-known Jewish bank Erlanger & Co. is involved.

The audiences of France and England had therefore the ber: lust of approximately £240 million or 5 billion marks through to lament Jewish frauds.

The reader will now be interested in what is wrong with everyone involved in the project. What happened to those involved was a breakup. We want to reveal it in advance: nothing! :)

The investigating commission also took a position that seems more than surprising. Apparently, it distanced itself from Nathaniel Meyer Rothschild's opinion is to be led by fools. This He had been summoned as an expert witness and had the 9 Elayden: pp. 42–148, Sinclair: Appendix pp. 129–190.

139

The view is held that the sole fault for such occurrences is "the desire of people to receive the highest possible interest rates on their "To get money." "Do you suggest we stop this situation?" "Help me?" the chairman asked him. "No, not at all," Rothschild replied. When the chairman continued to question him... Rothschild wanted to know whether this was not a very serious evil. no answer to this clear question, but spoke of the Abuse of the use of money from Honduras– Bonds. He refused during the negotiations to issue any bonds. what your own proposals to prevent future occurrences of this kind to commit fraud. This then concluded the investigation. The committee was also completely satisfied.

With such an attitude, one cannot even be happy about the Commission's report is surprising. At the end of its statement... The members of the commission made several demands. Suggestions for future solutions. They dealt with, among other things, with the question of whether one should enforce by law that a group of people who – as described above, depending on the Market conditions artificially inflate prices through buying and selling. the stock market influenced – instead of in secret, in full public view– working with sensitivity and in awareness of the audience. "It "The committee was informed," they continue, "that all Transactions in public bonds accrue to foreign interests would, if a law were passed on the basis of which the The activities of these syndicates should be made public. Dar= The committee immediately replied that – insofar as these were the only Conditions exist on the basis of which one can derive the benefits from such offers. borrowing profits accrued in England can be retained – they to would be bought at such a high price."

The main reason for such experiences is believed to be in the credulity and greed of certain circles of the population= to see a movement. These kinds of comrades seem to have value. the promises made to them not according to the rules of any kind= which experience, but merely according to their own superior– to have measured against driven expectations. This led to the discovery of a They have become easy prey for those who, trusting in such things, Gullibility led them to fraudulently obtain their money from them. have.

The committee does not consider it its duty to make any accusations against the various parties involved in these transactions do. They generally agree that... the The cause of the collapse was equally true for all those to be attributed are the interests, rights, claims, complaints or otherwise have any involvement in the matter. It is a kind of primal evil, which even extends to innocence= digst erstreckt, which have something to do with the matter)).

9 Account and Papers (1875): Vol. XI, pp. 266–207.
Times from W. and September 24, 1875.

140

Apparently, the Times also shared the committee's view that purchasers of such securities were at risk The scandal is just as much to blame as the fraudsters. Because they should have been held under such extremely favorable conditions from the outset with They have a high probability of losing their money. Can we, given such a generally prevailing opinion... Are you surprised that nothing has happened?

Even today, five million pounds are still donated annually to the Stock market lost money through fraudulent transactions.

141

Anti-Jewish forces

At the end of the last century, however, there was no shortage of upright men in England who distinguished themselves in word and writing opposed such behavior. "This age belongs to the Favorable to the machinations of the Hebrews. The use of violence

...is forbidden by our present civilization, while The use of unscrupulous deception is permitted and enshrined in law. is protected. Whoever robs a man on the street will be punished with imprisonment. Anyone who robs thousands on the stock market will be punished to live in a palace and have the aristocracy at his feet "lying." Speculating on the stock market and making money at a cost The defrauded person made this a principle. The Jews did They take advantage of the fragmentation of the people into parties and do Everything to widen the gap and fish in murky waters. But above all, it is the press – the great evil of today. Society, . . . which all too quickly falls under the secret cin- The flow of money-grubbing schemers would come. One then points out the danger, that not only in England, but all over the world Jewish Journalists using assumed Aryan names in the A staff of newspaper employees infiltrated the premises and set up a (Further information on processing the masses in a Jewish sense would be provided).

Sir Tolle, the Member of Parliament well-known in Disraeli's time, Sinclair made the public aware of it in connection with the Turkish question in a major work, that the The Jew has committed acts since time immemorial that are incompatible with our understand The concept of honor and decency cannot be reconciled. Her old will already shows her moral depravity and The story would have been an unbroken chain of crimes. the Jews. He also warned, among other things, against mixing. with the Jews.

He belongs to the ranks of anti-Jewish writers of this period. including the famous Sir Richard Burton. He died He published no fewer than 48 works and left behind numerous others. rich unfinished works). One of these was also ours. used book in which he dealt with the Jews in general and He was particularly concerned with the Jews in England. According to his View is increasingly being conveyed to the general public in England only by the kindness, thrift, and other good qualities—Stories of the Jewish communities. Few would know that the Jew actually “eats bread, not by the sweat of his brow, but in the sweat of his neighbors' brow.” He deserves his money through usury and fraud, and would become rich in the process, “the Workers, on the other hand, are starving in the middle of gold.” After Jews could previously be considered owners of gambling dens and as

1) Smith: 706–709

2) Burton: J and Geiss Borwort ©. v.

142

Find fences. They distributed salacious literature and thus corrupted the youth

As already stated above, this book is only available after death.
The author's work has been published. The publisher has informed us the very interesting reasons for this were conveyed.

According to his account, Burton was in the years 1869 to British consul in Damascus in 1871. He controlled the local situation.
He spoke languages and, disguised as a native, went to the city.
His research bore rich fruit regarding the ritual= Murders among the Jews in Asia Minor. At the same time, he was occupied with also dealing with the mysterious circumstances of the murder of Father Tomaso in Damascus in 1840. His comments on this matter
The investigations did not remain hidden from the Jews in Damascus. and aroused her utmost displeasure. This hostility was the reason that he was in 1871 by Lord Grauville, the then Foreign Minister, from where he was recalled.

However, it could not be prevented that Burton already paid=
he had gathered a wealth of material, which he used in his new position as consul in Trieste, he compiled it into a work. His Work was completed in 1874.

A year later, while on holiday in England, he laid
He presented a fine manuscript to a friend who held a very high position.
found. He advised him against it because of the anti-Semitic nature of the
The content urgently advises against publishing the book. Others Friends introduced themselves to him in the same way and... sought to dissuade him from it while he was still in the service of the
The government of a country "where the Jews have exemplary power" and hold positions; it would therefore be, to say the least, very
It would be unwise to make them his enemies." Through this Warnings prevented Burton from publishing.
and took his manuscript back to Trieste with him. His friends
They tried to arrange a transfer to Tangier – which was only one.

normal promotion according to his position of service – for to enforce it.

Year after year, Burton waited for the rank promotion that was rightfully his. But it didn't come; instead, someone else was appointed Sir William Kirby-Green was sent in 1886. This bitter Burton apparently so much so that he again without regard for was determined to consider the resulting consequences and to publish the book. publish. Meanwhile, his wife tried to... To be eligible to receive a full pension before he resigned his post and his intention regarding the book in carried out the act. However, the negotiations were delayed for years. long; died only a few months before leaving his prestigious office. Burton.

His widow also died before publication. However, she had left instructions that it be published as quickly as possible possible should have taken place. Burton's findings about the ritual murders by the Jews in connection with the murder of Father Tomaso in 1840 were not made public made accessible.

143

The omission of the chapter on ritual murders is now not It was not voluntary, but forced upon them by the Jews. Apparently, the publisher had already [made a decision] before the publication. The book includes a directory from which one can read without... further conclusions could be drawn about the content. When one I learned that the book would also be translated into foreign languages. The publisher and editor were threatened with lawsuits and other available means. At the same time, he sent Warnings were issued to all chief rabbis abroad regarding of the book with the instruction to publish on each (to prevent the case). It is very likely that this measure will be found= took the Jews who had prompted the publisher to to let the chapter continue. Especially regarding these accusations against There is relatively little flawless material available from the Jews. for modern times, and it is therefore all the more regrettable that the Science has not been granted access to these sources.

To further shed light on Burton's fate, only that pointed out that it was none other than Lord Rosebery, Burton's hopes of a transfer to Tangier through The appointment of another official was permanently thwarted. This Lord Rosebery was then Foreign Minister and later First Minister, had married a daughter of Rothschild and was thus closely linked to world Jewry.

Lord Rosebery has since passed away and been succeeded by his son, The current Earl of Rosebery succeeded him. He bears, among other things, the title of Earl, not only his grandfather's first name, namely Meyer, but also the facial features and shape of his family. His Mother inherited and is one of the largest landowners in England, as he owns more than 50,000 acres of land.

His sisters, who are half-Jewish, also have in the same way. She married into high nobility. Thus, one sister became the wife of Lieutenant General Sir Charles Grant. The other is the second wife of the famous Marquess of Crewe. The moment Lord Crewe famously attended the festival in 1905. He explained that he believed there were also honorable people without Jewish heritage. blood, but he was particularly proud to be of Jewish descent, while (fine wife of the Rothschild family).

One of his daughters is married to Sir Edward Coates, another to the Honourable George Colville, son of Viscount Colville of Culroß, married. The other two found wives. by Major JH Dodds and the Duke of Roxburghe.

) Emanuel: p. 142.

) Trans. Yew. Hift. Soc.: Vol. 5, p. 203.

144

England and World Jewry

The books mentioned above were the expression of the people's reawakened anti-Judaism. The Jews were of course. They did not miss this hostile current. They therefore considered a A tighter organization is necessary, especially given the relevant The English decor is a little outdated, and the French decor, which Alliance Israélite, hardly existed after the war of 1870/71= was present. Under the main leadership of Sir Francis Goldsmid and Dr. Benish, the then editor of the "Jewish Chronicle", the entire former organization was restructured. built up, at the top of which was, among others, the aforementioned Sir George Jesse was standing. Later we find Baron [name omitted] on the line. Henry de Worms, later Lord Pirbright.

According to the claims of the Jews themselves, one could from now on to once again rightfully state that London is the world= the center of the Jews, to which all persecuted Jews turned their eyes. They could turn around and wait for help.

How far the power of the Jews had already gone at that time, This results from a summary of the interventions that from the British government between 1860 and 1910= favors have been granted to the Jews. For only in this way can the It will be most vividly demonstrated how far the British government has gone in the past already a tool of world Jewry was. We know that this claim is not full proof. needed. But this has once again been denied to us here by the Jews. was made possible by themselves. It is, in fact, by one of their races. comrades, Charles Emanuel, an extract from the session= minutes of the London Committee of Deputies of British Jews have been published. This is a treasure trove for our Evidence and shall be used exclusively in the following, because there is no sound basis. In addition, other factors come into play. official bases, such as the Blue Book on the Be= Actions of the Jews in Serbia and Romania.

In all the relevant interventions by the British government Is it obvious that the entire apparatus of the Foreign Office and the English world power not only the achievement of British not only serving interests, but also fully serving the world Jew= available. The further conclusion to be drawn from this is, To establish a dependence on world Jewry would likely probably not too bold.

Now, let's look at the individual cases.

In 1860, the memory of the murder of the priest was commemorated. Tomaso was revived in Damascus in 1840. In a A memorial plaque was affixed to the Capuchin chapel there. was, on which it was stated that Tomaso had been murdered by the Jews been.

10,145

The Foreign Office in London was made aware of this inscription on= made aware of the issue and decided to oppose its installation. to proceed with the board. "In fact," Emanuel reports, "destroyed Shortly afterwards, a fire accidentally destroyed both the inscription and the Chapel." Apparently, following this "accidental" Brand" unrest against the Jews, and the foreign policy The authorities were again urged to intervene. "Lord John Russell immediately sent instructions to the British envoy in Constantinople, to take immediate measures to protect the to incite Jews. He did this with such energy that Many of the oppressors were punished and the accused Jew was set free. "Footsteps were established." The reason for the unrest was... Emanuel does not reveal what happened, or why the Jew was imprisoned. However, there should hardly be any doubt that all this is in (connection with the burning down of the chapel).

In the same year, news came of a poor treatment-

Lung of the Jews in Persia. Admonitions of the British there Envoys not only went unheard, but also led to the Cin-
The burning of Jewish homes. This sparked another protest.
presented by the British envoy. Regarding the success...
Nothing has been made public.

The Foreign Office was already informed in the next two years in similar matters with the governments for the . active in Corfu and Tripoli, mostly with success.

When Jews who emigrated from Russia to Jerusalem in 1863 had relinquished their citizenship, they were on Order from London immediately placed under the protection of the British appointed consul.

In 1865, the British Consul General in Serbia requested better conditions for the Jews from the ruling prince.
He also shares his fine request with the oldest member of the community whom he has summoned local Jewish community. When the accusations of further injustices were made,
The rest against the Jews could not be prevented, new ones followed.
Ideas. A remedy was promised. The same insurance company.
was also granted upon renewed request by the Shah of Persia given. Apparently, it wasn't meant seriously, since
The British Foreign Office will again be involved as early as next year.
believed he had to intervene in favor of the Jews.

The next four years see four different requests againstabout Romania. Lord Stanley had appointed the Earl of Clarendon as He replaced the foreign minister. He explained to the leaders of the Jews, that he should always be ready to make his services available to put in place to protect the Jews from persecution. When one in 1867 despite the earlier promises of the person concerned Governments that declared Jews in Romania to be vagrants,

1) Emanuel: pp. 76-77ff.

146

The British representative was instructed to speak with the reigning prince about the immediate punishment of those in
The question is to request the arrival of the next official. In the following year Then a general protection for the Jews was granted by the Romanian authorities.
guaranteed by the government. But shortly afterwards, anti-Jluidife
When the measures became known, the British general protested.
. energetically on the personal instructions of the Foreign Minister against. |

Serbia caused distress to world Jewry in 1869.

As a result, the British government left no doubt that that Serbia only had England's support against the Türkiye would find it helpful if there were finally no more persecution of Jews under= would take..

In the years 1872, 1875 and 1876, the Foreign Office again intervened on behalf of the Jews in Turkey and achieved and each time, the satisfaction of his desires.

When conditions in Persia changed again in 1876, the Jews were worsened, the English government announced via telegraph. fchem way instruct their representative to immediately implement protective measures to demand from the government. This request was denied. spoken.

In the coming decades, Romania and Morocco in particular would be the subject of British ideas in this regard

In 1876, conflicts took place between Romania on the one hand and England on the other. On the other hand, discussions about the conclusion between the country and France. a trade agreement. The original proposals here= for the Jews in England would have received from the grants therein Trading advantages excluded. They heard about it and pro- They protested against such contract content in a memorandum. A copy of it was sent to the Alliance Israellite in Paris. sent. The Foreign Office in London then assured the Jews, that the agreement in its intended form was not by would be concluded with the British government.

In the same year, in individual districts of Romania Expulsion decrees for Jews were issued. At the request of the Expulsion Commissioner... These regulations were not only issued by the Foreign Office in London not lifted, but the four officials responsible for this dismiss.

As the Berlin Conference approached, the Executive of the Jewish Community of London presented the English government with a request, in the event of a possible declaration of independence by Romania and other Balkan states for the freedom and equality of To demand security measures from Jews themselves. We We will remember that Disraeli took action in this regard. ift. But the Jews were by no means in agreement with those he had- They were satisfied with the agreements reached. They expressed their disappointment. in a special letter to Lord Salisbury and claimed that the British government had been ripped off by Romania been cut down. When, in 1884, the Jews were of the opinion that Romania should have upheld the treaties concluded in Berlin to Feeling disadvantaged, they requested the intervention of the British government in Bucharest. For the first time, they received a negative decision. They suffered the same fate the next time. Years. Lord Salisbury explained to them that this was an inner-Romania's political affairs, into which one (sic) does not get involved—can mix. This rejection is probably due to the al—Lord Salisbury's cruel attitude towards the Jews—leading to a situation that wasn't exactly very friendly. To this For a time he was First Minister and simultaneously managed the out-Foreign Ministry. This period of his administration and also the later ones are remarkable in relation to other cabinets—valued for the almost complete absence of such interference. We We will return to Lord Salisbury again below.

10% 147

Morocco was to be counter-insurgencyd in the years 1876, 1880, 1885 and 1887. The British state of mind will be. When the British Er—Since the warnings in the penultimate case had not been sufficient, action was taken. together with France, the United States and Italy.

Even during the period from 1889 to 1896, in Morocco, that the Jews are protected as much as possible on every occasion and The residents in question were severely punished.

During a criminal trial against a Jew in Corfu, The Foreign Office, at the request of the Jews, in 1880 A representative was appointed to attend the negotiations. The Jew was acquitted.

Success was also achieved in this regard in 1888 Interventions in Turkey.

In Malta, in 1892, under the express pressure—approval of the local Roman Catholic archbishop A leaflet was distributed accusing the Jews of ritual murder. were. The population was urged to keep a close eye on their children. to give.

The Jews in Malta, according to common practice—turned to London with the result that Lord Nipon of August—Foreign Office instructions to the Governor for the protection of Jews were sent. Furthermore, the archbishop of West Minister, at the instigation of the Jews in London, to his Colleagues in Malta with the request to use his influence to return—to assert the right to dispose of the leaflet. This intervention It also had the desired success.

In that same year, the Jewish community felt itself protected by a law—The draft is causing concern in Switzerland. According to this draft, ritual slaughter sho It will be prohibited for livestock. Upon the law coming into effect World Jewry feared that other nations would also do this. could take an example. Once again it was Lord Rosebery who in

The interests of the Jews were taken into account, for it was he who issued this message. which was forwarded to Lord Ripon at the Foreign Office. Immediately an article published in the medical journal "British Medical Journal" stating that the Jewish method of slaughter according In the scientists' view, the least cruel and merit- The Jews in London were informed about the matter. kept informed by Lord Rosebery. The Law= The proposal failed in the Swiss National Council, so that no Further warning measures from London were no longer necessary.

148

Further interventions by the Aus= also took place in Persia. foreign office.

When a Jew was killed there in 1890, the perpetrator was punished on the grounds of Enaland and the Tamils were expelled from the Jews compensated. Two years later, Lord Rosebery demanded... During the attacks there, protective measures were taken against the Jews, who also implemented with the help of troops. On dte- Similar unrest occurred in the same way in 1898. and prevented in 1907. But the Jews and the exodus occupied the most. The office in question around the turn of the century and later with the events= nifon in Nussland.

When the rights of Jews in Russia were renewed in 1890 Since restrictions were imposed, a meeting was held under the chairmanship of the The meeting of the Chief Magistrate of the City of London took place in the Guildhall. the "Verfolana of the Jews as a scandal for Christianity" "Damned." A memorandum was drafted and sent to the Tsar. sent, but he refused to accept it. This time he refrained from... the British government was unable to intervene, since it "It's an internal political matter." Nevertheless, he pointed out They contacted their representatives in Russia, reporting on the impact to submit the legal measures.

In the years 1904, 1905, 1906 and 1910, the must- However, the foreign office actively advocated for the Jews in Russia and She always managed to ensure that no action was taken against her.

The compilation of these interventions by England to= The favor of the Jews should suffice and could be proven beyond doubt. have, to what extent world Jewry and Great Britain since to work together for a long time. Yes, it might even be possible without To exaggerate, it is actually quite difficult to find another one. to establish a greater difference between these two powers. The Jews themselves make no secret of this position of power, as which results from the following statement by the Jew Simon Wolf:

"We all know that the world's greatest bankers – the family Rothschild – Jews are. We know that they not only have money= not only to dominate the market, but also the political destiny of Europe The press in Europe is largely controlled by Jews; the Editor-in-chief finds Jews... The revolutionary ideas in Europe were initiated by the Jews and advanced by them= driven .. .).

) Simon Wolf: pp. 86–34.

149

Boer War – Jewish War

The close connection between the Jews and England goes but also from the causes that led to the Boer War in 1899= waged war.

The Boers were in the first half of the 19th century from the Cape Colony under English rule migrated because the English had denied them their cultural They were not granted an independent existence. They colonized, among other places... Trausvaal, which has been part of other small free towns since 1884 Boer states united to form the South African Republic= had closed. In all the years before and after this founding Until the outbreak of the war, there had been disputes with the had Eugenians. When rich goldfields were discovered in the interior in 1886 When half of the Boer territory was discovered, it was obvious that that the English would soon add this country to their colonial empire= would attempt to integrate. ö u

The center of the gold industry, Johannesburg, was known throughout The population grew to approximately 100,000 in a short time. The shops And places of entertainment were in the hands of the Jews. The country In Transvaal, half already belonged to around the year 1900, and (Nine-tenths of the nation's wealth went to the Jews). In view by Hobson, who explicitly states in his book that he is not one= if they agreed with the "shameful anti-Semitic rhetoric", they set Johannesburg undoubtedly represents New Jerusalem. If the number the Jewish population, at approximately 15,000, is relatively small. They completely dominated the life of this city. The Gord-Mines were almost exclusively in their hands. At the top At that time, the so-called Edftein group was present with the The company Wernher Beit & Co. controlled, among other things, 29 mines with a market value at the time of approximately £76 million. Similar Companies with a major influence on the entire economy of the Lands could also be found everywhere else. The City of London, including Rothschild, who also had a strong interest in gold.

industry. Names like Albu, Barnato, Neumann and others were and still are leaders in Transvaal. One of the Among the few Christians in these societies was Cecil Rhodes. Also All other branches of industry were mostly in the hands of of the Jews, regardless of whether in wholesale or retail trade. It Under these circumstances, it was inevitable that the Stock market businesses were controlled by Jews. Jewish The stock exchange was closed on public holidays. As usual, the Jews were also heavily involved as moneylenders, and the The Boers on their farms were completely indebted to them. However, the Jews acquired their greatest influence through the fact that fie the press and fo dte public opinion largely con= trolled. The prevailing influence of the Jews went so far, that some entertainment venues also close on Jewish holidays were not open.

1) Hobson: pp. 11–18ff.

150

For various reasons, the Jews were now involved with the The Boer government is dissatisfied. Apart from the allegedly high costs. Dynamite prices – there was a state dynamite monopoly, in which the Jews were not involved – and the railway line that was too high= freight – the railway was also almost exclusively owned by the Government – it was primarily a question of wages= design and, consequently, the labor question, which gave rise to constant complaints from Jewish groups.

In addition, the economic situation in the English colony Rhodesia was very bad. The same people who were in the Gold= Those who were industry leaders also had great interests there. The damage suffered there was hoped to be offset by the expected to easily compensate for the large surplus in the gold mines. However, what was necessary for the merger of these businesses was the annexation of Transvaal').

It was of course impossible for the gold industry to use these reasons. could not communicate this to the British public. Therefore, it was necessary Others are invented to have a pretext for war.

These could all too easily be blamed for alleged assaults by Boers were found opposing Britons in Johannesburg and the surrounding area. The press played a major role in this. The Jews and their friends had already done a good amount of preparatory work for this. Thus, the Eckstein and Barnato group held the majority of the shares. in Cape Town's leading evening newspaper, Cape Argus. They He then quickly controlled almost all other important Newspapers in this English colony. Eventually, it was also the most influential newspaper, the "Cape Times", by the Jews and bought up by their friends. Other newspapers too, like in Port. Elizabeth, Durban, and other major squares went into the hands of the Jews and their friends.

In the Boer Republic, the Prefe was also appointed by the same She controlled people. She also did everything to create a crisis. lead. In recent years, the aforementioned persons= sons founded daily newspapers, all of which were against the government of Buren Front made. The "Star" and the "Leader" made sure of above all for the fact that the reporting on the various pre= The incidents hurt the pride of the English.

This was already the case for insightful contemporaries of that time. There is no doubt that the press initially targeted the English population in South Africa and then prepared for war in Great Britain had"). :

Thus, there can be no doubt here that the war brought one of the most valuable land acquisitions for the English Crown,

– EEE EEE EEG

*) Reig: p. 60.

:) Hobson: pp. 27–228. Stead, in the preface to Reitz's book: p. VII.

151

On the other hand, however, the lust for power of Judaism is again demonstrated, without bringing any advantages to the individual Englishman. Also of a rule of the English people in South Africa could There is practically no question of it, since all of life depends on the above. was controlled by the aforementioned persons.

The conquest of the Boer Republic has affected world Jewry and his friends were significantly strengthened in their power, as the importance This acquisition is evident simply from the fact that South Africa has long accounted for 50% or more of the total annual promotes the world's largest gold yield. We will even continue to see that today one can almost speak of a gold monopoly of the Jews can speak in the world.

King Edward – Encircler and friend of the Jews

Queen Victoria died in 1901. Her son, King

Edward VII succeeded her to the throne. Was the Boer War one of the important milestones of Jewish rule in Great Britain britannic, so one can probably rightly claim that the The reign of Edward VII brought the coronation.

His fondness for Jews is so widely known that only Some details will be shared. His biggest fears... The three Rothschild brothers were the trustees, one of whom was Alfred (fogar is described as a fine bosom friend). Also the family Sassoon could not complain about a lack of affection. Sir Ernest is usually considered his closest friend. to call Cassel. The king made him and another Jewish friend, Sir Edgar Speyer, to become a member of the Crown Council'). Sir Ernest was perhaps the most influential alongside Rothschild. Banker of his time, and called a very large fortune his own. He was born in Cologne and felt obligated to the Anglo-German Fellowship, a society for understanding between Germans and Englishmen, with the provision of to launch with £200,000?). His daughter has the married the well-known Lord Mount Temple. From this marriage came... Two daughters resulted from the birth. One of them is Captain A. Cunningham Reid, a conservative Member of Parliament, The other one married Lord Mountbatten. He belongs to the highest nobility and since 1937 aide-de-camp to the King. He He is also closely related to the royal family. The father was the former Prince of Battenberg, who in 1917 He felt he had to translate his name into English. again with Princess Victoria, the daughter of the Grand Duke Ludwig IV of Hesse and his wife Alice, ve The latter was the daughter of Queen Victoria.

All of King Edward VII's Jewish friends were among the one the most river-rich circles of finance and economy. This shows best understood from a letter by Wilhelm II to the Prince of Bülow, in which he writes as follows: "Ballin told me: Shortly Werner Beit was with him. He is the biggest speculator. and stockbroker in the city, one of the organizers of the Buren war and African mine fraud. He worries about everyone. Speculation ok His Majesty, who is almost a shareholder in his Transactions are, and must always be, at his, His Majesty's house. He needs to get more money, as he needs more and more. One could say, "He runs the King" (must endure the king).

) Jewish Year Book (1837): p. 868.
ackson: p. 103.
ewish Chronicle, May 7, 1937.
pectator: p. 193.

One can therefore easily imagine to what extent the king favored the Jews. He also tried to make it socially acceptable, insofar as this was not already the case. This often happens in England because the persons concerned= the members of feudal clubs. But the king objected. his efforts in this regard were met in part with very strong opposition Resistance was present, but it wasn't always successful. To address this in the To avoid the future, he founded the Marlborough Club and He gathered only his most devoted members around him there, who were the The introduction of Jews was met with no resistance. Today The club is considered one of the most exclusive in London, and it as we have been personally assured, this is hardly possible anymore today. Jews admitted!

Of the king's determination to do everything for his Jewish The fact that he did it on a friend also testifies to his efforts to make friends. A break with a deserving minister was allowed to arrive.

This refers to the aforementioned Lord. Salisbury. To this day, the reasons for his resignation remain unclear. That's completely clear. Although it's likely that fine, bad health... He gave a considerable reason for his action. Besides However, other reasons put forward also strongly suggest that Lord Salisbury despite the ongoing pressure from the King Edward VII was unwilling to accept one of the Jewish friends of the the latter in the list of those to be awarded a title to include persons. When the king, at his request, existed and took responsibility for it, Lord Salisbury fine farewell request cins).

Keith: pp. 105–106.

Jews flood England

Under King Edward VII, a new law was also to be passed to... prevention of unhindered immigration to Great Britain to be dismissed. This process was preceded by years of struggle. This preceded a debate for or against controlling immigration.

In the second half of the last century, Emigrants en masse from east to west. Among them were... The majority of those present were Jewish.

Ever since the end of the Crimean War, one could see from year to year an increasing immigration from Russia, which at that time was (which also included Poland and Lithuania, as determined!). On= Apparently, the new naturalization law from the year The 1870s event did not fail to have an effect on foreigners. Following this, it was possible They achieve naturalization after only a few years. long, especially since the prerequisites for it are easy to fulfill. were.

After 1882, a veritable flood of Eastern Jews poured into England. In Russia, the well-known May-Laws were enacted in 1882. They stipulated that the Jews only under very specific conditions in the countryside were allowed to live. Thus, the Hebrews had to prove, among other things, that they already outside the cities at a certain time= had settled there. If they could not meet this requirement, They had to return to the nearest town. Furthermore Jews were only allowed to emigrate within fifteen days. designated provinces of the then Russian Empire= to stop. The consequence of this was an overcrowding of the Cities in the area in question took place and the Jews in= Consequently, they had to look for other settlement sites.

The main masses went to England and America. Just like today, protest rallies were held back then against Such laws were enacted, and one could not do enough to condemn them as to call it a disgrace to civilization. In the Mansion House was at such a gathering for the poor, persecuted Jews collected a sum of £108,000, – and this concerns= made available to the refugee committee?).

The Jews mainly came by ship from Hamburg and Bremen and were mostly born in London and Hull lands. There were some difficulties during the entry. No migration. At that time, no one in England knew of any such thing. Passport=, there was still a registration requirement. There was only a Immigration law from the time of King William IV, but as a result of his age of about fifty years and the Due to changed circumstances, it no longer met the requirements.

9 Wilkins: Alien Invasion, p. 18.
) Landa: p. 7ff. Wolf: Effays, p. 858.

Ships, a list of the foreigners on board= to prepare and hand them over to the responsible customs officer). All in all, the law was in no way suitable, even just... to bring about the smallest possible restriction on immigration, especially since it did not provide for immigration officers to handle the landings. They could prohibit it. Even the existing customs officers had no authority whatsoever. Therefore, anyone could come to England, who for whatever reason has established his residence in this country believed they had to exchange. The newcomers mostly offered A sorry sight. This is evident, among other things, from the shields. struggles by customs officers who had spent years in the port of London were active and appeared before a committee of the Parliament in 1889 ments gave their observations as witnesses.

The passengers of these immigrant ships were, according to this The aforementioned evidence was gathered entirely without any means. With very few exceptions, they arrived in England without luggage. They usually only had a handkerchief, into which they put a little bit They had tied dry bread and a herring together. The clothing It was caked in dirt and usually completely torn. It was acting This almost exclusively concerns Polish, Russian, Lithuanian, Galician and German Jews. Upon arrival, the ships saw one already sees their race comrades standing around, who then show their faces. took them. What became of them after that, the authorities had no idea. To establish interest. They were usually looked in that direction. East London, especially in the Whitechapel district, disappear)).

It was not only London that was blessed with these Jews was. Many other cities too, especially Bradford, Hull, Manchester, Glasgow, Leeds and others were visited by them. populations. The consequence of this was that in the cities concerned A severe housing shortage became noticeable. Entire neighborhoods. were cleared by the English population because they (could not stand the dirt and stench there). In which The extent to which this was the case can be seen, among other places, in Leeds. There had the Jews multiplied so much that the English population= The excitement was heightened. The number of people present there is unknown. It could not be precisely determined how many had been laid down. Because Neither authorities nor private individuals had bothered about the above. the aforementioned law was disregarded, and it was therefore almost beyond reproach. A change has occurred. Official censuses, as we know, were also will be seen further, inaccurately. How different the opinions are. about the number of Jews in a medium-sized city like Leeds The population at that time was approximately 370,000, according to an official statement. The evidence presented in this regard was revealed. Thus, the present-

- 8) Accounts and Papers (1889): BS. 10, pp. 267-2A0.
) Accounts and Papers (1889): Nd. 10, pp. 315-33.
) Accounts and Papers (1889): Vol. 10, pp. 333-342, 348ff.

about rabbis of the Jewish community who were heard, the number is at most 6000, while a doctor who has a large practice in he had in the Jewish quarters, estimating their number at 15,000. A Leeds, on the other hand, had at least 30,000 souls. and).

It had also become very bad in certain districts of London, such as Hackney, Shoreditch and Whitechapel. There they had The Jews will increase their wealth by three to four times in six to eight years. more and the English population already from entire streets= (moves displaced)).

Thus, in 1889, the aforementioned committee was established in Parliament. This was intended, first and foren Determine the extent of immigration, and as far as possible also its disadvantages. It met in the months of May and July and produced after extensive evidence gathering, to which we have already partially referenced a longer estate= pay attention. At the end of the same, the commission reached its conclusion. Position in seven points and its recommendations for improvement The situation is summarized in five paragraphs.

In the former, she noted, among other things, that immigration was... significantly increasing and "the poorest and worst class in England" "remained." However, she did not request any restriction of the objections. derung, since a corresponding law would pose too great difficulties would encounter. One should simply ensure accurate official- in the future. (Does this constitute a proper count of foreigners?).

Following this finding, it is therefore not surprising that the Zu= The flow of Jews did not decrease, but increased from year to year intensified.

Meanwhile, partly unbearable conditions had developed in the economy regarding wages and other working conditions highlighted. In 1890, the so-called Sweating Committee met. Committee under Lord Dunraven. The latter, after a long time, produced Investigations, a draft of the report to be submitted on. In this, he cited the unsocial working conditions as the main issue. The issue is objectively related to immigration. This viewpoint was however, this view was not shared by the other members of the committee. so that they refused to give their consent to the draft. Lord Dunraven then resigned as chairman. That same year, opponents of an unhindered Immigration raises public awareness of the danger of being overrun by foreigners. to draw attention to the issue. They called meetings to discuss it. in which Lord Dunraven and Sir Howard Vincent played a lively part Arnold White and WH Wilkins, the former Secretary to Lord Dunraven, held leading positions.

The latter complained about the foreign immigrants in an article in ) Accounts and Papers 20 Md. 10, pp. 835–848.

1) Accounts and Papers (1839): Nd. 10, pp. 348ff.

) Accounts and Papers (1889): Vol. 10, pp. 274–275.

157

the "National Review" of September 1890, that they deprived the English of their birthrights').

The liberal circles referred, among other things, to the meanwhile... public official statistics of the Ministry of Trade (Board of Trade). This is where the arrivals were placed in such a subdivided, which are on route to places out of the United Kingdom were found, i.e., transit passengers, and those whose destination was England was. However, the opponents drew particular attention to the fact that that the publications in question were for various reasons did not correspond to the facts. To what extent they were right about that, will be discussed below.

Meanwhile, immigration took on an increasingly strong character. Scope, especially in Russia in 1890 new versions= Provisions relating to the May laws of 1882 were issued were those who further encouraged the migration of Jews from East to West increased. Protest rallies were held again via the Darba- The Tsar's measures took place, and again an amount was... of approximately £100,000, – collected.

Nevertheless, the general opinion strongly favored the Research into the entire issue of immigration interested, so that even those who came to power in 1892 The incoming liberal government will not entirely fulfill these wishes. could withdraw. However, initially they only entered into renewed sub- Searches were launched. Two members of the [organization/unit] were sent to this [location] Commission appointed for the purpose of going to America to learn about the legal immigration restrictions introduced there He= to make increases.

On February 11, 1893, the whole problem came to light in a long Parliamentary debate on language. The opponents of the over- The alienation of England was discussed by the Member of Parliament James Lowther. led. He pointed out that public corporations and Trade associations consider further immigration intolerable= held. The official statistics on this are for a The assessment of the situation is useless. It would happen that the Passenger lists, which the captains had to compile due to the now renewed situation law enacted during the time of King William IV.

to be produced and on which the official censuses would be based supported, not infrequently by the cabin boys of the ship in question Steamers would be built. In addition, one would have to completely relied on the information provided by the immigrants and no one... steps taken to allow the transit-to determine traveling. According to the new, stricter immigration regulations= Regulations in America even pose a risk that here-many remained in the country. The influx of foreigners would best English blood displaced and forced to emigrate= driven).

) Landa: p.

1) Ganfard: 4th page, Vol. 8, pp. 1154ff

158

His speech was frequently interrupted by the Jewish member of parliament.
Sir Julian Goldsmid interrupted. This occurred during the course the next few years are very much in favor of unhindered immigration one. He was the chairman of the so-called Russian-Jewish committees and therefore significantly active in this regard. His name and coat of arms is today held by Baron Osmond Elim d'Avigdor= Goldsmid continued the business, and he also succeeded him. The latter has a holds a significant position in the economy.

During the course of the disputes, James Lowther wished to know where the draft law for an immigration regulation=
The government that had resigned remained in the government. Sir Charles Dilke explained to him that he had no knowledge of this. An on= Their representative, however, stated that he even the
I saw the draft legislation with my own eyes.

Mundella, the president of the Board of Trade, regretted that despite
We have not discovered anything in our investigations on this matter.
cannot help but note that this is done with regard to the
The liberal government's aversion to immigration restrictions= to issue, is not possible. In the following Her supporters argued in debates that one should help the poor Jews.
but not take away the possibility of immigrating to England could. They would have suffered so inhumanly in Russia under the harsh conditions.
to suffer under laws that therefore they are granted refuge would have to. What all did one owe the Jews! Had one already Previously, Jewish emigrants were excluded; if one did not consider the have admitted the Disraeli family, and England would thus be the
The service of this great Jew has been lost. Furthermore,
Should one complain about the supposedly down-and-out immigrants?
Do n't worry. Ten English people walked for each of them.
countries of the same class. In fact, it is primarily a matter of

Among the Jews, it refers to people with outstanding qualities.
The above statements were mainly made by Sir Charles Dilke and Mr. Mundella made it. The one they led That direction also prevailed in the vote. That's how it came about.
not subject to any legal immigration restrictions.

So things remained as they were, with the liberal regime still in place.
leave it up to you, take any precautions.

However, she still had little inclination to do so. As a result=
Lord Salisbury, who was in the opposition, brought this up in The House of Lords introduced a bill that does not include a general exemption.
not only did it provide for restrictions on immigration, but primarily it also addressed t criminal elements are denied free entry into England.
wanted to make that possible. The discussion took place on July 6, 1894.
over instead. After a heated exchange between Rosebery and Salisbury, as well as a closing statement by the Jewish Lord Chancellor, Lord Herschel, who also opposed the bill=
Despite the opposition of liberal peers, the speech was given, and the decision was made.
second reading.

159

Some Woden later, the then Lord Londonderry asked Lord Salisbury to withdraw his application, since he was in the under=
The house would not find a majority. In fact, the law is...
The design also later disappeared without a trace into oblivion!!).

The next few years seemed to be the ones favored by a large part of the population—to bring about legislation longed for by the people, especially since the speech from the Queen Victoria upon the accession of the new government in the year contained a final promise in this regard in 1896. But Despite all the pressure from interested parties, nothing happened.
The Queen's speech next year about the activities of the
The government remained completely silent on this issue. The same thing happened.
in 1898. To everyone's surprise, Lord
Hardwig in the same year rejected the earlier bill proposed by Lord Salisbury. But nothing came of this in the following period either.
more heard. Erft after the Boer War, which changed everything.
The measure, in the government's view, made impossible, should the
The battle erupts more fiercely than ever.

A new member of parliament had been elected, who was in the Subsequently, he held a leading position against the foreign infiltration of England.
was to enter. It was Major William Evans Gordon, whose constituency is at the center of the events in Stepney, a district in East London. He had already a For a while, all English people who opposed the ever-increasing number of to resist the spreading Judaization of East London, in order to gathered and incorporated a unified system into their efforts brought in. It was probably due to his drive that an explicitly anti-Jewish organization, the so-called Britain Brothers' League, was founded. everywhere Information assemblies were held and energetic demands were made. Defensive measures against foreign infiltration were often such gatherings, moves in the most threatened areas A quarter ahead. The work of these species-preserving forces took place. great resonance in the nation, and for the second time after the Emancipation was accompanied by an anti-Jewish wave in England.

The Judaization of East London nevertheless made un= Significant progress. Where just recently the apartments of Where workers had once had gardens, there were now small ones. Tabrification plants, whose owners and workers almost entirely- Finally, they were Jews. Masses of them thronged the streets. Jewish peddlers and itinerant merchants. Everywhere you saw Ver- Market stalls. One street after another was transformed by the abandoned by the English population, the chapels and churches They stood deserted in the districts. Then as now, people believed not in an English, but in a purely Jewish one to stop the city. You can see this in some of the shops. Hebrew letters, the names of Jews. Even the fires- Messengers bear English and Hebrew inscriptions. Throughout 11) Landa: pp. 2-23.

160

In a short time around the turn of the century, the Jews had in the Often London's approximately 107 streets were completely occupied. Countless others were already predominantly Jewish and are now entirely within the Hands of the Hebrews. The population density is likely un= had been surpassed. Most were often quite extensive They had only one room to serve all purposes.

atte n). l ,

There was not the slightest indication that the Jewish immigrants belonged to a better class than the earlier arrivals. They were covered in dirt and were without every means. An official gives an impressive account of this. Writing. Thus, part of the [document] was transported by ship in 1905. Jews who had arrived in London were transported by bus to the nearest railway station. brought to the station. The official then spoke of the owner- The owners of the vehicles were assured that they would be thoroughly cleaned. New arrivals are not only very dirty, but also full of vermin had been).

The publication of this letter provoked great resentment.

among the Jews, and one of their representatives wrote an open letter. Letter to the "Times". In it he objected to the festival. Statements by the relevant health official. The Jewish Immigrants would be characterized by "excellent external appearance- Appearances. Some of them may not have been very clean, but this is not the fault of the immigrants. Rather, this was due to the six-day journey and the dirt on caused on board the ships." This, however, only seems to be the To have been in the eyes of the Jews, for they were respected men They repeatedly expressed this publicly. England "the waste of the waste from Eastern Europe and the ab= (receive the shame of the Jewish community).

The truth of this claim soon became apparent, that crime increased significantly.

It was primarily the crimes typical of Jews that were used against which meant the authorities had to intervene. Thus we find much Prostitution and illegal distilling."). Forgeries of Banknotes and tokens were not uncommon, and bankruptcy= Crimes were also one of the most frequent Jewish offenses back then. legalities"). It was, among other things, decided by the competent courts. established for a period of three years that creditors a total amount of £1,220,850,-, or approximately 45 million Reichsmarks, which had been lost in such bankruptcies. Four fifths The common debtors had already gone bankrupt more than once. does this and thereby caused further damage to the public of £354,600.

12) Gordon: pp. 10-19.

13) Times, October 4, 1905.

14) Times of October 9, 1906, %) Cv ua Members of Parliament in the House of Commons; cf. Times of the 3rd time in 1900. Whelpley: pp. 26-27. i 16) H. Lewis: pp. 173-176. Landa: pp. 159-169. White: p. 191. Gordon: p.wo.

17) Accounts and Papers (1036): Vol. 9, p. 27. Gordon: p. 207ff.

11,161

As early as 1893, the official declaration was made that the costs of imprisonment alone for the convicted single-hikers on E 30,000, - were estimated'),

Over time, more and more mixed marriages are found, which which inevitably led to disastrous consequences.

These untenable conditions brought about by the Jews did not remain hidden from the public, so that the onslaught of Anti-Semitism became increasingly violent, and the government sought to address it. No longer withdraw demands for in-depth investigations could. On January 28, 1902, the government indicated that it would appoint an investigative commission in the near future. This actually happened, and as early as April 24, 1902, the Commission holds its meetings.

Seven members were represented in it, among them Lord Rothschild, in order to maintain impartiality, furthermore belonged Major Evans Gordon appointed the assessors. The chairmanship was held by Hands of Lord James of Hereford.

Forty-nine meetings were held. The activity-ness of the Commission including the preparation of the approximately The 1100-page report covered a period of time of about one and a half years. One hundred and seventy-five witnesses and experts were heard, 23639 questions and answers were asked. The words were recorded. The report was completed on August 10, 1903. (posed). ;

He initially deals with the causes of immigration to Eastern Europe. A precise understanding had been gained through- This resulted in Major Evans Gordon being sent there. It was determined that the vast majority of the immigration, which had begun in 1880, from Eastern European Jews exist. The main stream of them flows through Hamburg, Bremen, Rotterdam and Libau to England. From the first Four steamers arrive at the port every week, from the nearest Three each of the two, and one of the latter. Upon their arrival would the Jews, regardless of whether they stayed in England or be passing through on their way to America, from members of the received by the Jewish organization "Jewish Shelter"?"). Upon questioning, it emerged that the arrivals in the In the years 1901 and 1902, 24.8% would have not owned a penny. The average for this over the last eight years has been 22%. beings, while another 15% had less than ten shillings can demonstrate.

Very thorough investigations once again confirmed the criminal investigations The situation of immigrants and the overpopulation of the East of London with all its associated excesses.

15) Accounts and ar 18008: 85 B. " 9, S uf. gerith Chronicle from August 14, 1908.
3°) Accounts and Papers (1008): Init.

162

With that in mind, it seemed advisable to... migration in general and settlement in certain areas
To allow access to certain locations only under certain conditions.

The proposals to resolve the situation are now not being considered.
for example, by restricting immigration, – rather
This should only be a precaution for official and correct statistics.
will be affected. Only if a foreigner is in the first two
He was found guilty of a crime during the years of his stay.
if it is unwanted or otherwise undesirable, a certain
The court may be authorized to order deportation. To avoid
In the future, certain city districts should be designated as overpopulation zones.
Restricted areas will be declared in which the settlement of new inhabitants is prohibited
Newcomers are forbidden.

This report was prepared by Lord Rothschild and Sir Kenelm Dingby
They agreed only subject to a separate report. They explained including the finding that the increased Crime has occurred due to the immigration of Eastern European Jews.
be. But they most strongly opposed the proposal that in the future the settlement of immigrants in certain areas Districts should be prohibited.

The report immediately drew criticism from the public.
Arnold White expressed his concerns in an open letter.
Expression. He did not believe that the proposed Elevate the system of restricted zones to law in parliament.
would. "The members of the commission seemed to be facing the enormous to underestimate the influence of Jews in politics and the press and the
To overlook the fact that their leader does not deal with this
He had agreed to the proposal. In recent years, he came to the realization that no measures could be taken without the
The consent of the Jewish leaders could be obtained."
Apart from that, he considered the Jews capable, even in the case (to circumvent the law with such an arrangement?).

The press was partly pleased with this finding of fact= Things that have long been the subject of contrary claims had been. "This land," she explained, "is the dumping ground."
space for the human committee of other nations ge-
"They were called the poor, criminals, and idiots." Nation Losgelaufen™). Another newspaper pointed out that One, driven by false sentimental motives, rejects all those strangers who...
I let in people mainly composed of Eastern European Jews.
"The slogan of free asylum has been used to..."

England's doors wide open to the scum of all nations
"Open." The application of the saying is now finally demanded.
Words: "Charity begins first at home," and protection the nation from being overrun by foreigners?). Even the "Daily Telegraph"

- u) Sunday Sun from August 16, 1908.
- un) Daily Mail from August 18, 1908.
- 23) Morning Post from August 12th and 14th, 1908.

11% 168

of August 12, 1903, admitted that the excess was mainly caused by Eastern European Jews

However, the population of London saw progress.
in the report and asked the government in a mass meeting lung in the following November, as quickly as possible a to introduce a draft bill.

But it wasn't until March 29, 1904, that the Interior Minister Atkers introduced the draft Douglas presented a draft law that essentially mirrored the
The commission's proposals were accepted.

After heated debates and liberal obstruction, as a result of which According to a statement by First Minister AJ Balfour, it is not possible to do this daily more than two lines of the draft legislation, the
To everyone's surprise, the government announced on July 11, 1904, that fic abandoned the draft law and will discuss it at the next session a new period would bring.

164

Judah in the Crossfire

What had happened? Was the government really only governed by the Difficulties during the deliberations in the committee on the return the draft law was drawn up, or were based on There are other, more important reasons that are visible behind the scenes and had become effective? ö |

To answer this question, we must first... return to the events outside parliament.

As early as May 1903, the Jews had already been subjected to the Nazi regime.
Investigations by the committee under Lord Hereford across the entire

Immigration relations, a protest rally under leadership=

The Zionist Israel Zangwill convened a meeting. He was already able to at this time, that is, about four months before publication=

Presentation of the report, the commission's proposals to the audience to analyze. Where he got this knowledge from is unknown today. It can hardly be determined with certainty anymore. But it is probably assumed that not wrong in assuming that he received the communications from a that have been made of the members of the commission. That one

It is also obvious that one might initially think of Lord Rothschild in this context.

A year later, Zangwill held another Zionist meeting. lung ab, in which he again refers to the meanwhile increasingly- drew attention to the growing sentiment against the Jews.

This fear of his reached the ears of the First Minister. Balfour, who promised Palestine to the Jews in 1917. He explained in an open letter that this was in prospect

The law taken was not against the Jews, but only against us. desired foreign elements were directed. "I would," he said. he continues, "the emergence and growth of an anti=

Semitic sentiment in this country is considered very serious

"Look at national misfortune!"

On May 20, 1904, about four weeks after the second

After reading the later abandoned draft law, a

A delegation of leading Jewish figures visited the Ministry of the Interior. It consisted of, among others, Lord Rothschild, Leopold Rothschild, Sir Samuel Montagu, Mr. Samuel, MP, and others. They conducted a long complaint about the hardships of the issues discussed in parliament

Draft legislation. It would bring undue hardship to the numerous Jewish immigrants with themselves. This would probably lead to a Intertwining of the newcomers leads to problems, which are only detrimental. for England, which has received much good from the Jewish incoming generations. I have had hikers. They further committed themselves that all

Jews during the first two years of their stay are not subject to the State welfare would become a burden. Finally,

They voluntarily assist in the elimination of criminals

be.

1) Abbott: p. 466.

165

In a leaflet distributed in public,

They reiterated their position and emphasized that the in Prospected legal provisions to the detriment of the

those persecuted because of religion and politics, and possibly the would make entry into England impossible.

What was the success of these efforts? Let's leave Emanuel to that. to answer as an authoritative source: "The Interior Minister

He promised them he would take their points of view into account. The draft law was therefore withdrawn."

What had White written on August 16, 1903? "Nothing at all." Measures are taken without the consent of the leader of the Jews can be hit." He was right.

A novella by the Jewish author Violet Guttenberg is in some respects indicative of the general mood among the Jews.

It initially deals with the love between a Jew and a Englishwoman. The latter is the daughter of First Minister Moore. who is a convinced anti-Semite. The two young people marry. without his knowledge.

Shortly afterwards, the first minister proposes a law where all Jews must leave England. It will be... departs, and most Jews emigrate to Palestine.

The consequence of this is that the economy of England has almost completely collapsed. "It's coming to lie down. Everywhere there is stagnation and misery."

The first minister's daughter sent her husband to Palestine She accompanies him and comes to visit him at home. She finds her Father with shattered nerves because he still almost only dealing with the Jewish problem. A member of the government Her father's cabinet tells her frankly: "England can do without Jewish money and Jewish intelligence are indispensable."

The First Minister soon changes his mind and lifts the ban The instruction law is enacted. All Jews return, and England is Happy again.

"Moore, the first minister, the anti-Semite, is dead, and Mr. Moore, The Christian statesman lives."

The tendency of this book is so clear that one can no longer deny it. It is not necessary to address this. However, it is interesting that one can access this Time in Jewish circles to have been uncertain about the future must be done when such a book is published.

The fight was not yet over, however. Both sides They continued to campaign for their views. For the preservation of the species. Forces were primarily led by Major Evans Gordon, for the Ver Opponents of the opposite direction included Mr. Winston Churchill.

The former did everything to thwart efforts to establish a Be to prevent the restriction of immigration from coming to a standstill. Fundraising was undertaken to continue the project.

A confrontation was organized. Gordon pointed this out in meetings.

2) Emanuel: pp. 161–162. Times, May 20, 1904.

3) Guttenberg: p. 283ff.

166

pointing out that the overcrowded ghettos of Russia and Austria-Hungary would bring new masses to England.

The other side only thought about the foreigners, but not about the own people. He also pointed out that weekly=

Twelve ships carrying strangers would arrive. How could that possibly work?

End? Other voices also called for a final, for

The people desired a satisfactory solution. Again it is Arnold White also points out the importance of the question.

But the other side was also in favor of spreading their view.

at work. She held meetings and wanted to lift the restrictions.

The immigration laws only target the sick and criminals.

"skillfully knowledgeable." Winston Churchill played a significant role in this.

Role. His father was Lord Randolph Churchill, who came from Rothschild borrowed £5,000 and used it to buy shares in gold mines.

he had bought it in South Africa. Later, due to lack of money, he had to...

He sold off two-fifths of it; he later sold the rest for

L 70,000, –, because the shares had risen unusually. One

I was also able to determine that he was one of the closest friends von Rothschild was a frequent guest at his country estate.

in Budinghamshire).

Winston Churchill had spoken in Parliament shortly before the above events

left the Conservatives and joined the Liberals switched sides. As early as May 1904, he had openly opposed

The draft legislation was announced. In a letter to a

Jews in Manchester had he the efforts of the government described as an attempt to appease the noisy part of their followers to do a favor and gain a certain popularity in to provide for some electoral districts. They were thinking of all this.

by achieving that they are "a number of unhappy, not chosen=

"capable foreigner treated harshly".

When it became clear to every discerning person in 1904, that the proposed legal provisions are not in

The triumph of the House of Commons was known before the bill would be passed.

Jewish press had almost no limits. Churchill received nearly the Highest praise and deepest thanks for his work on behalf of

of the Jews").

He also spoke in public meetings during the negotiations in 1905 in favor of amending the new (draft bill). Even the following year, they forgot Jews did not appreciate Churchill's contributions to their cause. imagine").

Churchill's friendliness towards Jews had not escaped the public's notice, and various English people had written to him about it

4) Times, February 18, 1906.

5) Smalley: I. Series, pp. 201-202.

Abbott: p. 465.

7 ARAL World of June 24, 1904. Jewish Chronicle of June 24, 1904.
Times, June 30, 1905.

Jewish Chronicle, December 15, 1906.

167

asked why he was so strongly opposed to the adoption Churchill had opposed the draft law.
and cited, among other reasons, that the planned police apparatus too expensive. Furthermore, the execution costs were too high. Decisions remained at the discretion of the respective Minister of the Interior. However, this power poses a danger if...
(an anti-Semitic interior minister was in office). In other cases...
On that occasion, he explained that he was proud to have contributed to the draft legislation would have opposed it, since such a policy would not be in keeping with the spirit of the would have corresponded to the 20th century).

It was clear to both parties that dropping the
The situation was not yet clear in the draft law of 1904.

As of the beginning of 1905, there were still no institutions of the government had made to remedy the entire situation,
The public grew impatient, which was reflected in the ongoing (expressed related inquiries in parliament).

On April 18, 1905, the application for the law was finally passed.
Government member Atkers Douglas in Parliament brought.

He explained, among other things, that the circumstances could no longer tolerate any further
In 1903, 82,000 foreigners came to England, the vast majority of whom are in the country remained. The associated problems would be caused by The numbers are growing daily. Crime has increased. Police And judges continually sent complaints to him. The Ent
The accusation primarily aims to appoint immigration officials in certain areas.

to use ports where 97% of foreigners landed. They should decide whether an entry permit would be granted or No. In the case of a negative answer, the person concerned would have a complaint-right to a specific court in the place. Furthermore, there are also Authorisation provisions for the expulsion of undesirable persons Elements provided.

Sir Charles Dilke objected to the wording of the law. Against The draft was first approved with the votes of the Liberal Party. Reading concluded.

The discussion about the second reading took place on May 2, 1905. Once again it is Sir Charles Dilke who was the first of the opposition. He speaks. The figures cited by the government are completely exaggerated. No disadvantages would arise from the previous Cin-Migrations arise. Even now, the children of strangers are proud to become English, and they already mastered the Ge-The country's history is better than that of its descendants-population. However, he would withdraw his consent to the Part of the legal template provides for the sick and criminals They should be kept away.

10) Times, December 9, 1904.

11) Times of December 29, 1904.

12) Hanfard: Vol. 143, pp. 212, 956, 1731-1735. Vol. 144, p. 1018ff.

168

He was contradicted by Representative H. Lawson. In fact, the Jews produced the most criminals. The Aus= The last shot of mankind would come to England.

Before him, Major Evans Gordon had spoken, who commanded the train. of the thousands from west to east as a kind of Jewish It was termed the Migration Period. It was incomprehensible how Mr. Zangwill on the offer to target the Jews in East Africa= settlers might reply: "The colony is not a dumping ground for Refugees." But he was quite right, because this was already the case. England itself. | A

Joseph Chamberlain is also in favor of limiting entry. hiking. It is not right to say that the proponents of the law... The template for calling them anti-Semites. They are just good Englishmen.

After the closing speech by First Minister Balfour, the Debate with the second reading of the bill.

Lengthy negotiations ensued in the committee. It is un-
It is possible to address all the proposed amendments and speeches.
It was primarily Churchill who took up the opposition here.
the draft law was highlighted. This was followed by further...
Days of debate before the plenary session of the lower house. On
The law was finally passed in its third reading on July 19th.
It differs. It also took place in the upper house in the three prescribed sessions.
Readings require a majority. ae

The law remained within the framework of what has already been stated.
Statements by Atkers Douglas. In addition, one might add:
It should be added that, in addition to criminals, the sick, and idiots, also Those who are completely destitute should be denied entry. The Be-However, the restriction for the latter does not apply if persons of this Category can prove that they are supported in England or that they are refugees who are deported because of their religion or persecuted for their political views, their country of origin was... had let. With this provision, it is obvious that they the continued to grant Jews unhindered immigration.

At the immigration ports, the number of which was precisely determined.
and in which only ships with new arrivals dock
Since they were allowed to enter, a kind of immigration chamber was formed.
These were occupied by three people and had, among other things...
Functions that have the task of, in the event of a refusal of entry to decide on the complaint of the person concerned. (From) Management regulations were largely controlled by the authorities.
let.

However, all these regulations only applied to Ships that had more than twenty immigrants on board.
Others could land their passengers wherever they wanted, and it
"Everything remained the same."

1) Law Reports (1005): pp. 2-27.

160

This was the revolt of almost twenty years of fighting in the
The public and the legislative bodies. Three commissions, even four, if one considers the Sweating Commission of 1890 to include, had years of work for this.
They worked out a pathetic compromise!

The law came into force on January 1, 1906. One would have thought-had been. Far from it. And so we have the rare situation, that both sides complain about the law and the criticize those responsible for it. One of them, Mr. Balfour, apparently believed there was widespread sympathy for the Jews to have to express this publicly. We hear that under his patronage a large charity festival in aid of was held for Russian Jews. Other protectors of these The event was attended by, among others, the Bishop of London, Sir Albert. Rollit, Sir Marcus and Lady Samuel, Ifreal Zangwill and others Mr. Balfour had meanwhile resigned along with his government. In the subsequent elections, the Conservative Party he led was defeated. The Alternative Party was completely defeated, and the Liberals formed the Government with a large majority. Herbert Gladstone was elected He was appointed Minister of the Interior, and his Undersecretary of State was a Jew. Herbert Samuel, the current Lord Samuel.
They should assume that the Jews and their friends are completely satisfied.

As early as March 1906, the disenchantment of the followers began. Major Evans Gordons by an arrangement of the interior caused by the ministry. An instruction was sent to the inspectors. Migration officials have been instructed that in case of any doubt about the claim by newcomers that they have their origin have to leave the country for political or religious reasons, Their information should always be assumed to be correct. Gladstone and his friends saw this arrangement merely as a interpretive rule of the law, without thereby changing the meaning of the would change itself. Major Evans Gordon explained his expressing his greatest displeasure and henceforth referred to the law as as no longer existing in practice. Now every approach would therefore be newcomers claim to belong to this class, and so they would be However, this does not guarantee protection against the introduction of diseases. "Steps would have been taken to protect the cattle from Antitoxin To protect the connection. Why wouldn't our own people protect themselves from that? protected?"

It soon became apparent that the fears of the opponents of this ministerial directive would prove to be true. Eyes Witnesses reported that the incoming officers apparently disregarded the relevant authorities Officials were told lies. But according to the meaning of the above... By ministerial decree they also allowed such immigrants in. allow!).

It should not be difficult to guess who was behind this measure of the Interior Minister. The Jewish immigrants gave

1) Times, April 2, 1906.

mostly claim that they are persecuted because of their religion or politics would.

(In one newspaper!) there is a bitter complaint that England is "the
"A dumping ground for Europe's moral and physical waste" be. The Jews and their friends protested against the fact that the New arrivals were being treated badly. That's what the [name] complains about.
Jude Landa, who was a representative of the "Jewish Chronicle" and later the "Jewish World" discontinued negotiations on complaints= expelled immigrant attended, about the inadequacy of such a procedure. The assessors of the relevant panel
The upcoming chambers are partly biased, partly incompetent. Very often, the stories of complaint were given free rein.
leaders have no faith, indeed, I even accuse them of telling the Untruth.

Winston Churchill did act in the interests of the Jews.
He promised them relief when he finally addressed all these issues he would have personal influence. He wouldn't miss the opportunity to... certain Jewish brotherhoods were required to provide such insurance.
(give!). Since 1906 he had been Undersecretary of State for the colonies were formed. Thus, the Jews had another
A friend in the highest position. When he became Minister of Trade in 1908.
Having become, he had of course further consolidated his position of power.
strengthens. His continued support of the Jews also went unnoticed.
not to the public, as evidenced by a corresponding praise in the "Manchester" Guardian" of April 21, 1908 shows.

The joy of the Hebrews at his appointment as interior= (Ministers in 1910 knew no bounds!). Triumphant They determined that from now on he would be handling the stranger= would monitor the law. Based on his previous behavior
He would certainly take care of the Jews. "Furthermore, he would also to have a significantly greater say in the naturalization issue have, than in a finer previous position").

His help soon became visible to the outside world. He he=
At the suggestion of the Jewish community, he named three Jews as associates.
sitter to the already frequently mentioned complaints chamber in London!).

Soon after taking office, Churchill also fulfilled long-expressed wishes of the Jews, namely Permission for complainants to be represented by lawyers to appear before the Complaints Chamber. Subsequently, by A special committee was established for the Jews, which was responsible for the timely appointment of defense counsel if needed caused.

: Daily Mail of 15 March Chronicle of 14 November 1906. Manchester Guardian of 9 January 1906 ewish World from the 10th of Pe ewish pone? from 20 1910.
Manuel: ©.

Jewish population until 1914

At the end of our remarks on this immigration=
History of Jews to England in the period from 1881 to 1914
We must deal with the rather difficult question, how high the total number of Jews in Groß by the year 1914= Britain has been. This finding is difficult with many.
linked to certain possibilities, so that only an approximate estimate is given.
can be.

We will only include those that, in our opinion, should be used.
Use minimum figures and thus protect ourselves from overestimations.
to try to stop. f

There are various criteria for the count. First of all...
Are the statistics of the Jews and the official censuses of the available to foreigners residing in England. Finally, we have we still need the total number of annual immigrants who come from The Board of Trade will be assembled. None will completely... flawlessly lead to the correct result, however, believe we, that one can use the latter with certain Corrections can be made to some extent to achieve the desired result.

The Jews themselves must admit during their census that they are partly dependent on installments and the estimates are accurate= (probably below the actual figure). This is also likely to be the case.
with regard to the Jewish population, it may not have been entirely without intent.
We have seen before that the fight for the Be= has been going on for years.
Restrictions on immigration were discussed and explicitly opposed.
the Jewish elements. The Jews therefore had the most-
The greatest interest is in keeping the numbers low, which has already been evident.
This was clearly demonstrated in 1889, when Rabbi Abrahams appeared before the Parliamentary commission heard and discussed the Jewish
The entire population of Leeds was surveyed. He set the number fixed at a maximum of 6000 souls, while two other expert Witnesses gave figures of 15,000 and 30,000 respectively.

Furthermore, the Jews explicitly emphasize that they only... have recorded Jews of religious affiliation. However, this is not sufficient, since for Our estimates take into account the number of racial Jews.

Finally, the statistics on Jews should also be available from a other reasons do not apply. According to this, there were... in the years

In 1891, there were 64,280 Jews in London and 101,189 in England.

In 1901 there were 97,000 Jews in London and 144,000 in England.

In 1903, there were 106,550 Jews in London and 188,000 in England.

The total number was therefore only supposed to increase by 1901 between 1891 and 1901. 33,000 grew finely, of which the Jews still numbered 10,000 persons. merely to assume a surplus of births, the rest only as

1) Jewish Year Book (1900–1901): p. GFF.

172

Explaining immigration :). This makes for a year-long process= The figure is based on only 3300 Jewish immigrants. If one believes Is it really true that with this level of immigration, all the previously described shocks and evils of the English life and political struggles in the legislative sphere houses and the public would have come?

We also generally do not believe the official surveys. However, to be able to follow, they will be used to facilitate the estimation and, for lack of better evidence, the evidence found herein Partially based on figures.

The Board of Trade, in its report of 1894, its official immigration censuses in a certain way use which cannot find our approval. He proposes for the Years 1890 to 1893, the total figures for traffic to England and from England together. Then he pulls the latter from the first one and then arrives at a net surplus, of to whom he then drops off those persons who are sailors be led. In this way, he arrives at the conclusion omitting the The result for the year 1890 was as follows:

1891 – 9797

1892 – 10,349

1893 – 9 760°)

This procedure can only be condemned in the strongest terms. because there are thousands of [unclear] in the traffic from England Emigrants of English blood, who were displaced by Jewish immigrants be replaced. The difference between incoming and outgoing=

Therefore, the postponement of the change can never be justified by outgoing traffic. Represent the population. The Board of Trade oversees this. The lack of evidence is not a problem, but the court holds him accountable. other circumstances are irrelevant.

The 1903 commission took the position that that the official surveys by no means entitle the holder to They could measure accuracy, but they consider the same to be approximately I assume that's correct, since they in turn do not include the annual counts. the immigrant as a suitable reason by the Board of Trade= I look at the situation. We know that Rothschild and Sir Kenelm Digby significant objections to the published expert opinion= brought. When assembling the committee, it was necessary to consider – apart from these two – certainly also with the others Making compromises with the assessors in order to even get to an Ab= The final report is coming soon. Just take a look at the examination of witness Evans Gordon on this point, And one will agree with the above opinion, since this is the official findings were considered significantly incorrect") and troughwho later signed the report as a member of the committee.

2 gemito Year Book (1000–1901): pp. 26ff., (1903–1904); p. 218ff.
) lecounts and Papers (1894): Vol. 6, see above

Accounts and Papers (1903): Vol. 9, p. Huf.

178

Major Evans Gordon, in support of his opinion, cites, among other things, that The Jew generally avoids being counted, since he always believes there are some disadvantages associated with it, and if It only poses the risk of a correct tax assessment. Apart from that- Having seen it, the committee did not miss the possibility that the incompetence of the officials in question, and Furthermore, that the immigrants do not yet speak enough English. were proficient in the language, in order to understand the not always easily understood to fill out a questionnaire. Furthermore, one would also have to deal with that. to assume that the individuals in question deliberately misrepresented their nationality specify)).

However, we also have further concerns regarding the accuracy of the official census. It was then and it is now. a frequently observed phenomenon, that Jews as quickly as possible change their name to an English one and then go outside to appear as English. This is almost impossible in England. any difficulties are possible and it requires hardly any significant assistance from the authorities. The Jew Vanda') He apparently doesn't want to deny this, he just keeps it in a... In such a case, it is right to put such a foreigner in the

To conduct statistics as an Englishman. Because the possibility of "the Avoiding recognition as a foreigner was the safest Mn-Signs that the individuals concerned already exhibit English characteristics
"had appropriated." However, we cannot assume such a thing-
The founding will not be followed.

Furthermore, those not included in the foreigner statistics were-leads, who has since acquired British citizenship had. This too will meet the assumptions of our estimate.
not fair, since a Jew does not become British simply by virtue of his is admitted to the British state.

Finally, the children of Jews born in England were no longer listed as foreigners. It made no difference whether whether the parents were naturalized or still had their original possessed citizenship, because under English law he-Does everyone born on British soil advertise the British state?
affiliation. |

After all this, we can use the official censuses for foreigners only then will they be used as indicators for our estimates, if we don't have any better ones available.

This is the case with regard to the period before 1881. Because Immigration statistics only began to be compiled in 1879.
even if initially only quite inadequately, to set up.

We therefore proceed according to the following procedure:

1. Up to the year 1881, the official records serve as a reference point.
Survey of foreigners.

3) Accounts and Papers (1903): Vol. 9, p. 20.
e) Randa: ©

174

2. After this time until 1907. Immigrants= Statistics.

3. Then free estimate.

According to the official census of 1889, there were in England
There are 136,000 foreigners present. We have seen before that these
Some of the findings are inaccurate and by no means all of them are relevant to us.
to capture future persons. This would hardly constitute an injustice.

to be, even without taking into account those foreigners in England, who are not Jews, use these figures as a basis for calculation to add. But in order to as far as possible avoid the accusation of infringement To refute claims of accuracy or bias, we will only 75% of this official figure are considered Jewish. Also We will use this percentage for the figures found later. apply. We believe we can do so for the following reasons. to be entitled to:

Based on the above explanations, there should be little doubt are subject to the fact that those streaming into England from Europe Masses to the vast majority of the Jewish race belonged. Since 1856, Jews have been arriving in increasing numbers. Number in Great Britain. Undeniably, they were after the introduction of the May Laws in 1882 and the subsequent amendments stricter implementation regulations in 1890 were considered significant It was perceived as annoying. This intensified year by year. The All the literature on this question deals with the separation sation as almost exclusively Jewish and also usually emphasizes the large predominance of the Jewish race among the immigrants from former Russia, Austria-Hungary, Germany and Romania. Also, the recordings from the debates in both The legislative bodies convey the same impression. The last However, the evidence gathered in the three trials dispels any doubts. four different commissions, as an insight into the evidence- This will be confirmed by protofolle. Furthermore, the names reveal this. of the later naturalized persons, who with more than 75% un "unmistakably pointing to Jews." Finally, the good- The various commissions almost exclusively only the issues related to Jews.

We therefore have no doubt that the rate of 75% at the official census of foreigners from 1881 and the later ones Results from the immigration censuses are appropriate and is correct.

This principle, based on the official census of the year 1881, results in a total of 136,000 Jews population of 102,000 people.

The next deposition is expected to take place between 1882 and 1888. stretch, although it is still very unlikely that the arrivals

1) 5 and Papers (1903): Vol. 55, pp. 44ff., (1904); Mb. 78, &. B41ff., (1905): Vol. 62, p. 400ff., (1906): Vol. 96, ©. 781ff., (1907): " p. 712ff.

have been recorded. In the interest of the desired accuracy
However, this should be assumed.

However, I also find the immigration figures from 1882 to 1888 very... inaccurate. Because we have already heard that the
The law of King William IV has almost fallen out of use.
was the requirement that immigrant censuses be conducted. Only in London, Hull, Grimsby and Southampton were their destinations around the year
It was reintroduced in 1880. All the other ports refrained from doing so.
still on it. London seems to be fairly accurate.
We have conducted investigations into this, and therefore we want to Only these should be considered. After that, during the specified time...
81,896 foreigners landed in the Port of London. How many of These were now en route, i.e., passing through, it cannot be determined more certainty. The official random sample at a Schiff's report showed it was 9%. We are ready to increase this percentage.
to increase and deduct 10%, so that we therefore have 73,706 people are coming. We again calculate with 75% of this figure.
the Jewish immigrants, so that we have a total figure of 55,281 received. So we have the arrivals in all the other ports were disregarded, and also in this case only 75% were employed as Jews, although the information heard about this Officials explicitly only spoke of Jews and their misery during the Arrival speaks. 7

For the years 1889 and 1890, only the same annual amount should apply.
Average as used for the period from 1882 to 1888 will be, although rising immigration figures for the previous to be determined for the coming year. This increase amounts to approximately 8000 people, so that we can calculate the further sum for the two years of 16,000.

The next uniform period extends from 1891 to 1904.
Here we have, in principle, the official immigration censuses.
based on modifications that are still to be discussed.

We have already explained above that we also have these Consider the surveys inaccurate. In the years after 1891 he However, there were further shortcomings that the relevant festivals revealed.
Positions appear far more likely to be too low than too high.

The lists were still compiled by more or less capable people.
Positioned among members of the crew of the incoming ships.
They relied on the information provided to them by the passengers.
Information. The officers accepted this as correct and took it seriously.
They didn't care whether a newcomer was actually was passing through or not. Confirmation of this can be provided.
one repeatedly sees in the statements of the various people in this
The matter concerns the questioned official. Thus, the great
The probability that many who stated they were passing through to to be, to remain in England. Others also hold the view that the immigrants gave false information about their travel destination or later their changed their minds and went on to America, so that the The number of transit passengers is greater than the number in the official figures. Statistics. It may be true that in this respect too the official immigration censuses are incorrect insofar as individual Persons are being considered. We, however, believe that the The final result is correct. After 1893, the Americans were Niche immigration laws have been changed, significantly restricting entry. had swords. Some were therefore afraid of crossing to America returned or came back after a futile attempt, like As mentioned above, to England. Consequently, it is more likely that that actually more people stayed in England than in appear in the official statistics. But here too we want to In pursuit of the most accurate possible estimate, both possibilities know that they are mutually negated.

176

In addition, the Board of Trade, according to the above-mentioned... The messages in no way indicated a tendency to... to maximize migration figures. On the contrary, Many, including Lord Salsa, accused him of Misleading.

The Jews and their friends consider the immigrant censuses unsuitable as a basis also because between the= those who were not just passing through, tourists or They were business travelers returning to their country of origin= returned. This may be true in small numbers, but is more as unlikely. Because only those who were counted were counted. newcomers who did not travel first or second class – therefore All third-class passengers or those on the intermediate deck. However, one hardly ever finds the travelers of the aforementioned among the latter. Category. Rather, one must assume that among the Among the first and second class travelers, not a few Jews were found who have settled permanently in England. So, if anything, one could only consider an increase in the Let official censuses take place, but we want to in the Inter= disregard the total number to be found.

The opposing side insists that from the respective annual Total number of persons listed as seafarers out of those not Those passing through will be deducted. Here too, they want we follow their wishes, although we have strong reservations about a to engage in such a procedure.

The evidence presented by the commissions of 1889 and

In 1903, the results were exactly the opposite. According to the...
It is not uncommon for customs officials to find that those listed as seafarers
They processed their passage to England. They were thus, among other things, as Keepers on pony transports). Apart from that Generally, these were persons who were listed in the official surveys.

) Accounts and Papers (1880): Vol. 10, pp. 821, 823, 828.

12 | | 177

as sailors, permanently in England'). Yes, felbit
The Board of Trade's most senior expert explicitly stated=
In his testimony before the commission of 1903, "in my view it was (It's wrong to deduct them all). But nevertheless,
We deduct them in full and thus do not classify them as immigrants.
take into account. ; |

Finally, one last and important circumstance speaks in favor of it.
our view against the Board of Trade's finding.

This is because two children were treated as one adult.
counted, and thus appeared in the official statistics for two Children (only one person). What great significance this has for a
The exact count may be seen from the following example.

We know that the families of the Jews, especially the Eastern European Jews,
They are very numerous. Five to six children in a family are Not uncommon. But here too, we want to accept the judgment of the Rabbi Abrahams of Leeds, who was officially questioned about this submit. This gave the average of a family with five members. (i.e., three children, Ann). So they appear for one Over a certain period, a total of 400,000 people were in the official [locations/records].
Statistics, in our view, are actually about...
571,000 people have immigrated. But we also want to address this.
in favor of the most unassailable estimate possible=
view.

If we now examine the official immigrant lists of the years 1891 to 1904, based on the above statements,
We arrive at the following result:

18111. 238270
1892 22 . 22137
18999. 221 296
1894 18861
1895 20634
1889. 24987

1897 28089
189. . 28486
189. . . 87522
19000 47555
190... 40318
1902... 51409
1903. 69162
194. 82874

521 60015)

) Accounts and Papers (1903): Vol. 9, p. 77, question 207ff., p. 92, question 434ff., P. 658. Fra ne 16. 572ff. Hanfard: Vol. 27, p. 17 2ff. a 10) Accounts and Papers (1903): Wd. 9, p. 837, question 22. 367.
1) Accounts and Papers (1903): Vol. 9, pp. 10-20, p. 108, question 864, p. 124, Trade 1 21. Wi Ene: Invasion p. 83.
12) Accounts and Papers (181): Vol. 10, pp. 344ff.
13) Accounts and Papers (1894): Wd. 68, p. 857, (1903): Vol. 9, p. 947.

178

For the years 1905 and 1906, a completely different type now appears.
and the method of counting. One no longer distinguishes Durdtransit passengers and non-transit passengers, but introduces a another system that will be different again in both years= which is designed from various perspectives. Details are of interest.
No, because the final sum is pretty much the same as in 1904.
On the contrary, it is reasonable to assume that the immigration figures the Eastern European Jews from former Russia at least the same remained. Because as a result of the Russo-Japanese War and The ensuing turmoil led to more Jews leaving than ever before.
Russia. Furthermore, after January 1, 1906, that is, after the Entry into force of the Aliens Act, not rarely the Act thereby
This circumvented the fact that immigrants on ships with no more when twenty passengers of their category arrived in England.
As is well known, such ships were not subject to the regulations.
of the law. The passengers could disembark anywhere along the coast.
landed where no officials conducted investigations.
One consequence was, among others, that these immigrants were also not eligible for the Statistics were collected. Therefore, if we look at the years 1905... and if, in 1906, the figure from 1904 were replaced with 82874 each, this would likely be a reasonable estimate.

In the following years, the structure of the Statistics. The counts were taken based on the number of immigrant ships.
before, which from certain ports, such as German, Dutch, Finnish-Szech and Russian arrived.

We now believe that if we only consider the immigrants from taking the ports of the last two categories, we one- The wall-free estimate should come quite close to this. We are not taking into account all the arrivals from other states and those who violated the law in the manner described above had left. This brings us to the following for the years 1907 and 1908: 66,000 or 19,000 people!). Taking our Based on a 75% allocation, this results in a total of 63,750 Jews.

From 1909 onwards, the system was changed again, And they made it so confusing, probably not without reason. Intention that there are hardly any clues left for a wanderers of the Jewish race can be found. We therefore believe that, from The low year of 1908, with 14250 each, is assumed. can. This results for the period from 1909 to 1913 inclusive. 71,250 Jewish immigrants in England. The year 1914 followed with Disregarding the outbreak of war, whether: The main immigration has probably already taken place, which should be fine, since the Numbers usually decline sharply in the autumn and winter months. went.

4) Accounts and Papers (1908): Vol. 87, pp. 909ff., (1909): Vol. 70, pp. 499ff

13% 179

Our calculation then yields the following in detail:

up to 181141. 102,000

from 1882, 188899. 55281

"1889 " 1899000 16 000

"1891 " 1904 391200

"1905 " 19000 165 748

"1907 " 1908 . . . 63750

"1909, 1918 baw. 1914 .. 71 250

875,229

Consequently, we have no reservations about estimating the number of Jews in England by 1914 at 900,000, especially given

The above analysis shows the birth surplus for the period from 1881 to 1914, i.e., 33 years, remained unconsidered.

It is quite impossible that this large-scale immigration could occur in one relatively such a short period for the British nation without adverse consequences have remained. One must not overlook this, that the British population within Europe during these years had not exceeded the 40 million mark. Consequently The result must have been similar to or stronger than if... within the same period in present-day Germany, the Jews— The population would grow from approximately 200,000 to 1,800,000. This process must, however, have a further adverse effect, if at least as many English people in the same period left their homeland. That this is indeed the case is evidenced by an insight into the official survey on emigration (appointed by the British for this period). The danger inherent in this This is not overlooked by the English either. They complain, for example, that... Whelpley ne) the fact that, in their view, in 1904 Approximately 75,000 foreigners immigrated, compared to approximately 80,000 Britons. emigrated. The latter would be affected by inferior personnel. replaced those who only had a harmful influence on the lives of nation might have.

We lingered in this area for a long time because we considered it suitable. the assessment of current events in England, on which we will discuss below, consider essential. Furthermore Does the above estimate compare to the one issued by the Jews? in such a contradiction that a detailed explanation is not possible seemed necessary. The Jews, in fact, are giving up their population... The figure in Great Britain up to the year 1914 was 245,000.” We leave it to the reader to draw their own conclusions from the presented facts. to form an opinion about the two opposing numbers educate. However, we would like to point out that N estimate should represent a minimum.

- 15) Statiftical ur a: Vol. 44, p. 350.
- 18) Whelpley: p. 26ff.
- 17) Jewish Year Book (1915): pp. 167ff.

180

The Mareoni Sfantal

But it wasn't just the number of Jews in England that had increased— not only did they rise, but the Hebrews had also, in some cases even after Visible from the outside, it has gained an ever-increasing influence.

This was evident, among other things, from the fact that besides Rothschild, there were no other Jews had been made peers of England.

These are Lord Michelham and Lord Wandsworth, who Both originally bore the name Stern, and Lord Swaythling, who was formerly known as Sir Samuel Montagu.

Around the year 1914, we find no fewer than 22 barons.

and 15 knights of Jewish blood. Six Jews, namely Lord Rothschild, Lord Reading, Sir Alfred Mond, Herbert L. Samuel, Sir Edgar Speyer and ES Montagu were at this time With Members of the Crown Council. In parliament, the Jews were represented by 16 members are represented, all of whom are Jewish religious denominations. (acted). How many baptized Jews or half- and quarter-Jews

It is hardly possible to determine with certainty today when they were in parliament.

In the following, we will first discuss Herbert L.

Samuel and Lord Reading, the former Rufus Isaac, to be have jobs. The first was a postal minister and the latter...

Crown lawyer in the liberal Asquith cabinet.

Rufus Isaacs had an adventurous career.

As a boy, he ran away from his parents. Later he became

The securities broker went bankrupt and therefore lost substantial sums. belonging to the stock exchange. He then turned to legal studies.

He completed his apprenticeship and passed his barrister exam. It took five Years until he had paid off his previous debts. Already

After ten years of practice, he had an annual income of £7,000,-, which increased to £30,000 between 1900 and 1910, -

Annual earnings increased?). In October 1904 he was appointed a liberal

Elected to parliament as a member of parliament and appointed in March 1910

Solicitor General, promoted to Attorney in September of the same year Appointed General.

Herbert Samuel also belonged to the Liberal Party and had been a member of Parliament since 1902. From 1905 to 1909 he was Under-

State Secretary in the Ministry of the Interior and among other roles from 1910 to 1914 Post-Minister.

Both Jews, along with Lloyd George and Godfrey Isaacs, the brother of Rufus Isaacs, were principal figures in the Marconi Scandal.

To describe the story of this exactly would, as at the time

L. Maxse, the owner and publisher of the "National Review" rightly said, "the pen of Conan Doyle and the

"It requires the keen intellect of a Sherlock Holmes." It is a matter of Jewish Dear, (por al): p. 278ff., (1914): p. 175ff., (1915): p. 177ff.

92 Jackson: gof

not only the extremely numerous material, but also the many processes behind the scenes, which even an eight The investigation, which lasted for months, never fully clarified the matter.

It is generally known how great the merits of the recently deceased Marconi was involved with wireless telegraphy. In England He was admired not only for his genius, but also by Jewish financiers. Moved forward. Also regarding the treatment by the patent office. During the patent litigation, he did not... can complain. It is therefore not surprising that he is involved in business. personal matters towards his competitors mostly to enforce, although their inventions sometimes were at least equivalent to him.

In October 1909, the Marconi company announced its shares. They said that for £15,000, all coastal stations and those there Marconi's incorporated patents for use in the next (14 years would have been sold to the English government)). N

Shortly after the conclusion of this contract, a patent dispute arose. Information about competing inventions. Among others, Marconi had Society has an interest in ensuring that the patents of its most rigorous Adversary, the holder of the Lodge-Muirhead patent, as a result would be declared invalid due to the passage of time. For general information... The Marconi Society was surprised to find support from the Crown in the person of her lawyer, Sir Rufus Isaacs.

His brother Godfrey was two months before his appointment to Solicitor-General, therefore in January 1910, to Director of the He was appointed to the Marconi Society. Later, people wondered why. generally, why he in particular had been chosen, since he no particular skills or merits for this so far large post had shown. On the other hand, it was generally It is known that Sir Rufus Isaacs in the past almost always somehow involved in most of his unsuccessful ventures (Brother's involvement had been involved).

Despite the Crown's support, Lodge's patent remained Muirhead was valid, and negotiations took place between the owners of the same and the Marconi company. The Jn-Holders of the first patent, Sir Cliver Lodge and Dr. Muirhead had tried in vain for years to convince the government of its goodness to convince them of their patent.

Meanwhile, Godfrey Isaacs, as his brother Rufus Sol= had become a general, with Post Minister Herbert Samuel negotiations on the establishment of a network of wireless stations across the British Empire.

They dragged on for a long time and were only recently discovered.
following a further recommendation from Imperial
The conference in 1911 was accelerated and continued. Even now

National Review: Bs. 60, p. 204 ff.
Accounts and Papers (1913–1913): Vol. 8, pp. 12ff.

182

No other inventions have been used for comparison yet.
They didn't withdraw, but only asked for a final offer from the Marconi Company. |

In the event of an agreement, it would close its major stations of Poldhu and Clifden were available and promised another Expansion of their system at various points in the British Empires. However, no one had bothered to to check whether the two mentioned transmitters are suitable for the intended purpose Purposes were established. The Admiralty experts and the Postal Ministry did not request any details about the previous use. However, such measures would be all the more necessary.

had been, when one then read the contract terms and all
He had to draw up calculations. It involved various officials.
or seven or eight departments of the Ministry of Finance over let them draw up the contract. They had it on the other side.
This page deals exclusively with the cunning Godfrey Isaacs,
who expressed himself to them quite openly,
that the Marconi company, out of consideration for his brother Rufus occupies a privileged position --
In January 1912, negotiations had progressed considerably.
further. On the 17th and 24th of the month in question, final meetings in the relevant committees held, in which, however, only to use the words of Samuel to talk about the purchase price, the duration of the contract and
The ongoing patent fees were negotiated.

Lord Murray, one of the leading Liberals, Sir Rufus Isaacs and Finance Minister Lloyd George spent early January in Villa Gragonier at Cap Martin, their holidays. The first During this time, he sent the following telegram to his broker Fenner.
Gramm: "Write to me and tell me how things stand." Mr. Fenner Folat responded: "Another stock which during
The number of Marconi's [unclear] has risen considerably in recent months.
"Apart from this, the market had declining trends."

enz." Be, | i
Meanwhile, negotiations of the Marconi company have progressed.
with Samuel as the representative of the British government. In

During the final negotiations, Godfrey Isaacs received even better...
Conditions regarding patent fees were granted. In all
The final offer was hastily made on March 7, 1912.
Marconi-Gesellschaft subject to approval by the Parliament adopted by Samuel.

The content of the contract stipulated, among other things, that the Marconi-Gesellschaft Company £60,000, – for each of its stations and 10% of the gross revenues from all stations that, according to the agreements, were built, received. It lasted 28 years.
agreed, however, the government had the right to already after to withdraw from the contract after 18 years. In this case, it was possible
However, they will have no further use for them in the future.

188

Marconi patents. The Marconi company had the sole right to take the necessary steps in their opinion directions to incorporate, including those who have patents had nothing to do. The company continued to be a
A kind of consulting engineer for the government. It went so far, that the government will in future disclose all details of its offered new invention of the Marconi company for the purpose of had to submit an expert opinion, which they might have to present in one of the to install stations built on the basis of the contract intended. Details of this contract were communicated to the holders. of shares by circular on March 9th.

On the same day, Godfrey Isaacs set sail for America, to put the affairs of the local subsidiary in order bring. He himself was also a director of this company. The The majority of its shares were owned by the English company. Conditions in America were not the basis for the Marconi invention. best, since a major trial is underway for alleged violation of a Patents belonging to the United Wireless Company were pending. It succeeded. Godfrey Isaacs, the aforementioned competitor for the British Ge- to buy out the company. The purchase price consisted of the transfer of 700,000 shares of the American Marconi company. Furthermore, another agreement was reached between the English and the state of American society. The first one sold the rights transferred from the agreement, indeed all assets to the American Marconi Society for approximately the double the price. They further agreed that each of to build them a station on both shores of the Atlantic, to secure the wireless connection between Europe and America- to deliver. In general, a fairly close collaboration was established- Work was agreed upon. Furthermore, it was decided that the share capital increased by the American company to ten million dollars Should be. Unless the shares are issued in America... If exploitation were successful, British society should have the right have, within a period of one year, the remainder of the to issue shares at par. Finally, the two Marconi-Companies also have agreements with a third company for joint communication.

These entire agreements should under no circumstances be made before the. Open= The possibility will be communicated when American society announced its had given approval for the issuance of the new shares.

Sir Rufus Isaacs had invited guests to a banquet on March 17, 1912.

Marconi Society in New York, a public telegram

The following message was sent: "Please congratulate Marconi and my brother to the success of a wonderful venture= (I wish them all success in New York).

Godfrey Isaacs had in the aforementioned agreement personally received the right to purchase 500,000 shares at five dollars each. 9 Accounts and Papers (1912-1918): Vol. 8, p. 12, (1913): Vol. 7, pp. 124-127.

184

or to placicrene. He already succeeded in this with 400,000 units in America, leaving only a remainder of 100,000. brought to England. He was also not affected by these agreements. Nothing is known to the public.

On April 8, 1912, Godfrey Isaacs returned to England. The very next day he had a meeting with his Brother Rufus and a third brother, Harry. He under= She spoke in detail about the association that had been established in America. He explained to them that the things in his hands were existing shares would rise. Nevertheless, it would offer they the entire share package at par price (ane). Sir Rufus declined to acquire shares. Harry, on the other hand, took over. 56,000 units.

Immediately after this conversation, countless people shared Godfrey Isaacs stated that a significant opposition in Parliament against the Marconi= agreement with the British government. In his view, the greatest difficulties therefore lay in... including the approval of the lower house, especially since it is very influential Members of Parliament were among the opponents of the treaty. Godfrey Isaac therefore believed the final acceptance of the treaty was still pending. not secured for a long time. His brother Harry, meanwhile, gave his Efforts not to gain access to the influential brother Rufus's shares to sell to the American company. On April 17th, The success. The Crown Prosecutor Sir Rufus Isaacs acquired 10,000 shares. from the possession of Harry Isaacs. They were not actually given to him. not handed over, but Rufus was proportionally involved in the whole The latter held a share package. The price was set at £2 per share.

The share price has been fixed, as the shares are now unlisted on the Double the increase had been').

In the later taking of evidence, Sir Rufus Isaacs he clarifies that he had no reservations whatsoever about being with his brother Harry to reach graduation. The first commandment of his He had to refuse Brother Godfrey because he was a He had been a government entrepreneur. This was the case with Harry. This was not the case. Consequently, the purchase was invalid. ftanden, especially since he was separated from his brothers individually. It has been established that American society has nothing to do with the (to do with English).

Sir Rufus Isaacs was very close to Lloyd George, the then Minister of State, and a friend of Lord Murray. On the evening of April 17th, Sir Rufus went to meet these two. and informed them of his deal with Harry Isaacs. Should they also be interested in the shares, he would... each one thousand were left. These first inquired about the Payment terms. Sir Rufus replied that they should ) Hansard: Vol. 54, p. 455.

7) Hanfard: Vol. 54, pp. 395, 457. Accounts and Papers (1918): Vol. 7, pp. 197-129.

e) Hanfard: Vol. 54, pp. 398, 436. Accounts and Papers (1913): Vol. 7, p. 129.

185

They didn't need to worry about payment, as he had been with them for a long time. He would give advance notice if he needed the money. He further explained that, according to his communications, Brother Godfrey had no connection whatsoever between the English and American society.

Lloyd George and Lord Murray then each took over One thousand shares at a price of £2 each.

On April 14, 1912, the luxury ship "Titanic" sank and on The shares were issued on the stock exchange on April 19th and the Publicity, the important, aforementioned American ab The statements were communicated. This timing was therefore very convenient. chosen, as everyone with regard to the "Titanic" disaster the The importance of wireless telegraphy had become clear. On That same day, Lloyd George called his real estate agent and informed him with the fact that he owns shares in the American Marconi- Company free. The broker replied that he had this did not consider the investment fortunate, since society, according to its In view, it is overcapitalized and all the associated costs Circumstances reminded him too much of the last big stock market scam of Barnato was reminded. Lloyd George took this suggestion on board.

seemingly unkind, as he immediately ended the telephone conversation abb rach'9).

The shares were raised on the morning of April 19 at £3,000/a
They were placed and rose to £4 on the same day. The Crown=
The lawyer immediately sold 7000 of his remaining 8000 shares.
an average price of 3.510). Lloyd George and Lord Murray sold a total of 1714 shares on April 20th.
£3,532 and earned £2,200 from it. These two ministers acquired 3000 new shares on May 22nd at a price of £2.80.
Lord Murray had previously purchased 2500 shares at 3 on April 18th.
On May 14th, another 500 were sold at a lower price at the expense of the Bought by the Liberal Party.

Rumors had already been circulating in Börfe in April that Ministers have interests in the Marconi company. On On June 13th, Post-Minister Samuel was appointed by Sir H. Norman requested to provide the terms of the contract. Samuel ant-
He told him that this was currently impossible.

On July 19th, the Postal Minister signed the contract in Individually published. The shares surged to £9.15.-
The rumors in the city about ministers' business dealings...
More and more shares of Marconi were concentrated. In June, a report appeared.
a single article in a newspaper that dealt with it.
Such indications increased during the month of July.
The leading publications were "Outlook", "Eyewitness" and "National Review".
A certain Mr. Lawson compared the latter to speculation.
in the stocks connected to the South Seas scandal. Other newspapers De nfard:) Hanford: Vol. 54, p. 895. Accounts and Papers (1913): Vol. 2 p. 19 ff.

"N Vol. ve. 899. Accounts and were (1918): Vol. 7, p. 181.

186

They characterized the ministers' involvement as corruption.
The press of the Liberal government remained silent.
He didn't even respond to the rather harsh criticism.
was all the more inexplicable as the opponents' press was always storming= required a mixed examination.

Late July or early August – those involved wanted it allegedly not knowing exactly – was said to First Minister Asquith Lord Murray and Sir Rufus Isaacs' involvement in the American society. However, they did not clarify it.
about the details, e.g. about the number of their shares and the various phases of the transaction. However, they missed
They did not explain to him that the American society= which would have absolutely nothing to do with the English one. A Letter that Lord Murray sent to Asquith in this matter=

The latter did not keep the document he had written.

After July 19th, Samuel had done everything possible to...
as quickly as possible obtain parliamentary approval for the agreement to receive. Still in one of the last sessions of August he tried to persuade the opposition to abandon what had already been decided= to distance oneself from the terminated resistance during the discussions.
It was at this time that Samuel, too, if one considers his fellow fellow-Division follows, from Lord Murray on the transactions of The minister was informed. He also considered this fact to be true.
for meaningless, because he believes Murray's statements gave that there was no connection between the two Marconi= companies existed.

On 6 August 1912, the First Minister declared that he was returning view of the already evident large opposition to the
The contract would allow for an in-depth discussion, for which everyone...
However, there will only be time after the summer holidays. Regardless of this Samuel turned to Major Archer Shee, who on this point the opposition led – and tried to persuade him to his to abandon concerns and refrain from lengthy disputes=
see. The postponement to the meeting after the holidays means an unduly long delay, which, with regard to the international situation and the urgent need for improvement=
The installation of remote transmitting equipment is undesirable. Major Archer Shee rejected this request.

In one of the negotiations with the British Marconi-
The company also included a technical official from the postal ministry.
participated. On this occasion, he learned some of the He knew the contents of the future contract. He bought himself some few shares of the British company, because he considers them a good
He held an investment for his small fortune. After a while, he lost it.
However, he bought them with consideration for rising prices.

The matter came to the ears of Samuel, who was the expert.
The conduct was established. The postal minister did indeed speak to the officials.

11) Accounts and Papers (1013): Bs. 7, pp. 810–811.

187

He was acquitted of corruption charges, but was sentenced with Demotion because he used official knowledge for his own benefit would have used).

On October 11, 1912, Asquith fulfilled his promise made in August to establish a commission of inquiry Samuel made the relevant request that day, to-apparently because Asquith was suffering from a minor illness.

was unable to attend the meeting. A heated exchange ensued.
took place, during which the government faced heavy accusations regarding the
The content of the contract was made. Naturally, this came about.
The individual ministers in question also had their say.
Reject all accusations as unfounded and defend themselves against the allegedly untrue claims made in public= preserved.

Sir Rufus Isaacs declared that he was in no way involved in the negotiations of the British Marconi Society with the Re= government involved. He didn't even have an official or I received private notification of the events. Only a few days later.
before the general publication of the agreements, he
I learned about it by chance at a social event.

The Crown Prosecutor solemnly declared further that he had "from the beginning never, neither as the shares at 14/- nor at 9.-
stood, - even a single transaction in the aforementioned
He would have had papers. He wasn't just speaking for himself, but also for his two friends, the postal minister and the finance minister= minister."

His statement was then subsequently reinforced by Samuel in a longer speech. He too emphasized once again that no
the only member of the government with an interest in British affairs Marconi-Gesellschaft would have and the opposing claims in (presented baseless slander to the public!).

The Finance Minister, Lloyd George, also failed to do so.
not to dismiss all rumors as unfounded and called for
He sought clarification of the facts. He demanded an open discussion.
before the committee meeting, because they are dealing with the rumors should, which behind the back of the house by a gossipmonger were forwarded to the other...).

At the end of the meeting, the formation of a sub-group was then decided.
The search committee decided, which has full power=
heiten regarding the summoning of witnesses and the presentation of evidence= Customers were equipped. Nine members of the government-
The party and six members of the opposition were appointed as assessors.
determined. Decisions in the committee were made according to simple Majority system approved.

2) Hansard: Vol. 52, pp. 1884-1865, Vol. 54, pp. 454-454, 510-512, 649
a penai: Vol. 42, p. 725ff.
u) Hanfard: Vol. 42, ©. 714ff.

The sessions began immediately after October 11th. heard witnesses of all kinds and examined the most diverse sub- lay. Only the ministers against whom the charges were brought, were not heard, although one could have heard about the swearing-in of the Aus= saying that a clarification of the situation would have been possible as quickly as possib They can count. The months of October, November, and December were filled with meetings in this way.

On January 13, 1913, Lord Murray left England to go outside allegedly to pursue his major business interests in the world= They would take him away from home for months. He He himself, like his accomplices, had nothing to say to the committee. of fine transactions. Bor fine departure he sought his brother, Representative Captain A. Murray, and handed him the 3,000 Marconi shares of the Liberal Party. "He "suggested," Captain Murray later explained as a witness, "they to be kept until the Marconi matter is resolved, fo that no one but him would be involved." He told Then, if one wants to follow his pronouncements, nobody will either. some of it. It wasn't until June 15, 1913, that the public was informed. consequence of the business collapse of Lord's broker Murray is familiar with the transactions. The committee demanded Lord Murray immediately telegraphed to appear for questioning as a witness. to return to England. He rejected this request with a refusal. view of his business obligations and the great ent= distance. The journey would probably have taken a maximum of four weeks. lasted.

First Minister Asquith defended Lord Murray on 19 June 1913 because of his conduct and declared him particularly Honorable man. f

In the first week of 1913, Lloyd George and Sir Rufus Isaacs reconvened First Minister Asquith and divided He now also gave him all the details. Allegedly for the first time. They placed him on the second purchase by Lloyd George and Lord Murray was informed in May. They came with the first ministers agree to send the Trans= to the committee as quickly as possible to open actions. Lloyd George and Sir Rufus did this. but not.

Rather, at the end of January, the latter asked the liberal MP Falconer, who was a member of the committee, to take over the committee conversation. During the course of it, Isaac told him the ver-various transactions because, with regard to the Falconer subjected the witnesses to cross-examinations, which he considered to be appropriate.

Brought appeared. But this too kept the confession to himself.
According to his own statements, he believed he was entitled to do so.
because the message was only sent to him privately and he
I had to fear that if I passed it on to the committee, the press would...
would gain knowledge of everything.

189

Meanwhile, Marconi was dismissed from his contract on January 27th.
alleged delay in execution led to resignation.

Even in February 1913, the ministers still hadn't done anything.
Her testimony before the investigative committee. In the course of...
This month an article appeared in the French newspaper
"Le Matin" with the headline: "A financial scandal in England."
Many similar articles had previously appeared in the English press.
It seemed, and because of one of them, the ministers even
A defamation lawsuit was filed and the trial was scheduled to begin shortly.
to be expected. On February 27th, the "Matin" was given a, Ber-
A defamation lawsuit was served, which was already heard on March 19th.
was. The transgender people were publicly discussed for the first time at the meeting.
actions communicated by Samuel and Sir Rufus Isaacs.
Surprise was hardly conceivable. As early as March 25th... the latter was questioned by the investigative committee. Also the
The following two days were filled with his interrogation.
Despite many criticisms, he stuck to his previous views.
Clarifications!).

From October to June, the committee had smaller sub-groups
Court hearings were held. Many witnesses and experts were present.
[The following appears to be unrelated and possibly a separate document fragment:] ...and A total of approximately 30,000 questions and answers were generated.
recorded, and the printed evidence is in two parts.
summarized in numerous volumes.

Immediately after the conclusion of the taking of evidence, the Committee presents two draft reports to Parliament= laid. One came from the chairman, the other from Lord Robert Cecil, a member of the opposition party.

Following the first, a summary of the facts should be provided.
and subsequently a mild reprimand from the minister.
Lord Cecil's report presented the irrefutably proven facts.
again, but concluded with a sharp rebuke for the ministers.
To everyone's surprise, the committee did not accept any of the designs.

It appeared as if it were the first report.
which formed the basis of the final report. In reality changed the majority of the committee, which, as is well known, consists of Mit-members of the liberal governing party, the report of the-so neatly that hardly anything of the original statements remains.
the chairman remained.

In the final paragraph, the committee summarizes its expert opinion on this matter.
together, that "all ministers involved in the whole matter-that they had acted in honest faith, not even that to do the slightest thing that would put them in any contradiction to their Duties as Minister of the Crown set ().

16) Accounts and Papers (1913): Vol. 7, pp. 165ff. Ganfard: Vol. 54, p. 637ff.
Jackson: p. 170ff.

16) Accounts and Papers (1919): Bs. 7, pp. 100-101.

190

However, the opponents of the liberal government conceded defeat.
Not satisfied with the findings, they filed a complaint on June 18, 1913.
motion that the House of Commons address the transactions and the lack thereof
I regret the openness of the ministers in question.

The matter was again discussed over the course of two days.
treated. Sir Rufus admitted that it would have been better if they had He told everything to Parliament on October 11, 1912. But the Attacks against her had only been directed at the British Marconi-society and its alleged connection with it, so that they saw no reason to disclose information about their inter-eating in American society, which otherwise
He had no connections whatsoever with the British. He states
Emphasis on the finding that he had acquired the shares from his brother Harry bought, which has no connection with Marconi-Society would have stood.

Lloyd George also regretted not having told the house everything.
to have. He emphasized that he had not speculated with the shares.
but rather viewed them as an investment. After both After the ministers had given their statement, they left the Meeting room.

All efforts by the opposition to get their motion passed, were unsuccessful. Parliament, too, with its liberal [selection/action], proved ineffective
The majority determined that not the slightest criticism could be leveled at the ministers

This decision by parliament is undoubtedly only due to

It was decided for partisan political reasons and cannot be considered unparalleled. withstands German judgment. It may be another sign of that. to what extent the government of Great Britain already at that time Jews and their friends are inclined to protect themselves even in scandals. was. Apart from the main people involved in the matter. Will we also find other ministers with Jewish blood or with close ties to Hebrews. Lord Crewe, for example, had two Position. He is Lord Keeper of the Seal and Minister for Indian Affairs. Matters. Winston Churchill is the First Lord of the Admiralty. Reality. One cannot predict the outcome of this case. wonder.

After all this, the Marconi scandal should be one of the great examples of where Jewish influence leads. Lord Robert Cecil considered the ministers' behavior an outrage. They described it, but refused to call it corruption. We have There are strong doubts about whether he is right. But let's not forget that Even this assessment of Lord Cecil was held by the majority at the time. Parliament considered it too harsh, and the ministers have been acquitted of all blame.

It might be of interest to know what came of the individual main= involved. The steeply upward career path Lloyd George is so well known that not a word is said about it.

11) Ganfard: Vol. 54, pp. 663-670.

191

needs to become. Sir Rufus Isaacs was born on October 20, 1918, four months later, to Lord Chief Justice, the highest Judge in common law, made and simultaneously elevated to the nobility He was raised with the title Lord Reading. During the war, he was He is the ambassador extraordinary to the United States. The procurement of the huge loan was thanks to the local authorities. which was used to purchase war materiel. He also contributed significantly to America's entry into the World War. Furthermore, he was considered one of Lloyd George's main employees.

On January 6, 1921, he was appointed Viceroy of entrusted to India. After the end of his term in office there, He is the director of the largest economic enterprises. His Work on the construction of Palestine was significant. In In 1931 he was Minister for Foreign Affairs. It is almost superfluous to mention that he was hostile to the Third Reich. His speeches in the upper house left no doubt about that. There were doubts. He died in December 1935.

Herbert Samuel held, in addition to the positions already mentioned, He held the highest positions in the British government. That's how he was. among others, Minister of the Interior in the years 1914–1915 and later Chairman of the important committees. In 1919 he was British Special Commissioner in Belgium and from 1920 to 1925 High Commissioner in Palestine. Afterwards, he held various high offices in the Homeland inside, including that of the Minister of the Interior in the years 1931–1982. In 1987 he was ennobled as Viscount Samuel raised

As you can see, the Marconi scandal has not been able to harm any of the main participants

192

The Sir Stuart Samuel Scandal

During the sessions of the Marconi Inquiry Committee

But another scandal came to public attention. Here's what happened:

The Ministry for India had been continuously purchasing silver for to make the Indian currency. For a long time, it has allowed this 1. Brokers appointed by the Bank of England were.

At that time, as mentioned above, Lord Creme Minister for Indian Affairs. His Undersecretary of State. was the full Jew ES Montagu since the beginning of 1910, who had been since 1906 He was a liberal Member of Parliament. His brother was a Lord Swaythling, partner of one of the largest banks, Samuel Montagu & Co. in London. Another partner in this firm was Sir Stuart Samuel, a brother of the aforementioned minister Herbert Samuel. He was also a member of parliament for Tower Hamlets in Whitechapel. 5

On March 4, 1912, Lord Crewe was appointed Minister for India. in contrast to previous practices of the Samuel company Mantagu & Co. were commissioned to supply silver in the amount of £500,000. to purchase. This company was not among those previously employed. Brokers appointed by the Bank of England. Later, attempts were made to justify this change by claiming that the prices for silver would have increased every time the up to the previous real estate agent had shown interest in buying, because behind it... the British government rightly suspected.

It may be that this was the case. But we can I don't believe that this was the main reason for this step.

Rather, we assume that this too will arise from the purely Jewish connections must be explained. Because all previous explanations... The aforementioned persons are Jews or have Jewish ancestry. Veins. Yes, even the senior official in the Ministry for India, the company Samuel Montagu & Co. received its first order- The divided [thing] bore the name of Abraham. This does not follow from the Publication of the letter in question dated March 4, however undoubtedly from a letter from the aforementioned company dated March 25, 1912, in which Mr. Abraham's letter of March 4 was received= (is spoken!). Until September 1912, that is, in seven months, The ministry spent approximately eight million pounds sterling to be purchased by the aforementioned Jewish company. Another well-known Hebrew, Sir Felix Schuster, was also involved in the transactions at involved in a leading position. He was the governor of the important- tenden bank "Union of London and Smiths Bank". On special= whose wishes were fulfilled by Samuel Montagu & Co., the payments to make silver purchases through his bank. As you can see,

1) Accounts and Papers (1912): BS. 61, pp. 533, 587.

19,103

There could hardly have been a more exclusively Jewish issue in The scene will be set.

It shouldn't be too long before the public becomes aware of became aware of these events. On December 7, 1912, Sir Frederic Banbury brought this to our attention. Immediately= Early on, an inquiry was made in parliament as to whether the government would consider th It should be clear that, taking into account the fact that Sir Stuart Samuel, a partner in Samuel Montagu & Co., is guilty of a crime. Act according to a law of King George III (Statute 22) George III, c. 45). The First Minister replied that he I have already requested an expert opinion from lawyers of the Crown.

This law from 1782 was necessary at the time. was established to prevent the common bad habit and to to punish certain members of parliament for giving orders granted to the public authorities to assist them in submitting their Voices in the House of Commons in support of the government in power= to gain a victory). In other words: such a state of affairs fulfilled the prerequisites for corruption.

It should be pretty obvious that the above-mentioned whose actions applied to this legal provision. Sir Stuart Samuel was a Member of Parliament, and his fine company had a Received a public commission. The Crown Prosecutor, Sir Rufus Isaacs, He explained at length the view that it was This is a case of doubtful interpretation. It is unclear whether whether this constitutes a public gathering within the meaning of the law whether I have acted improperly, or whether the law would also apply to Matters which fiH does not consider to be those of the mother country— would move. He believed that this question would be best answered by a commentary. mission, composed of members of parliament, ent= could be divorced.

We see another Jew takes on the case and...
He is accused of more than just that, as Bonar Law also accuses him of. the government's stance as an impartial legal good— pay attention to submitting.

The opposition under Lord Balcarres holds the view of Sir Rufus for false, since a case from 1907 highlighted that the law applies to the present case I have found. In the process he attracted, there were coals. It was purchased by the Ministry for India. In this case, the ministry itself in a special paragraph on the subject of... Reference was made to the eighth law of 1782. Lord Balcarres asked if Sir Rufus Isaiah seriously believed that it concerned= The law makes a distinction between whether one possesses coal or Buy silver. The respondent declined to answer.

Lord Balcarres further demanded that this legal question be addressed. It would not be decided by parliamentarians. Rather, it should be to be examined by judges, since since 1869 with

2) Ganfard: Vol. 44, pp. 688ff.

194

Right to deviate from this, to pass judgment in such matters to have members of parliament dismissed. For it must be determined here whether a Member of Parliament the right to a fine seat through un— Whether or not he has forfeited his legal rights. His demand However, this did not prevail, and the liberal majority decided to... Commission composed of parliamentarians to review to take the case seriously.

Apparently, after the committee had some After months of meetings, the opposition's demands no longer applied. withdraw, and according to a further decision of 31 January In 1913 it was decreed that the matter be resolved with the consent of the Königs to be subject to review by the judge— should be made a college of the Crown Council.

Meanwhile, it had become clear that between the company Samuel Montagu & Co. and the Minister for Indian Affairs= In addition to silver purchases, contracts were also concluded.

were, on the basis of which they gave him short-term loans had. Furthermore, they made agreements regarding the acquisition of Exchanges and treasury instructions of the Indian administrations. By judgment of the judges of April 11, 1913, it was established that This factual situation, the prerequisites and the application of the fulfilled the aforementioned law because it was clearly a matter of I have dealt with public contracts. As a result, Sir Stuart Samuel lost his seat on the day the contract was signed. and was no longer entitled to serve in parliament as a member of parliament= to sit and vote in the oröneter.

The law of 1782 further stipulated in such a case, that a member of parliament who acts in contradiction to this legal situation Each time he voted, he had to pay a fine of £500. In this way, Sir Stuart Samuel received a total sentence of £45,000 to £50,000 forfeited. N

It is very interesting to see the opinion of the "Times" on this. To hear a saying: "Sir Stuart Samuel is, of course, moral." innocent and because of the loss of his seat, he will be... Regret. The same applies to the penalties he received. set if*).

The costs of the proceedings amounted to £1055,-, which however designated as public by the government and therefore not subject to government oversight Sir Stuart Samuel were drafted.

It soon became apparent that the condemned man, in the view of his Friends should absolutely not pay the outstanding fines. Should have. Inquiries were already raised in parliament on May 1st and 7th. asked whether the government of Samuel could not be protected by a corresponding measure. I want to exempt the law.

On May 8, the Crown Prosecutor Sir Rufus Isaacs brought a case. Draft law according to which "Sir Stuart Samuel, Baron, is exempt from all "He should be released from punishment and compensated," which he suffered through the subtle actions described above. To the Finally, the first reading took place immediately.

Times, April 12, 2018.

18% | 195

However, it soon became apparent that the government was dealing with a closed large opposition to this bill would have to reckon with that. Therefore, it was allegedly due to a lack of For now, further prosecution in parliament will be postponed. However, it looks as if the opposition has made demands.

had requirements that the company Samuel Montagu & Co. was unwilling to fulfill. Bonar Law had, in fact, examined all the books of the company. The company required an audit by a certified public accountant. This was believed to be the case. However, they would have to refuse because then their transactions would be affected. clients would have apparently become aware of it').

No further measures were announced by the government in the near future. Attempts were made to pass the law. Other= Since then, nothing has been done by the authorities to address the issue. to collect fines. Three people from the The right of the "Common Informer", a right to prosecute, use, against Sir Stuart Samuel in court for fines Two lawsuits were dismissed on formal grounds in the The first instance rejected the claim, while the third plaintiff filed an obscenity claim. received a judgment in the amount of £13,000. Against all An appeal was filed against the verdict. A new trial will be held. But it never happened. Apparently, the parties had reached an agreement. The case was settled out of court, as each party withdrew their appeal. The nature of the agreement was not disclosed." The same circles that had freed Samuel from punishment by law- Those who wanted to ask this question certainly had a similar intention here as well. helped.

Sir Stuart had suffered no other harm due to his fine conduct

However, on April 21, 1918, Parliament had, with consideration for based on the decision of the panel of judges of the Kxonrat, the previous must declare the seat he held vacant. In= Consequently, a new election was held for the relevant electoral district. It became necessary. With the approval of the Liberal Party, it was possible Sir Stuart Samuel was nominated for election again and won. On April 30th, he lost his seat by a narrow majority. His absence from parliament was therefore very short. being. The Times noted in a special editorial with Rightly so, his victory was only possible thanks to the numerous Jewish votes. in this district. Furthermore, we want Don't miss the beginning of Samuel's address to his To give back to voters after the victory. "I won because Liberals and conservatives were convinced that I should be dealt with harshly. The procedure has been carried out. As a result, many voted for me. (who did not do it before).

Times, August 8, 1918. Danford: Vol. 56, p. 2247-

2248

Times of 17 January, 10, 12, 18, 17 February, 18 and 24 March 1914.

Times of 1 May 1918

Jews in the World

and particularly in British countries

at the beginning of the 20th century

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER I

JEWS AROUND THE WORLD AND PARTICULARLY IN BRITISH COUNTRIES AT THE BEGINNING OF THE 20TH CENTURY

Before studying more specifically how Jewish power is exercised in the Kingdom-United, it seems necessary for us to throw a overview of the different countries where this power slowly took root: and gradually developed over the two last few centuries.

There is hardly any country, in fact, where the Jew had not established its operation as soon as its keen instinct sensed something of ex-deplorable. That's how the good historian Cap-Figue shows us this (1) by engaging in the emb-worst Roman to all the little branches of the trade; taking over the tolls and all tax authorities' rights; selling filters, making the trade of predictions and horoscopes; and, In any case, attracting towards him and those of his race gold and silver without ever pro-to produce something of value in exchange.

(x) Philosophical history of the Jews, since the decade-the decline of the Maccabean race until the end of the 6th century key, by Mr. CAPFIGUE. - Brussels, 8°, 1840.

TO JEWISH ENGLAND

The slave trade was, as Well, we think, one of the children's favorite forms of trafficking is... of Israel in antiquity. The Church Fathers complain about it in many places in their writings. The memory of it has been preserved, on the other hand part, in many legends where we see of saintly bishops or archbishops, in Brittany and in Gaul, to rescue the unfortunate from hands of the Jews who had acquired them for the to be sold as slaves. The wretched without awareness that today deals with white, too easily, fueling the disreputable places in the East or America, with poor young girls recruited in the Eu-Western rope, thanks to pro- liars masses, honorable positions and posts foreign businesspeople can recognize-born there the ancestors of whom they are only too much worthy.

The means they employ today to achieve wealth, and through wealth to domination, they have always had them employed, with an equal spirit of profit and a per-

JEWS IN THE WORLD 5

They maintained their success. No qualms of conscience.
does not come to stop them, since everything that con-the world of non-Jews is prey that
The Talmud gives free rein to their rapacity.

A converted Israelite who lived in the 16th century
Antoine Marguerite revealed, among other things edifying practices, the meaning of absolution Easter that the rabbis give to their people in the synagogues: "Good Jews are,
by virtue of this absolution, cleansed of all acts bad faith that they may have committed in the previous year's course.

According to Eisenmenger, the author of Judaism unveiled and published in the 17th century, this absolute-tion is preventive, and, if I may say so, prophylactic; it does not apply to the past, but to all the actions to be taken in the course of the coming year.

To show to what preponderant degree of influence this practiced and applied morality-

what had driven the Jews throughout the Middle Ages – despite the oppressions and persecutions that maintained or re-established – know the balance, – it will suffice to recall that the million maravedis needed for the charter – the caravels of Christopher Columbus was put forward to the two sovereigns of Spain

6 JEWISH ENGLAND

Ferdinand and Isabella, by Luis de San Angel, treasurer of the royal household, and Gabriel Sanchez, Grand Treasurer of Aragon, both notoriously of Jewish race, if they do not profess it They don't value religion.

Religion, in fact, has never been an obstacle to the advancement of the Jew. There is nothing for him no difficulty, when he sees an advantage in it pressing, to make it cheap or rather a cheap, one might say, because he trades it willingly in exchange for another more advantageous one. The Catholic branches of Jewish families have therefore become quite numerous. But it is very rare for ethnic characters to which do not persist for very long after changing religion. All the more so do they maintain their integrity when The Israelite tradition ranges from Judaism to Protestantism. as has frequently happened in England – earth.

The Protestants' aversion to the worship of images, their habit of studying the Ancient Testament, to comment on it and to quote it without ceases; the number of sects and the principle of free inquiry, which allows one to form a individual belief, under whatever name – nation that the follower has enlisted, make infinitely easier for the Jews to pass their original religion to the religion of the reform. The Reverend Moses Margoliouth, himself a convert, and author of a History of Jews, published in 1846, recognizes it as its own terms that would be infinitely too long to reproduced here. The propaganda made among the Jewish community is also very active and dates back a long time.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 7

One of the most curious documents on this subject is a brochure printed in 1687. It contains two letters addressed by a merchant from London to a friend in Amsterdam. The first one recounts a heated controversy which allegedly took place at this merchant's establishment between the Father Saliam, a Jesuit, and Rabbi Jonathan: this completely refutes all the arguments of Catholic priest. In the other letter, we see the same rabbi launches into a conference combative with a certain Protestant named de Beza, who obtains advantages in his refutations. Jonathan expresses, in fact, his appreciation and gratitude for His new opponent, who "said a lot in a little words and completely removed the obstacles that he, Jonathan, had believed he could meet—to cross his path."

The conversions of Jews were mostly nominal

8 JEWISH ENGLAND

breuses under the reign of William III. I] It happened that more than one head of household was baptized to tiser with all the people in his house. But it was also not uncommon for grace not to touched that only one of the family members usually children, typically more easy to circumvent and more often a young A Hebrew man in love with a Gentile girl? So, her parents abandoned her; the whole The Jewish congregation turned against the apostate; there were around him, and among those of his race, a coalition that was determined to reduce it to misery.

It required an act of Parliament, which took viwar from the first year of the reign of the Queen Anne, to force Jewish parents to to allocate a pension to their converted children food proportional to their means.

Reverend Margoliouth reports, to this On the subject, a funny anecdote. A son conVerti was pursuing his father by virtue of this law. The father, not wanting his rascal of sons "eating pork" at his expense, char-Gea, a famous lawyer, to find a way to not to pay. Some time later, the lawyer summons the Jew, who rushes over and learns with a genuine joy, in long sleepless nights

JEWS IN THE WORLD 9

Hey, the businessman found a way ingenious in twisting the law to her advantage customer. But the discovery is worth the price, it's the large sum and quid pro quo. The he-breu, who understands that there is sometimes economy to show generosity, immediately extends the ar-gent requested and the lawyer places the amount of these fees are immediately secure.
After which he proves that, like this law unfortunate provision in favor of the children of Jews, but not in favor of those Christians
Well, that's the only way a father of a family, in the case of his client, to be able to neutralize it
The effect is to receive the Christian baptism. "If this is the fruit of your
"Insomnia!" cried the disappointed Jew, and fled.
Mr., why didn't you fall asleep, Mon-
"Sir lawyer, so that you never wake up!"

In the 18th century, wrote a correspondent from the Intermediary of researchers and curious (July 20, 19x10), it was in France and in England-land a kind of sport for the great ladies than the conversion of a Jew. These ceremonies were pretexts for magnificent celebrations symbols at the church and in the streets. From time to time Furthermore, the Mercure de France finds material there to an excellent copy. But it doesn't seem

10 JEWISH ENGLAND

that these conversions to Catholicism were very sincere. What is certain is that,
In many cases, the instruction of catechists
The games went on indefinitely.

Here is an example:

From 1761 to 1763, the five Astruc brothers, who were Jewish from Bordeaux, had acquired a bad reputation in Paris by "their roguery and their indoctrination" "Lite," according to police reports. They had already scoured the province: they had marked there—their passage was marked by "bankruptcies".

One of them in particular, Moïse Astruc, was noted as "noisy" and monitored for his "bad morals". He affected the allures of a fop and, despite the prohibitions of the police, stubbornly insisted on "wearing the sword and the neck-hunting blind." One day, on the Pont-Saint Michael, he was fighting with one of his Ravel's fellow believers, when the inspector of Police officer Buhot, having been warned, rushes to separate them. RER. Moïse Astruc draws his weapon. The policeman actually As much to defend his life. But, reinforcements When this happens, the Jew runs away as fast as he can and goes to hide in a neighboring house, where the inspector—The tunnel doesn't penetrate. Astruc is no longer visible. in the streets of Paris. The police lieutenant He believes he has gone to the provinces, where this Jew is running around fairs, including those of Beaucaire and from Avignon, as a partner of his mother. In Consequently, Sartine, the police lieutenant, begs the provincial intendants to re-look for Moses Astruc: he gives the signal-ment: "Brown, thin, and pimply face, "Small eyes and an aquiline nose."

THE JEWS IN THE WORLD II

Meanwhile, he was receiving letter after letter of Mes de Malon, Beringhen and Ver-noodle who were pleading for his clemency Interesting Astruc; for two years, this Jew is instructed in the Christian religion; and that is the jealousy of his fellow believers who de-He did not, however, have to give up on his own to the Petit-Châtelet prison for holiday-to kill for a month.

The devout women, noted above, succeeded—Were they going to make him renounce Judaism? we encountered in the Archives of the Bas—several examples of the same kind. Beau—a group of Israelites "were being instructed" and even baptizing them, to please their protectors.

But how few remained within the fold of

The Catholic Church!

Regardless of the high frequency of these conversions, they never reached that a tiny minority of the Jewish population.

12 JEWISH ENGLAND

The same is true today, that the resources of Protestant proselytism were multiplied, and that the fervor of propaganda is no less in Anglo-Saxon countries. There are at least a dozen re-companies known in England, dealing with the conversion of the Jewish version, the most important of which is the London Society for Promoting Christianity Among the Jews, who has an income of 40,000liv. sterl. and 154 agents. America has one a large number and Germany a few.

With all these resources, the mission-pairs specifically occupied with preaching the gospel Gile to the Israelites throughout the world are not In total, only 250. Reverend RW Harden estimates the number of conversions at around a thousand annuals, and Dr. Delitzsch does not believe that the proselytes made in Judaism by the Christian religion (we are not saying Catholic) may exceed 100,000; this figure is already respectable.

Let us add that these conversions are, at the]Day-of today as in the past, often bought at prices of money or material advantages, and that certain-Some Hebrews make a real business out of it, de-coming back from relapse to retrain shortly after and as long as there is still a bonus to be collected.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 13

Among the sincere converts, many em-They stir up the ecclesiastical state. There are some more than 350 among the Protestant ministers of Great Britain. We have no sta-technical training for Catholic priests of origin Jewish, but we know that there is a certain number, and it would not be difficult to cite some names, if we are to place our trust in certain-certain English authors and more particularly to an authority: Mr. Arnold White (1).

Since the beginning of the 19th century, due to favorable circumstances, at the pre-first of which it is appropriate to put the illustrious principles of equality established by In our French Revolution, the Jews had the increasingly free field in civilized countries ses, too, one can believe, they have marvel-happily enjoyed. We gathered the the most authentic documents and figures the least contested, in order to present to the elect the table of the race's progress during from the hundred-year period of the last century, without neglecting to extend our study to the present hour, in order to bear witness to how much The numbers have increased over the last 12 years.

(1) ArNoLD WHITE, The Modern Jew. Heinemann.

I4 JEWISH ENGLAND

From 1820 to 1830, there were approximately 6,000 Jewish lions, scattered throughout the world, including Western Europe, Moravia, Poland, Wallachia, Moldavia and Crimea contain- were born at least half. The Israelites were particularly prevalent in Poland at the time, since that Casimir the Great (1333-1370) had married the beautiful Jewish woman Esther, and had allowed her Girls follow their mother's religion. Despite the unique facilities given to Jews to settle blir in the country, very few, it is interesting to notice it, they became farmers and attached- They are worked on the ground. The immense majority Rit  confined itself to manual labor jobs money or intermediaries they used wherever they were given some freedom. many of them were taken in. wine merchants, distillers, brewers, horse dealers, Secondhand dealers, money changers, and usurers. The sect Karaites, in Lithuania and Crimea, com- It took 5,000 individuals. There were 26,000 Jews. and 32 synagogues in the city of Sala- mic, 40,000 in Constantinople and 10,000 in Jerusalem.

Tiberias was entirely populated by Jews. Ibrahim and Soliman, ministers of the Pachalicks of Damascus and Acre, belonged to the Hebrew race. In France, they were found especially in Alsace and Lorraine, in Marseille, in Bordeaux and Paris. In Italy, they had primarily established residence in Livorno, Genoa and Venice. The Rome Ghetto, again subject to strict rules that evoked The Middle Ages contained 4,000 of them; a soldier from the Pope stood guard at the entrance to the said Ghetto. Any Jew convicted of having spent the night in outside this squalid neighborhood was struck of a fine. However, they remained no less powerful; most of the prelates Romans used them in their brothers. They had frequent needs for money; they knew how to get it, We can well imagine, there are significant direct interests or indirectly, and, when they were enriched-Chisels, they moved elsewhere, leaving the instead to their less fortunate brothers, who then... soon in turn greased themselves with the same manner (1).

JEWS IN THE WORLD 15

In the United Kingdom of Great Britain and from Ireland, they could then be quantified approximately by a total of 10,000 to 12,000, having of a capital of 800 million sterling, or 19 million 200 million francs, giving a (x) The New Monthly Magazine, 1829.

16 JEWISH ENGLAND

annual income of over 40 million pounds sterling, to which was added a profit of 4 million at least, earned through good brokerage. consented to by the government for their good offices, because Israel was already serving as an intermediary for loans, negotiations of Treasury bonds and other high-value transactions finances (1).

In the United States, the North American Review in 1826, it numbered approximately 9,000.

distributed as follows:

New England, 3,000 or 4,000; Pennsylvania, 3 or 4,000; New York, 950; Virginia, 400; North Carolina, 400; South Carolina, 1,200; Georgia, 400; Florida, 30 or 40; Louisiane, 200;

A critic from the Quarterly Review could then write in a very noteworthy article-ble (1828): "Jews are found everywhere the surface of the earth. They landed in China, where there is so much repugnance for foreigners; they founded empires in Abyssinia, in Ethiopia, and at other points along the coast. Afghans are of East African descent. and Semitic customs, to the point that one asks if we shouldn't look there for the descendants of the ten tribes of Israel whose trace is lost, and that some authors have "Allegedly found among the English." There are some had in Malaba, on the coasts of the states bar-Baresques, everywhere at last, and fifteen years before that Toussenel's work on the Jews, Kings of the Era, an editor of Blackwood's Magazine (1829) drew on indisputable documents, the right to write: "Throughout all regions of Europe, the the power of gold lies in the hands of Israelites.

(x) Blackwood's Magazine, 1829.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 17

"We tolerate them," said another writer. English, but as one endures an illness a chronic condition that cannot be cured (1).

In an article entitled: On the Jewish State in Europe, and published by Alexandre Weill who he wrote so many curious and interesting works through verve, freedom of thought and vigor of expression on his coreligionists, this original writer, friend of Offenbach and Albert Wolf provides us with the following statistics on Jews in Europe as of 1844 (2).

- (1) Quarterly Review, 1829.
(2) Independent Review, 184%, in-8, article of 38 pages.
2

18 JEWISH ENGLAND

This statistic, he says, is far from being determined by official figures; with the exception of Germany, it was not established for the other countries than approximately and on floating-point numbers.

Here are the statistics on European Jews in 1844:

Austria.	650,000
Prussia	x 197,000
Bavaria	65,000
Saxony	1,500
Württemberg.	10,000
Hanover.	3,000
Baden	12,000
Duchy of Hesse 	10,000
Electoral Hesse	8,000
Anbalt-Oldenburg.	7,000
Saxon duchies	4,000
Mecklenburg-Reuss.	3,000
Frankfurt and Hamburg... .	13,000
Denmark	8,000
Holland.	35,000
Belgium	2,500
France.	95,000
England + + + + +	100,000

TO BE REPORTED... 1,224,000

JEWS IN THE WORLD 19

REPORT... 1,224,000

Italy, excluding the other provinces

female dogs	35,000
European Türkiye	550,000
Russia and Poland... .	2,110,000

Swiss +... 2,000
Sweden 2,000
Portugal (Gibraltar). . . . 2,500
The Ionian Islands, Malta and Greece. 4,000

Total . 3,929,500

The Jews were then emancipated in Holland, in Belgium and France. In Türkiye, the last-Hattischerif had granted them rights which they didn't even enjoy in many ways civilized states of Christianity.

About twenty years later, the Rev.
Moses Margoliouth presents us with a painting of the Jewish community in England, of which we reproduce-Let's look at the main elements:

In this short period of time – from 1830 to 1845 – the number of Jews increased by 12,000
at 60,000. There were then 10 synagogues in London and 36 in the provinces. The author of the History of Jews gives us information on the establishment of the is-Raelites in the major cities of the Kingdom-
A unit of precious details.

In Birmingham, the hardware industries

20 JEWISH ENGLAND

jewelry and jewelry, so well suited to supplying the trade of peddlers and merchants Street vendors attracted them as early as 1720. The city quickly became the headquarters of Jewish "bargain hunters," who formed a populaconsiderable floating tion, outside of the Approximately 140 families were established there.
remains. A Jew named D. Barnet there had been a member of several years in a row the municipality. Birmingham is inhabited pre-Sentement by nearly 5,600 circumcised men.
Liverpool became a Jewish center considered-made possible thanks to Mr. Yates, one of the Israelites that Queen Charlotte had brought with her from Germany: This person having been named to an important position in customs, in Li-Verpool around 1762, attracted several of its coreligionists, distinguished either by their ri-chess, either by their talents. This colony prospered so well and became so important that, when Prince Albert came to Liverpool to lay the first stone of the House of Mariners (Sailor's Home), several Jews sat down at the banquet table that the city offered him. This seemed at the time an extraordinary event, suspicious and implausible. There are 7,000 Jews in today in the important city of Liverpool.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 21

The first synagogue opened in Manchester was so in 1780, thanks to a certain Nathan. Manchester now has numerous Jewish temples, with a population of 30,000 Israelites. It was in this city that, Moreover, the illustrious Nathan Rothschild threatened his career.

In Bedford, a merchant named Michael, Joseph, founded a synagogue in 1808. This zealous religious man did not know how to communicate his zeal as a believing apostle to his sons, who abandoned Judaism to enter the Anglican Church. Its foundation did not have a A happier future: from synagogue it became a carpenter's workshop. We don't believe not that any others have been built there since. Fortunately.. Bedford!

The Jewish congregation of Bristol dates back to 1800. It had approximately 500 members in 1850. In 1899, 9 births occurred there. 9 funerals and 5 weddings; which does not suffice. does not pose a significant increase and does not mean possible for the invading race. Indeed, Bristol, In 1911, there were barely a thousand circles concise.

The city of Hull presents itself to us as a very old Jewish settlement, because of the ease of communications by sea, with the Dutch, Scandinavian and German ports. The number of Jews residing there exceeded 200 fifty years ago, and 500 to 600 Jews foreigners landed there annually to Various destinations. The population

22 JEWISH ENGLAND

The Jewish population at the end of the 19th century was 2,000 in-Individuals, attending two synagogues. She must have increased by nearly a third. As for precise data on transit movement
They lack the information to assess it exactly, but it that certainly amounts to several thousand.

In 1730, Canterbury did not yet have synagogue. The one that opened shortly afterwards was replaced in 1847 by a new building, erected on the site of a Templar convent.
The Jews of Canterbury are all rich and, in the English sense, "respectable". Their number has not increased significantly since 1850, because around 1898 there were only 12 is-Raelites residing in the city and today-
Today we are told of 14 (1911).

The Jewish settlement of Ipswich dates back to 1730.
She has a reputation for being superstitious excessively protective. The following is cited in support of this This anecdote is based on superstition. In 1812, two pigeons were ritually sacrificed in cer-

JEWS IN THE WORLD 23

taine family from Ipswich, to make a pie the Sabbath day. The throat badly cut, without Without a doubt, the birds began to run in the room, bleeding and moaning, at Great excitement among the people of the house. The new-
The news spread instantly, and all the Jews from Ipswich rushed to be witnesses of this phenomenon. They had no difficulty in to explain it. This persistence of life in these unfortunate birds offered themselves up as the obvious choice.
tooth testimony that human souls are there were found locked away as expiation for their mistakes. Consequently, the corpses of the two pigeons were buried in the cemetery Jewish with all liturgical honors. The Jewish Year Books from 1900 to 1911 do not Ipswich is not mentioned among the agglomerations Jewish communities of some importance in England earth.

Israelites are found in Falmouth around the year 1740. A century later they were there at a number of about twenty families, holding shops or businesses. This colony is also not included in the latest Jewish Year Book of 1912.

The same is true of Penzance, in the Cornouaille, where some still lived in 1850

24 JEWISH ENGLAND

Jews, almost all hardware peddlers—lerie and fake jewelry.

The Jews of Exeter have had a synagogue since 130 years. Reverend Margoliouth reports them such as "numerous, intelligent and sociable". They currently have 30 fellow believers in this city.

In Sheffield, there were about twenty thousand, formed into a congregation since 1838. They now number 2,250, and own several Synagogues.

The Jews established in Dover opened a A synagogue was founded there in 1833 by a Mr. Cohen. a Classical and Mathematical Boarding School for upper-class Jewish youth. It does not appear to have prospered. Yet a school was established there in 1873. of Hebrew and religious education (Dover Hebrew and Religious School), attended at—today by 20 students, 12 boys and 8 girls. The synagogue of 1833 was replaced by another in 1862. The Israelites are at number of approximately 120 currently in Dover.

Cheltenham had only a small population in 1824 Jewish congregation, which grew considerably The plan was to found a synagogue around 1847. The synagogue still exists, but it is closed.

JEW IN THE WORLD 25

the Jewish population being currently reduced for 4 people.

Ramsgate has become fashionable among the Jews by the famous Sir Moses Montefiore, whose We will have to speak more than once. There was his country house, and he had it built at his own expense a synagogue which is administered perhaps even his heir Sir Francis-Abraham Montefiore. We're counting right now 130 Israelites (1911) residing in Ramsgate.

Newcastle-upon-Tyne had a synagogue as early as 1833. However, the city did not contain fifty years ago, about twenty of families of true Hebrews. There are some today-Today, 3,000, a figure provided by statistics general Jewish law and a new temple was built built in 1880.

It is clear from this list that the Jewish population centers in England most notably, they have moved during the latter part of the 19th century. But what this population has increased overall in considerable proportions, that's what my-will list the other localities where Jews which abound reach or exceed since 1900 the number 100:

Bangor, 90; Belfast, 1,200; Blackburn, 280;

26 JEWISH ENGLAND

Bradford, 300; Brighton and Hove, about 500;

Brynmawr, 30; Cork, 400; Dublin, 2,700;

Dundee, 160; Edinburgh, 250; Gateshead-on-

Tyne, 123; Glasgow, 7,000; Great Grimsby,

Hi 450; Hanley, 45; Leeds, 25,000 Israelites;

Leicester, 270; Manchester, 30,000; North-

| hampton, 200; Norwich, 158; Nottingham,

750; Plymouth, 400; Pontypridd, 100; Port-

sea, 500; Reading, 200; Southampton, 25;

Southport, 200; South Shields, 140; Stock-tone-on-Tees, 100; Stroud, 100; Sunderland,

| 3,000; Cardiff, 1,800; Swansea, 1,000; Trede-

| gar, 160; Volverhampton, 35 families providedsant 170 circumcised; Harwich, 160.

In summary, Jewish forces in the empire

The entire British population is distributed as follows:

GREAT BRITAIN:

SJ London, 150,000; provinces, 59,700; Scotland, 5,000; Ireland, 30,000. Total: 244,700.
for the British Isles.

COLONIES:

Australia, 15,250; Canada, 95,500; India, 18,300; New Zealand, 1,900; Africa of South, 50,000; Egypt, 50,000; Gibraltar, 1,300.
This gives a total, for the entire British Empire-

JEWS IN THE WORLD 27

tannic, of 232,250 Israelites, except many English colonies where the se-Mites, it is true, are hardly predominant.

The number of Jews spread throughout the world an integer can only be known approximately tion. The census is, of course, Density, impossible. The most modest figures bring it to around 9 million for Europe alone, 2,300,000 for both Americas, 850,000 to 900,000 for Asia and Africa. The Jewish Yearbook of the United States (x) reached, as of 1899, a total of 10,728,491. The English Yearbook for 1900 provides a detailed and comparative overview, which appears as close to reality as possible.
The figures given for 1891 in the countries
most of them are official from Europe, resulting from the last census which then has been done.

IN EUROPE:

Germany 576,884 570,000
Austria-Hungary . . 1,860,106 1,800,000
Belgium 3,000 4,000
Bulgaria 16,500

TO REPORT. . 2,439,990 2,390,500

(1) The American Jewish Year Book, 1899-1900.

28 JEWISH ENGLAND

REPORT. 2,439,990
Denmark. 4,080
Spain (with Gibralt-tar) nor 2,500

France. 72,000
Greece x 5,792
Holland and dependents

these... 97,324
British Isles 101,189
Italy 50,000
Luxembourg. 1,000
Portugal 300
Romania. 300,000
Russia. 4,500,000
Serbia. - 4,652
Sweden and Norway. 3,402
Switzerland. 3,609
Türkiye 120,000

Total 7,705,838

EN ASre:

Türkiye in Asia. 250,000
Persia . . 30,000
Asian Russia. 50,000
Turkestan, Afghanistan 14,000

India, China and Japan. 19,000

2,390,500

4,000

4,500

80,000

5,800

100,000

144,000

40,000

1,000

300

206,015

6,000,000

5,000

5,000

3,000

200,000

9,289,115

363,000

JEWS IN THE WORLD 29

REPORT: ASIA. 363,000

IN AFRICA:

Egypt... 25,300

Abyssinia (Fellashas). 50,000

Tripolitania 60,000

Tunisia... > 55,000

Algeria and Sahara: 43,500

Morocco | 150,000

South Africa . . . 20,000

— 403,800

IN AMERICA:

United States 1,100,000

Canada... 30,000

Antilles. 3,000

South America . . 12,000

1,145,000

AUSTRALIA:

16,000

Total for Europe... 9,289,115
Grand total: 11,216,915

According to new information, forgotten in 1900 and 1910, the current number of Israelites throughout the world are affected, if not exceeds the figure of 115 million and it increases every day, he considered

blement. |

30 JEWISH ENGLAND

It is interesting to examine more closely the condition of the Jews in those of these countries where they can practice directly, sin %h per backlash, some influence on the number,
the special situation and conduct of the Jews of England, which concern us more specifically securely.

We will not be discussing France here.
fiery works of Edouard Drumont and a few other vehement writers who are applied in our country to the study of the ques-Semitic traditions are there to provide us with all the desired information and are easy for our readers to consult.

The most important country, due to the number of Jews it contains and also by the legislation to which it subjects them is incon.testably Russia. It is from Russia that come, in a kind of continuous exodus, these thousands of Jews spreading across Europe western and on the United States, poor devils innocently exhibiting, beneath their for-my vilest and most repulsive, all the vices of their race, to the great annoyance of high-ranking barons of commerce and banking, | their coreligionists, who find themselves burdened towards them, charitable duties of more and more

j

more expensive, without being able to withdraw from this compromising fraternity something other than a resurgence of unpopularity, if not outright hatred, for the Jewish name and the Israelite character. England, with its traditions of hospitality and its firmly established reputation of loyal land of asylum, is more than any other countries affected by this invasion of misery vicious and rapacious. It's barely possible the "Britishers" are beginning to sense the danger which threatens their country. As we will have more than once the opportunity to observe this at However, during this study, concern arose It is already being felt. Thus, in 1897, the Lord-Mayor of London, assisted by a large number of notable and wealthy citizens, organized in the Guildhall a meeting which voted an appeal to Tsar in order to soften certain laws to be enacted and enforced against his overly enthusiastic Jewish subjects. The Lord Mayor sent directly to Emperor Alexander II The resolution voted on by the meeting. The result fat what it could be. The document was ren-sent to the Russian ambassador in London, who put it in an envelope and addressed it, without further comment, at the Foreign Office, from where he returned rather pitifully to the first magistrate of the city, without any sanction was even tempted.

32 JEWISH ENGLAND

The reasons for the ostracism of which the Israelites are the subject in Russia are more complex. They are more complex than is generally believed: they are religious, economic and political.

The religious question is, if not the most important perhaps, at least the most important-ancient. Already during the reign of Vasili Ivanovich (1505-1533), we see the Jews being harassed as heretics. This is further accentuated under Ivan the Terrible (1533-1584). We also know- lies that the hostile attitude of Catherine II to Their attitude towards them was due to the influence of the Prosecutor-General of the Holy Synod, Fiofan Prokopovich. The extent of religious sentiment, at the time current, can be judged by the fact that not only the Jews, but the Protestants and the Catholics are viewed with suspicion by a part of the population and certain functionnaires.

It was hardly until under Nicholas I" (1825–1855) that arguments clearly manifest themselves economic measures against the Israelites. The Conservatives fear the presence among the illiterate, ignorant peasants – and whom we hold to keep in ignorance – of a race too gradual and skillful. From there, all the measures intended to obstruct the investigation and the intellectual advancement of the Jews, principal decisions mainly under Alexander III and Nicholas II.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 33

The political point of view is the one that is promoted by the official world. And it is It is impossible to deny the participation of Israelites. to revolutionary movements.

We know that the Jews are confined by the government of the Tsar in the sixteen provinces of western Russia as well as in the eleven provinces of Poland. They do not can be neither millers nor fishermen; he It is forbidden for them, except with special authorization. to buy, sell and lease land. Permissions are, moreover, granted quite frequently. liberally under specified conditions of surveillance and location tracking. There is, by For example, 30,000 Jews in the governments of Kherson and Ekaterinoslav, distributed in 21 agricultural colonies, cultivating with a certain success 60,000 hectares of land. The pre– The first of these colonies dates from 1804; but the most were established by Nicholas I," in 1846, on the requests and advice of Sir Moses Montefiore, already named above. They produce appreciable results after two or three generations; but the this measure should be even less problematic. realize that the vast majority of Jews of Russia and Poland – including Sir Robert Morier, then England's ambassador to Saint Petersburg, was estimating the number, in 1891, at over 5 million – would refuse to to try the experiment. Emigration to the Republic Argentina, where Baron Hirsch offered land to his poor coreligionists, to so it was very frankly sponsored by the imperial government; but the Jewish masses has not suffered a true decrease in this respect. appreciable, and full of disappointments nature followed this attempt at colonization far away taine.

Two essential things were missing: the physical capacity of emigrants for the cul- their willingness and their readiness to adapt to a sudden and complete change of life and climate. Baron Hirsch has abandoned care from his philanthropic enterprise to the Jewish Colonization Association. This one does not admit the independent press at its assemblies and not states in its annual report that simple generalities devoid of any detail. It is so it's practically impossible to get there accurate account of the current state of the colony Jewish in Argentina. But it is not doubtful- less than failure, at least to the point of a practical view of colonization through culture, not be complete. Many settlers return- They are in Europe, even in Russia. On July 15th In 1888, they numbered 6,904; 200 of less than the previous year, and the movement- The flow of emigration had not stopped. Not only had none of them yet then reimbursed for the advances made, but all complained bitterly, declaring that the fate of their fathers in the worst ghettos and amidst the threats of the Inquisition, aided their auto-da-fé appeared enviable compared to them of theirs. No doubt, we must wait for the second and perhaps the third generation, like in the agricultural colonies of southern Russia dionale, in order to be able to hope for some result-tat. But how many settlers will remain then?

JEWS IN THE WORLD 35

And, in any case, admitting a partial success-
Site that would already be controllable at the current timetuelle (1912), what is a derivation of 6,000 to 7,000 individuals out of a mass of 5 to 6 million Israelites, a number that increases every day considerably and becomes one of the scourges of Russia and Poland?

36 JEWISH ENGLAND

The Polish Jew constitutes, in effect, the race
the most prolific in the world, four times more about the Russian race, which is already infinitenister more than all other peoples of the Christendom.

Jews avoid military service because them and for theirs by all means in their power. One of the most effective is to dissipmule, every time they find it average, the birth of their children. He-
It follows that the number of births is, in rea-ity, higher than the statistics do not provide itnissent. Despite this definite element of insinu-
To be fair, they nevertheless accuse the Jews.
and Christians have enormous differences. Thus,
in the decade from 1882 to 1892, we observe among Jews an average of 171.42 naiissessions against 100 deaths, while, among the
For Christians, the average is only 138.14.
Out of 1,000 births, the Orthodox had 407 stillborn children and only 232 Jews. A Warsaw, where Jews make up a third of the population, the number of births is equal at their place, compared to the one found at both other third parties.

Based on these observations and on a few other similar examples, ME-J. Dillon

JEWS IN THE WORLD 37

calculates the annual increase in the Jewish population in the Russian provinces which are under their jurisdiction
The number of green spaces must be at least 80,000. This figure is of superior eloquence (1).

The reservoir from which the overflow spills on our West is certainly not close to be exhausted.

Regardless of the strictness of the regulations—
the conditions to which the Jews in Rus-sie, it would be dangerous for the State to bring it the slightest softening or loosening of the discipline.

The main agent of the movement towards Ar-Gentine, who led the negotiations with the Russian government, in this matter,
Mr. Arnold White states clearly, in a book, published twelve years ago (2), "that no no other policy is compatible with development development of Russia along the line of its national traditions." After insisting on the intelligence of the Jew, on his fierce will!
on his unscrupulous ambition and ready to |
all the sacrifices to achieve wealth, |
Mr. Arnold White adds: "They are a people:

(1) The Fortnightly Review, Jan. 1898.

\ (2) The Modern Jew. London, W. Heinemann, 1899.

38 JEWISH ENGLAND

which only exists when it can expand and to take advantage, like a parasitic growth, of the vital sap and riches of another race. Emancipating the Jews in Russia would be to give them, in the short term, a preponderant-rancid much more complete than those they had already had so much trouble conquering in France and that they are currently working to assert in England. "What a Tsar in his good sense, What sane Russian minister would dare to per-to force his country to commit suicide by giving in civil administration and the destiny of high-ranking army positions, to a minority Jewish?

Russia considers itself absolutely within its rights, by expelling citizens Americans holding regular passports, for the sole reason that they are of religion
Israelite, |

A conflict on this last point divides this moment (1912) Washington and Saint Petersburg-town. There are few of our readers who do not have We have heard about these difficulties. We will therefore limit ourselves to recalling that following the systematic refusal by the Russian authorities to honor the passports issued by the United States to their Jewish citizens, and in the impossibility of reaching a conclusion on this subject agreement with the Tsar's cabinet, the president Taft notified Russia on December 15, 1911, that the intention of his government was to abrogate the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation gation of 1832. The motive put forward by The president is that this treaty contains a clause whose interpretation by Russia seems be the cause of the present conflict. The paragraph The target is as follows:

JEWS IN THE WORLD 39

"...The inhabitants of their respective states will have the freedom to stay and reside in any part of said territory for to attend to their own affairs; and they will enjoy this effect of the same security and protection as subjects of the country where they reside, provided to submit to the laws and ordinances that govern it are in force, and particularly regarding the rules-current regulations concerning trade.

In Russia, Mr. Taif's act was considered like "unfriendly," because this leader The state made its notification immediately after the vote. by the House, on the resolution of Mr. Sulzer, and, in short, anticipated the consent of Senate. The Russian press, understandably, has not to be tender, on this occasion, for the government American nement. She saw in the gesture of the president an electoral maneuver, to the effect to win over the Jewish vote: some leaves go further, and allude to a Mr. Taft's agreement with Jewish financiers.

4. Jewish England

Russia is, it must be acknowledged, required to protect themselves against the Semitic race which she's already suffocating and she has to take all the Measures against these Jews who have settled at her home during the reign of the King of Poland Otto I' and who, since then, have never ceased to multiply in a perilous way.

It is, moreover, difficult to disentangle whether the prominent European Jews, those who hold global wealth and actually print the direction they want in politics States, truly care about the emancipation of their Russian brothers. They did well, for what—that time, aroused and maintained a kind of agi—anti-Russian sentiment in England and the United States United. Thanks to them, the nihilists and anarchists exiles or escapees from Russia, almost all of them Jews were able to publish pamphlets and books against the Tsar and his government. One journal, Darkest Russia, which we will have to to speak again, was substituted to make a cam—violent loincloth against the persecutors of the Jewish race in Slavic countries, and young

JEWS IN THE WORLD 4x

Israelites, full of zeal and talent, have advised to compare Minister Popedonotseff to Torquemada, and to invite the Anglo-Saxons to "boycott" Russian travelers visiting England or the United States. All of this has did not last long; Darkest Russia could not to continue its publication due to lack of funds, and the Jewish bankers, after a fleeting grimace of bad mood, in 1894, lent to the Russia, all the money she then had urgent need, without stipulating, in exchange, the the slightest reform or the slightest concession in in favor of their oppressed coreligionists. They were holding on, at this moment when the events were serious, Russia at their complete discretion—tion. If they provided him with the essential resources—conceivable to pursue its policy inte—They, the younger generation and its administrative errors, are declared, by that very fact, its approvals theorists and their accomplices. They have their part in the suppression of the Jewish newspaper Le Courier du North (1) and in the suicide of Prince Baria—

(x) The Northern Courier (Sievernyi Vietsnik), large daily newspaper of Saint Petersburg, had been founded by Prince Bariatinsky.

He found himself unable to continue to support and manage the newspaper, the Courrier du Nord tinsky, who had founded it. They are not strange—no longer to the measures that Nicholas II decided to take action to put into effect the Law of Nicholas I, restricting trade in foreign Jews, and denying them any naturalisation.

42 JEWISH ENGLAND

After Russia, it's Austria-Hungary's turn. and in the Balkans that Jews abound and multiply the most. In Romania, they form a fifth of the population and are among those who count towards 63% in the annual surplus of births on the dead. The government, around 1899, took rigorous measures against them; also Did they emigrate in large numbers to Anatolia? in Australia, the United States and Canada. Some stop along the way, in the large cities like Paris or London: they

He found other sponsors and inspirations. became suspect in the eyes of the public and the government ment.

He soon learned that this newspaper was sponsored by a Jewish union. Furthermore, Everyone knew it and said it openly.

An official statement appeared in every newspaper. naux, thus conceived: "The Ministers of the Interior, of public education and justice, etc., by virtue articles, etc., assembled in council, have taken the The following decision:

"The publication of the Courrier du Nord is and will remain forbidden.

increase the number of piece-rate tailors miserable victims of the sweating system, are-earn money from top fashion designers, become vague brokers, "bargain hunters", pawnbrokers or small-time loan sharks, spreading everywhere, in their fight against the misery, demoralization, discontent,
The strikes. They are almost always lively.
of the same spirit of ruthless covetousness that makes them capable of trying anything to free themselves of a bad market and to cling on opi-niätrement, like leeches, in such a a matter which, for better or for worse, should bring them profit a profit.

In Austria-Hungary, the Jewish element is, according to Elysée Reclus, who became eight times more numerous in the last century.

Official censuses give, for
In 1885, the population was 41,056,206 individuals.
including 1,648,000 Jews, and, for 1805, 4,448,474 individuals, including 1,873,000 Jews, accusing a increase in favor of these very superior laughing proportionally to that of the rest of the population.

This statistic is, moreover, in that concerns Jews, far below the reality.
Many circumcised men took Hungarian names

44 JEWISH ENGLAND

and have been listed as such ever since.
Here is the path followed by the population Jewish, in Austria proper, since the reign of Maria Theresa. Under this famous sovereign, 200,000 of them were counted. Let's come immediately in the 19th century.
In 1830... 355,000
In 1859... 476,000
In 1869... 822,000

In 1880... +1,000,000
In 1890. 1,143,305
In 193... 1,225,000

For Hungary, the editor-in-chief of Deutschen Volksblattes, of Vienna, M. Ernst Vergani provided the following table:

Under Joseph II...	25,000
Late 18th century.	50,000
1830	100,000
1847	270,000
1870	500,000

1883	700,000
1900	+ 1,000,000

In Vienna in 1890 there were 118,405 Jews: out of 1,214,363 inhabitants. We can say, without fear of making a mistake, that one must take into account today at least close to 180,000.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 45

That's progress. In 1850, there were only...
32 out of 1,000 inhabitants.

At the University, there were 2,500 students in 1888.
Jewish deeds out of a total of 6,350, or 40%;
among professors, the proportion was only 39% in other schools in the capital
It was distributed as follows:

Technical (School) . .	27 p.
Academy of Commerce.	24 p.
Realschulen	26p.
Realgymnasien . . .	48p.
Gymnasien.	29p.
Volks und Bürgerschulen	13 p.

pp6s0cSsPpS

In all the Mittelschule or schools
On average, Jewish children provide 77%.
of the school population.

Budapest is home to more than 186,000 Jews.

University, attended in 1888 by 3,679 students deans, counted 1,194 Jews and a third of the These teachers were of the same religion.
figures could only increase significantly—
It has been lying for twenty-five years. The same is true.
of Ja "polytechnique" where there were 207 Jews out of 578 students, and from the Academy of Commerce (Handelskademie), where out of 599 students only 119—
They were Christians.

46 JEWISH ENGLAND

Prague, which is famous for its circumcised boys,
It has more than thirty synagogues. In Galicia.
the number of Jews increased by 54%
for forty years; they make up 15% of the population and own a fifth of the land. In Silesia, the increase was 64%; and, out of 100 inhabitants, 16 are Jewish.
In Bukovina, they still only constitute 11.8% of the total population, although they increased by 74%; but 22% of Large landowners there are Jewish.
and the rest of the soil is, to a large extent, hypo-teaque to individuals of this race.

The Austrian aristocracy still holds the Jews are kept separate. Only the Rothschilds are allowed in.
by her; yet we still know how to make them feel, at the occasion, that it is only a condescension-dance.

It is said that the late Edward VII, then that he was crown prince, on the eve of going hunting at his friend Baron Hirsch's place, he announced to Prince F... that he would pay him a visit in a dreamnant from the financier Israélite. "Hand in your visit to a place long ago, the prince told him Austrian. I will be happy to see you again in any occasion, but not on your way out of at that Jew's house." This did not prevent the Hebrews,

JEWS IN THE WORLD 47

in Austria, having gotten their hands on everything:
commerce, finance, industry, professions liberal, pleasure establishments. Except-tion of some Czech newspapers, which are kept independent, they command:

and inspire the entire press.

"Do you have any Christians in your per-?"
"Sonel?" asked the Anglo-Jewish novelist.
Zangwill (r) to the editor of the Pesther Lloyd in Budapest. "I believe we in
"We have one," he replied. Is there any left?
still in the editorial offices of Budapest and;
Even from Vienna?

This state of affairs means that there is no poor Jews in this country on the banks of the Danube, but that everywhere there are Israelites – and where are there none? – the peasants and the Christian artisans are in a dark middle-serendipitously, they are deeply hated in the
The people and the middle class. This is in Austria-Hungary, – and this is understandable, – that the anti-Semitism is the most violently militant.
But, as the author of the
The Modern Jew book: "The Jews have acquired, thanks to mortgages on the land, such

(1) Without Prejudice.

48 JEWISH ENGLAND

a hold on national life, that a revolution
Only she could wrest it from them.

Fights are frequent in Vienna between Jews and Christians, and even among Israelites themselves different sects. Here, for example, is the Recent testimony (March 1, 1912):

"A bloody battle took place between the supporters of official Judaism and Zionists.
Here are the details of this interesting episode whose story, however, must be preceded by two definitions for laypeople.

"Official Judaism is that which, in most major European centers, rule his conduct and his speeches, in short, his attitude, based on the principles of opportunism without which it would be difficult for the Jews to establish their commercial, financial, political positions ticklish, worldly, and to maintain oneself in these positions. The Jews in this category don-nent for citizens of the country they inhabit;

They deny that Judaism is a distinct people.
tinct or a separate nation. Some support that religion alone differentiates them from the rest citizens; the others, calling themselves free, pen-sisters deny any difference and claim not to distinguish themselves from the clerics.

"Both sides insist that they

JEWS IN THE WORLD 49

are assimilating; according to them,
They will get there soon, provided that we don't
They don't mind; they already know that conf-
They are certain that they are Jewish, and they lack nothing
Just a few million more for having forgotten it quite.

"Three categories of Jews are fighting the "assimilated", or as imposters, or as renegades of the nation: these three categories are the Orthodox, the Jewish nationalists and the Zionists.

"The Zionists are propagating the idea of recognition" territorial constitution of the nation, and the terri-
According to them, the territory of Israel must be Palestine.

They are committed to nationalism in that this affirms the national character of the ju-Daism, but they accept the dispersion, much like the Croats of Dalmatia, for example, they remain Croats without thinking of the formation of a kingdom of Croatia which They would be part of it. The Zionists hold also to the Orthodox: they borrow from them the tradition of the future return to Jerusalem and, in Taking it up again, they find many among them supporters as well as subsidies. But the ele-
The active role of Zionism is very little religieux.

has

"As for the leaders, their faith in the idea that they
The spread is mediocre. Theodore Herzl confessed in private that he had made himself so-like other Jews, they are assimilated or patriots in their country, or royalists lists, or Catholics, or sometimes even anti-Semites.

"But that doesn't change the fact that the Zionists Convinced people do not form a large mass.
and very restless.

"So, the pontiffs of official Judaism"
had reserved the large Beethoven hall, in the City, where Rabbi Grunwald was supposed to
to make their voices heard on behalf of the community Jewish religious center of Vienna.

"The purpose of the speech was to criticize the..."
ideas of a Herr professor from Berlin, named Sourbart, who sides with the Zionists and whose writings are causing a stir in Israel.
community president, Mr. Stern, presi-
The meeting was held. The room was packed.

"Unfortunately for the organizers," a considerable number of Zionists had
A place was found. At 7 o'clock, the doors were closed.
But it was too late; the enemy was already there.
installed. Also, when Rabbi Grunwald launched its first attacks against the Sio-

JEWS IN THE WORLD 5x

nism, vehement interruptions erupted-
The wind blows, the altercations begin, and the blows are exchanged.
They are raining down from all sides. The Zionists being Scattered in groups, the fight continues without appreciable strategic results, the entire work reduced to individual misfortunes duelles.

Meanwhile, the staff of the
The room alerted the police, who then entered.
It was a close call that the union was formed against the en-common enemy, for they heard shouts: "It's
"We Jews are the masters! Down with them!"
"Christians!" The agents' person is sacred; we expose ourselves too much by touching them; also

Is the wrath of the Jews directed at the huis-siers, some of whom were quite mistreated.

"While this pointless battle was taking place Inside, a more serious action was underway.
jay in the street.

"A Jewish millionaire, a well-known agitator," named Lucien Brunner, appeared in the middle-instead of three hundred Zionists, and demanded that one He opened the doors for him. The police refused. "When "You come begging for your orphans and"
"Your widows," replied the Jew, "and place your
"Lottery tickets, I'll open my door to you,"

52 JEWISH ENGLAND

"Me!" He is arrested and taken to the station.

"On several occasions, the police repelled" the Zionists and clear the street; but they They reform and constantly return. Finally,
Some of them reach the gate,
he stormed it, invaded the building and the There he is in the room. In front of them is... a prominent figure in opportunistic Judaism, Mr. Dia-mand: he is slapped, beaten, and pressed-that was laid bare by twenty hands that tore it away
the clothes of the body.

"Mr. Diamand's fate seemed to decide..."
that of the battle, because, from that moment on, the Zionists occupied the platform, dominated the audience and held the meeting for their account. Mr. Stern, commander-in-chief of the army defeated, she signaled to some beadles of the Viennese Israelite religious center; he positioned himself at in their midst and, protected by this human rampart-
He then carried out the retreat, covered in insults.
jeers and jeers. He trembled with anger and sur-Completely frightened ; having reached the street, he jumped into a car speeding away.

"A good number of the opportunists were thrown out of the room; the rest remained silent or flowed discreetly and calm was not not yet recovered when midnight struck.

"Thirty-two arrests were made."

Several injured people were taken to the hospital. tal, but almost all felt better barely off the battlefield. After At midnight, the Zionist army disintegrated and went camping in nearby cafes, without their presence changed its appearance usual, because Vienna is Vienna, that is to say, in times of peace as in times of war, a vast ghetto (1).

After this account of this event, if recent and very typical, let's continue our study summary of the Israelite elements in the uni- towards and characteristic facts of this time as far as they are concerned.

William II, Emperor of Germany and king of Prussia, is the hero of an anecdote which reshapes the one we were talking about earlier. During a stay that the Kaiser was making at Cowes, about fifteen years ago, the Prince of Wales, his uncle, on the eve of his reign, him asked to be put in touch by him with a Jewish gentleman, whom he counted among his close friends, and who was waiting in the The salon favored the presentation. Guillaume

(1) Za Libre Parole, March 3.

54 JEWISH ENGLAND

He refused point-blank, and the circumcised man had to withdraw.

The little regard that the German sovereign has for himself the fact that they most often do not prevent it to have, like all heads of state, a need of their financial support, and this situation their gives a boldness and an ambition that always greater. "The Jew, in fact, has never been able to support prosperity in moderation (1).

It will therefore come as no surprise if they begin to to be agitated everywhere with such arrogance. At the beginning of this century, around 1900, 50 prominent Jews, gathered in Berlin, decided to convene an Israelite congress which had for program to claim the political situation tick to which they claim to be entitled in because of their number, their wealth, and their culture. This first assault on the Par-

The German element was followed by a few others.
with the aim of breaking down the barriers that still separate them from certain powers.
All of history proves that the Jews, immediately that they are no longer contained by a series of special regulations, as formerly in An-England, and as is currently the case in Russia, become predominant to an alarming degree

(x) ARNOLD WHITE, The Modern Jew.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 55

for the nation, partly through their talents, in part by the disdainful indifference of Many of them, for moral laws.
which ordinarily govern the relationships
"From man to man (1)."

In the United States, and we'll end there this already lengthy review of the Israelites in
In Europe, several Jews occupy positions in the com-trade and banking in high-risk situations as on the continent; but the new-Yorker still hardly admits them any more than People of color. Comic strips.
are teeming with jokes about rapacity,
the ugliness, the bad taste of the Jews.
But the Jewish community of New York is strong in more than a million individuals and, in a twenty-
For about ten years, the Jewish population of the New England has grown considerably derable (2). The increase must be even more pronounced in the Western states and the Far West, because that's where it all began.
leads the vast majority of emigrants who came from Russia and Romania, by the way
by France or England.

(1) ARNOLD WHITE, The Modern Jew.

(2) JACOB Rus, The American Review of Reviews, Dec. 1900.

In summary, not to mention countries like the Persia and Morocco, where the Jew is still the being vile one who bows under contempt and oppression Zion, out of the 11 million scattered Israelites In the world, there are indeed 8 million who lead a life of misery and hardship. But above this peat where fermenting the desires and energies of the race and from where sur-the most robust shoots unexpectedly fall Busts and the most beautiful ones, a minority stand out increasingly rich and powerful, which dominates already the whole world. The Jew is not absorbed among the peoples among whom he lives. Whether he is based in France or England, He is isolated among those whose profession he practices. to be a fellow citizen; there is always in him something that screams: "I am not one of "You." He really does have a Russian Jew as a brother. the Polish Jew, the Jew from the Levant or Morocco, poor, lousy, superstitious, ignoble; tan-say that English and French, with privilege of which he intends to take more than his share, is not for his Semitic heart than a foreigner, a despicable son of his oppressors.

It is from this ineradicable feeling that exiting the organization of this vast republic of which the universal Israelite alliance remains the a living and active testimony, and one that embraces today the entire globe.

JEWS IN THE WORLD 57

Let us take heed; if the peoples, by a of these unforeseen movements that suggest the obscure instinct for self-preservation and Vital forces that are ignored do not revolt against the preponderance of the Israelites and not find no way to restrain their ambi-tions, the day is not far off, to employ Mr. Arnold White's expressions, "where the nations of Europe will suddenly discover that the best of the country's wealth belongs to their Jewish subjects, and that in doing his esteemed work supremely humanitarian, democracy has worked blindly and unknowingly at triumph of Jewish supremacy, at the same time time as she lost the ability to maintain apart from its own existence.

The awakening will be terrible, we can, alas!
already sensed it.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER II

Some Characteristic Types of Israelites in the History of English Literature

Digitized by Google

BIBLIOGRAPHY
of the principal English works written in favor Jews or Judaism

The Expulsion of the Jews from England, in 1290, by BL Abrahams (1895).

Aspects of Judaism, by Abrahams Israel, and Claude
G. Montefiore.

Short History of Jewish Literature, by Abrahams, Israel (1906).

Jewish Life in the Middle Ages, by Abrahams, Israel.

Chapters on Jewish Literature, by Abrahams, Israel (1899).

Records of the Jews in Liverpool, by BL Benas (1900).
(Jewish Historical Society, 1897.)

The Celebrities of the Jews, by Rev. Avigdor Chaikin (Part. I, Sheffield, 1897).

The Jews and English Law, by Henriques, HSQ (1908).

Sir Moses Montefiore, by Israel Davis.

History of the Jews in England, by Hyamson, Albert-M.

(xg07).

Shetaroth: Hebrew Deeds of English Jews, by Myer David Davis.

62 JEWISH ENGLAND

The Return of the Jews to England, by Henriques, H. $SQ (1908).

Aaron, the Jew, by BL Farjeon.

Miriam Rosella, do.

Jewish Sources and Parallels to the Old English Romances of King Arthur, by Rev. Moses Gaster (Transact. of the Engl. Jewish Hist. Soc., 1887).

Jewish Folk-Lore in the Middle Ages, by Rev. Moses Gaster.

Romance of Jewish History, by Marion Hartog and Celia Moss (3 vols.).

Tales of Jewish History, by Marion Hartog and Celia Moss. |

Studies in Jewish Statistics, by Joseph Jacobs.

Jews of Angevin England, (up to 1206) do (1893).

Statistics of Jewish Population in London, etc., by Joseph Jacobs (1894).

Biographical Sketches of Eminent Jewish Families, by Rabbi Joseph Kohn Zedek.

Jewisk Portraits, by Lady Magnus.

Sir Moses Montefiore, by Lucien Wolf (1884).

The Children of Ghetto, by Israel Zangwill (1892). Below
The same title: a drama in 4 acts.

Ghetto Tragedies, by Israel Zangwill (1893).

Dreamers of the Ghetto, do (1898).

They that walk in Darkness, do (1898).

The Mantle of Elijah, do (1900).

Ghetto Comedies, do (1907).

Memoir of Sir Francis Goldsmid, by Marks and Lowry.
Eninent Israelite of the Nineteenth Century, by HS Morais (Philadelphia).

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 63

The Rothschilds, by John Reeves.

Judaism and the Social Question, by D' Henry Berkowitz.

Jewish Ideals, by Joseph Jacobs (1896).

Jewish Literature and other Essays, by Gustav Karpeles (American Jewish Publication Society, 1895).

Georges Eliot and Judaism, by David Kaufmann (translated by JE Ferrier).

The Jews of Modern Times, by Rev. DW Marks.

The Jew in English Fiction, by Dr D. Philipson (Cincinnati).

Jews as They are, by CK Salaman.

Studies in Judaism, by S. Schechter.

The Influence of the Jews on the progress of the World,
by Simon Wolf.

History of Yiddish Literature in the Nineteenth Century
tury, by Leo Wiener.

The Vale of the Cedars, by Grace Aguilar.

David Alroy, by Lord Beaconsfield.

The Rebel Queen, by Walter Besant.

The Scapegoat, by Hall Caine.

Dr. Piillips, by F. Danby (Mrs. A. Frankan).

Lesser's Danger, by Mrs. Andrew Dean.

Isaac Eller's Money, do.

Daniel Deronda, by George Eliot.

Orthodox, by Gerard.

In Handful of Exoties, by Samuel Gordon.

Daughters of Shem, by do.

Hermani the Jew, by AN Homer.

The Jew, by Kraszewski.

Reuben Sachs, by Amy Levy.

64 JEWISH ENGLAND

The Hasty Marriage, a Sketch of Modern life, by Nathan Meritor (Mathias Levy).

Little Mariam's Holiday Tales, by Lady Magnus.

Cecilia, by Stanley Makower.

A Son of Israel, by Rachel Penn (Mrs. ES Willard).

The Son of a Star, by D'WB Richardson.

The World and the Cloister, by OJ Simon.

The Limb, by XL

The King of Schnorrers, by Israel Zangwill.

Curiosities of Judaism, by Philip Abraham (1879).

Yiddish-English Manual, by Jacobs and Landau.

Songs of Exile, by Nina Davis.

Esther, a Drama in Verse, by .A D. Goody.

Songs of a Semite, by Emma Lazarus.

Songs of Zion, by Mrs. Henry Lucas.

The Jewish Year-Book, annual record of matters Jewish.

Songs of the Ghetto, by Mario Rosenfeld.

Modern Judaism investigated, by Moses Margoliouth.

Justice to the Jew, by MC Peters.

The Jewish Question and the Mission to the Jew (1894).

The Modern Jew, by Arnold White.

The Spirit of Judaism, by Grace Aguilar.

The Jewish Faith, by do.

The Genius of Judaism, by Isaac Disraeli.

Jewish Dreams and realities, by Henry Hiowzi.

As Others saw Him, by Joseph Jacobs.

Messianic Expectations and Modern Judaism, by Rabbi Solomon Schinder.

The Modern Hep! Hey! Hey! by George Eliot.

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 65

At Jewish State: An Attempt at a Modern Solution of the Jewish Question, by Dr Theodor Herzl (translated by S. d'Avigdor).

On the Physical Condition of Jews, by Prof. Mandelstamm.

Progress of Zionism in England, by Joseph Gowen.

The Status of Jews in England, by LJ Greenberg.

About the Jews since Bible Times, by Lady Magnus.

Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion as illustrated by the Religion of the ancient Hebrews, by Montefiore.

The Evolution of the Messianic idea. To study in the Comparative Religion, by Oesterley.

The early Religion of Israel. by J.Robertson.

Publications of the Anglo-Jewish Historical Exhibition.
tion. -Office of the Jewish Chronicle.

Sketches of Anglo-Jewish History, by J. Picciotto (1875).

Manassekh ben Israel's Mission to Oliver Cromwell, by Lucien Wolf (1901).

Anglia Judaica, 1738, by Tovey.

The Jewish Encyclopedia, 12 vols. (1907).

Think and Thank, Biography of Sir Moses Montefiore, by W. Samuel Copper.

Diaries of Sir Moses and Lady Montefiore, by Dr. L. Loewe (1890).

Israel in Europe, by G.-F. Abbott (1908).

Parody in Jewish Literature, by Israel Davidson.

Yiddish-English Manual, by Jacob and Landau.

5

66 JEWISH ENGLAND

Anti Semitism, Its Causes and Cure, by Sir Andrew Wingate, and Rev. SH Wilkman (1907).

Judaism and Christianity; their Agreements and Disagreements, by IM Wise.

We limit this bibliography to the works essential works that deal with the history and role of the Jews in England, and which may relate to the study of general Judaism and the writings of certain authors Anglo-Jews. We have not mentioned here either the publications on discussions on Zionism, on Theology, the Talmud, The sermons, the Russian or Romanian question, no more than those on Rituals, Ceremonies, Liturgical Rabbinate culture, polemics, philosophy, Poetry, Kabbalah and Magic, Legislation, the Grammar, Biblical History Studies and others which, for England alone, would form as reference books, a fairly large volume.

CHAPTER II

SOME CHARACTERISTIC TYPES OF ISRAELITES IN THE HISTORY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE

That would certainly be a curious and interesting thing. study to write than the one that would apply to determine the influence that it exerted and that it exerts again the Bible, through its different versions sions, on inspiration, development and the tone of English literature since Wiclef. But that is not the object we are pursuing- vons here. We would simply like to explain under what traits certain great writers of England have in turn seen, understood, interpreted and describes the physical and moral type of the Jewish and give an accurate idea of the production Jewish literature in the United Kingdom.

Chaucer, in one of the Canterbury Tales, tells us about an Israelite, living in the midst of Christians in a good Asian city, protected by a local lord and who, for the profit From this, he withdrew a huge amount of money from its wear and tear and its ink, but appeared as a being odious to Christ and to the honor- nêtesgensquilesuivent. However, the first a Jewish figure who appears vigorous to us- drawn in detail, among the characteristic images risks created by English fiction, is that of Barabbas in The Jew of Malta (The Rich Jew of Malta). We know the passion, wild energy, out of all proportion with the mediocrity of average humanity, which animates the powerful and fierce genius of the great Shakespeare's predecessor, Christopher Marlowe. This prodigious mind conceived and en- Fanta Faust nearly two centuries before Goethe. Similarly, one can consider the Jew of Malta like the prototype of the Venetian Jew and believe that Barabbas was not useless to Shakespeare when he set about composing his Immortal Shylock.

68 JEWISH ENGLAND

Marlowe's play, probably performed around 1588, we see in Barabbas a per-considerable wealth, rich merchant that Selim Calymatbh, the Sultan's heir, does later governor of Malta. It should be noted that, since the expulsion of the Jews from Spain in 1492, all the islands of the Mediterranean were rid of this pullu- breed

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 69

the health of the Ghettoes and that, on the other hand, the Israelites had been expelled from An- as early as 1290 England, where they were only recalled a few centuries later by Cromwell (1650). It is necessary add that Marlowe's drama has a foundation- historical fact. Sultan Suleiman II had a favorite was a Jew named Joseph Nassi. A few years before the playwright's play English, Suleiman created this Jewish Duke of Naxos, . by appointing him governor of the Cyclades. 11 We must admit that we do not know if the res- The resemblance goes further, and if Nassi was an ab- pathetic monster like Barabbas.

The entire play revolves around meanness. atrocious acts of this Jew, in whom Marlowe condensed all the odious things that his fellow believers inspired would be relevant to the citizens of his time, not only- lying as descendants of the deicides, but especially as usurers and hateful exploiters and ruthless Christian populations. It was not, after all, it must be emphasized, a purely literary feeling, made up of reading common myths and legends that he expressed Marlowe, by giving credence to the most hideous vices, to the most inexplicable crimes, the soul of a Jewish for farmland. The poet had been able to to form a personal and reasoned opinion.

70 JEWISH ENGLAND

We will see, in fact, later in our historical summary, that, despite the edict of expulsion Edward's sion, a fairly considerable number Jewish families had remained in England land, without being disturbed or in the exercise of their worship nor in the exploitation of their industries, at their expense only, when their chests were largely filled with gold, and to pour the large portion into the king's hands.

In any case, Marlowe's Jew is driven by a persistent and furious hatred against everything that is not him and his daughter, Abrigail. Again, he cursed that girl before to die, this only creature he ever loved because, having become a Christian out of love, She no longer wanted to lend herself to any-to lie to his dark and hypocritical designs, to his pathetic trickery. The other peopleswims, Muslims or Christians, from the work of Marlowe, and all of them, are, moreover, selfish perfidely and cruel, because the author intended it, he de-Clarice formally states in his prologue, to put to the scene the questionable morality of Machiavelli.
It remains no less true that he is a Jew chose to realize his ideal, and immediately the spectators had without Hesitation and protests acknowledged and accepted

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 71

this terrible portrait. In this play of a truly wild inspiration, where everything is tense and exaggerated to the point of excess and mon-Strueux, Barabbas holds in the foreground the the shameful place that is rightfully his. None of those Those who see him operate, those who judge him, do not protest. against the profound darkness of his soul, against the blasphemous violence of his words, against the unjust and blind atrocity of his actions.
All of them, on the contrary, gripped by the realizationstriking tion of this caricatured resemblance
"Tural," they cry out in a single vengeful voice:
It's him! It's definitely him! He's the one who...
He oppresses and plunders! That's the Jew!

Hyperbolic Jew, if you will, but in whom they bloom, as if in an enormous flower and poisonous, all the characteristics and all the unconsciousness of his race.

Let's listen to him for a moment and tell him if you don't know the island.
do not recognize in these passages literaltranslated:

Some Jews are wicked, just as well as [some Christians;

but admit that the tribe from which I descend was entirely damned for her sins,

Should I, myself, be judged for his crimes?

The man who acts righteously will live.

72 JEWISH ENGLAND

This is the language of the Pharisee, nourished by gold-Pride and hypocrisy. Who could doubt it?
when he adds:

It is not a sin to deceive a Christian,

because Christians themselves profess the principle that there is no need to keep one's faith with heretics;
and all are heretics, who are not Jews.

He bases his hatred and his rage, the expression of which takes on accents of magnificent triviality:

We Jews know how to crawl like scamps [gape when we please, and when we force a smile, it's because [bite; however our air is innocent and harmless, just like that of a lamb.
I taught Florence how to kiss a hand,
to shrug my shoulders when someone calls me dog and to dive, with a bow as low as that of [any discoloured monk;
hoping to see them starve to death in their shop,
or be the subject of a collection in the synagogue,
so that, when the offering basin comes [in front of me,
For all the charity I could muster, I'd spit in it!

The popularity of Marlowe's drama was long-lasting and maintained even after Shakespeare's great successes had transformed the English theatre. Translated into German,

we were still playing The Jew of Malta, on the other on the Rhine side, towards the end of the 18th century and, Curiously enough, he excited the spectators to such an extent to the degree that, in order to bring them back to their senses, to a better balanced mental state and the prevent people from rushing out of the theatre the representatives in Germany of the race cursed, they were being spared, immediately after the Jew of Malta, the philosophical spectacle Nathan's philosophical, philanthropic, and soothing The Sage, where Lessing carved out the type of his Jewish hero on the benevolent and humane patron accredited by the encyclopedists.

Is this the considerable success of Marlowe which prompted Shakespeare to strive as well to flatter public passion by taking a Jewish as the main protagonist of one of his pieces? Are we to believe that apart from all Another consideration was that he was drawn to the interest dramatic double story of money and of love that he knew so wonderfully how to forge and unravel in The Merchant of Venice? This These are questions to which he is strongly difficult to answer and which, in short, have In our view, this is of very secondary interest. amusing speculations of literary critics raire enamored with hypotheses are here out of place. Whether or not Shakespeare knew the Gernutus's ballad, which Percy collected in his Relics of Ancient Poetry and which rap-shovel by its beginning the passage of Chaucer mentioned at the beginning of this chapter:

74 JEWISH ENGLAND

In the city of Venice, not long ago,
A cruel Jew had his dwelling,

He who lived entirely off usury,
As Italian writers tell the story,

That doesn't matter to us. It's enough for us to to observe and confirm that the history of Portia and Bassanio is borrowed from the Gesta Romanorum and the episode of the pound of flesh to a short story by Giovanni Fiorentino, entitled Tulée II Pecorone. However, it is not without It is worth noting that, as early as 1579, the author of a treatise on abuse (The School of Abuse), Stephen Gosson mentioned a piece of play performed at the "Bull Theatre" and entitled The Jew, where "the es-

"Bloody capture of the usurers."

Moreover, there is by no means any proof that this epithet of bloodthirsty alludes to the pound of flesh and we have absolutely no idea if This piece, which has been lost, may have been used to Shakespeare. In any case, the Jewish question.

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 75

was on the agenda and the great Will was confident of interesting his audience by talking to them about it. This is the case if there was plagiarism or copy that the Genie murders those he plunders.

It was assumed that Shakespeare had intended, by drawing Shylock, to give not a counterpart to Marlowe's Barabbas, but of to provide a contrast. We even dared to pretend that all his sympathy was reserved to the Jews and that the stratagem by which Portia brings the final judgment, which was only one forced concession to popular prejudice who certainly would not have suffered that the The moneylender left with clean breeches.

In our opinion, Shylock clearly expresses and simply the living, realistic figure of the Jew, of whom Barabbas is merely the grimacing one and primitive caricature. Barabbas takes in Marlowe's tragedy, the proportions of a wild ogre; Shylock is kept by Shakespeare in normal data and se brings us closer to ordinary humanity. Both However, they are indeed from the same family, and he nothing exists between the two characters of the English theatre, the difference that separates the genius and dramatic character of two essentially impulsive authors.

Shylock, wrote M.A. Mézières, "is a powerful type who represents an entire group of individuals. He has the usual flaws of his race, greed, love of gain obtained by illicit means, the harshness and the brutality of the usurer; but he adds to it a feeling that the Energetic natures experience this alone: it is a deep resentment against Christians who They often humiliated him and he desired revenge. of them... He is indignant at all that his people; he thinks bitterly of antiquity and to the sanctity of the race from which he descended seeing the treatments she is undergoing. He likes to make money; he wouldn't Jewish if he didn't value it; but he loves Even better, to get revenge. The mere sight of a Christian inspires in him an aversion that he does not speak of. He doesn't fake it. Despised and hated, he returns contempt. "For contempt and hatred for hatred."

Is there one of these features, so well detailed, which does not apply to Marlowe's Barabbas? This one, no doubt, also has a haunting fear and the itch of the evil; he rejoices in giving to sacristan-gravedigger on the occasion of the "bell tolling" to ring and graves to dig"; he has the pro-extrahuman portions, – inhuman, the more often, – characters mentioned in

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 77

Kit Marlowe's titanic and mad brain. But, for the rest, Barabbas and Shylock are similar. It extends even to tenderness. paternal, the only feeling capable of moving– to see their hearts sterilized, which they do not possess in common. Just as Barabbas loves Abigail, Shylock loves Jessica, and they're getting paid for it. in the same way.

The only difference, then, in summary, is that we can discover between them, – and this The difference is indeed considerable – it is that Shylock is the product of the most intelligent, the largest, the most complicated, the more subtle, more "human" than ever never given the task of studying and painting to draw in all its depth the heart of man. Shakespeare had and expressed to us the understanding of all that is human. In his vast and luminous brain, the opposites

They harmonize and the antinomies agree.
I1 throws off his coat halfway through, dreams and re-ity, on greatness and baseness, on the virtue and vice, on heroism and treachery, on heroism and crime, on honor and shame, and always, in the folds of this coat magnificent, you can feel it living and pulsating, at amidst the whirlwind of noble passions and

78 JEWISH ENGLAND

vile, the conscience of man, this conscience that struggles, fights, succumbs or triumphs
Phe. That's precisely why all parties, all of them.
Religions demand it. All causes lost or desperate, all the claims tions, all weaknesses and all complaints find in him fortifying words of recovery and comfort. We don't know what is the value of the claim that Shakespeare belongs to the Roman Catholic Church, and He really doesn't interest us at all.
to delve deeper into this question. But, one thing
One thing is certain: he had a Catholic soul.
or, to put it better, universal.

This is therefore not to contrast with the stupid horrors of the Jew of Malta, nor for to protest against the prejudices of his time, nor to express feelings of sympathy their personal, which Shakespeare made of Shylock, a man driven by fierce passions, powerful logician, implacable enemy of Christianity tien, a sensitive and tender father. That's because he con-the essence of human nature was born and that the Jew, like the Moor, like Iago, like Macbeth, like Hamlet, like the ambi-the wicked, the warriors, the jealous, the traitors, the lovers with whom he populates his theatre, has under

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 79

its appearance and special attributes this background eternal and irreducible humanity.

We will not dwell on reproducing
the major sections of The Merchant of Venice, which are etched in everyone's memory. In short, Shakespeare, as well as Marlowe, conceives of the Jew as an enemy of the people among which it establishes itself, eager to shoot money and the power that money gives, storing up all the insults into a treasure of vindictive hatred, fueled by tireless pride and open to tender feelings only for those of his race, his family and of his blood.

Much later, the School for Slander (The School of Scandal), by B. Sheridan (1777) mon-
The Jew is back on stage. The conceived Israelite and brought to life by the author of this masterpiece absolutely confirms the type of classical Hebrew siqure; he is a moneylender and a usurer unscrupulous. At the very end of the 18th century, when the teaching of the philosophers ency-clopedists would have made it fashionable in Europe whole what Musset so aptly called the human-nitaierie, and that the favorite sport of the beautiful the company was to collect frozen snakes for to warm them in his bosom, a playwright

80 JEWISH ENGLAND RS

fruitful, but of inferior order, Richard Cum.
Berland wrote a kind of tragicomedy bourgeois, entitled The Jew, dignified, declares the American rabbi, David Philipson, by the nobility of feelings, sympathy towards the persecuted, benevolence towards Is-Raël, to be placed next to Nathan the Wise, of Lessing; but the rabbi must declare, however-while, as a dramatic work, that Richard Cumberland's is indisputably superior.

That's an excellent reason not to go there.
stop further. Let's say, however, that, following-before the particular poetics of these reformers viewers who observe nature in certain abstractions from their matagrab-like brains, Traditional roles are being revised here.
by being a pawnbroker by trade, -

There are certain things that cannot be ignored.
subtract, – the Jew Sheva is charitable and Well, while the Jewish Christian merchant, sir Stephen Bertram is stingy and ruthless.
causes a character to exclaim: "It's you!"
Sheva, whom I call Christian, and he is the proud and a hard-working merchant whom I call a Jew." To what?
The Hebrew man replied with a thin smile: "I don't
"I don't thank you for the compliment." (Reply)

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE Br

quite a pointed remark from this Israelite extraordinary, which is presented to us as friend of the widow, father of the orphan, protector of the poor and universal philanthropist!

Sheva is merely a reproduction on stage of a type already invented by Cumberland, under the name of Abraham, in a short story which The story takes place in Spain. The author, too equally well in the play and in the tale, wanted to make "a charity appeal of the kind human," because, he says in his memoirs: "He it was high time to do something for "A persecuted race." None of his successes Could no playwright have been more gentle to his heart.

Rabbi David Philipson, quoted above, who is willing to acknowledge that the Sheva of Cumberland is also implausible and impossible in the excess of his kindness that the Barab-Marlowe, in the throes of his rage, cries out
He spoke emotionally about this: "The Jew no longer has Nothing narrow about it. It's cosmopolitan, it's the citoyen of the universe. His religion is broad: a "One God, one humanity." Ah! Without doubt, one God, of whom he is the chosen one; a only sheep-like and bleating humanity, with 6

82 JEWISH ENGLAND

him, a pastor always ready to milk and to mow.

It is in the novel that we will find now the main Jewish figures of the English literature. The vast and prompt genius by Walter Scott, evocative of middle-class life age at which he gave, for the pleasure of his readers, the charm of its poetic nature and sensitive, could not deviate from tradition neither literary nor historical truth, in painting
the Jew of Zvanoe, Isaac of York. Likewise Shylock is an intelligent and me- Barabbas
Sure, Isaac is a toned-down and less...
Original. He's a true Jew, with his humility.
false, her fear of being a victim, her indifference to the suffering of others, his persistence in the pursuit of following the gold, his perfect selfishness and his unique tenderness for his daughter Rebecca, sister of... tedious of Jessica and Abigail. But that's not Not the surr: it's an individual, certainly not the picturesque and typical representative of a race. Scott had taken on its features, we said his biographer Lockhart, in the accounts that his friend Skene had made of life Jewish in Germany, where the old regime of

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 83

Ghettos were not abolished. He made the most of them.
their party and gave us a real good Jew alive, strong, cowardly and audacious, clinging to His weariness, masking his caution with affability, slithering with the stickiness of a leech between the barons, the Knights Templar and the ecclesiastical dignitaries, of the substance which it feeds on and fattens itself on.

It was pointed out that Isaac of York was not, in the time of Richard the Lionheart and John Lackland, in no way obliged to wear a special hat or any other warning signs of Judaism. Indeed, it was only at the council Lateran, under Pope Innocent III, in 1215, that it was decreed that the Jews would wear a badge outside the ghetto, and the measure does not was extended to England only for the council from Oxford, in 1222.

But what does the hat matter? Not anymore in Walter Scott's novel that in society

In modern times, the Jew needs no badge.
particular so that it can be recognized by its
His only aspect. His face is distinctive,
Its origins are clearly visible there.

Another criticism seems to us to be better founded-deed. How Rebecca, "the beautiful rose of the unpolluted and withered Judaism, whose aroma is

84 JEWISH ENGLAND

"So refreshing and so pure," she might like.
a Christian knight, even when he pretends to be she feels like a sick person, an injured person, that she has cared for by her expert hands and which he owes to her life, even if it presents itself to us as a a model of beauty, tenderness, courage and of honor, such was Ivanoe? In the work by Sir Walter Scott, Rebecca, much safer-the fact that his father is representative of the race. It provides the intense feeling and reasoned. That's why, a writer asserts and Jewish critic, it is impossible that being this that they show it to us, that she may experience Love for a Christian paladin. The woman who said to the Templar: "You must know, proud knight, whom we count among us names alongside which your nobility of The north, so highly praised, appears like a calabash.
next to a cedar tree. Such were the princes of Judah. And now there are some among them who do not detract from such a high lineage; thus Will it be the daughter of Isaac, son of Adoni-Kam?
This woman, in whose blue blood boilslonne so vehement "the first aristocracy of the world," can surely have pity on a poor man bleeding and suffering Christian knight, but is incapable, even if she desired it, of un-

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 85

to fall so deeply that I truly love him, from this sincere, profound, prodigious love that transform all.

And here's another argument in favor of the assimilation of the Jew by the Aryan.

We encounter many others of the same kind.
nature in the novels of the greatest writer of Jewish race who had a resounding

Ben-

Jamin Disraeli, better known now: under his last name as a statesman, Lord Beaconsfield. Grandson of an Israelite merchant from Venice, expelled in 1748 by the Inquisition, his father, the author of the Amenities of Literature- ture and so many other compilation volumes
a very articulate and undeniably curious person, Isaac of Israel quarreled with the synagogue and had the five children he had baptized Maria Basevi, his wife, an Israelite like him.

The eldest of the four sons was to be, by several repeated, the Prime Minister of the Kingdoms-United of England, Scotland and Ireland, and to add to the sovereign's titles, "protector of the Faith," that of Empress of India.
In him, the Jew reached the pinnacle of power-political session and literary illustration.

86 JEWISH ENGLAND

A whim of his father had made him a Christian;
and baptism assured him far too much advantages so that he would never have thought of re-to deny Christ. But he did not renounce him either.
his race in his public statesmanship and private, no more especially than in its name-numerous works of writing. He protected Israel not only in the countries he was called to to govern, but in all places of the world accessible to his influence, each time that The opportunity arose. And so, at
At the Congress of Berlin, he insisted that in Rou-all inhabitants had rights equals, thereby emancipating the many Jews in this principality.

His own political instincts, he found itself reflected in the atavisms of its race. For He, the Jew, was essentially Tory; he represented-felt on earth, for nearly two thousand years, the conservative element. He also blamed highly those who lie to the function that they have to fulfill in the world and which believe they are serving the interests of their brothers by lending their support to the revolution. He written on this subject after the upheaval of 1848, words which, far from aging, find their increasingly narrow application in the

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 87

Present time: "We encounter the hand of the Jew" in the final unleashing of the spirit of Destruction in Europe. An insurrection has a place against tradition and the aristocracy, against religion and property. The destruction of Semitic principle, the extirpation of religion Jewish, in its Mosaic strength or in its form Christian, the natural equality of man and the abolition of property, all of this is proclaimed by secret societies that form provisional governments, and one finds men of Jewish descent at the head of each of them. God's people cooperate with atheists; the most skillful hoarders of property owners ally themselves with the communists; the race special and chosen touch of the hand to the bass castes, to the dregs of Europe! And all that because they want to destroy this Christianity ungrateful woman who owes them even her name and whose They can no longer endure tyranny. Not to mention his oriental novel, David Alroy, the books of Lord Beaconsfield which particularly depict the Jew are Co-Ningsby and its continuation Tanered. These are, First and foremost, thesis novels, where the author—the author is supported by a large character Divine and mysterious, unsettling and charming,

88 JEWISH ENGLAND

Sidonia, the theory of the perpetuation of the race, which constitutes, in favor of the pure-blooded Jew, a descendants from whom the sons of Crusaders are a thing of the past. In these novels, as in one of the chapters of his biography Lord George Bentinck, Disraeli insists on affirming—sea that it belongs to a people who, "dis-persecuted, banished, plundered and humiliated for thousands of years ago by the pharaohs of Egypt, the kings of Assyria, the Roman emperors, the Scandinavian crusaders, Gothic chieftains and the

The Holy Inquisitors, however, held firm.
to preserve the purity of the race and remained until-that to this day irrepressible, indispensable, full of energy and genius."

Disraeli, moreover, possesses a particular way of distinctive, highly characteristic of this sharp mind that scruples never hinder, of con-to compare the faith of his ancestors to that of his father
He made her take her vows at the age of twelve, and who... earned his prodigious fortune: "Son of Israel,
he exclaimed, addressing his fellow men, reminding you that you created the Christia-nism, you can forgive Christians even their book burnings.

Another contemporary writer, who no
Not the birth this time, but above all Ia

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 89

philosophy and philanthropy have led to to consider the Jew in a purely Jewish light daïque, it was Mary Ann Evans who made famous throughout the world the pseudonym by George Eliot. It must also be said that she in his early youth he was influenced from a schoolteacher named Mrs. Lewis, and that she lived mentally for a while long years with the positivist G.-H.
Lewes, whose Jewish ancestry is not known-dubious lie. It's in his latest novel, Daniel Deronda, published in 1876, nearly two years before Lewes' death, which she exposes the
the result of his studies and meditations on the life and feelings of modern Jews.

A young man, the son of a Jewish opera singer, was raised as a Christian, in ignorance of his mother's religion and race. It is not it was at the age of twenty-five that he became aware of this that he is by blood. From then on, under the influence with an enthusiasm that the idea and the fever gnaw at at the same time, of a certain Moidecai, of Jewish type, the most pure and the highest of all literature From across the Channel, Daniel Dironda, takes in
He prioritizes the interests of his people and dedicates himself entirely to them.
He dedicated his life to such a great cause. He will rehabilitate the Jewish race and will reconstitute its nationality

by returning it to its original cradle, the Palestine, where it will reform itself into an administration rable people whose place is marked at grand concert of civilization.

It is likely that the character of Moïdecai was suggested to George Eliot by memories by GH Lewes. This one, in fact, gives in his memoirs, the portrait of a German Jew named Kohn, whose essential traits are re-find, with an undeniable resemblance, in the intellectual and moral physiognomy from Daniel Deronda's mentor.

This last production by George Eliot, novelist philosopher, was not the most appreciated public opinion, nor even that of authorized judges and independents. Swinburne states that he has not ears for the melodies of this "harp" Jewish," and that he "leaves Daniel Deronda to his natural place, above the door of the re-"scraper." On the contrary, success and praise were great among the circumcised, one can Think carefully. "Daniel Deronda is a Jewish book," not only in the sense that it deals with Jews, but also because it is eminently cal-designed to be understood and appreciated, special "of the Jews." That is why they "pro-will always gratefully proclaim that

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE

George Eliot has truly earned the gratitude of Judaism. That is the opinion of Dr. David Kaufmann, professor at the Theological Seminary The Jew of Buda-Pesth, and such is also that of the Jewish world. We do not know, however, if Doctors Herzl and Max Nordau show enough gratitude towards the novelist and clay which, long before them, had invented the Zionism. Let's mention in passing the new titled The Modern Hep, Hep, Hep, by the same author, which is dictated by the same spirit, written and dedicated to the pursuit of the same goal.

With Dickens we enter the con-traditional conception of the Jew and, it must be said to say, in truth, not that we claim—let's say that all Jews are teachers of theft and child exploiters like Fagin, that there are no honorable and honest ones, but it is, alas! all too certain that the worst ways to make money have nothing to do with it. repugnant in the eyes of the majority of people of this breed, especially if it's about winning this money at the expense of Christians and the gen— Even when they have reached positions high social status in wealth, dignity and Consideration, the Israelites have a morality to those which they authorize themselves to practice

02 JEWISH ENGLAND

villainous acts that profit at the expense of the Goy, and thanks to which they distort the meaning of the words justice, honor, probity, that they adapting them to the most shameful speculations.

It is true that the Jew Fagin, from Oliver Twist, has its counterpart in the Jewish Riah, of Our Mutual Friend. But Riah isn't the person—main swimming in this novel about old age of Dickens, and Jewish critics, such as the Rabbi Philipson, could not help but re—to know that this Israelite model of all the Christian virtues is quite implausible—blabber.

Carlyle and Thackeray spoke of the Jews in—Incidentally, both in fairly straightforward terms harsh. The latter especially likes to portray them in the vilest conditions and animated by lower feelings. Now, we know what observ—Thackeray was a penetrating and subtle observer, and one It is hardly risky to say that, if he painted them Thus, it is because he saw them, knew them, appreciated them and judged as he presents them.

Since then, the Jew has proliferated in fiction and—clay. For years no one wrote a single word. "A social novel" without including a Jew. It It is necessary, since indeed the Israelite has pe—It is present everywhere in British society. It is

It's rare for him to be unlikeable. On the contrary, he is most often endowed with all the charms of the perfect gentleman and of all virtues charitable and selfless. To appreciate as befits the sincerity of such pain— In matters of disinterest, it would be necessary to know if the model is shared by the painter, or if so many qualities are not, directly or Indirectly, loaned on the card to be paid? The Scapegoat, in which Hall Caine paints a richly detailed picture colorful depictions of Jewish and Muslim life in Morocco, the novels and short stories of Israel Zangwill, a Jewish writer of great talent and audacity who usually chooses his subjects from the sub-veairs of the Ghetto, must be mentioned to part in this brief review. The Jew is not, in _these works and others like them, nor better no worse than other men; the tendency of his books are designed to make people believe that the traits characteristics of modern Jews are so— religious wind, when they still exist; but that, as Rabbi David Philip— affirms his, "there are no Jewish national traits", that is to say, a Jew does not differ morally— the manner of an Englishman, a German, an American American or French. That is the watchword.

04 JEWISH ENGLAND

to which the majority of authors modernes cannot fail to comply, if all they want is a relentless war, open or deaf, whether made to their productions. The newspapers and magazines that dis— think about fame and spread the books new, aren't they, in fact, among the hands of the Jews? Who wouldn't lavish them with compliments and tributes to achieve to reconcile them?

Few writers have enough independence and of respect for their own dignity to speak as Mr. Arnold White used to do, the author of The Modern Jew, regarding a a "brilliant but sinister" novel entitled D" Phillips:

It's a fact that's not widely understood here (in London), in the heart of a large cosmopolitan city, sharing, appropriating its riches, an entire nation exists remaining apart, in absolute separation, that she maintains, of which she is proud and of which she It's shameful in the end.

All the burning questions of the moment are for them a dead letter: art, literature, politics Ticks don't exist for them. They only have one goal: the acquisition of wealth.

To be precise, let us add that the acquisition-
The distribution of wealth is, for the leaders of this race, a means of acquiring dominance, and that they make everything serve this dual purpose: polite-technology, science, literature and art.

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 95

The first English book written by a Jew is, it is said, the collection entitled: Discourses of the Ecclesiastical Polity of the Jews (1706), by Rabbi Isaac Abendars, who was professor of Hebrew at Oxford University, in the early years of the 18th century. A little later, in 1722, another Jew, Daniel Israel Lyra Laguna translated into verse the Psalms of David. This version had a success that which went beyond the synagogue, and I would not be not surprised that some poetry lovers from the last century still preserved on the radius of his favorite poetarum minores In Faithful Mirror of Laguna chose to label his paraphrase.

We could go back much further.
almost indefinitely, if one wanted to name-brer and determine the channels through which the Jewish thought, even outside of the great books recognized by Christians as sacred, has infiltrated intellectual demonstrations of the European peoples. The historian, says James Darmesteter, "meeting at almost every changes in thought, a Jewish action, either bright and visible, or muted and latent.

Thus, Jewish history runs parallel to universal history.
saddle over its entire length, and penetrates it by a thousand trances (x) ».

T1 also said:

An entire branch of literature emerges from Ghetto: that of the tale and the short story: it is of the thanks to the Jewish translators that France receives its old Indian fables, born in the time of Buddha on the banks of the Ganges, and which will have such a mer-a lucky nightlight on the banks of the Seine and from there into all of Europe.

But we cannot embark on
This is the current approach, at least for the time being. The share which belongs to the two Semitic races, Arab and Jewish, in education and development
Western intellectuals through teaching
The customs of the Orient is a subject that has never has been thoroughly examined, and of which we need only-
We can simply point out the rare interest-lêt in passing, without thinking of outlining it the study.

In any case, the Jews in England as elsewhere, understood what a wonderful instrument of controversy, propaganda, of

(x) A look at the history of the Jewish people.

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 97

persuasion, the press offers minds between-
They were captivating and quick, and they knew how to draw a marvel-
They started from the book and especially from the newspaper.
To realize this, one only needs to leaf through the voluminous compilation of Jacobs and Wolf entitled Bibliotheca Anglo-Judaica.

We will show in these pages that almost all the departments and editorial offices in editor of influential newspapers and periodicals, political, literary or special, are, in England as well as in Germany and in France, in the hands of the Jews, who have not no difficulty in creating currents of opinion in line with their interests.

Let us give, as an appendix to this chapter, a long list of works of merit and subjects various, due to Jews. We have, on the other hand part, noted in biographical dictionaries English and contemporary phiques (Who's Who. Men of the Time, etc.) more than seventy names of Jewish journalists and publicists. A much larger number, including those with a reputation is not yet big enough for them appear in these biographical collections, flock and swarm into the offices of editorial. Finally, among the latest Directories Jews (The Jewish Year Book) meet the headlines of ten purely Jewish newspapers, written either in English, or in Hebrew, or in Yiddish jargon and published in the British Empire—nique, in addition to some magazines or magazines, the two most important of which are the Jewish Quarterly Review and the collection edited by Harper's house, under the title Hebraica (1).

7

98 JEWISH ENGLAND

(x) Here are the titles of Jewish newspapers and magazines published in England and the colonies (1892) and which constitute the Anglo-Jewish Press:

Jewish Chronicle, 2, Finsbury square, EC, London, weekly (first Anglo-Jewish newspaper, founded in November 1841).

Jewish World, 10, Duke St. Aldagate, London, EC, weekly.

Jewish Review, (Routledge—Publisher), London, annual.

Jewish Club Magazine, 35, Porchester, Terri. w. London, monthly.

The Zionist, 2, Park—place, Manchester, monthly.

Hayehoodi (published in Hebrew), 6, Tenter, St. E. London, weekly.

Jewish Express (Yiddish), Osborn str., C. London, daily.

Jewish Journal (Yiddish), Osborn str. E. London, daily.

Jewish Herald, Melbourne (Australia), bi-monthly.

Hebrew Standard, Sydney (Australia), weekly daire.

Canadian Jewish Times, Montreal (Canada), weekly madaire.

South African Jewish Chronicle, Johannesburg, weekly.

IN ENGLISH LITERATURE 99

The cosmopolitan nature of their spirit as their interests compel the Jews to possess everywhere the press or to bribe them. Their last-the latest company, on this side, is quite characteristic: they have, about fifteen years ago, a sort of consortium was formed in Basel. tium international with the aim of publishing, in various languages, the weekly magazine Die Welt (Le Monde), devoted exclusively to literary works with tendencies Semitic.

As we can see, they are well-armed, and they have reason to believe that they hold the world. They could be wrong, as they have already done it so many times. In England as in France, here we are, despite everything, independent men devoted to their countries are watching them at work, denouncing the plans that they form, shed light on the for-excellent resources at their disposal, mon-all the work of corruption, of disresolution and ruin that they pursue in all states. This is the true means of their to thwart them and render them harmless, otherwise to delete them.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER III

The Origins of Israel by John Bull
Simple Historical Notes

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER III

4
THE ORIGINS OF ISRAEL IN JOHN BULL.
SIMPLE HISTORICAL NOTES.

It is certainly very curious to know by what series of humble encroachments, by what successive intrusions the blood relatives Shylock's forces conquered England. Tolerated, Then, expelled during the Middle Ages, they returned more daring during the Stuart era, they they land, then lavish themselves and display themselves, according the laws that either control or liberate them, until, in our modern society,
considering themselves masters by virtue of equal rights Civilians and politicians, they slip in large numbers number in Masonic lodges, some-sometimes under the guise of a false name, and strive-
One hundred, both in the stock market and in politics, in business and in all agencies which help to shape public opinion, to prevail through the omnipotence of gold
Or the pressure of financial pneumatism.

104 JEWISH ENGLAND

History is necessary for any study, as the rubble wells at the foundations of a construction. For these impulsive studies, we provide the minimum foundation in order to
to get through the preliminary stages with so much Haste and mobility that a Boer commando or that a party of lone gunmen without heavy artillery

– lerie ni impedimenta de bagages documensilences.

History records nothing concerning the pre-
First appearance of Jews in England (1).
The documents that the old families
Jewish women undoubtedly possessed in this respect must have been destroyed during the persecutions and exoduses that the race had to endure.

Their establishment is surely well-pre-laughing at the Norman conquest.

It is very likely that the Jews came to Spain, in the time of Kings David and Salomon, with the Phoenicians; and from there, the tra-

(x) See on this subject a very interesting work:
The History of the Jews in Great Britain, by the Rev.
Moses Margaliouth (London, Richard Bentley, 1851, 3 vols. in-12), from which we have borrowed many of our documents.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 105

paid into Great Britain was hardly by good wind for a day and a half to two or three.

Sir Isaac Newton said: "With these Phoenix-These people came a sort of people versed in religious mysteries. – These people don't-Wouldn't they be Jews?

Herodotus calls the British Isles "Cas-
"Siterides," or Tin Islands. Strabo uses of the name Bretanikèé (Breravxn); now, this word is the corruption of the Hebrew words Barat-Anach, which mean the same thing as Cassiterides.

A close affinity has been noted between the Welsh language and Hebrew.

– There were Jewish soldiers in the ar-Roman women: they were numerous in Rome and in the western provinces of the empire.
Were they unable to enter Great Britain?
with Julius Caesar, who invaded it twice?

– Josephon ben Gorion, who lived under Hyrcan speaks of an edict of Julius Caesar guaranteeing-weaving freedom for the Jews, from the banks of the Indian Sea as far as British territory-nique, and another similar edict of Caesar-Augustus. This edict is mentioned again in The English Jewish calendar.

– The apostles who founded and organized the Christian church in Great Britain, what

106 JEWISH ENGLAND

that they might have been, moreover, Peter, Paul, Simon Zealots, Joseph of Arimathea, or anyone else, were certainly of Jewish descent.

The Jews are not mentioned in the annals. lists of Great Britain that about the persecutions, massacres, extortion or the crucifixion of children.

Whitglaff, King of the Mercians (833), defeated by Egbert took refuge in Croyland Abbey, and in gratitude confirms to this abbey the possession of all lands, estates and other gifts that were bestowed upon him by his predecessors or by faithful followers, Christians or Jews. (IGuzraus, History of Croyland ÀAb-bey.)

Canut le Graud banished the Jews from England in 1020 (Lino, Jewish Calendar); the fact is confirmed by Basnage, who says they do not They only returned after the conquest. But they did not They certainly didn't all leave.

England already had some subjects Israelites in the 7th century, because we see, from 740, a severe ordinance from the archbishop of York, Elbright, forbidding any Christian to traffic, to house, or even to take some food with Jews and especially to attend Jewish holidays.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 107

But these Semites, treated as lepers, were more objects of curiosity, and that's hardly that after the arrival of William the Conqueror that the first cohorts of merchants of Judea. It would appear that the Duke of Normandy, son of Robert the Magnificent, attracted all the Israelites after the conquest Rouen, but he continued to use them poli-Edward the Confessor's trick, whose laws only carried the Jews and all the property they hold belong to the king who is their sole guardian and protector, and who can, if he... please, claim them as his own property. The Jews who followed William on the The large island had already skimmed the tops of Normandy, Others came from the Lombard plains where they had put the fortunes of the young people to rest amorous and extravagant lords. They took foot on the ancient land of the Angles and we lived to settle in Stamford, Oxford, London and other cities of the Saxon Kingdom, where, guided by their instinct, like grasshoppers, they had been able to smell abundant harvests.

They immediately drew attention to themselves by their skill in monopolizing small businesses and in to seize control of all areas. In In less than thirty years, these small-time lenders

108 JEWISH ENGLAND

week had swept away the Saxons in the de-braiding a portion of their assets. Not to mention that from Oxford, they possessed, by means of... noises and shady dealings carried out, all the houses parishes of Saint-Edouard and Aldegate. They even founded a kind of college there. for the study of the Hebrew language and three teaching rooms have remained there Lebres: Moser Hall, Jacobs's Hall and Lombard's

Hall. | |

It is claimed that William, the victor Harold held them under his high protection because of the financial services he had receipts; and so they soon proliferated during the reigns of the first Norman kings; They trained in London, Norwich, and Lincoln, important colonies in York and Bristol, if although at the accession to the throne of the valiant

Richard I, the Lionheart, they were numbering 20,000 for an uninformed population area which at the time comprised little more than 2,900,000 inhabitants.

William Rufus who summoned to London conferences of bishops and rabbis, pro-hides the Jews; forces converts to return to their former religion, and receives money faithful Jews. The story of a young man is cited.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 109

Israelite convert who refused to submit to the king's authority, and to return to his former faith; the father then demands the money he had given to the king (60 silver marks), who then He prayed hard, and finally only gave half of the sum.

William II used to leave the ecclesiastical seats and vacant benefices for as long as possible, to touch them income, and it was to Jews that he entrusted it the administration.

During the reign of Henry I, known as Beauclerc, the Israelites prosper in such a worrying way—aunt in the British kingdom, that Jof-Fred, Abbot of Croyland, must strive to organize nisation of missions to oppose their progress and their proselytism. They possess-then referred to schools superior to those of Christians, in Cambridge, in Oxford, in Lincoln, in York, in Norwich, where all this was taught which constitutes higher education: mathematics techniques, logic, medical sciences, chi-legal and technical aspects, the history of peoples and religions; perhaps even astro-logic (despite Moses' formal prohibitions) and prophets), because an ancient medal Jewish woman found in York at the beginning of the 19th century

110 JEWISH ENGLAND

bears Hebrew words and astro- symbols norms that would indicate that well before Edward I, the Israelites professed the Magic and astrological sciences.

The wealth they had acquired under the Beauclerc's reign called down the con-
The persecutions and the persecutions, and for nearly
For two centuries they had to endure harsh treatment.
comments.

Since they were the king's property, the king... striking at every moment with taxes and contributions extraordinary events. – The populace is excited against them, their houses looted and burned. – They are imprisoned, subjected to the torture, put to death through torture.

The troubles begin under Stephen of Blois, which, regarding a murder committed by an Israelite from London, imposes on the community Jewish community of this city a fine of 2,000 pounds.

The ninth year of his reign (1135–1154),
First accusation of ritual murder: this involves of the crucifixion of a child in Norwich, at time of the Israelite Passover.

This ritual murder of the Jewish Passover is remained unforgettable. The little crucified child, who named William, was placed among the mar-

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL III'S

Christian tyrants. Although he was never an officer-
He was canonized in heaven, he was sanctified under the name of the blessed Saint William of Norwich.
Many works have celebrated its legend (x).

We can clarify the facts all the more more easily than a certain Monk of Norwich Thomas of Monmouth displayed them in a manuscript written in 1172 and which was preserved.
At the time when this monk recounted in all his details of this infamous and landmark crime the story, the tomb of the martyred child was already a place of pilgrimage illustrated by mi-scrapers and the cult of Saint William was strong widespread.

(x) See the following publications on this subject:

The Life and Miracles of Saint William of Norwich,.
ed. by A. Jessop and M.-R. James. Cambridge, University Press, 1896, xcI-303 pages in-8° and 5 plates.
– Compare: R. REUSS, The Tisza-Eszlar Affair, Strasbourg, 1883; – The Child of Toledo, Testimony, 1887, p. 323; – Is. L&B, The holy child of La Guardia. Review of Jewish Studies, vol. XV (1889), p. 203; – ID., One Laurent Ganganelli's memoir on the slander of ritual murder, ibid., t. XVIII (1889), p. 179; – H.-L. STRACK, Der Blutaberglaube, 2^e ed., Munich, 1892; – S. REINACH, The Accusation of Ritual Murder, Review of Jewish studies, vol. XXV (1892), p. 161; – Jos. JACOBS, Little St. Hugh of Lincoln, London, 1894 (from The Jewish Chronicle; quoted from the Analecta Bollandiana).

II2 JEWISH ENGLAND

Here is the story as we find it summarized – me in an article signed S. Berger, which appeared in the magazine Mélusine in March–April 1897:

"William was the son of a farmer from surroundings of Norwich, the county seat of Norfolk. Pious and charitable, he was loved by all. Since the age of eight, he had been apprenticed to a furrier.
Jews, who had business at his employer's house for the maintenance of their coats and furs that they were given as a pledge, learned to con-to give birth to the child when he was twelve years old.
For some time they had been looking for a Christian so that they could sacrifice. The priest Godwin Sturt, husband of the child's aunt, and a named Wulward, with whom he was staying, re-close to these acquaintances. The Jews then sent to the child on Monday of the Holy Week of the year 1144, a man who donna for the cook of the archdeacon of Norwich, and who came to hire him as a valet of cooking; the tempter triumphed over resistance the mother's reproach by handing her an advance payment of three shillings. The lamb was given to the wolf.
A young girl who was following them saw the seducer
and his victim entering the house of a Jew, and the door closed behind them.

"On Wednesday morning (it was Easter)" Jewish), the main Jews of the area meet-
They were born in this house. The child was seized.
In the middle of his meal, they gagged him, they he ties a knotted rope around his head and, after shaving his head, they prick him with thorns. So they crucified him, as Christ, by tying him to two posts between in which was found a piece of wood;
links the right hand and the right foot, the foot left and left hands are fixed by nails. Finally, the left side of the en- is pierced fan to the core and, to erase the trace
From his flowing blood, they pour over his head boiling water. That's how the en-Christian fan. It was Holy Wednesday, March 22nd.
1144.

"A very curious altarpiece, preserved" in a church in Norfolk, in Loddon, and which dates back to the beginning of the 15th century, represents this scene with great accuracy study, according to our text.

"Like the Jew Eleazar, in the house from whom the crime had been committed, was leaving with a companion, the next morning, deto place the victim's body in the woods

Thorpe Wood, a burgess of Norwich, Ael-
8

114 JEWISH ENGLAND

Ward Ded, who was making the rounds of the shrines from the place, met them. Distrustful of the bag which was resting on the horse's withers, he felt it and recognized a human body, but the sheriff John, whom the Jews had bribed, made him swearing he wouldn't say anything. That was five years later.
that, on his deathbed, Aelward confessed his concealment from the monk Wichemann and from a priest of Saint Nicholas.

"On Good Friday, towards evening, we lived in several places gleamed with a bright light.

whose rays indicated the place where had
The child's body had been hidden. Henri de Sprowston, forester and formerly head of the bishop's stables Ebrard, and a widow, Legarda, who cared for the sick near the chapel of Saint-Madeleine, along with her poor, saw these singular radiances. In the morning, Legarda goes to the forest and she finds herself lying at the foot of a oak the child dressed and shod and the head dies-Sorting, as we said. Two crows tried in vain to peck at the body and a miraculous force made them fall back to each time (this fact is imitated from the life of saint Columban). The woman chases birds, does
He prays and returns home. In turn,
Henry of Sprowston, guided by a peasant,

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 115

arrived at the child's body and saw the gag and injuries, but he sent back to Easter Monday, the responsibility for burying the body.
The crowd rushes forward and immediately the
The name of the Jews. Fear of the sheriff prevents only the locals could get their hands on them.
While they were putting the body of the child, a delicious scent, like that of Flowers and field herbs spread around him.

"The priest Godwin Sturt, husband of the aunt"
of the child, accompanied by his son, the deacon Alexander, and Robert, brother of the martyr, from goes to the grave and reopens it to recognize the body; he finds it wonderfully conserved and spreading the sweetest parînm. A the next assembly of the clergy, Godwin denuncio to the bishop the Jews as the murderers Triers. Summoned before the Dean of Norwich, the Jews resort to the protection of the sheriff, who first forbade them from appearing, then the accompanied before the synod, withdrew with them, covering their retirement, and finally gives them asylum in his fortified castle. The matter being thus halted by the magistrate's opposition, church people are limited to transporting grand ceremony for the remains of the martyred child in the monks' cemetery, near the cathedral. It had been thirty-two days since the child was dead, his body was intact, his limbs were flexible and his body spread- It smelled of herbs and flowers.

The Jews guilty of the assassination of Wil- They all died, it seems, of a bad death. The leader of the plot, Eleazar, was killed by a knight, his creditor, whom he had wanted ran- to know. Sheriff John having had the audacity- the desire to annul the election of a bishop was punished by a pitiful and cruel end.

Two accusations of this kind are being renewed- They were born under Henry II (1154-1189), one of whom... Gloucester, March 18, 1168. It was found in the Severn, in Gloucester, the mutilated body of a... fan named Harold; the corpse bore burn marks, thorns were visible embedded- holes in the head and in the armpits. The Jews were accused of the murder.

The monks and priests then borrowed to the Jews who took the vessels or clothing sacred as pledges; then they complained, and the lenders were condemned to heavy fines.

One of Henry II Plantagenet's grievances, against his minister, Grand Chancellor of An-

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 117

England, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Becket, whom he had assassinated, was related to a sum. of 500 pounds that he had emb- levied on a reprobate on the king's guarantee.

Numerous were the atrocities that struck sometimes pay the entire community, sometimes private individuals.

To prepare for the crusade, the king imposed a contribution of 60,000 pounds to the Jews, while he was only asking for 70,000 from the rest of his subjects.

The Israelites were then accused of having crucified at Bury St Edmunds in 1181, a named after Robert, to whom a tomb where, as on William's, they performed miracles.

The king's death at Chinon in 1189 relieved them gea at the opportune moment.

He had granted them the right to have a cemetery outside the grounds of each of the cities where they lived; until then they had not had only one, near London, in the pa-King of St. Giles, Cripplegate, called "the "Jewish Garden."

The famous Spanish rabbi Aben Ezra vi-site then England, there teaches, there writes several of his books.

118 JEWISH ENGLAND

Many Jews were then mede-excellent cinemas, accused of witchcraft and art Kabbalistic, for their marvelous cures.

The first act of Richard the Lionheart (1180-1199) was to defend women and Jews to approach the palace during the ceremony coronation ceremony.

Specifically, on that day, Israeli MPs-lists of provincial towns, ignorant without doubt this defense, arrived bearers of large gifts through which they hoped to to win the favor of the new king. Repulse-They are seized by the guards and mistreated by the crowd, growing increasingly excited, begins to kill the London Jews, to loot and burn their houses: the disorder lasted all night. Three people were punished with death: one, because she had looted the home of a Christian yours and not of a Jew; the other two, because than by setting fire to the house of a Hebrew they had made the Christian houses run adjacent buildings pose a fire hazard.

Rabbi Jacob of Orléans perished in this tumulte (1190).

The result was that the Jews gave to King Richard, who agreed to use it, without To do this, first decide which ones to favor.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S I19

ser, considerable sums for his expédition in the Holy Land at the beginning of the third Sixth Crusade. These sums increased by Day by day, Richard finally committed himself, but only for the sake of form, to be declared, in a special proclamation, that he was taking the Hebreux now under his protection.

But the impetus given to the fury of the people and to the spirit of persecution could not be suppressed facilement. In Norwich, in Lynn, in Norfolk, and in many other major cities, massacres took place. At Dunstable and in many English cities, the Israelites converted en masse to escape the ill-treatment that threatened them everywhere.

In Lynn, the signal for the massacre was given by the Jews themselves who were pursuing one of their renegade brothers to put him to death.

In Stamford and Lincoln, the crusaders are stirring up the mob against the Jews, whose property must to be employed for God's work. These are For many long days there was killing and looting. Plus—The Israelites had to take refuge in the fortress, commander of the city, and bought by offering large sums of money, rather than obtaining... governor, shelter and protection.

120 JEWISH ENGLAND

In York, 1,500 Jews took refuge in the fortress with their wives and children, to support a veritable siege and, when the Resistance becomes impossible, they slaughter each other or perish in the flames of the fires dies lit. The people blinded by their hatred, massacres all those he can seize.

Upon his return from captivity, Richard the Heart of Lion established the Jewish Chessboard, a kind of Court of Justice, also called Chamber of the Star Chamber, to which each he-Breu had to declare the details of all his assets and who was to receive the deposit of all the documents (sales, purchases, loans) where a Jew had left. It was a well-invented machine for pres-to assure all the people through the Jew and this contributed significantly to increasing the fervent seekers of revenge against the sons of Judah.

Richard the Lionheart's brother, quarter-third son of Henry II and Eleanor of Aquitaine taine, wanted, from the moment of his accession to the throne (1199-1216), winning the sympathies of the world Israelite by appeasing his Hebrew subjects. knows what John Lackland, the feline prince, was like, Cruel, cunning, and a bloodthirsty king. For his At the beginning, he appointed a great Rabbi: Jacob the Jewish, from London, whose jurisdiction extended-

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 121

It was directed at all the Judaizers in the kingdom. Moreover, he recognized the power of the rabbis as judges in all disputes between coreligionnaires et en conformité avec leurs lois spéciales. The disputes between Jews and Christians were tried by a special court before a jury of Israelites who swore an oath on a wheel the parchment containing the five books of Pentateuch. These privileges had cost, at the good Semites a sum estimated at approximately four thousand marks of gold (x).

Popular anger was not diminished. She publicly manifested herself in the name of numerous opportunities against the cursed tribe. The The king used these hostilities as a pretext to address-to send a stern letter to the chief magistrate of London, reminding him that the Israelites of-were to be considered as being henceforth directly under his protection.

This protection, despite the persecutions accidental, however, had allowed the ha-secondhand dealers, moneylenders and usurers that are, almost without exception, the sons of Shem, to become colossally rich.

(1) The mark was worth 13 shillings and 4 pence of the monnaie d'alors.

122 JEWISH ENGLAND

That was probably where Jean was waiting for them.
landless, who, aware of the accumulation of their treasures Go out, don't hold back, as he had
The project had undoubtedly been in the works for a long time.
to squeeze the right jackpot sponge. In
In 1210, he imposed a tax of 60,000 marks. Inutile to look for a way out: who doesn't pay
He is seized, imprisoned and tortured.

Every Jewish man or woman subject must declare the exact and demonstrable amount of his fortune under the penalty of being placed in strict and regular prisonteased morning or evening.

Those who resisted had an eye gouged out. There were
He certainly had a lot. From this came that Expression: "That's worth a Jew's eye."

Abraham of Bristol, taxed at 10,300 marks of money, let him pull out a tooth each day for seven consecutive days, the hui-On the thirtieth day, he only had one left; he decided to keep it and consequently he paid the requested amount.

Other taxes followed this one. The
The king gave his favorites a receipt for their debts to the Jews; they also took on without the slightest shame the houses of these to donate to the lords of his court (Isaac of Norwich and the Earl of Ferrais).

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 123

The Great Charter of English Liberties contains two articles limiting the rights of Jews in relation to their creditors and heirs third of these.

During the unrest that preceded the
the King's signing of this charter, barons demolished houses right down to the ground

Jewish women in order to find all the necessary materials there.
necessary to repair the city walls.

Richard, Prior of Bermundsen, erected a house for converted Jews (1213). It was piously dedicated to Saint Thomas.

After Jean's victory over the Scots at Berwick, the King took the Jews as executioners authors of his great works on prisoners sentenced to death.

"Throughout the entire age period of darkness the role of the Jew remains constantly subordinate to the King's will. That's... less what we are exposed to with a great depth of judgment a critic and socio-anonymous English logue (1). He reappears at The 11th and 12th centuries, including the Renaissance.

(x) See The Eye-witness magazine, "The Jewish "Question," unsigned article, attributed without attribution.
I can affirm this to the editor of this journal, number of September 7, 1911.

124 JEWISH ENGLAND

active situation of Europe during this period Riode again requires his assistance, and, for the second time in European history
European, it has now become universally im-He's the one who finances everything throughout.
the early part of the Middle Ages. Those who speak of the great financial power
The current Jewish community should know that this situation has its parallel in the past and a parallel that proves that the financial power of the Jew
the [power] of that time was much stronger than ours days. The construction of our great cathedrals drales, of our great abbeys, one could
To tell the whole story of financial life during that era, depended on the capital accumulated by the Jews, thanks to their usurious loans to the Christians productive content. An interesting fact to note.
stater succeeds this flourishing period for the Israelite race. The Jew becomes poor. The Chance ruins him. He is not robbed, far from it.
from there, because, before its debacle, its enormous riches are carefully protected by the state against occasional explosions of popular fury.

"When he starts losing his money, that is to say, during the 13th century, its Troubles return. But there are warning signs...

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 125

Runners in the debacle are making their presence known before the end of the 12th century. The funds loaned for The Crusades are poorly guarded. This domination-centuries-old tradition of Jews in finance very bitter fruits; nevertheless, the peril and The real degradation only happens to them with poverty and, if they are then driven out of An-England, if they lose their prestige at one end to the other of the other western countries, it is because they then cease to be the bankers of the West.

Let us come to Henry III (1216-1272), in our referring again to the History of the Jews in Great Britain Brittany, by Rev. Moses Margoliouth, their coreligionist, so benevolent and so pi-compassionate towards their miseries and sufferings, so blind to their misdeeds.

During the minority of Henry III, the Israelis The English lites were protected and were able to negotiate peacefully without being disturbed. They will-were the oriental costumes that distinguished them always Englishers and pointed them out to the hatred or disdain for the people to whom they belonged rapacious usurers, hard-hearted lenders, exi-giants to the point of cruelty. However, in addition They had to display their Levantine attire on the chest, as a distinguishing mark, two wide white bands made of canvas or parchment, that is to say, clearly visible. Beautiful-blow from their brothers from the East or the West were arriving in England at that time, at-driven by greed. They were very poorly received there. read by the population, especially by the authorities of the "Five Ports". The King's government had to often strive to restore order so that the new arrivals can be hospitalized on English soil and welcomed with a spirit of tolerance.

126 JEWISH ENGLAND

However, there was sometimes conflict between ecclesiastical authority and royal power.
The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Lincoln issued directives to the faithful.
to remind them that the Israelites should to be considered outside the Church is to that is to say, kept strictly apart so that at-a relationship cannot be consensual with these reprobates under penalty of grieving the God of Christians.

Around 1230, the persecutions against the Israelites
The beds, fattened by wear and tear, start all over again. Everything
A Jew who wants to convert is stripped of his property for the benefit of the King who re-founds
a refuge for converted Hebrews.

In London, during their years of peace and quiet,

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 127

they had built a sumptuous synagogue gogue, more opulent in appearance than all the churches of the great city. King Henry III did not hesitate to seize it and donate it to Brothers of Saint Anthony of Verona. Likewise, the Jews had to contribute to the costs of the reconstruction and ornamentation of the abbey of Westminster.

It was during this reign that the ritual crimes, which we discussed earlier which exasperate the population of Norwich and which have remained legendary in England.
Israelites accused of having circumcised a boy Christian children were quartered or hanged, while-said that their property was immediately confiscated.
at the request and for the benefit of the King.

In 1240, the Jew Jacob of Norwich was accused of a ritual crime of the same nature. The case made great noise for more than four years; the tri-ecclesiastical authorities seized it and condemned four sons of Judah to be cast aside They were televised and hanged. The unleashed mob burned their homes.

A few other mysterious ritual crimes also took place in Norwich and Gladstonbury and in Lincoln. Herbert's child drowned at Huntingdon, then, in 1192, a great deal of noise was made of a child crucified in Winchester, approximately under the same conditions as little William of Norwich. These child crucifixions Christians, whose blood was given to the fanatics, constitute unexplained murders, such as this baby's corpse found in London in 1244 with Hebrew characters on the thighs, arms and chest and marks of mis- treatment. I'm going to have treatments all over my body. The inscriptions indicated the names of the parents and portions. They said that the unfortunate man had been sold to Israel. The rest was indecipherable. Specifically, certain Jewish people had just fled from London to never to return. Popular anger was rumbling.

128 JEWISH ENGLAND

These ritual crimes were essentially denied. Israelites, but the testimonies are quite numerous so that doubt is no longer possible. Possible. Even today, ritual murders are not uncommon in the East. Some sects of occult and superstitious Hebrew practices readily accept these awful human sacrifices. hands, to this question:

Why do Jews commit crimes?
Rituals? An Israeli historian gives a clear answer.
for the following series of reasons:

- To celebrate Passover: we mix the blood to unleavened bread;

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 129

- To get rid of their special odor-cious;
- To make love potions;

- To stop the bleeding at the circumcision of their children;
- To cure secret illnesses;
- For the wedding ceremony between Jews;
- To anoint the rabbi's hands at the mother's blessing in synagogues;
- To facilitate childbirth for women Jewish;
- To make the sacrifices more pleasant to Jehovah;
- To give holy unction to the Jews dying and thus ensure their eternal life;
- To summon demons and force them to answer all questions.

The Hebrew people were therefore not as freed from the superstitions that we have been willing to say. In the lower class one encounters a fanatical and blind credulity which carries certain-enlightened beings destined to become sacrificers of children. The famous Sir Richard Burton, the traveler-English general, wrote a book which, although very independent in his ideas, provides a quantity of evidence of these bloody customs in a few rare categories of Hebrews who consider-

9

130 JEWISH ENGLAND

denote the sacrifice of a Christian or an infidel as pleasing to Yahweh.

Among the ritual murders of the time of Henry III, let us recall that of a crucified child to Lincoln, aged eight, whose name was Hugo. After fattening him up for ten days with white bread and milk, his burial-The locals performed all the ceremonial rituals on him. annihilation of passion. His entrails were removed-Worn to serve evil purposes. Buried Three times, three times the earth rejected the corpse.

The body was finally thrown into a well from the house of torture where his mother was found The corpse. The master of the house, after confessing repeated before his execution, he was quartered; ninety-nine Jews recognized as Accomplices were also executed.

Among the anecdotes from old chronicles From the 13th century, we can cite this one:

Abraham, a rich Jew from Berkhamsted, place a statue of the Virgin Mother in a indecent place (the latrines?). He was having fun at the cover it with garbage. He ordered his wife, the Beautiful Flora, to do the same. This one, disgusting- He refused, and the Jew, no doubt convinced that he conformed to the precept of Deuteronomy (XIII, 6-9), strangled him.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 131

Discovered, he was thrown into a dungeon. ditch of the Tower of London. He was granted a pardon. at the price of 700 marks and against the promise of denounce those of his coreligionists who dis- they faked their wealth, which he did with a lot of zeal.

To allow the sponge to expand as the royal hand pressed upon her, an act of Parliament, towards the middle of the reign, self- This tolerated the Jews to practice usury. But this tolerance- This cunning scheme was only temporary.

The twenty-seventh year following his access Upon assuming the throne, Henry III issued an edict, agreeing with the ecclesiastical authorities, who testified- He was extremely harsh towards the Jews, these were placed there completely apart from the the rest of the population among the infidels re- proven.

During the invasion of London by the barons revolted against the King who had... locked inside the Tower, one of their leaders, John Fitz-John coldly murdered the richest Jew from London, Kokben Abraham; 600 or 700 at- people were massacred and a synagogue was destroyed. The old building was destroyed.

Cities like Newcastle, Derby, Southampton, Wycomb, Newbury, etc., obtained

132 JEWISH ENGLAND

charters allowing them not to receive to see Jews and even to send back those who are there were already installed.

After the Battle of Lewes, disastrous for the royal party, the people, were swept up in violence against the Jews. In London, many escaped they contributed to the massacre by taking refuge in the Tower, which the constable had them open the doors. A proclamation from the King finally came, guaranteeing them peace and relative protection.

Towards the end of the reign, the landed estates of Jews taking on dangerous proportions, the king published an edict forbidding Jews from acquiring and keep all free land, their ordering them to limit themselves to the houses they inhabited and forbidding them any domestic relations with Christians (July 24, 54th year of the reign which lasted fifty-six years). The total amount of money extorted by Henry III England's was partly done. It exceeds 400,000 marks, that is to say, for the time, nearly of 4 million pounds, which is difficult to assess the current relative price based on the renouveau of money.

Edward I (1273-1307) was even more systematic thematically rigorous and exacting than his father in relation to the Israelites who, at the time when

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 133

He seized power, and they were loathed by the population, accused of magic, counterfeiting, of manufacturing illicit acts, crimes and frightening and reduced to hiding, to going underground in their ghettos to avoid being mistreated by the Christians who hunted them down and fought with all the ferocity that the persecutors in matters of religion.

Comments were written about their prejudged religious, for their usury, their avarice, their absolute lack of scruples in the organization of their wealth and on their ruthlessness—able methods against the unfortunate incapable—unspeakable and unavowable interests.

Edward I published the Statutum of Judaism (1295), prohibiting usury for Jews and limiting their rights over their debtors: subject to taxation only according to the King's pleasure; all the Israelites over the age of seven had to wear visibly two strips of yellow taffeta; it They were finally assigned cities of residence.

It was then that the Hebrews began to rise up against the Christian religion, religion which cannot come from a God of mercy—rope, since it allows such cruelties.

In 1279, a new edict: any Jew caught denying or to satirize the divinity of Christ will be put to dead. The yellow badge will be worn by Jewish women. as by the Jews.

134 JEWISH ENGLAND

Two hundred and ninety-four Jews were put to death as counterfeiters or clippers of currency at the beginning of the reign.

On May 11, 1287, all the Jews of Angle—earth were imprisoned the same night, then released for a ransom of 20,000 pounds of money.

Hatred of the people is becoming increasingly large. Their expulsion is being demanded everywhere.

It was around 1290 that the Edict of ban—nisation. It is estimated at around 15,000 to 16,000 the number of Israelites who left the Angle—land, but not all went. A number important enough that it is impossible to pou—to see, to evaluate, remained on the soil of Great Britain Brittany, preferring to abandon the practice of a religion that was no longer tolerated, that to abandon very lucrative businesses. This—Meanwhile, these recalcitrants were not very visible.

obviously, avoiding drawing attention to themselves and remaining humble and obsequious. Among the
Among the banished was Nicolaüs of Lyra, a student from Oxford, author of a commentary on The Old and New Testaments, one of the most brilliant lights of Spain, a true pre-Luther's cursor, who became a Christian in Paris.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 135

The Reverend Moses Margoliouth, in his History of the Jews in Great Britain, not don't fail to mention what perseverance was involved. and the firm conduct of the Israelites in the midst oppression and continuous suffering suffered during those dark hours of persecution. "The courage they showed," he declared, " brave all dangers and all difficulties cultivated to pursue wealth, is a characteristic proof of their tenacity and of their value." He hardly acknowledges that the usurious morals of his coreligionists had become a danger to the people English and that King Edward, to protect his subjects, had been brought by force of things to the Edict of Exile of all the Hebrews who perhaps spared the country a kind of war civil, so much so that public opinion was then he was furious with the circumcised.

Houses, possessions, libraries children of Israel were rigorously confiscated goods. Among this loot were tre-Outings and priceless works. Roger Bacon, the marvelous scholar who was called the doctor admirable, he recounts having discovered in these

136 JEWISH ENGLAND

Jewish libraries of precious books and rare manuscripts of prodigious interest from which he admits to having derived the most benefit.

After this exodus, which continued until the After 1791, Great Britain was liberated of its financial tyrants for nearly three hundred and fifty years. Where were they then?

these wanderers? Towards which ports of the East do they descend?
What do these rodents pull? We couldn't say. They spread everywhere, mainly in Venice and in the Orient.

They did not reappear in London until after the death of Charles I. They arrived there then, sens-such a troubled time, almost in a state of conquest
They were well-off, their pockets full, and their expressions confident.
offered to Cromwell, so that he would recognize their rights of establishment in England, a sum of 500.00 pounds sterling for the Commonwealth or British Republic.

For these 12,500,000 francs they were asking that they be given the cathedral of Saint Paul,
then disused, and the wonderful library-Bodleian library of Oxford, of which they wish would build synagogues. The government-Cromwell refused, and it was not a little later than Rabbi Menasseh Ben Israel, from Amsterdam, received permission

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 137

to travel to English territory and there to found a new colony of Israelites in London.

Not all Jews, let us repeat, had,
Moreover, he left England after the edict of Edward I*. There had always been a ghetto or Jewry in the big cities. But the inhabitants of these Jewish quarters led a life sordid and remained penned up in contempt audience.

These new Semitic immigrants were almost all of them originating from Holland or Al-Lemagne, and no special costume for them
He stood out more from other men. They were tasked with being agents intermediaries between the merchants of the City and their Levantine brothers.

The first Jews to disembark surrendered in body at Huntingdon, birthplace of Cromwell, under the guise of gathering information from it-information about the Protector's family; they claimed they were assured of discovering to see in him the Messiah who was promised to them,

But the great Olivier rebelled at the hearing of these base flatteries and, addressing the en-Rabbi Jacob-ben-
Urzriel made him understand that, far from being

138 JEWISH ENGLAND

pleasant, the Jews of the Levant risked to expose him to the ridicule of Parliament.

A little later, Rabbi Menasseh-ben-Israel, from Amsterdam, received permission from return to England and found a new one there.
old colony of Israelites. He had an interview with Cromwell who granted him permission to establish a Jewish colony in London.

It was during this period that the East End of London, on the very site of the former the ghetto was invaded by the children of Israel who believed they already held their piece of land pro-Jewry, near the Guildhall, Whitechapel and Houndsditch are still today the center of the impoverished Hebrews. The Jewry has, for centuries, ceased to belong to Jews. We find 50,000 of them from various backgrounds.
sects, Portuguese, Orientals, Dutch and others who own six or seven synagogues and whose life, customs, and superstitions and prejudices have been remarkably described in a curious novel published in 1892: Chil-Dren of the Ghetto, and whose author Israel Zangwill, English short story writer of independent undeniable talent.

ISRAEL AT JOHN BULL'S 139

This brief and concise exposition of the origin and occupation of England by the Jews seems to us sufficiently nutritive for a first chapter where we have summarized as concisely as possible and the examination of essential historical facts.

We will soon tell you what the Jews were like.
immediately upon their return to England towards the end of the 17th century, their role in the British world

tannic during the 18th century* and exposes us to we will easily see by what fortunate strokes we will suck
These financiers, sleight of hand, are without scruples, these eternal fishermen in troubled waters-blue, have become powerful enough to unleashing unspeakable acts for their own benefit wars in the land of gold mines and more particularly in southern Africa.

CHAPTER IV

The return of the Israelites to England.
From Servitude to Emancipation.
Historical notes and judgments.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER IV

THE RETURN OF THE ISRAELITES TO ENGLAND.
FROM SERVITUDE TO EMANCIPATION. – NOTES AND HISTORICAL JUDGMENTS.

With varying degrees of success, but with the same patient voracity and the same rage of success, – here chased away, there ransomed, hated everywhere;
– bowing their heads, but attentive to the slightest gain, and never weary of hope, the Jewish people have successful, in all nations of Europe, this age-old and infectious invasion, of which we have just summarized rather than studied the stages in England.

A quick glance at the world map, will allow us to see the slow extension, but uninterrupted, of this social leprosy, which dis-
A base that decomposes and kills.

During the three centuries in which the kings of England had the right mind
To ward off the scourge, the Jews took shelter primarily...
They are tolerated there, but...

prized and pressured. They are accused of exercising the magic, poisoning fountains, sacrificing— Proud of newborns... The hatred stemming from Golgotha is still burning, and any pretext is good for dragging a Jew into court, the condemn him and make him sweat through sums of money. Which is, after all, the only way to use a Jewish, and the only way not to be, in the end of account, ruined by him.

In the year 1495, the Jews suffered misfortune in Spain. An edict of Ferdinand and Isabel They hunt them down and are sent back to Portugal. There, they are initially quite well received, freed King Emmanuel paid an enormous tribute that Don Juan had demanded of them. But then it happens soon Emmanuel wants to ally himself with the king of Castile and that the expulsion of the Jews becomes One of the conditions of this alliance. The consequences Tragic scenes unfolded from this treaty. whose description we borrow from the excellent— slow notice of MF Morel (1).

"The Jews were ordered to leave the Portugal, with a ban on taking those from their children who had not yet reached the age of

(x) Historical note on the establishment of the Jews in this side of the Pyrenees. — Review of Progress, by F. MOREL.

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 145

fourteen years old, and who were to be raised in the Christian faith. At this news, they stopped— They stood at the city gates and refused to go further: a terrible struggle ensued between them and Emmanuel's soldiers, who re— they laid eggs through blows and outrages to the heart-rending and solemn pain of these faithful thousand outlaws. Furious and delirious, According to a contemporary account, the Jews they themselves slaughtered their children below— age, under the soldiers' eyes, and the precipit— they lay in wells, preferring this hideous sacrifice to the defilement of a new belief. However, the banishment edict was changed in an order to choose between Christianity and slavery; but things remained as they were,

and the Court of Rome strongly condemned
this violence is an enemy of the law of Christ.
Hidden in Lisbon, despite the severity of the
They were tolerated despite the sentences imposed on them.
still by the inhabitants, when a plague which ravaged Portugal at the beginning of the
The 16th century brought about the vengeful calls upon them.
these blind people, a multitude stirred up by monks. They were loudly denounced as the instigators of God's scourge; one de-commanded their death as a legitimate expiation-10

146 JEWISH ENGLAND

tion. A rabbi who wanted to defend for a moment the entrance to the synagogue, the first one His blood stained the cobblestones of Lisbon. It was the signal: all the Jews perished in a single day by iron and fire, and scarcely a few Did the naked and desolate families manage to
"To flee to another land."

Such cruelties are atrocious and senseless:

They arouse pity. Pity leads to attention-tenderness. The feeling of tenderness encourages disarming sea. And when we laid down our arms, the Jew he rises up, becomes master, tyrannizes his Such was always, alas! the way of this world.

_ Moreover, the extraordinary and almost supernatural-
The Jew's vitality survives all the massacres.
cres, endures all persecutions. Compa-rables to the sections of the fabulous serpent, the members of Israel, severed by the sword, becomenent as many new hydras that live, and They bite, and inject their venom.

But let's return to our historical notes on Israel at John-Bull.

"Time," he declared, with his brilliant eloquence,
"The great Shakespeare is the only good old"
"judge who still knows, here below, how to examine all » the culprits. » The documents that accumulate

The centuries were also cumbersome and sleeping pills than notary minutes, he con-comes, to whoever wants to offer interest today to the large number, not to linger in the story, to clear the way as much as possible that we intend to go through, to proceed by elimination and to span the centuries long and brisk strides.

We showed Israel regaining its footing on English soil during the time of the protector Cromwell. We will now study him.
 the long and arduous work of the said Israel for existence, for extension, for domination tion on this territory where he claims to take root (x).

In London, it is in Whitechapel that things are formed the new ghetto, a focal point of the re-Jewish tower in the 17th century. The former ghetto from the Middle Ages, this Jewry whose name survives still near the Guildhall, is now only a so-come. In Whitechapel, many families
 The Israelites had remained, as we have said, escaping under one pretext or another to the order of exile promulgated by Edward I,

(1) See, on the return of the Jews to England, the book by HENRY FINCH, a great jurist of the time by James I, entitled: The World's Great Restoration
 tion; or, Calling (Vocation) of the Jews.

148 JEWISH ENGLAND

and, huddled in this wretched neighborhood, attentive-had been doing this for three hundred years, with a pa-ethnic, so to speak, return of better days and skilled coreligionists.

The days are better, but not very bright.
 still. With the Restoration, the animosity
 The hatred against the Jews is reborn among the English people.
 and we see a goldsmith, Thomas Violet, peti-to act in Parliament for the deportation of the Jews and the confiscation of their property.

But the Israelites had already managed to win the approaching power. Charles II had received, from some of them, profitable services to the stranger; he had kept in his entourage— These skilled men immediately rallied; he gave them maintained its protection.

When it comes to ensuring the marriage of Charles with the Infanta Catherine, the intermediary— Monk's employee was a Portuguese Jew. gays. — On the way, the infanta having fallen m— lade of an erysipelas, a circumcised man still find there, Antonio Mendès, doctor to John IV from Portugal, professor of medicine at the University of Coimbra: he rushes over, treats the infanta, follows her to England, calls near him and his two brothers, one of whom, Andrea, becomes chamberlain to the young queen. These Mendes

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 149

then took the name Da Costa (1), under whose descendants are still known today, just as much as that of Mendes.

However, Israel is teeming. In 1666, the king formally authorizes Jews to settle in England. And these latter — smelling the rich prey, — arrive like rats from all over Sentins of Europe. It was during this period that the symbolic appearance of the "Jew— "wandering," — as it is found recounted in a letter from the Duchess of Mazarin to his sister, the Duchess of Bouillon.

To strengthen their roots in the ground, and— clay, many Jews converted, without so that this becomes dangerously Jewish: like Rabbi Moses Scialitti, of Florence, who takes the name Paul, — like a merchant extremely wealthy, named Dupas.

And the year 1680 saw the printing of the first Jewish catechism.

(x) The Da Costa family of the Commune, one of whom, Gaston, was secretary to Raoul Rigault, led the archbishopric than at La Roquette, and later, a peaceful compiler, composed the "Grammar of the City of Paris"; — are— Are they descendants of this family? — Their father, pro—

a freelance mathematics professor, had a good reputation in the Latin Quarter before 1870. Were they Jewish-lites? – We cannot say for sure.

150 JEWISH ENGLAND

The following reign, the reign of James II, – (1685–1689), is no less favorable to the semites. The king grants them sin- protection ordinary, expensive, no doubt, for the couronne, but much more certainly for the English people. At the instigation of Sir Peter Vandeput, export rights, or alien duties, are given to the children of Israel, which constitutes a considerable privilege for them. Protests from English merchants, representing indignant sentiments and very humble pleas wounds: but the king turns a deaf ear and cowardly the interests of his people.

And as the public authorities are becoming increasingly... monkey days of the sovereign, it happens that the father will of James II determines among the various magistrates of the kingdom a singular mansuetude study regarding the circumcised litigant. In 1687, a Jew was demanding, before the chief justice J'effries, a large sum to a Christian; which Christian, without denying the debt, refused to pay. based on the old text: "No action
"It's possible to have a Jew against a Christian." The judge, after ascertaining that the debt actually existed – ment, pronounced: "In my capacity as judge, "I tell you that according to the very terms of your "Defense, you are required to grant his request."

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 151

"demands and to pay; for it is not to a "Christian that he filed a lawsuit, but well
"to a Jew, much more Jewish than he himself –"
"Even so." Which was to do justice with a Double irony, but what wouldn't have happened in the spirit of a judge from the old game.

Jewish gold nonetheless turned its redoubtable power against James II, who would have
It was to be expected. Two million pounds sterling, supplied to William of Orange by a Jewish community of Amsterdam, in the name of its Korean religious figures, put him in a position to undertake his expedition. And this magnificent fur-war-time, where we see the origin of the debt British national, assures the people of Israel a new capture on British soil.

The Jews, expelled from Spain and refugees in Hollande, had, through their activity and their trade agreement, derived from this small country, the floods of a veritable jackpot. Next en masse William of Orange and establishing Following him, they assured England of the same financial benefits they had previously endowed the Netherlands. The annual credit-English prosperity would therefore have, in a meaning, an Israelite origin. It goes without saying. that William of Orange, who became William III

152 JEWISH ENGLAND

(1689-1702), granted Jews a wide protection. However, the clamor of commerce The English national identity is such that claims are being made. native traders, harmed by a con-intractable currency, rise up so imperious-ment, that William III was forced to sup-to prioritize this exemption from Aliens rights, formerly granted to the Jews, and for them a source copious enrichment. However, this con-The weather does not seem to affect their prosperity. general r- The intruding race is gaining territory rain. Successively we see rising, in Broad Street, at the expense of Moses Hart, the synagogue-nogue of German and Polish Jews; then rebuilding the Spanish synagogue in Bevis Mark, wherever she still is.

During the reign of Queen Anne (1702-1714), Scotland is becoming infected, and we see a congress-The Jewish community settled in Dublin. gain access to major political-fi-financial institutions are beginning to enrich themselves through speculation. focusing on the destinies of the country that receives them, prelude to the grandiose raids in which, later, they will become masters, exempt as they are from all patriotic constraints tic. This is how one sees, near Mal-borough, a certain Jewish Medina, who follows the warrior in all his campaigns, like a shark following the ship that buys it, for an annual payment of 6,000 pounds sterling, the right to send news of the war, and which thus draws from Ramillies, from Oudenarde, from Blenheim, more riches than the English name finds no glory there.

Another fact will show that the Jews of 1713 already knew their trade. In the last-
In the last year of his reign, the rumor suddenly spread-the death of the Queen, producing a General panic. Great commotion: the speculators-Christians are selling at any cost, the funds
Public figures are collapsing... While Menasseh Lopez and some other Jews collect at lower prices. The next day, the Queen is wearing Well, the prices are soaring, and Menasseh Lo-Pez, loyal launcher of the productive false news-new girl, cash in the difference. We'll see, assured-things improve later on, but we observe that the principles of the art of stock market maneuvers are therefore already established.

Likewise, a few years later, in 1720, during the reign of George I*, exploded the major financial crash known as South-Sea-Bubble... And, through protection very special from the God of Israel, no Jew

154 JEWISH ENGLAND

is not caught up in the disaster! The great financier-
The leading figure of this era is Sampson Gideon.
a great friend of Horace Walpole, and a Jew like by chance.

In 1723, an act of Parliament admitted the Jews to take an oath in court. And, as The Christian oath cannot accommodate them.
we find for their use, and to put their comfortable scruples, a new and comprehensive formula Joke.

In various parts of the kingdom, successive-Different eruptions signal the progression of the disease

Jewish. In 1726, a new synagogue was built.
in Fenchurch Street, then it's a congress-Jewish congregation that was founded in Birmingham.

During the reign of George II, a new con-partial quest. An act of Parliament, dated of 1740, declared natural subject of the Great-Brittany, without even receiving baptism, all
A Jewish man who, having spent two years in the colonies of America, will have served for two years on a British warship. It is to be re-to mark that this gracious concession of the Parliament must have been virtually ineffective practical, the Jew, throughout history, having shown a declared aversion to any career hasardine and, in particular, for that of a sailor.

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 155

During the disturbances stirred up by the loan-and Charles Stuart, the Jewish nation established in England, able to keep his cool in a public danger that is only a danger for the English people, finds an opportunity to exercise cer his ingenious rapacity. The riots and the battles, wounds and bruises of the next can become very beneficial to the viewer Attentive and subtle. In 1745, the great Jew Gideon reissues, with variations, the hit so well achieved, thirty years earlier, by Menasseh Lopez. Learning from one of his agents that the Pre-Tendant has just failed; he runs to the Exchange.
announces the success of Charles Stuart, buys at lower prices all values fell suffered-distressed items and resells them the next day even when, the truth being known, they resumed of the amount. Thus does good Gideon become millionaire.

The year 1747 is notable for the construction of a hospital for Spanish and Portuguese Jews gays. The year 1748, by the landing, in England, from Benjamin Dis-'s grandfather
Raëli. Then, pretty much everywhere, there are con-Jewish congregations which, so to speak, pustules on British soil: in Canterbury, in Chatham, in Cambridge, in Bristol, in Exeter, in Edinburgh, Falmouth, Glasgow, Liverpool,

Manchester, etc.

All these attempts represent the pre-Israel's first efforts to embrace its prey.
But, at the time we arrived,
Israel is still far from the domination it dreams of.
During the second half of the 17th century and the beginning of the 18th century, all these Mazaréans with their heads long-haired, goat-bearded men applied themselves to build in silence and to support in in the shadow of their fortunes harvested on the land
the most dubious, fertilized and sown-created by usurious sowing. Huddled apart, in the neighborhoods assigned to them, they lived amongst themselves, devoted to the customs of the time.
braic, avoiding attracting attention, as well as beings who feel barely tolerated, fearful-especially scandals always ready to burst and that they frequently suffocated, at at all costs, so as not to attract the hand of the justice for their nice little businesses.

Apart from the small-scale traffickers, jewelers,
brokers, money changers, art dealers, pawnbrokers, proprietors of pawnshops games or tolerance, some distinguished themselves hardly in the practice of medicine, in Professorship or banking. The less timid.

BERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 157

they ventured to show off their possessions.
The Salomons, the Davids, the Cohens, the Lévy's
the Meyers appeared around the middle of the reign of George III in the opulent districts of Bloomsbury or Soho, the West End in formation. But, as they were forbidden to to deal with public affairs and that the 80-the society of that time held firmly between itself and them a veritable stick of length, they resisted they embraced their role as outlaws and deployed their splendor, with its Rastafarian orientalism, in the vague middles of the outcasts of London raf-refined and debauched. The hour had not yet sounded of cosmopolitan, turbulent, audacious Jews heavens, playing their cards right, determined to conquest and frantically launching the sparrowhawkmeasured their financial ambition on all Rivers of humanity. In the United Kingdom,

The Jews could not have skinned her open-their sheep: they had to be content patiently shear them. English laws
They were, in fact, half-bound, in the inability to operate broadly, in a ser-absolute virtue. They could not possess and, Therefore, acquiring neither houses nor land-rains without notifying the King, of whom they were the serfs; they were not admitted to the profession

158 JEWISH ENGLAND

of lawyer and did not exercise any of the rights of citizen. To tell the truth, some cunning descend-Judas's teeth bought many buildings to the noble lords in their destitution, or trip-were in advantageous investments in cro-stuffed codiles to the young lords hollowed out by the game or gallantry, but it was in cachette and because of the number of prescriptions royal decrees then remained a dead letter.

As early as 1752, the Jews believed themselves to be strong enough to apply for their naturalization, and, by next, their emancipation.

A daring undertaking, full of risks and of dangers, for which they had mobilized significant capital intended to buy the parliamentary votes. There were violent clamor in the public, and, in Parliament even, a tumultuous session. In the Mé-
In the memoirs of the Marquis d'Argenson, we find Île account of this session, the most obvious feature of which-The characteristic is this: As the question
a member was going to be asked the legislators.
of the House rose indignantly and left the as-appeared, wearing above her hat, in large poster letters, these words on a vast sign: "Down with the Jews! No more nature-
"A pact for this cursed people!"

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 159

Despite cries and protests, by the power-
the skill of the orhabilement and copiously sown,

The Jews achieved their goals and believed they had city taken. By a law of 1753, Parliament proclaimed Jewish naturalization, opening The entire English city was at the mercy of this invader. formidable (x).

The outcry from London spread throughout Europe, the courts foreigners remained stunned before the aberration of the English Parliament. And of Ver-Mr. de Pompadour wrote to the Duke of Mirepoix these lines, where the most admirable political foresight:

"(1753) The approach that Parliament an-"
"The French government's actions in naturalizing Jews are astonishing."
"All of Europe: the old marshal says that the "Religion, laws and customs of the Israelites"
"makes them incapable of being good citizens"
"And good subjects; it is always a people to

(1) This fundamental law concerning Jews is thus de-completed in the parliamentary archives of Angle-land: "An Act to permit persons professing the Jewish Religion to be naturalized by parliament. »

The vote on the law to repeal this law is desired-gnée: "An Act to repeal An Act of the twenty sixth year of His Majesty's Reign entitled: An Act to permit professing the Jewish Religion to be naturalized by parliament", etc.

160 JEWISH ENGLAND

» part which forms a state within the state, and to whom "Privileges should only be granted with "Discretion. It is assumed that the gold which, like "Love makes all men equal, is the "strongest argument that the Jews have ever had" deployed on this occasion. France knows how to-
"For a long time, this precious metal has been
"All-powerful in England, and that everything there
"Peace, war, justice and..." are for sale.
"Virtue."

Isn't it very interesting to note how many, on this occasion, M° de Pompa-Dour proved to be wise, far-sighted and truly "Statesman"? The 160 years that have passed time has passed since she wrote that letter, this a century and a half full of triumphant semites and their global plunder have de-showed that Israel is indeed, in truth, "a little-

"a separate thing, foreign to ours, incapable of
"To provide good citizens and good subjects."
The marquise was therefore right against the phiphilosophers, egalitarian polemicists, the mou-bleating tones and sensitive souls.

However, in London itself and in England-land, Jewish naturalization did not succeed not to be "digested". The English people, at the both revolted and frightened by this Jewish brotherhood

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION I61I

secular fraternity that was imposed upon him, incomfashionable, ruinous, and fetid, the English people defended it as best it could, through riots and by a resurgence of bullying against children of Israel. A deluge of jeers, insults and caricatures rained down on the new brothers
They were circumcised. They were treated more harshly.
that they had never been, quarantined taine, driven from the theaters and places of pleasure, scorned at every opportunity, humiliated and somewhat rubbed at the spine.
Growing public anger is directed at also to the Parliamentary Bribers, Panamists before their time, and wants us to tell them to make them cough up... What was finally clear-forced to do so, corruption having has clearly been demonstrated.

In short, the outcry becomes so widespread and so violent that he take everything. A law of 1754 undid this that the law of 1753 had done, and the Jewish natu-
The realization has been reported. It needs to be started again.
for Israel...

Israel, moreover, immediately resumed its tra-a war of sapping, with the patience of a burrowing animal sister, which was given to her by Jehovah. From In 1755, a new contingent arrived for him, by following the Lisbon earthquake.

II

Many Jews, locked in dungeons of the Inquisition, are then freed: they ac-run from Portugal to England, come to strengthen their already entreated coreligionists on English soil, they share their pre-disasters scents and their indomitable appetite for prey, of the national prey that the future owes to their claws.

An overview, taken of society
English from the mid-18th century, allows to recognize this supremely interesting fact health, and what remains too often forgotten: is that the Catholics in England were then housed on the same footing as those subject to the law Sanhedrin. After having heroically resisted, for more than two centuries, to the tyrannies of the Anglican Church, with its strict formalism, all those faithful to the dogmas of the Roman Church were held under strict obligations and outlawed by a state religion which showed the full brutality of an Inquisition white.

The four hundred thousand Catholics who vi-were going to England, including Ireland and Scotland, in the second half of the eighteenth twentieth century, were not recognized for subjects of the kingdom could not acquire nor

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 163

houses, no land, no schools, no values real estate exceeding 5 pounds sterling; they remained in faces intolerance, contempt, and ridicule from Protestants, unable to admit the souveraine image of the pope, whom they designated by this A superbly diabolical name: "The Scarlet"
"woman", "the red woman of the Apocalypse".

This implacable rigor of the Reformed Church was not popular in the lower classes social issues that the reform had so long persecuted. Groups were forming everywhere-comments from bourgeois or peasants eager to to break free from the heavy cloak of lead which the Anglican Church enchasublated their temperaformerly vigorous, expansive and boastful. From there came these dissident sects of the Quakers, Methodists, Baptists, Apostolicals, latitudinarians, pietists, presbyterians, Antimonians, and more than two hundred others whose followers were terribly suppressed at equal to Catholics.

Free thought had a long way to go to establish itself. to pose to England. These were the theories of French encyclopedists who, through infiltration, fertilized the school of thinkers and reformed-social actors of Great Britain: John Horne, Tooke, Francis Hardy, Jean Thelwall,

164 JEWISH ENGLAND

Thomas Payne, who strove to re-to spread new revolutionary ideas in a country that is already excessively advanced as a political spirit, but alas! narrowment and petty conservative and insittingsitting with regard to religious doctrine.

The Jewish question thus became intertwined with the the general question of religious sects, which he The goal was to liberate from the yoke of the state church.

However, this distinction must be made: when it comes to Jews – a fiercely and powerfully race temporal, moreover not at all fond of Protestantism – the purely theological challenge gic and doctrinal is found quite outside of season. Alongside the rabbi, his servant, today the god of Abraham and Jacob took care of to place a shrewd financier, who makes a fortune – who, rich, becomes powerful – and who, then-sant, knows very well how to enforce it, by the Christians of all possible denominations the millennia-old teachings of the rabbi.

This is how, throughout the reign of in-The terminable of Georges II, the Jewish race serves very effectively his god through commerce through speculation, usury, and all the known means of accumulating cash. She achieves unspeakable financial prosperity.

Increasingly, she is becoming a nuisance to English people who balk, who insult, without ar-
river to free itself from the pincers, from the pincers Hebrew women who are beginning to tighten their grip.

In the year 1780, disturbances occurred in London, and the population is striving to... backstabbing, singing this unfriendly refrain: "No
"Jews, no wooden shoes!" (No Jews, no of clogs!) The clogs here symbolize the French, and the French do not appear in the song just for the rhyme... or rather for to satisfy the people's taste by putting all their Hatreds in one bag. But what happens?
When the people cried out, the Jews, who had not Having lost a small amount of money for this, they return to to dig their underground tunnels.

In that same year, 1780, a member of the Lord Gordon, a member of the English high aristocracy, had the original idea of converting to Judaism.
he whistles at it, and, under the pretext of a written pamphlet by Jui against Marie Antoinette of France, on imprisoned in Newgate. Will the Jewish community... rescue this likeable and unfortunate novice-He's swollen? He would need a deposit... But no Hebrew millionaire consents to the four-to nir, and Lord Gordon has the simplicity to con-
He will receive much sorrow. He dies when-

166 JEWISH ENGLAND

a few years later, having formulated the desire to rest in the Jewish cemetery. Unfortunate.
To the very end, he was buried in the vault of his family.

For a defector like Lord Gordon,
the Anglican Church receives into its austere fold
a number of prominent Israelites, for whom this theological maneuver is merely a speculation Furthermore, beneath the Puritan mask, they will serve-will more surely see their personal interests and those of their race. Thus are found puritrusted, by the baptismal waves, the economist
David Ricardo, then Sir Gideon Sampson, illustrious financier, who enters the "Peerage" of Ireland, with the title of Baron Eardly of Spalding.

Among the countless widespread benefits on the world by the French Revolution, one of the most certainly beneficial, if not the most notable, was a further enrichment of the Jews of England. Quite calmly, without neither leave London nor the area around the Stock Exchange Exchange, without getting passionate about any of the utopias that were then asserting themselves on all sides, these truly circumspect men knew how to be skillful—how to monetize France's misfortunes and convert to pounds sterling perfectly

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 167

The real, immortal principles of '89. One could to recognize, on this occasion, one of the procedures from the most lucrative of the Jew: tactic truly spiritual and coldly philosophical phique, which consists of speculating on ideology from the neighbor, to entertain him with appearances, to generously let him have the shade, seizing the prey.

The early 19th century saw the emergence in the Hebrew sky, on the horizon of London, a new constellation that must surpass shattering the Jewish stars previously observed Well before 1808, Nathan Rothschild came to settle in the English capital.

There had been, for a long time, in England, quantity of Jews all in gold: merchants, bankers Quiers, money handlers of all kinds. He there was, in the English West Indies, a number of wealthy and prosperous Jews, escaped pes for most of the Spanish possessions, where persecution was rampant, and who, as founders trading posts that had become powerful had their designated representatives in the metropolis. There there were still, in London, a large number of Jewish people Turkish, Italian, Levantine, who traded with insolent happiness, and displayed each day with more luxurious importance. But Now, here is the Golden Calf himself.

Nathan was descended from Maier-Anschel Roth-Schild. And Frankfurt, in 1777, had seen him born. At nineteen, he left his father's house, that General Kléber's cannons had just to undermine, and came to Manchester to do his best to traffic in it, like money-lender and pawn-broker, that is to say, financier and pawnbroker. All his fortune was then 1,000 florins.

But, at that time, the fluctuations of Cotton-trade offered attentive people opportunities for fortune that Nathan knew not to neglected, so much so that five years later he had in his pocket 200,000 pounds sterling.

It is with this fortune, already considerable for the time, when Nathan came to London around 1801, and that, driven by love, he married the daughter of Lévi-Barnett-Cohen, a young lady weighing one weight precisely equal: 200,000 pounds sterling. He then established himself at the Stock Exchange, as on the very axle of the wheel of the Fortune.

Some public miseries soon followed to his aid. In 1810, Sir Francis Baring and Abraham Goldsmith having taken on an em-a loan of 14 million pounds sterling for the

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 169

On behalf of the government, it happened that Baring died and Goldsmith, unable to do faced with a coalition of opposing interests, poisoned himself. It was the State Loan, or em-State loan, following which a large A number of English subjects were ruined.

On the other hand, Wellington, who was fighting in Spain pagne against Napoleon's troops, reck-desperately controls funds that the Treasury English, out of stock, could not send.

Nathan Rothschild, seriously informed-confident in advance of an English victory, He therefore bought the public funds at the lowest price. allowed to settle Wel- credit notes

Lington awaited the victory which faithfully came, resold at a higher price, and thus pocketed a colossal fortune appeared before our eyes the English as saviors of the fatherland and restorer of the national credit.

After this subtle act of audacity, the happy Youpin began to shine with intensity- He became a kind of state financier. received confidential information from the ministry, was employed as mediator in the treaties that the Angle-land combined with the anti-French powers Caisses. Nathan Rothschild thus became a ambassador of money... but an embassy a man who conducts diplomacy on his own behalf staff.

170 JEWISH ENGLAND

His main concern is to know, quickly and Surely, what is happening in Europe, in this at the moment when Europe, all resounding with the sound of weapons, all shaken by the convulsions the unions of the peoples, produced in abundance these sensational events, so favorable to the rise and fall.

Already, through its relations with the government-English ment, and by the fact that his brother, there- down in Frankfurt, Germany and the EU- central rope of a small, awake eye, of an eye Youpin, already, by these two advantages, Nathan Rothschilds finds itself admirably equipped for the struggles of the Stock Exchange. However, he wants more again, and, in his fever for knowledge useful, he organizes a real and complete service information deficiency.

Carrier pigeons fly overhead They will wing the continent and the English Channel; they will like arrows from the battlefield to the Stock-Exchange; they have the small encrypted note around their necks. who says victory or defeat, and that a good A Jewish spy, conveniently positioned, confided in them for the edification of Nathan Rothschild.

A flotilla of small fishing boats will constantly from England to the continent, from continent to England. But these boats Fishermen don't care about the fish; they take The accurate, unbroken news is captured in their nets.

again, fresh and succulent, including Nathan Rothschild is going to make some nice gold bars.

And, since nothing beats the eye of the master, Nathan Rothschild operates himself. He passes sometimes in France and Germany, approach-che cautiously and prudently of the enright where something happens; then, when men and horses cover the plain with a bloody and groaning harvest, he, a Jew ma-Lin, look, conclude and enjoy.

Thus, on June 18, 1815, he found himself in Brussels, and from there, like Fabrice de Stendhal ran to the cannon of Waterloo... But it is not to see the standards shudder-darts, it's for a good reason. Before the end of action, as soon as he senses the opportunity is there, Nathan Rothschild sets off at full speed, at triple galloping, in the direction of England. At In Ostend, he finds a terrible storm unleashed; but, faced with gold, her decision worth that of Caesar or Bonaparte: it commits a boat, passes through the tumult of the winds and from the waves, lands at Bexhill in Sussex. – There,

172 JEWISH ENGLAND

I need a horse, my kingdom for a che-Val! Nathan Rothschild knew at that time terrible trances. He thrashes about, he runs, he promises sums... Finally, very late in the that evening, he met a farmer named Hudson, which, for a high and very high price strong, agrees to rent his cart, and, in the night, takes the financier to London...

The following morning, June 20, Nathan Rothschild is in its place on the Stock Exchange, pale and decomposed, and like an inner man-deeply torn apart by the misfortunes of the homeland.
"A few reliable agents, who are there," he murmured.
The watchword whispered quietly: "Spread the rumors"

of a disaster suffered by the Allies: Wellington Crushed, Blücher torn to pieces! Then, when collapsed courtyards litter the ground of the
On the side, Nathan picks up, picks up, picks up.
As long as the next day, in the sunshine of victory
Finally known, Nathan can make a shine million pounds sterling earned in this operation. As we can see, the tactic is tou-
The same days, but it's necessary, in a brilliant dose, dissimulation and impudence, faculties emi-Jewish women.

Now Nathan Rothschild, rex Judeo-
Rum, will spread its power and its name upon

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 173

the world. He lends to the Tsar, to the Republics Americans, to France itself, to the Sultan,
To the Pope! Like fruitful colonies, Rothschild banks established themselves in Naples, in Vienna, in Paris, etc. A formidable machine for a thousand suction pipes, which go away, narrow-destroying the planet, drying out and ruining everything around it from them, pumping gold wherever gold risks its yellowish reflection.

We must not lose sight of the fact that, despite this shower of gold that floods them as in a
A magical ballet, the Jews still feel the weight of it.
This disrepute that followed them over the centuries.

They are kept away from high society,
Even the richest, even the most talented.
None of them can set foot in the Court.
Gilded, but humiliated. The English aristocracy she takes revenge as best she can, through contempt, through insolence. And the case of Lord Mel- is cited Bourne visited by Nathan Rothschild in per-rings, leaving him waiting at the door, then in the anteroom, for hours... and savoring with delight, while the needle turns, the affront he makes to the King of the Upstarts.

However, this disposal seems all the more more unbearable to the Jews than, richest people

Now they feel the hunger for everything what wealth can give; and the dilata-
the expressions of pride also become necessary for them.
Serious than the jubilation of the senses. To what?
Well, millions, if there's anything left to Desire? Israel desires, Israel ferments. And its fermentation becomes more sour when, in
In 1820, Catholics finally obtained liberté.

Excluded from the law for two centuries common, teased, rebuffed, treated in re-proven, the faithful of the Roman Catholic Church ar-rivet, indeed, thanks to the eloquent efforts of O'Connor, Brougham and others, to this conquest of civil and political rights which makes them equal to their fellow English citizens. And,
From then on, Israel could no longer hold together in its poorly-fragrant as it may have become, in turn,
As English as John Bull himself. That a Nature's law arranged things differently.
It hardly matters... A bill from Parliament will break the law of Nature, and the goats will be declared bulldogs!

From 1820 onwards, this insidious ambition is ambushed beneath every Jew's brow, of a across the United Kingdom, and all the effort of the tribe tends to the same point: recommen-

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 175

cer the failed attempt at emancipation in 1953; to create in the public, by one hundred thousand muted and converging efforts, the state of mind that it takes to succeed this time.

And when ten years have passed in pa-
These preparations, in sustained paths fields, the Hebrew will appears and struggles in the open air. It is then a political campaign-a legal and parliamentary process that will last twenty years.
a passionate campaign, marked by setbacks and partial successes.

In 1830, Mr. Grant, Member of Parliament for Inverness, presents a bill with a view to deliver the Jews from all civil incapacity or political. Petitions support it, including one signed by 14,000 merchants and bankers of The City. The bill is rejected.

In 1831, the Jews scored a point: they are admitted to the franchise of the City of London.

In 1833, Mr. Grant and Lord Bexley renewed—want their effort. This time the bill, voted by the municipalities, is rejected by the Peers.

The same thing happened in 1834.

In 1835, the Jews achieved considerable success. They obtain, by the Skheriff Declaration Bull, the right to be called to the position of Sheriff and to perform municipal duties. And everything They immediately take advantage of it: D. Salomon is elected Sheriff of London and Middlesex, then Alderman from the Aldgate district.

176 JEWISH ENGLAND

In 1836, Mr. Grant's bill, introduced from new by Mr. Spring Race, is again Rejected.

The year 1837 saw the Queen's accession to the throne Victoria, and the beginning of a reign full of dou- heart for the children of Israel. First of all, we He spruces up and adorns a prominent Jew, Moses Montefiore, former Sheriff of London and Middlesex, a very active protector of the Jews of the East. Moses Montefiore is created a baronet: a few years later, to top it all off kindness, he will have the right to put sup- ports bearing his coat of arms, and will make the figure of a nobleman knight, whose ancestors were to deliver the Holy Sepulchre. And that's not the only one: favors, titles, small gifts and big advantages Attacks begin to rain down on the Jews: It is the dew of Heaven and the nourishing manna. Israel dances before the Ark, and already distinguishes On the horizon, the verdant groves of the earth promise.

However, the delicious bill must wait. a few more years. It was in 1846 that he then moves on to the House of Commons.

They even put this false front on him: Religions Opi-
We are referring to the Relief Bill. But, all in all, the text voted places Jews on the same level as the other English citizens. And as one should not don't let a new weapon rust, from the start
The following year, parliamentary elections having taken place (1847), Baron Lionel de Rothschild is seeking the votes of London citizens and becomes a member of Parliament.

How will he lend the obligatory service?
ment, which carries the words: On the true faith of A Christian? If he doesn't say those words, the f6-ôrme is displeased, and, if he pronounces them, It's Jehovah who's raging... Cruel alternative.
Hesitation, respectable scruples, small mines of dignity. But, very obligingly the Prime Minister Lord John Russell comes to Rothschild's distressed rescue, and one con-comes (the House of Commons agrees) that in the presence of a Jewish nose the malen- formula counteruse will be removed. This decision puts such joy in Israel that a m-medal in honor of Lord Russell.

Premature joy again, because not everything is finished. In 1848, the Chamber of Peers closed in His statement, once again, rejects the bill.

12

178 JEWISH ENGLAND

No Jews! And, in the discussion, the first
The minister and the Jews are forced to listen
some unpleasant truths.

The Bishop of Oxford, for example, does not hesitate not to say that: "the prime minister, »not being sure of his election, believed com-
"The trend, to ensure success, is to ally with"
» a firm where one of the partners find-
"One would see capital and the other honorability."

To which Lord Stanley adds this: "In fact, the "Jews in this country are not from this country;"
"It's a nation apart. They reside there temporarily-
"Rarely, are entitled to hospitality and to the "Protection, but they only have Jewish interests"
"and not British and Christian interests"
"Well." An opinion we have seen expressed-already, in 1753, by the Marquise de Pompadour; opinion which has asserted itself just at contact with the facts, at all times and in all country; opinion that reflects political truth, Human truth, the naked truth.

To make a long story short, it was only in 1851 that the Jews take definitive possession of the Promised land. Under the sole condition of being born in England and to undertake nothing against the Protestant religion, they are recognized-naked citizens in every sense of the word,

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 179

can sit in corporate assemblies tive, municipal and political. And if they de-come members of the Communes or of the House of Peers, a compliant law their allows one to swear an oath on the Old Testa-Some high-ranking positions, those, by example, of lord high chancellor, of lord keeper, lord lieutenant of the county, vice-king of a colony, etc., are still reserved to Christians. But a Jew can become a member-the cabinet and decide the fate of Albion.

Synagogues, schools, asylums, hospitals
Jews are surrounded by the same guarantees.
gales than establishments of other faiths.
Marriages celebrated in synagogues becomerespectably authentic, by means of requiring the formality of a double signature of the spouses on the civil register, which one brings to the religious ceremony. In short, Israel has the
With the wind at our backs, let the galley sail on!

All that termite work didn't get done.
all these successive advantages have not been obtained without furious opposition from the fi-Anglican deles, which, as one might say to believe, saw in every Jewish success the Beelzebub's black, crooked hand. But we let them shout and point to the sky

180 JEWISH ENGLAND

Signs preceding judgment. The Jews
they had on their side their tenacity of insects fo-
They had the money, – they also had,
Let's face it, the support of Catholics, their an-former companions in misfortune, by no means fa-seized an opportunity to in turn oppress the Protestant bullies.

Above all else, the Jews had the Queen's encouragement and complicity Victoria, a true shield for Israel. All at Throughout her reign, this sovereign left to see, in the case of the circumcised, a benevolence
a blessing lance and something like a Royal infatuation. Such a determined, such a lavish inclination.
in profitable concessions that some cher-later, choirs claimed to find the origin in the queen's own ancestry.
And, around 1901, we encounter in the magazine
English, Black and White, this irreverence history of a gracious queen, presented like a mixed Judeo-Anglo-Saxon bloodline. The Proof?... Black and White provides none.
very serious, limited to a few re-brands, namely: "That Queen Victoria was "the first sovereign of Jewish origin, that "His mother, the Duchess of Kent, was half "of Jewish origin through the Saalfeld family, an is-

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 181

"pure Raelite, and that the face of King Edward" » marks certain distinctive traits of the race
"Elected."

We will not take this as our own.
an adventurous assertion and, moreover, refuted.
"Saalfeld," as he noted in his issue of April 17, 1901, the Intermediary of Researchers and curious minds, "Saalfeld is not
"not a family name, but the name"
"of a princely fief, located in Thuringia, and which,
"Since the Middle Ages (1389), has always done » part of the possessions of the House of Wet-

"tin, in other words: of Saxony."

So, once again, Piraeus has been taken for a man, – and there was Victoria, clear of all ancestral contamination. Nothing remains no less than she was voluntarily or by Judaizing chance and – perhaps through religiosity – to be, through biblical contagion, through tenderness for the Sarahs, the Rebeccas, the Judiths, the Esther...–quite often willing to satisfy any Jewish request.

We knew all too well how to exploit these trends or of these weaknesses in his immediate circle.

This furious tenderness of a queen for the parasites of his people, – and which brings to mind a kind lady who adores her dog's fleas,

182 JEWISH ENGLAND

– this gentle philosemitic inclination does not corten-
"There was no point, at Victoria I's," of favors, of preferences, decorations, titles and lovely gifts for the cherished object. She gave her subjects themselves, through the care she took of to place in power, and to maintain there energeticallyment, the statesmen most suited to to lead England down the path of Israel.

We saw, in 1846, Lord John Russell to fight for the liberation of the Jews, and there compromise to the point of giving rise to a suspicion of venality.

But, of all the pro-Semitic Ministers of Queen Victoria, the most famous, the most useful and profitable, the sweetest to Jewish hearts was the seductive Lord Beaconsfield, or Disraeli.

That one was of Israelite-Spanish race.
His father, old Benjamin Disraeli, fixed first in Venice, then in England, had took care, from the moment he disembarked, to con-convert to Protestantism and receive the baptism.

The son was baptized in the same way, when he appeared to the world. But he remained Jewish nonetheless, and all the water in the Jordan could not have changed neither the form of his mind nor that of his nose, nor make his heart beat otherwise

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 183

than a Jewish heart. He also has Jewish features and all the moral traits of the Jew... but of the Jew
superior.

Disraeli is not the German Jew, of the Rothschild type, absorbed by the erection of a mountain of money, and sordid to the point in extreme luxury. Disraeli, who, moreover possesses the money through his wife, appears turn-described as a superior itch, which is ambition of power, the taste for ruling over a people and over all the peoples of the world. He possesses the rarest qualities of the writer and of the statesman; his weapons are a mind vast and comprehensive, a sen- imagination suelle and all oriental, a physical type strangely seductive, by some unknown means mysterious and distant charm. All this in-sings and entertains the good English audience from his
In his early books, Disraeli garnered a large following.
very warm arity, which wins over the readers mass. He becomes the "Dizzy" of the people of London, and Punch has no caressing jokes-things that are only for him.

When Benjamin Disraeli came to power,
We can say that the people of Israel go up there with him. Disraeli, the English minister, is keeping watch.
his heart the worship of his true nation, the

184 JEWISH ENGLAND

Jewish nation; and it is in Jew of great scope-figure that he will govern.

Isn't this Benjamin's core idea?
Disraeli, his guiding thought, which we findvons, escaped from her pen, at the turn of a
A page of a novel? He writes in Coningsby, and It's a character, Sidonia, who speaks... He
He therefore wrote these words: "We do not observe a » major intellectual movement in Europe where "The Jews should have a large share."

Thus, they merge and help each other big feelings and small skills, drysilences. A very special rhetoric has been created, whose first stammerings we recognize here-comments, – a sentimental and weak verbiage, ingenious at making the drape float on the voidfallacious laughter of abstract words, – repeating The recurring theme: "Humanity, Fraternity..." without these obsessive litanies,
no other reason nor other result than to place,
Everywhere, always, a Jew in the right place...

A Jew at the convenient ambush from where he will be able to rob others without danger Humans, his brothers!

Moreover, with what effortless grace,
Minister Disraeli looks so well!
the jump! He passes, general considerations-

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 185

als, humanitarian, fraternal, grandiloquent-quentes, to certain very particular contingenciesclimes, which no longer have anything in common with "The great intellectual movement in Europe!"
Through him, the sordid money-grubbers of Ghettos are cleaning themselves up. A Rothschild, a Gold-Smith slips into high society, sees to open doors that have long been closed off, and, if he's willing to pay the price, manages to do his makeup in great English lord. Every Rapa- Jew city, usury, speculation, underhanded encroachment, arrives, with the protection of the throne and the middle-Ministry, at its most malevolent. So much that in the end, if the English nationals are not not circumcised, at least they are noticeably diminished and reduced. John Bull found his master. From now on, if he remains, in appearance, owner of his island, it is by a last Israel's skill; but John Bull must dispute, sharing, and most often losing gentle generosity from the motherland. He has a brother, a false brother, a terrible bastard who,
Little by little, he is pushed out of the house.

Aiinsi, harshly persecuted during the Middle Ages, thrown out of England, exiled pen-for three centuries – then timidly reappeared

in the time of the Stuarts, – humbly active,

186 JEWISH ENGLAND

– still modest during the 18th century,
but walking in the shadows of the Masonic lodges–
niques, where everyone will lie in ambush – the Jews, under the reign of Victoria and by the protection Disraeli's, arrive at the most terrifying then– a power that never 8th is brought down upon a people.
Now they will drop the mask, they will reign.
will speculate freely, until those pre– sent where it seems that, from bite to bite– supe, their rat teeth have gnawed the Angle–
earth.

We want a patriot as its guarantor.
English, a sailor of good British stock second-in-command of the English squadron in Mediterranean, – and which, not long ago, threw a cry alarm bells were ringing. In an article in the York American– Can Review denounced "The Gangrene of the ar–
"gent." And it is on the anxious words of this sailor, we want to finish this chapter historical.

"...In the motherland," he said, "corruption the manipulation of money wreaks terrible havoc within the ranks of society. In the United States,
There are already warning signs of a storm.
analogous; on both sides of the Atlantic, the plutocracy gains power every day and
The Democrat risks being crushed under the heel

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION 187

of a tyrant a thousand times worse than a king covered of purple or that a cleric having at his
at the disposal of the wrath of temporal power.
"English society is being eaten away by change" money. From base to top, the tree is rotten. The most immoral pose in front of the public as being the most philanthropic, Beauty is enslaved by gold and intelligence guided by beauty, dance to the sounds of the violins.
lons that were granted by the plutocracy.
"...What will we say about the new order based on wealth, of this order of things which makes than those that should be the firmest protectors of the race, abandon everything and they themselves throw themselves at the feet of the golden god.

This is the main danger that threatens the race
British. The sea that feigns engulfment—
The shot is not formed from the furious waves of races
Latin, but it is mostly made up of verses rodents that this breed carries within its own heart; and of indolence, of immoral luxury—laughing, at the lack of moral courage of which these Parasites leave the germ behind.
danger that threatened Babylon, Carthage, Athens, Rome and many other na-powerful tions and flourishing races in the past now threatens the race to which

188 JEWISH ENGLAND

Anglo-Americans belong; but to this danger, it must be acknowledged that these oppose a force that ancient civilizations did not have never possessed to the same degree: the power of democracy. "England," wrote Hume, his historian, has nothing to fear as much than herself.

The voice of the people is the voice of God, says the Old proverb. And, in short, it's true.
because it is impossible for the masses to be able to—selfish or solely greedy for escapism vage. It is to the masses that the Anglo-Saxons will have to appeal to regenerate the State and save the race, but the races are already well started!

Unfortunately, we must fear that all peoples are on the fatal slope of ruin through excessive plutocracy, as well than England, even though to a lesser extent degree perhaps. Since France, it is necessary To put it simply, he abandoned his old policy of generosity, sentimentality and assistance to the weak, the world delivered to the Jews too broadly—
The emancipated no longer seem to be attracted to anything but towards money. War and the politics of interest—
They dominate us and make us more and more ferocious, blind and deaf to everything that does not touch point the social security fund or the individual. Who would still fight today? for an idea in our governed Europe through financial markets? Is there only a national Don Quixotism which conch shell since 1870? Everywhere they are awakening or appetites for fortune are growing; everywhere shopkeepers eager for investments are lurking about, businessmen ready to do anything stages; even between States for the benefit of some ingeniously orchestrated wars. Everywhere one sees only agents of industries set up in search of gold, like the pigs, which Wet speaks of, are at the de- covered with truffles, and there was a general trembling- less fear or pity in most capitals of the universe, upon the announcement of a battle paid for at the cost of a thousand lives. human beings, that the news that such and such gold mines during the South African war would have been seriously damaged by the virtuous Boers.

Let's look at the great men of that time, of the England ever greater. What were... They? Chamberlains, suppliers to the armies and a brazen speculator; of the Cecil Rhodes, whom one dared to call him the Napoleon of the Cape, and generals of unspeakable mediocrity, who made themselves upon returning home, pay for their services at the price of usurious endowments. Near and around them, It's a society of welcoming plutocrats. to the upstarts, triumphant Semites, such who were the Weernher and the Beit, who could make millions and millions of pounds sterling, and which, the war over, this war of which they were partly the authors, saw with a satisfied eye, without being worried in any way- lying and without having to pay for the damage, their capital doubled and their power more solid- She sat there, more sovereign than ever.

190 JEWISH ENGLAND

If society, justice, the happiness of humankind manity could perhaps one day future pro- fiter, by a roundabout and still uninvit-

within our judgment, of all these depravities which, until then, only served the interests of skilled, illustrious Gaudissarts of politics that and all the unscrupulous of the cosmopolitan world litism, that would be comforting for historians Philosophers of the future, nothing but corn, it is not necessary there is little hope that men will return to healthier and more real pleasures than those that gold provides them. Increasingly,
we are heading towards a legitimate, official act of banditry.
to state-sponsored brigandage, and the only salvation we

SERVITUDE AND EMANCIPATION IOI

could stem from the total depreciation of gold, when all the mines in the world, still at their initial operation, will provide together their maximum yield.

Have times really changed in An-England since Shakespeare wrote:
"Gold is the worst poison for the human soul-Maine. He commits more killings in this corrupt world than no drug veno-
"user."

The bright, yellow gold, hard and cold, deserves-Is there so much tribute, bloodshed, shame, and of iniquities? Alas! If the murder carried out for Possession of it makes an assassin, millions Murders create a hero. Numbers sanctify.
Crime and financiers operate on a large scale.
Only small children are liable to be housed central; the masters of the genre become the Napoleon of the Cape.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER V

Parallel study on the Jews at the end of the 18th century in France. – The Encyclo-pedians, Voltaire, the Prince de Ligne and The Israelites. – Curious observations
and necessary.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER V

PARALLEL STUDY BY THE JEWS AT THE END OF THE 18TH CENTURY IN FRANCE. – THE ENCYCLOPOLOGY PEDISTES, VOLTAIRE, THE PRINCE OF LINE AND
THE ISRAELITES. – CURIOUS OBSERVATIONS
AND NECESSARY.

Similarly, there would be a higher education study–
It is very interesting to write about the role of Jews at the time of the Reformation in England, Similarly, a work on the Israelites, before, during and after the French Revolution, offered would constitute a number of valuable chapters of a very wide variety of documentation likely to shed light on certain obscure points of this history general history which, according to Lamennais, is only – the successive martyrology of humanity.

We are not unaware of the fervor and the
With their resourcefulness, the children of Israel... stirred in France, in the second half of the 18th century, with a view to their emancipation– tion. Malesherbes, who had returned to the mini–

196 JEWISH ENGLAND

tère with M. de Lamoignon, had, on their repeated requests, formed a committee with the aim of gathering all the testimonies capable of fostering a solution to their convenience. He intended to make it acceptable a project for King Louis XVI which would have emanated Cipé, the eternally persecuted of the chosen people but the events that unfolded rapidly
Studies were interrupted between 1786 and 1789.

At that same time, the disciples of Moses were meeting a new defender in the person of the Count of Mirabeau who published a important work (1) on the famous Moses Mendelssohn, Lessing's close friend, who had just created a schism in Judaism

by delivering decisive blows to the Thalmud.
Count Mirabeau made an eloquent defense Jews a few years later in front
the Constituent Assembly with these colleagues Clermont-Tonnerre, Abbé Grégoire, Dupont, and Barnave.

With the new era of Human Rights,

(x) On Moses Mendelssohn, on political reform
the tic of the Jews and in particular on the Revolution attempted in their favor in 1753 in Great Britain
tagne, by the Count of Mirabeau, in London, in 1787, octavo, 130 pages.

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 197

The Israelites underwent a reform. The Revo-French solution, by placing the Jews under the protection of the common law for all, withdrawn Civil jurisdiction for the Talmudists. The principal members of several municipalities Jewish women abandoned with determination the Talmud and the rabbis and a new sect was formed which was designated by the name of Neumodisch. That was the one of modern Jews.
All their schools were reformed and one
I cannot express here the enormous scope of this Revolution in the world of Israel,

One should not believe, despite the beautiful principles of freedom and universal tolerance and despite the general taste for all projects of emancipation which were encountered by-everything about the end of the 18th century, that the spirit Jewish then "good press", as we Let's say today. The men of letters, the scholars, all those who found themselves at the head of the revolutionary movement were not mostly in favour of the Israelites.

Voltaire, J.-J. Rousseau, even Diderot were rather hostile to this Jewish spirit of which they had encountered so many diverse traits and unpleasant also through their work than during their lifetime. They appreciate-encompassed all the nuances of this spirit and everything by acknowledging the influence that they could have on the history of humanity: Moses, Jesus and Spinoza, they defied all of the circumcised and readily made ironic remarks to their subject.

This Jewish spirit, indeed, cannot we, to follow through the ages? Born with Celsus and the authors of the counter-gospels, huddled in the middle Having spent his age within the confines of the Ghetto, he emerged timidly-demented at first, then grew bolder,... march of front with the Reformation, underground serpent-...during the harsh reign of Louis XIV, finally bursts forth in the work of philosophers 18th-century French.

– Where then is Voltaire, Jean-Jacques, d'Alembert, Diderot, and the others, will they... sea, if not in the old Jewish arsenal where for centuries, obscurely, tirelessly-ly, the rabbis, the polemicists, the thinkers Were Israel stockpiling weapons of revenge?

– Believing they could destroy all of the past, and the past Jewish like the others, all those in the Encyclopaedia, the reasoners, the mockers, the Sensitive men fight and chirp with a great deal of activity. Then, when their catapulte broke down the walls when the breach was open in the tradition of the peoples, which Who is the first to enter the compound? The Jew who was there, who said nothing, who waited-said!

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 199

This adventure is all the more enjoyable to observe that the Encyclopedists, on the one hand to the other of their works, never fail an opportunity to criticize the Hebrew people, its history and its sacred books. That's because in By undermining the Bible, we cut the roots of Catholicism, and that it is necessary, above all, to be disagreeable to the Pope. So we undermine, we knock, we split pell-mell the Old and the New-Willow. While working, the logs-They sing, and, above the other voices Voltaire's falsetto is heard, very irreverent-spiteful and sardonic.

It seems that Voltaire never saw in the Bible, no more than in the psalms and the Prophets, something other than an inexhaustible mine jokes. Noah, Lot, Methuselah, David and Solomon, Adam himself, the persons—the most significant swimming strokes, finally, and of which the gravity seemed established in the centuries of centuries, all these ancestors and noble fathers, Voltaire takes ever-renewed pleasure in them to seize them and their ladies in the act of mischievous and revelry, and to embark them—quer in farcical scenes where Pulcinelle, Guignol and Gnafron could give them the reply. We know this old monkey game. Ferney, and one can indulge in the amusement—this is found on almost every page of the Tales, from the Philosophical Dictionary or the Correspondence. However, we want to, for to show to what extent Voltaire, and, consequently—early, in Voltaire's time, had taken the habit of passing the leg to the Jews, we wish—We should point out the pamphlet: A Christian Against six Jews, published in The Hague in 1777, and which seems—This is the absolute pinnacle of disrespect. It's of exegesis in grimaces, and one cannot miss—a quest for veneration with greater intensity. There there, under the guise of historical discussion or theological, a whole series of tongue twisters and of thumbing our noses, with priceless considerations on Aaron's Golden Calf, cast in twenty-four hours, while Mr. Pigalle This operation requires six months, on Prince Zamri and Princess Cosbi, massacres nubendi tempore in ipso, on potable gold, on the inclination of the ancient Hebrews for the goats and their wives for the rams, strange gallantries that would have taken place

200 JEWISH ENGLAND

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 201

place in the deserts of Pharan, of Sin, of Oreb, of Cadès Barné, where they were strong idle, on griffins and ixions, on the woman in Michas, suspected of idolatry, the prophet Ezekiel, scatophagous, and on the Nabi Ozée, skirt maker, on David, who danced without breeches in front of the arch; to whom Michol, his wife reportedly accused him of having, in dancing, "showed everything he was wearing to the serboasts, by getting completely naked like a "buffoon," and who, the fool! would have replied: Ceryours! And I will be more glorious in the eyes of handmaids! on Abraham, who, having a beautiful woman, passed her off as her sister in Egypt so that good might be done to him because of her, and who, by this clever artifice, obtained a great deal of oxen, donkeys, female donkeys, sheep, cats meaux, of servants and maids, etc., etc. In short, mockery and indecency, the Bible at Tabarin's, and everything you need for sewing To ridicule a sacred people! That's the pro-Voltaire's usual concession.

Already, around 1720, Voltaire liked to joke to speak about Jewry and his little epimuse Grammar has left its mark. In an epistle to Countess Fontaine, after having congratulated this lady for obtaining a tax on the Jews of Metz, the simian Arouet him uncheck these lines:

202 JEWISH ENGLAND

Farewell, despite our epilogues,
May you every year
Read me two or three novels.
And tax four synagogues.

However, like a spirit of this power- Science cannot indefinitely mask the truth. A day comes when Voltaire, leaving the tone of sarcasm, he wrote the following in his Dictionary- philosophical question: "Finally, you don't find- You will see in the Jews that they are an ignorant people, lazy and barbaric, who has long joined- the most unworthy time, avarice to the most despicable table superstition, and the most invincible hatred for all the peoples who tolerate them and the enrich. » This last line contains the thought that must be repeated indefinitely when

These are the Jews, the "Attention" that is required shouting at the people crazy enough to let themselves To Judaize. In "God and Men" (Chapter X) he calls the Jews "the most hateful and the most shameful of small nations." In In his Essays on Morals (chapter XLIT) he writes: "The Jewish nation dared to display an unrecognizable hatred-targetable against all nations; it is revolt against all his masters; always suspicious, always eager for the good of others, still barbaric, crawling in misfortune, insolent in prosperity. – In his Defense of My Uncle (Chapter VII) His Judge–The statement is brief: The Jews have never had anything invented. In his Essay on Customs, he explains, in several chapters, that always, to the school of other nations, the Jews did not never taught anything, not even their music, if While generally praised, he finds it intolerable: "Re–"Turn to Judea as soon as you can." he wrote, you will execute there with pleasure, in your detestable jargon, your detestable music (sixth letter of the Dictionary). Garlic–theirs, he further explains the singular sterility intellectual passion of the Jews without measure for money: "Money was always the object of their conduct at all times. He mocks them in Zadig (chapter X) where The Hebrew thanks God "for having given him "The way to deceive an Arab."

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 203

Finally, in his Letter to the Chevalier de Lisle, of December 15, 1773 (written towards the end of his life), "that these Foreskins of Israel call themselves of the tribe of Naphtali or Issachar, this is Although of little importance, they are nonetheless the

204 JEWISH ENGLAND

the greatest scoundrels who ever defiled the face of the globe.

No fanatical prelate ever went further far from being the prototype of free thinkers, the Voltaire was tolerant and liberal.

"However, they shouldn't be burned."
he often adds with his constant humor.
Let us repeat, however, to finish with Vol-to keep silent about it, whether joking or serious, and despite its invariably hostile attitude, the great des-demolition, in the end, to demolish at the pro-He did more for the Jews. He did more than Moses for to lead Israel to the Promised Land. Israel, which He knows it, and doesn't fail to take care of the rep-Voltaire's statement. And, if there is any justice in this world, we will see later the "Patriarch of Ferney" venerated in the synagogues gogues, and placed in the same category as the other patriarchs, imposing and respected prophetically speaking.

Jean-Jacques Rousseau could also to be placed in a neighboring niche, without considenunciation of what his Bohemia had little leftobservable. For he too, without knowing it, a good worker for the chosen people. He was so with a fierce and imprecating genius, better made than Voltaire's wit to seduce the imagination

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 205

Jewish. He will surely join Voltaire.
Abraham and Jacob.

Moreover, the entire gang of encyclopedists always seemed to ignore ia historical value and the formidable threat of Israel. She mocked him as she passed, in a jumbled fashion. with other cults. She prepared the ways without paying attention, carelessly, per-because she was in the misty vapors of ideology. It took a few more years for a serious, and truly comprehensive study of thought, come and shed some light on the odious actions of the circumcised.

We want to talk about this Memoir on the Jews, written by the Prince de Ligne on the eve of the Revolution, and which, prophetically, is already signaling the big financial barons European.

Despite the lively verve and biting irony which are the hallmark of the century, this work is serious, attentive, concerned with conclusions practices. The Prince de Ligne first poses the fundamental idea that we have seen expressed led by Madame de Pompadour, by Voltaire, and since by Lord Stanley, namely that /Israel is a nation: "The Dutch or Portuguese Israelite—"Gais is neither Dutch nor Portuguese; he is not"

206 JEWISH ENGLAND

"that Jew." It's astonishing that such an apparent truth... annuity needs to be formulated; and yet Very few minds have been able to glimpse it. In general, governments and writers, just like the common people, they do not consent to see in the Jew than a man of another religion, while he is in reality a man of another nation, of a scattered but united nation, and terminantly. This incredible blindness, which puts people at the mercy of an enemy— This, unsuspected, contributed to the power of Israel.

Therefore, considering the Jewish nation, such that it presents itself in Europe in the second mid-18th century, the Prince of Ligne first mentions "some well-educated Jews" » vés: bankers, merchants, sometimes "barons, almost nobles, established in the capitals" "Christian tales. There are several, including..." "We know the merit and honesty that have "Friends, to whom justice is done for..." "Beautiful acts of humanity."

Then, behind these elite circumcised men, a truly disturbing filth is spreading across Europe. — "Do we want to have their portraits?" "Always sweating from running around the place » public cabarets, to sell there; "almost all of them hunchbacked, with a red beard or

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 207

"Black and always filthy, with a livid complexion," "broken teeth, long and crooked nose, the re—" "fearful and uncertain gaze; nodding head," "Terrible frizzy hair; knees pi—" "red-sided and uncovered, long feet and

"Inside; sunken eyes, long chin,
"tapered, black stockings with holes and falling over their
"withered legs; yellow hat at Avi-" »gnon, yellow sleeve in Prague; bonnets of "grenadiers in Poland; elsewhere, caps of "hair under a large, old, holey felt hat and-" » beaten, or small pointed hat, the point in "The air... That's how ten are in Europe"
"millions of Hebrews."

However, the Prince de Ligne did not forget the the beauty of Jewish women, which he perfected-distinguished and which he appreciates as an amateur:
"It is, perhaps with a bit more harshness,
"and less of that charming, soft voluptuousness"
"Luse, the kind of beauty that Greek women possess; and"
"All these oriental figures are above"
"those of our sad and vulgar West,"
"Which is the least spicy thing about it."

But what advantage can be gained from the Jews? The prince of Ligne would like to use these black ants-to bind and derive a social benefit from them, – by where we see that he has retained some naiveté....

208 JEWISH ENGLAND

– "Except for those who make tricks with game bags,
"Which proves their skill, and horse dealers" » (to whom all religions allow to be "of scoundrels), one hardly ever sees, among them,
"There is no other profession than that of engraver. There is no
"That's just one step away from being jewellers, goldsmiths, » implementers, turners, manufacturers-
"Riers; they would prefer to make weapons"
"that they carry them, and build plows"
"That they drive them."

Because an attempt by Jewish warriors was done under the prince's eyes, but without success
ces. – "In 1787, Prince Potemkin wanted
"Turning them into Cossacks! Nothing amused me."
"more than seeing this beginning which is approaching"
"Peeled Israëlowski. We already had some
"Two squadrons: their pikes, terror" » that they had of their horses (while waiting-» dant that of the enemy) made them co-"Miques. It's on horseback that they have even more."
"They looked like monkeys."

Since it is impossible to animate them at sound of the trumpet, couldn't we...
Use it differently? Take advantage of the manifesto the tendency of Jews to hoard money, – the Fatten them... and then degrease them? – "If They were given the task of clearing the moors of

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 209

"Bordeaux, the heathers of Hungary, the "Steppes of the Russian Tartaries, they seek–"
"They would be settlers, workers; and Jews"
"The richest, helping the poor, benefit from it"
"would be such a good match that, in ten years, they would be in a position to pay good contributions "Buttons to the crown... They would do the calculation"
"that one must give half of one's fortune"
"to keep the other... The more we would provide "an opportunity for Jews to get rich, and the more we "could put pressure on them in the major be–
"Management of a state's finances."

This is essentially the shearing of the Jews, praticked in distant times by some wise sovereigns, and who have always found themselves easy and profitable development. – But the prince of Line written at a time when philosophy & makes great progress; and, as soon as philosophy–
Sophie enters the picture; it's no longer about mowing the lawn.
Jews, that is the point, but to be shorn by them.

Moreover, the Prince de Ligne, manifest-influenced by the ideas of the Encyclopedia, sensitive man, has no rest in his
that he had not brought happiness to 10 million of Hebrews whom he finds so ugly, and of their such pleasant women. In his imaginative zeal–

As a native, he sets out to give them back their homeland.
14 |

210 JEWISH ENGLAND

and positively launches Zionism.– "I want–
"Draïis that someone from those who are in "Türkiye was clever enough to take some of the » credit with the Great Lord, who would make their kingdom of Judea, where they

"They would surely drive better than before..."
"Jerusalem, a horrible little hole now,"
"would once again become a magnificent capital..."
"would rebuild Solomon's temple... We set-
"Would be the waters of the Kidron Valley..."
would find the Garden of Eden, and the four
"sources of the rivers, which would make it the most
"The most beautiful English garden in the world... The deserts"
"Would be cleared and inhabited..." – And there you have it.
the dreams of a perfectly well-adjusted man tense... But the Revolution will come to at that very moment, and the Jews will have something better to do.
to do nothing more than rebuild Solomon's temple: they will find, without leaving France, an Eden fruitful and flowering, and in a much more delicious way than the old one. When the prince adjures the Christian peoples to renounce horror centuries-old feelings they have for Jews, and concludes his Memoir with these words: "A "Anger of eighteen hundred years seems to me to have "lasted quite a while." – When did the
The prince speaks like this, believing he is demonstrating a

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 211

elegant gentleness, not at all dangerous for nations that control their own land.
But the time is very near, or the mosque-
The study will be called: Liberty, Equality, – the eighteen hundred years' anger will not take hold that was the end of it, but the Jews in turn exercised it.
will cement this anger, for ruin and deposition session of the peoples.

The French Revolution, looking at things taken as a whole, had no other objective and no other result than to legislate the declamation-Rousseau's tion. Men being born good and equal in rights, it became necessary, for the honor of principles, that the good Jews were invested with all the dignities of citizen.

"But you can see that the people of this breeds are endowed with a particular rapacity, and Once unmuzzled, they will devour everything...!
So be it! Let France perish rather than a "Social Contrary page!"

As early as 1789, a proposal was submitted to the National Assembly, with a view to giving to Jews and actors the rights which they enjoy all citizens know. But, a remnant of centuries-old horror still persisting, this proposition encountered obstacles. Discussions ensued;

212 JEWISH ENGLAND

Then, following Mirabeau's intervention, the project The emancipatory session was adjourned (session of December 24th). December 1789).

Moreover, it didn't last long, and The following year saw Israel crowned with flowers. On January 28, 1790, a decree emancipated the Portuguese, Spanish and Avignon Jews, with this additional kindness "that they enjoyed-will have the rights of active citizens when they will meet the conditions required by the decrees of the Assembly."

Then, on July 20th, came the abolition of all special taxes and fees imposed on Israelites... The manger wide open to foreign appetites, French heritage in-Sent to the sharks.

Finally, on September 27, 1790, emancipation complete list of French Jews, who are invested of all civil and political rights, and legal-disguised as Frenchmen. There are carnival-austere waltzes, and that one can pass for one the less joyful ones that were observed to-then the invention of human eloquence and of false nose.

In those early years of the Revolution, the French people were in the grip of such philosophical delusions, that it is not

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 213

It is impossible that, in good faith, he admitted the Jews as harmless and fraternal concitoys. However, here and there, people were suspicious again, and especially to the armies, there where pressing realities and visible dangers These things required caution. We did not want them to...

Let us take as proof that the following proclamation vante, enacted in year II, by a member of the National Convention that all the surrounding rhetoric should have,
However, a layer of philosemitism |

Jews!

Jews are forbidden to follow the army under penalty of dead.

The generals, the commanders of the posts of the army and the municipal oversight committee Mons will receive the complaints against the counter-coming, and will have them arrested on the spot, to be executed within twenty-four hours.

Mons, this 16th Messidor, year II of the Republic
French.

The People's Representative to the Northern Army, LAURENT (1).

As you can see, nothing beats a row of well-aimed cannons to put the es-

(1) We find this text, which is truly military, in
Mr. OUVRELEUX's work, The Jews of Belgium under the old regime.

214 JEWISH ENGLAND

caught in a state of equilibrium and showing things as they are that they are. But these were insights isolated, individual, and fleeting. Of a In general, pitifully abused, Jacques
A man in a carmagnole was celebrating Judas and pressed it civically to his heart!

Thus, thanks to the French Revolution, the Jews, in a few years, crossed the desert of hatreds that for so many centuries had separated from other men. They had nothing left all that remains is for them to officially profess their faith before the Christian faith, and it was Napoleon who...

charge.

On May 30, 1806, an imperial decree came crowning the work of 1789 and 1790, by the organization of the Israelite cult. In a pream- The Emperor (this superman) has a fairly long bubble. (of understanding!) notes that some Jews "do not practice any other profession than that of "Usury, that they accumulate interest" "more immoderate, and put a lot of "farmers of this country in a state of "Great distress." From which he concludes (this over- (man has the unforeseen genius!) that one must row- among the Jews "the sentiments of the mo- civic rally." The effect he intends to achieve through better organization of worship and

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 215

Israelite teaching. He orders an assembly- a group of prominent Jews to whom twelve questions Questions will be asked concerning the Hebrew faith. And the responses from this assembly having appeared plausible to the Council of State, the Emperor, To the joy of Israel, the meeting of the Great Sanhedrin, general assembly of the Jews. This is the official consecration of Jewish worship: Mïse was hailed by the prefects as equal to Jesus!

The Sanhedrin met on December 1, 1806. constitutes an organic regulation to which, the March 17, 1808, an imperial decree was issued giving force of law. Synagogues are being built, the consistories are established, and Jewish plunder takes on a governmental, imposing air and decent, who no longer abandoned her by the following.

From that time onwards, the Jews were put in a position to French society, and it's a co- pious, nourishing and juicy to which, without tar- They adapt millions of suckers. England will only be served to them when Fifty years later, but as early as 1808 one can to sit down at the table in "la doulce France", which per- puts you to wait in 8th place, inflating.

Moreover, all that's needed is to let them do their thing. Jews. As soon as a country is foolish enough to let them to get a foothold at his place, they soon took four feet, a thousand feet, and every foot. At beginning of this 20th century, in this England that we have just studied, and in this France, on which we cast a quick glance

At a glance, one could say that the natives
They have nothing left but the grimaces of independence, while the reality of power, complete,
absolute, oppressive, belongs to the Jews.

In any good political ambush or finance, wherever ri-Chess and domination, who revels in it? One Jewish. – And if he is not a Jew – Israel is not but a drop, yet one that corrupts a lake –
it's some Protestant official or ca-Catholic, perfectly domesticated and styled by the Jews; more often it's some Frenchman-Freemason, some freethinker who doesn't think than to serve. To serve, to serve the Jews dispensing Grace-givers!

Through public education, which they occupy
as one holds a bunker, the Jews themselves-They control the minds of the subjugated people, leaving nothing there to enter that sophisms, illusions, the useful prejudices. The schoolteacher, without him even realizing it Doubt, he is the rabbi's sexton.

Through the press, which is the heavy artillery

ISRAEL AND THE REVOLUTION 217

From Israel, the Jews make known and leave to ignore what is necessary, so that the people may tribu-
To be silent, proud of knowing how to read, continues to pay, to obey, to serve.

As a result, Israel, flush with cash immoderately exaggerated, assures its tyrant-A masked, exhausting, and deadly denial. If necessary teaching youth in a positive reality, no, in the hypocrisy of things, the geo-
School books should bear this inscription: France England: Jewish colonies.

Moreover, the study of other nations of Europe and America, which we have not Not here, the leisure to undertake leads us—would be to this conviction that the parasitic race
It encloses, embraces, compresses the entire world.
Everywhere we would see the same slow process, patient, silent, and ultimately victorious: the en-invasion by imperceptible infiltrations, the tenacity, exalted endurance in persecutions tions, gold mining pushed to the point of heroism, the attention to spread among the peoples (like the cuttlefish its ink), these ideas of humanitarian softening, so profitable to those who lie in wait, then, when the people en-Vahi is ready, quite bewildered, quite disarmed...
My hooked hand thrown in the right places,

218 JEWISH ENGLAND

leaving national life to its appearances, seizing up what benefits power and money.

This, as we can see, is Tar-'s policy tufe in Orgon's hand. She succeeded in Jews during the early acts of their history story, and everything suggests that it will end differently—as in Molière: through dispossession complete and the ruin of the overly stupid man faithful. He will leave his house, with his family in tears. Where, then, in the 20th century, can we find—would one say the Prince, enemy of fraud, who dispatch an exempt officer?

CHAPTER VI

Emancipated Israel. — Two dominant figures
Nantes: Baron Nathan Rothschild and Benjamin Disraeli Lord Beaconsfield.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER VI.

EMANCIPATED ISRAEL.— TWO DOMINANT FIGURES:
BARON NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND BENJAMIN

DisRAËLI, LORD BEACONSFIELD.

Although, in a previous chapter, we we may have accidentally spoken of two prominent Jewish figures of the 19th century in England and determine Nathan's financial role Rothschild and that of the illustrious Benjamin Disraeli, from Lord Beaconsfield, we estimate-mons that it is appropriate to make them bite back with more vigor and sharpness the silhouette of these portraits of originals who held such a prominent place predominant in this story, where, as As J. Darmesteter notes, one encounters at almost all the major changes in the thought of a Jewish action, be it brilliant and vi-possible, that is, deaf and latent.

A great deal has been written about the Rothschilds:
books, brochures, and articles followed one another in all countries about them, spreading with great enthusiasm

222 JEWISH ENGLAND

A slew of legends, far too many errors.

A series of studies published in the Deutsche Rundschau Berlin, during the year 1901, comes to destroy certain erroneous accounts and Replace the legends with accurate data.
golden, it's fair to say, which grew around the much-envied cradle of the kings of gold. Thanks to unknown or unpublished documents said, discovered in the various archives German or obligingly communicated by those concerned, Mr. Richard Ehrenberg is managed to reveal the real source historic millions that have done so much small.

Let us recall on this occasion that, with the exception from an English work by Reeves, which must be... to consult with a certain mistrust, and of a note written by Frédéric de Gentz (x) in 1826 and published in part in the Dictionary of Brockhaus's Conversation, the study of Mr. Ehrenberg is the first attempt to se-laughing to write the history of the greatest banking house of contemporary Europe.

Meyer-Amschel Rothschild was born in 1743 in

(x) Schriften von Friedrich von Gentz, fünfter Theil, p.113 et seq., ed. 1840.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 2923

Frankfurt am Main where his father was com-merchant. After an apprenticeship in the house-his Oppenheim, from Hanover, he founded in his hometown a currency exchange office, which the put in touch with Crown Prince Guil-Hesse-Cassel. General von Es-Torff, who had known the young Rothschild at Hanover, recommends it to Prince William;
As fate would have it, during his first visit to Hanau Castle, the general and the sons of the Landgraf played chess; a con-
The promise made by Rothschild won the match.
tied to the prince, who found pleasure in conversing with the young currency trader and used to enrich his medal collection.
This must have happened around 1775. Rothschild also negotiated bills of exchange on Lon-the things that Prince William had to draw against the supplies of German soldiers to the English government, at war with its American colonies. In 1789, four years after his accession to the throne of Cassel, Guil-Iaume received a service offer from Rothschild;
the information gathered about him was satisfactory: "He had a reputation as a an honest and hardworking man, to whom one can-was going to grant credit. » In 1794, the Land-

224 JEWISH ENGLAND

Graf had 150,000 pounds sterling to sell;
seven Frankfurt competitors were on the rank: Bethmann, Melzler, Heyder, Ruppell, Gontard, d'Orville and Rothschild; the four
The first ones were put in charge of the operation and this
It was only in 1795 that Rothschild was entrusted the negotiation of bills of exchange in London, which he paid counting; at that time, he was not yet that financial agent of the Landgraf, he became Oberhofagent in 1801.

The Landgraf was one of the richest capitals lists of his time; he used the product of the sale of his soldiers and the treaties on London in banking affairs; he lent to the foreign governments, as well as to private individuals, officers, civil servants, without neglecting the small clientele of the bakers and shoemakers. In 1784, an operation was made by him with the court of Denmark; but in order to determine the prince to agree to the loan, the Danes had to pay a commission of 2.5% to its consumers.

It was only from 1800 onwards that the relations between Guillaume and Meyer-Amschel Rothschild become intimate and followed; Rothschild received 160,000 on deposit from his protector

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 225

thalers at 4 1/2 pc; in 1807, 200,000 florins at same rate; he negotiates the purchase of 120,000 florins of bonds 4 1/2 pc of the Palatin, exchanged in 1802 for titles of Frankfurt's debt; in 1803, 499,000 florins city of Frankfurt; in 1804, 400,000 florins, Hesse-Darmstadt. Moreover, he didn't have the having a monopoly on these operations, he shared with other houses trust the Landgraf.

the first major case that Meyer-Amschel fit, always to invest Cas-'s capital salt, was with the Danish government, which after having used the Dutch market until 1780 Landais, had been using it for about twenty years born from Frankfurt bankers, notably from Bethmann's house. In 1804, it had proposed in Copenhagen to find some hundreds of thousands of thalers, which formed the balance of an uninvested loan, provided that it They were granted an 8% commission. That's then a more acceptable offer came in produced under the auspices of the Lawaetz company, d'Altona, on behalf of Rothschild, who He initially asked not to be named and who thus advanced successively 1,750,000 thalers. In 1806, during a loan of 1,300,000 tha-

lers, his name was indicated for the first time 15

226 JEWISH ENGLAND

times and the coupons were said to be payable at his cash register. Contrary to the previous use of to only make short-term loans, the emprunt, in accordance with the wishes of the Landgraf, who wanted to have a high and sustainable income, was concluded for a series of years; the interest stood out, at 6% for the first time. Bonds were also issued in denominations expressed in round figures and easily negotiable. It was around this time (October 1806) that the Elector of Hesse entrusted his fortune liquid to its Hofagent which, unlike the common opinion, did not retain it, but the he sent to London, where his son was Nathan Meyer. He recounted that he received 600,000 pounds by mail, which he administered to the satisfaction of the princely depositor; and this last-to deny as a sign of recognition, He later gave her wine and linen as gifts. Meyer Amschel died in 1812, after having, In 1810, the company name was changed to Meyer. Amschel and son: he left behind the reputation of a an upright man, extremely benevolent and a great connoisseur of antiques and medals and in works of art.

Of Meyer Amschel's five sons, it was the Third, Nathan Meyer, who held the most

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 227

great influence on the development of the home. Nathan went to England, to to do business there in goods (true-similarly in fabrics); he had brought with him 20,000 pounds sterling which he tripled in a few years. Exports from England was difficult from 1800 onwards, although the blockade con-The tenental would not have been decreed until 1806, but it was lucrative. After spending a few years in Manchester, Nathan settled in London, where he received the Hessian money in 1806 and replaced as court banker, the Van Notten house. He was 28 years old at the time. That same year, the East India Company made sell 800,000 pounds sterling on the market Hng in gold; Nathan bought all the metal, including he knew that the Duke of Wellington had a pressing need and of which he held a great quantity of bills of exchange, acquired at good market. The government brought in the buyer gold, and he declared that he needed these 800,000 pounds: once in possession, one does not I didn't know how to get it into Portugal. Nathan took care of it and later he said to Sir Thomas Burton, the famous anti-philanthropist slave owner, that it was the best deal that he had ever done. Around this time (1808-1810) Wellington, engaged in the war from Spain, where he had to pay for everything in cash with their hard cash, he was forced to procure some funds by selling Treasury bills-rie, negotiated at a loss. There was then a syndicat of money changers, established in Malta, in Espagne, in Sicily, which exploited the situation financially difficult. The most complicated part-the exploitation for Nathan Rothschild was the transfer of the species to Spain.

228 JEWISH ENGLAND

In 1812, after the assassination of Perceval, Vansittart became Chancellor of the Exchequer and had as his right-hand man in his financial operations Cières with the continent, a man of first rank order, the Commissioner General Hennis. The An-England, determined to pursue vigorously-The war against Napoleon was underway. to have allies: Austria, Russia and the Prussia, whose finances were in a state deplorable and which absolutely needed to provide assistance through subsidies.

From 1813 to 1815, England granted 15 million lions of subsidies, including 11 million to the three great powers, while the rest were divided among the small states. The prince d'Echingen received 1,615 pounds for his part. It was also necessary to provide for the salary and the de-

I think of the English troops who, in 1875, were still costing 1 million pounds a month. The transfer of these considerable sums... done in 1813, by sending silver ingots or in currency, or through negotiation of These two methods had serious drawbacks. Many things were done sending money on warships, this which did not rule out the danger of capture or shipwreck and you had to pay up to 8 percent as an insurance premium. Transportation by land was no less dangerous; it was in besides being difficult to obtain in England Cash in such large quantities. Exchange English suffered a sharp depreciation: 30p. c. In 1813, this was a major loss for the Treasury English or for subsidized states, which were also having difficulty selling large quantities quantities of effects on London and yet The needs were urgent. In 1813, Prussia was due to receive 630,000 pounds in subsidies, the Court Councillor Bartholdy, envoy from Berlin in Vienna, managed with great difficulty to sell 83,000 pounds; in Berlin they could only sell 25,000 pounds. Amid these difficulties Herris proposed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer a new plan to ensure the service of the Treasury on the continent. This plan had been developed by Nathan Rothschild; it was sent secretly, with instructions, in Holland and in Germany, to buy, wherever he You could find some, even in Paris, change French and to send it, by the channels more diverse, at the Welling- headquarters ton, who was able to pay everything in cash, while The allies were fighting against the most terrible financial embarrassment. Rothschild will maneuver if although the Stock Exchange did not notice these operations and £700,000 in drafts on Holland and Frankfurt could be achieved tés, without impacting the exchange rate.

230 JEWISH ENGLAND

A converted Israelite, Father Leman, we also learn that Nathan was the in- Wellington's friend.

"This friendship," he writes in his book on Napoleon I' and the Israelites, dated from the The Spanish Civil War. The British government-nique, very embarrassed to send regularly to the Duke of Wellington the funds which he needed, he had addressed the Rothschild house... This intermediary mission The diary earned the opulent house in eight years, 1,200,000 pounds sterling (30 million) and created close relations between the Duke of Wellington and Nathan Rothschild... »

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 231

In 1814, Rothschild's operations... rent an even greater extension; it first bought 200,000 pounds sterling of drafts on Paris, necessary to pay the travel expenses of Louis XVIII returning to its capital; negotiations then took place with the States from the continent to convince them of the interest that they would need to be given payment effects wounded on the continent by ceasing to fire on London; the English government is taking charge of-geait to ensure the method of payment; all operations were to be centralized at Paris and the intermediary, whose name was Not named, was Rothschild. Herris was sent to Paris, where the pound sterling was worth that 17.50 francs; he initially paid 100,000 pounds in or brought with him from London as well as 137,000 pounds in drafts on Frankfurt and Berlin, which Rothschild had bought, and the Similarly, considerable sums of money were spent on the France, Austria, to the English troops. Thanks to this new method, the exchange on London quickly rose back up to 21 francs. Rothschild's intervention remained secret. The English Treasury made savings of 120,000 pounds. The Rothschild name was not known to the crowd only during the Hundred Days. During this period, at a time of difficulty Herris paid to Prussian financiers.

232 JEWISH ENGLAND

200,000 pounds in Berlin and that was the first the time we came into contact with Rothschild. Salomon de Rothschild was tasked with bringing there gold; it still provides 150,000 pounds, but at conditions so unfavorable that the governor-English media had to decide to reimburse the loss suffered by Prussia in the operation. Herris, in two reports in 1816 and 1822, reported on how the payment subsidies were granted and he reveals that, since In 1814, 18 million pounds sterling were paid on the continent through of a single agent. The savings achieved exceeded 500,000 pounds. Herris states emphatically that it was solely thanks to Rothschild's intervention and his brothers on the continent that success was due. After their father's death in 1812, the five their sons had continued the business by establishing themselves health in the various major cities, this which had greatly facilitated the transfer English money. Anselm, the elder, remained in Frankfurt; the second, Salomon, resided first in Berlin, then permanently in Vienna; Nathan was in London; the fourth, Charles, was- James, aged twenty, was born in 1821 in Naples. he went to Paris where in 1817 he founded the mai- his of Rothschild brothers.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 233

Mr. Ehrenberg shows us after 1815 the Rothschild trying to compete with the major bankers Baring of London who had bought the old house in 1814 Hope and C'e from Amsterdam. We know how, In 1817, Baring and Hope contracted for the France takes out a loan of 350 million, medium- with a rate of 2.5%

But let's not pursue this study any further. Mr. Ehrenberg's, which would lead us too far astray Let's move on and return exclusively to our Nathan. from London.

"If money goes first, all roads will be blocked."
"open up," - Nathan Rothschild adopted this statement from one of the most cynical people- the great Will's schemes, and tried to demon-to find all the amoral accuracy.

In just a few years, in Manchester, thanks to his combined offices of pawnshop, agent currency exchange and brokerage in trade From cotton, he made approximately 200,000 pounds sterling. that is, 5 million francs which he brought as entry into the game for its operations on the market London.

234 JEWISH ENGLAND

Shortly afterwards, he doubled this initial capital by marrying Levi Barnett Cohen's daughter, and, at the death of his father, – which occurred in 1812, in Frankfurt, in that same Judengasse where He had grown up – he partnered with five of his brothers and founded this house in London powerful, this great savings collector public which played a significant pneumatic role derable in most major operations financial ratio of time.

Nathan Rothschild had secured the con- during the course of all his wealthy coreligionists, born-merchants, bankers, stockbrokers who, since the at the end of the 18th century, had considered settling in most of the English possessions, and mainly in the West Indies, in Leeward Islands, Bahama and Jamaica. These Jews were almost all refugees from Spanish possessions, hence the persecutions and the anti-Semitic revolts had expelled them ses. With their contribution and thanks also to the Levantine and Italian Yuddis, Rothschild of London could aspire to this royalty of the gold he wanted to spread across the universe in an immoderate dream of financial imperialism, which was not very different from that which he personified long before the war of Transvaal, that bald, disruptor of Africa southern which is named Chamberlain.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 235

"The price of money is the pulse of a "State," wrote Voltaire. – Rothschild of London got along wonderfully well at piercing see, to count exactly the pulsations of the credit of the kingdoms and to operate the transfusion gold in failed states. The history of considerable sums that he advanced in 1813 to the English government, and that of its loans to various other countries would be interesting to tell. He bought the bills or bonds at a very low price. Wellington's war (Spanish War), that the government could not settle, and, after the success of the campaign, realized to a large profit. This operation attracted attention to him the attention of the government, which employed him as an intermediary in its loans in Europe, aided in this by his brother Francis. He became the treasurer of nations in the distress, the skilled general, my aunt inter-mediation to be found. His important commissions aunts excessively favored the increase—his fortune.

Moreover, if he did not invent stock trading that

236 JEWISH ENGLAND

Law's system made him so harshly known to France, he was in England, the great—Master of stock market maneuvers. He knew how to devise superiorly and employ, with the subtle—necessary, the least delicate maneuvers cates to produce unexpected variations in the price of public effects and turn thus profiting from the financial debacles which The result was that he revealed himself as the great Stock Exchange raider and reigned by the terror on all economic markets of world. – It was Rothschild of London who created the brigandage of capitalism, legally organized with the complicity of the government ments, ministers, and hypocritical civilization—pseudo-humanitarian tion which, for sixty years, strips the countries of a happy golden age—savage men than businessmen strive to introduce the refinements of injustice—ICT and dishonesty of declared races superior.

The organization of the information office
The aspects of this Rothschild were, at the beginning of the Pre—

My Empire, extraordinarily well understood.

Never a great leader of truckers or counter-Bandiers could not imagine a more ingenious service, before the era of railways and television

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 237

phoues. — He had it set up for his use
In particular, we have already mentioned it more Up above, countless homing pigeons that brought news from all countries from Europe and carried orders and notices for foreign agents. For added security, he maintained properties in Dover, Hernebay, and Hastings and Folkestone, a veritable flotilla of bafishermen's tents that crossed in the Sleeve to make it hold even before governments were notified, the new news of the most recent events on the continent. He himself was putting himself on the line and frequently left unexpectedly, and incognito, to come and observe in France or in Germany, what was said there, what was plotted there, or what was happening there It happened. And so, on June 18, 1815, Nathan Rothschild left Brussels, at the pre-first hour, to witness the peripheries from afar stories of the Battle of Waterloo (1).

(x) According to a letter from Mr. Ch. Le S..., former mayor of L..., who requests that his name not be Quote: He's a Rothschild agent, a certain Schmitt who made the journey. He had mingled with Wel-'s staff lington, and when the latter, at the appearance of the Prussianshis own, he cried, raising his hat: "Now the
"The day is ours, let's go!" Schmitt set off abruptly-Especially for London. The rest is correct. Schmitt

238 JEWISH ENGLAND

As soon as he was certain of the terrible defeat which bringing an end to the Napoleonic epic, he parwas heading for Ostend at full speed, there was chartering a sailboat was crossing the Channel despite from a terrible storm, landed in the Sussex county, at Bexhill, procured there, in
In the dead of night, a farmer's car, at a price of gold, led him to London in the morning June 20th. – Pale, nervous, a little emotional like a man who is about to play a decisive shotsif, he appeared as usual at the Stock-Exchange. He informed his fellow believers of this that he expected from them, with the help of these moves fortifying, eager, mysterious elements of this lan-secret pledge of the stockbrokers, which he spoke of so judiciously Balzac, and which form in Jewishness as so many signs of a Freemasonry of passions.

The rumor of a crushing victory for the Emperor-the rumor spread immediately; the values tom-they eagerly flutter from the hands of the stockbrokers as in the rout the rifles or the bags received a bonus of 1 million for this service, and left the Rothschild house some time later to live off his earnings in Genoa. That's where the

The father of our correspondent from L... knew him and received him
From his own mouth, the account of this operation.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 239

leave the hands of the soldiers. Rothschild and his accomplices only had to bend down to to reap all these shortcomings. The next day-hand, when the triumph of Wel- was proclaimed In London, he was reselling at the highest price all this paper depreciated the day before, real-sant, for its part, more than 1 million pounds sterling, that is to say 25 to 28 million francs, perhaps much more.

The story of this powerful Minotaur of the finance is known; the flowers that were lavished in the biography of the first Rothschild, Austrian baron, have obviously been too dissimi-mule the shameful galleries, the dungeons and pitfalls of this adventurous life full of corpses and ruins. It would be necessary, as The Adventures of Cartouche, several volumes quarto to expose all the lovely misdeeds and the the iniquities of this highway financier. The ruin of his colleague Goldsmith, his attempts-how many other cases against Lloyds Bank acts of legalized villainy, alongside traits of artificial grandeur and ostentatious generosity would be useful to readers who hate YouTube to teach them about the beginnings true evidence of Jewish omnipotence in the An-contemporary England.

240 JEWISH ENGLAND

What's strange is that Rothschild, from London, could have played, openly, a role so prodigious in an era when the Jew was still relatively unknown as a citizen of the island British kingdom. However, it was named-me consul in 1820; admitted as a baron in 1822, but, although he had restored the unicorn English, many great lords they liked to treat him like a Jew, and we willtale that Lord Melbourne was offering himself the sweet pleasure in making people wait for hours and hours this king of finance in his anti-br, in the midst of the little beggars without importance.

The services rendered by Rothschild were undoubtedly had some weight in the decision which was decided in the middle of the century to grant emancipation to all Israelites established in England. Thanks to O'Connor's eloquence, of Lord Brougham and Wellington, the Catholics liques enjoyed their complete freedom since 1820. By 1851, all English Jews had as citizens. They were admitted to the elect-municipal and corporate bodies
the City with the commitment to never do anything attempt against the Anglican Church. Their schools, synagogues, almshouses and hospitals

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAËLI: 241

were recognized by the government at same title as similar establishments of other religions.

Their marriages in the synagogues became-
They were born legal. They could aspire to be members of Parliament, in the second division sion, either for the chamber of commerce, or for that of the Lords, provided that the candidate swore an oath on the Old Testament.

recognized their rights to the management of affairs public as cabinet members but they were refused possession of certain offices, for example, those of Grand Lord of the Chancery, Lord Keeper or Lord Commissioner, and also those of lieutenant county or viceroy of the colonies.

Not all of these concessions were made to the Israelites without considerable opposition on the part of the religious puritans. The Catholics, however, favoured emancipation Jewish passion for all their efforts and the cause triumphed thanks to the support of the illustrious lord John Russell, one of the sons of the wealthy Duke of Bedford, representative of Hunting County—gift and who was the most intrepid defender of Freedom of religion in England.

The Jews, having been emancipated, still had to 16

242 JEWISH ENGLAND

overcoming very rigid social prejudices and inveterate throughout the English aristocracy registered in the Peerage, which is the guestbook of the nobility from across the Channel. — Who patronizes them—would, these liberated Jews, in this world so disdainful and so closed to everything that is not Introduced by a high and powerful lord? — Who would open the doors to the High—Life to these elegant people of the ghetti, for so long—eager to take their place in the receptions aristocratic residences and drawing rooms of the Queen? It was Lord Beaconsfield who presented himself to fill this office. Disraeli He was the introducer of Israel; he had on the situation social policy of Jews in England a decision—sive influence.

Of Hebrew origin, grandson of merchants He was Venetian, descended from those Jewish families. that the Inquisition had driven out of Spain and who had taken refuge in the great republic the republic of the Doges, so hospitable to all outlaws. His father, Isaac Disraeli, a literary— a most distinguished author, who lived part of his life in Buckinghamshire, knowing how hard it had been for him to make a name for himself because of his condemned religion, he wanted to avoid—to spare his Benjamin such setbacks. He therefore converts by simple calculation being ground—a freethinker, a disciple of J.-J. Rous—bucket and he had his son baptized and converted to Protestantism in 1817, thirteen years after its birth, but he had been circumcised six days ago after his birth.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 243

Lord Beaconsfield never forgot, by the then, his former coreligionists, and their ten—said the hand on every occasion. — Physics—Legally and morally, Benjamin Disraeli con—always served the characteristics of his race; his sensual and oriental imagination is revealed in all his works which indicate more than ease and gifts of assimilation rather than genius. Having come to power, when he was this popular Dizzy, whom Punch caricatured every single one—Maine, he opened the doors of the most closed to the Rothschilds, the Goldsmiths, the Jessel, to Solomon, and prepared, in some In a way, the advent of Jewish preponderance contemporary, just as one can say that Marlow's Jew of Malta prepared the way for the coming from Shakespeare's powerful Shylock.

Mr. Maurice Muret, in an excellent study on Lord Beaconsfield (1) seized at sea—

(x) MAURICE MURRET, The Jewish Spirit, An Essay in Psychology ethnic gic.— Paris, Perrin et Ci, x vol. in-8o, 1907.

244 JEWISH ENGLAND

monitors character, dominant tastes and the This statesman's policy: "His histo—"Even the most favorable ones," he wrote. to his cause, have clearly marked, the character Disraeli's foreignness and his isolation in the series of great English politicians of our time: If he had inherited, Froude observes, a of English character, he could have devoted himself more to...

fully addressing major national issues.

"He would have inscribed his name forever among the English luminaries. But he was not English that by adoption and he never identified himself as—completely with the country he governed. [I] was He was Jewish, and his great pride was to rule. although he was Hebrew, a great Christian nation her. Her career is the result of circumstance—special stances and of a special character. It is unique in its kind in political history English. Even more categorical, the language Mr. de Haye's idea with Disraeli Jewish woman who came to power and as long as he had the authority the persecuted and banished race could to say that she was running the state.

Lord Beaconsfield believes in everything and everywhere. the superiority of Israel. We know its theo—laughed at by the triumphant purity of this race ethnic: "Semitism and religion," he added.

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 245

Mr. Maurice Muret, mean the same to him thing. Christianity is the flower of the semi—ism. The Jewish religion is an im—trunk mense who threw two main branches: the Mosaic law and Christianity. This theory Lord Beaconsfield's situation can be explained by the circumstances particular tion in which he happened to be at the twice circumcised and converted to Protestantism. Its system aims to punish ren—against in his person these two sacraments heterogeneous and successive.

In a famous speech, tending towards admission the representation of Jews within the British Parliament, He once expounded his proud doctrine. o8sa is demanding this important reform, no not under the principles of general tolerance rarely professed today, but well in because of the services rendered to humanity by the Jewish race. The English statesman commits—kept the same sophism as the German poet Henri Heine. He concluded that the primitive identity—The relationship between Judaism and Christianity: "The Christianity, he said disdainfully, is the ju—Daism for the use of the masses, but it is "Judaism again," or: "Christianity"

"It is Judaism completed or it is nothing."
In other words: Christianity is a ju-

246 JEWISH ENGLAND

Daism appropriate to the inferiority of the Gentiles. Undoubtedly, there is no incompatibility regarding the key points between Jewish ethics and ethi-than Christian, Mr. Muret remarks. A Jew and a Christian, by virtue of strict morality emanating from their respective religions, would act in the same way in the greatest number cases. But we cannot claim that the Christ changed absolutely nothing in the teaching The teachings of the prophets. Would his doctrine have stirred up such anger among the Jewish people if it had been in perfect conformity with the spirit of this nation? It is because its This humble statement offended Jewish pride, that is because of his principles of self-denial and renunciation thwarted the masked instincts-rich and pleasure-seekers of Israel that this people persecuted with such ferocity.

One could not discover at Lord Beaconsfield the famous Jewish cosmopolitanism that one meeting at so many other of his coreligionnaires, but in him we find this "stranger-ger without the slightest drop of blood in the veins" that Gladstone once denounced, his an uncompromising opponent. Disraeli was striving to conceal this foreign flaw that he felt in itself and that he suspected could be an obstacle

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 247

has

key to his unbridled ambition. That's what pushed people to be popular and to attract attention the votes of the lower classes: "I'm coming out of the of the people, he once declared to his voters. by Hugh Wycombe, but if I don't have in the veins nor the blood of a Plantagenet nor that of a Tudor, it is all the more certain that I desire to put the happiness of the greatest number at above the satisfaction of a few. » We

He recognizes his subtle and cunning mind there.

No one knew better than he how to adapt to circumstances and did not possess as well All the tricks of social climbing, though. He first declared himself, following the example of his father Isaac, a fervent follower of the ideas of the encyclopedists and an admirer of men and principles of the French Revolution. In Fancred, in Sibyl, in Lothair, in Coningsby, it is easy to discover clearly the influence of 18th century literature in France, but perhaps we feel it more strongly here. again, this influence, in many of its stories in the style of Voltaire that he wrote in his youth.

Relying on the people, Disraeli felt the need for a solid foundation in this society Londoner without whom it is impossible to succeed. He had to ensure his success. its literary merit, the brilliance of its renown that his successive works had given him, But he wanted better. He pretended to become the Swell, the Smart gentleman, and as he there was nothing in him that betrayed the pure British He deserves some credit for achieving it. "dressed," said Mr. Maurice Muret, "his radical ideas" laden with sumptuous garments and, thus adorned, introduced them into London society where They were welcomed warmly. Benjamin Disraeli practiced in his youth a learned dandyism. But his dandyism was of a very special nature. Towards this same at the time the austere Brummel was drafting the Code worldly, the man of taste. We know of some General provisions: "Avoid their dazzling appearance and especially what can attract attention, new objects, exaggerated shapes rees. » How much the violent dandyism of the young Disraeli: Spanish-Italian-English, resembled Little to this cold correction! From its origin Jewish, from the sojourn of her ancestors in the East first, then in Spain and Venice, he remained to Benjamin Disraeli the love of fabrics cha- toys, trinkets and baubles.

248 JEWISH ENGLAND

Nature had given him a charming vi-

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 249

wise, so that he triumphantly supported these ridiculous rags. But did his traits predisposed ones in his favor so that one would He was well received despite his attire. Grotesque! Perfumed with all the aromatics of Arabia, her left cheek half-veiled by wild strands of black hair, the jacket of velvet with silk fringe, open over a vest beaming, he went brandishing his cane at gold tassels and chiseled silver pommels. Gold chains crisscrossed his shoulders. trine, encircling his neck, connecting his pockets. Passersby, admiring or mocking, returning, following with his eyes Benjamin Disraeli, the celebrated young author, the feared mocker, the ambitious one from whom much was expected. Is this not the true portrait of the Israeli-triumphant elite, of the foreigner who wants impose by an appearance which he cannot to feel the caricatured side and the expression rastaquouère. But this Semite with oriental tendencies-tales was well aware that everything is accepted at London, even the ridiculousness of the setting, provided that we manage to impose this ridiculousness and to He knew how to consecrate it with time. He knew the psychology of English social snobbery and all the weaknesses of this famous company a rigid person who closes their eyes so deeply on the faults of those she adopts. Disraeli He had the knack for it, he got himself accepted despite his extravagant costumes, which he tempered by the rest.

250 JEWISH ENGLAND

When, having been consecrated as a great statesman, Laden with honors and worldwide fame, he presided over the destiny of this English nation which was only his chosen homeland, his field of vain business dealings and operations, he had no longer kept these famous letters of credit that he owed to his features of a young adventurer the-Vantin. His face had steadily hardened and harshly betrayed its semi-tick. Everything about him betrayed typical Hebrew from medieval times, the forehead, the cut of the beard, facial coloring, and especially the nose, that nose with its hairy nostrils that gave him the ap-parentage of an old rabbi from Alsace in love with snuff and which would carry yellow rupees nâtres at the corners of the olfactory apparatus.

Lord Beaconsfield had many excellent... slow biographers. Perhaps we haven't sufstudied extensively as a Jew, as well in his works of genuine literary merit, that in his political actions and speeches? His
The political ideal was a Jewish ideal, based on the cult of public opinion. Didn't he dream of the abolition of Parliament, with the plan of a a unique link between the sovereign and the people, and this intermediary power had at its

NATHAN ROTHSCHILD AND DISRAELI 251

A sentiment clearly inspired by concessions modern Jewish women.

The time is coming when Disraeli's work can be conscientiously presented and judged as a whole and based on its results.
One needs the necessary perspective to embrace the consequences of a political impulse and see where this impulse stopped and the benefits otherwise the ravages of its momentum, and of its 6vo-evolution through the years. The Israelites mounted-already with what speed and what productivity
They took advantage of the game with great flexibility.
open to climb to all the bri- capitols tannic. You only have to look at what they have made of this country that Shakespeare so magnificently praised Superbly. Disraeli was the Saint Peter who opened the gates of this Paradise to them large island where they have grown far too much and multiplied. "You never know how you will perish, wrote Balzac; the Why is the
the historian's task.

Disraeli will have his moment in the court of history.
toire.

CHAPTER VII

The Gold War.
Jewish Politics and Southern Africa.
Financiers in the Transvaal.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER VII

THE GOLD WAR. — JEWISH POLICY
AND SOUTHERN AFRICA. — THE FINANCIERS TO THE TRANSVAAL.

Jews have always had a particular fondness for and practiced public life. Everywhere, at every At one of the hours of their history, they were free—appreciated and criticized the actions of those that they had as priests, as judges or as administrators of their common interests. While being subject to the doctors of the law that they accepted as advisors and for guides, they never failed to dis—to cut the questions that relate to well-being or to the future of their race in assemblies popular where the smallest worker, shoemaker or The tailor has the same right to be heard. and the same chance of seeing his motion adopted that the high baron of finance or the sacrifice—A descendant of the Cohen family. In the Ghettos of the Middle Ages, in the villages of Poland

256 JEWISH ENGLAND

or of Bohemia, as in the ancient cities clays where they are found in sufficient numbers, Everywhere they are organizing themselves into a kind of demo—hierarchical cracy, whose members are mon—thirty always zealous for the public good.

It is not surprising that as the social and political barriers were lowered before them, they were concerned to wear this same zeal in the wider sphere which was open and that little by little, in England in particular, they were able to succeed in establishing themselves as the most active makers of the various local, national, imperial or royal.

We see very early Jewish people... to war and receive municipal functions in many cities in the United Kingdom. In London, Lord Mayors of Jewish descent succeeded one another for a few years at the end of the 19th century almost without interruption. The elections at Parliaments were, in certain constituencies—electoral tions, towards the end of Victoria, such as those of Southwark, Marylebone, from Chelsea, from Leeds, entirely in the hands of the Jews. The candidates, children of Israel, then numbered 21, including 12 radicals and 9 nominists. The Honourable Sir

THE GOLD WAR 257

Samuel Montagu, the candidate for the canton central Leeds, supported by its influence 5 fellow members of his family: 3 nephews and Two brothers-in-law, candidates against him. Since then his political fortune and his functions of Under-Secretary of State for India.

It is necessary to remind everyone that the Israelites are hardiment entered the Upper House with Benjamin Disraeli, Lord Beaconsfield, and that they have effectively governed England on many occasions resumed, without ceasing, even when the Whigs were taking power, to gain the ear of the Queen Victoria, who certainly did not favor them. It will probably be said that Lord Beaconsfield was Christian. Take a Hottentot and baptize him, Will he be any less black as a result?

As for the excellent Queen Victoria, We have often told anecdotes that... would prove his aversion to enrichment chis Israelites. It is no less true, without to emphasize the case of Lord Beaconsfield, that, from 1837, the year of his accession to the throne, the The Jewish Moses Montefiore was, through her, created a knight to link. But let's hear from the Archives. Israelites: "In 1840, when Sir Moses..."

travels to Constantinople and Cairo to plead his case
the cause of the unfortunate victims of the accusation

17

258 JEWISH ENGLAND

ritual ceremony of Damascus, he is received in audience by the Queen, a precious encouragement for our valiant coreligionist in the delicate mission he undertook.

Later she created baronets, Messrs. Isaac-Lyon Goldsmid and Moses Montefiore.

"The visits that the sovereign deigned to make to them" to render, as well as the one she made in 1890 to castle of Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, attest to how foreign the Queen was to the prejudices that still exist today
So many sovereigns... and simple bourgeois.
Alongside these expressions of partial goodwill-private, there were public ones that she te-moigna to the Israelites.

"Three Israelites were also created"
Lords: MM. Nathaniel Mayer de Rothschild, Henry of Worms and Sydey Stern. »

Today there are more than twelve families
Jewish women listed in the Book of Peerage and Baronetag'e english, vigorous names, which gave birth to too many branches
so that we can attempt to list them here.
The Jews themselves, who have no astonishment Easy, they can't believe it. In The Jewish Chronicle, it was noted some time ago, in a tone
With proud astonishment, this unique fact-

THE GOLD WAR 259

than here in the history of England: the proclamation of King Edward VII to the Private Council, which was signed by three Jews: Lord Pirbright, Sir George Faudel-Phillips and Sir Marcus Sa-Muel, baronet since 1903.

Let us note in passing that Lord Pirbright

Pela, whose original name was Henry of Worms, and that he married the eldest daughter of Baron von Tedesco, from Vienna; that George Faudel-Philips, former Lord Mayor of London, like the was his father, took as his wife the daughter of Lord Pirbright, and that Marcus Samuel, ex-alderman of the City, ex-sheriff and ex-Justice of Peace, for Kant County, married Fanny-Elisabeth, daughter of another Jew, named Benjamin-Binjamin. That's it, isn't it true? good examples of assimilation.

It is widely believed that political positions are more modest, but easily accessible and, by their number and their nature, of no less influence penetrating and effective, must be systematic-meticulously sought after and occupied by the Jews. The consulates, which allow them to inter-to profitably maintain their international relations relationships with parents and fellow believers that they meet everywhere and make it easier for one From one country to another, stock market speculations and trade that enriches them is extreme-coveted. Frankfurt, Vienna, Berlin, Hamburg, Dresden, to name just a few major commercial cities of Central Europe trale, have Jewish British consuls. "As long as it remains so," melancholy admits-how the author of "The Modern Jew", the English trade will hardly benefit. And he adds: But if we wanted to change this state of things, the entire Jewish community would cry out at the per-security.

260 JEWISH ENGLAND

The same writer, Mr. Arnold White, former agent of Baron de Hirsch, in Poland and in Russia, for the Jewish colonization of the territory-The cultivable land of Argentina is certainly not animated by no ill will towards Israel: but he is constrained by the evidence of the truth to recognize that the number of Jews in the The House of Commons is becoming quite out of proportion to the number of their coreligionists in the country, and he must constater: "The growing power of the race Jewish, her separation from the nations in the middle of which she lives, and the waning patience peoples among whom it established itself.

"Intellectual superiority, subtlety"
Eastern and pain education give

THE GOLD WAR 261

to the Jews a complex and mysterious power laughing, denied to any other living race," Arnold White added,

"They can be found in all nations," but, like the Gulf Stream, they remain at part of the mass of the ocean that surrounds them.

"Yet they reflect, like the chameleon, the texture and color of the rock on which they rest.

"Attacked from the outside, the Jewish community presents
a single front against the enemy.

"They are the most interesting people of the world: stronger than the Pharaohs, Nebuchadnezzar-Donosor, Rome, feudalism, the Romanovs, the Kaiser, the French Third Republic.

They will do anything to establish and increase their influence. Thus, an association founded in July 1871, under purely apparent philanthropic, takes on a political dimension completely unexpected when you know that this Anglo-Jewish Association, whose stated goal is the protection of persecuted Jews and the education of the cation of Jewish children in the East, not seuit subsidizes Jewish schools in Asia attended by more than 10,000 children, but is affiliated with the Alliance Israélite Universelle, and that she maintains a diplomatic correspondence

262 JEWISH ENGLAND

matic with foreign governments, in conjunction with the London Committee of the Deputies of the British Jews, which dates from 1860, and has the special task of monitoring the English legislation in what may be of interest
the Jews.

It is enough to make a few people understand examples detailing the implementation of Jewish forces in Great Britain. Ana- to analyze the mechanisms, to describe the means of action, Listing the results would make this one The initial chapter is a large volume. Let's note only in England as in France Jews hold all the positions forward. these, which ultimately lead to directing public opinion public... and to purge the Stock Exchange of the masses Popular, Press, Theatre, Concerts and Music- Halls, places of entertainment of all kinds, those who are not immoral and the others, pawnshops, banks, Stock Exchange, etc.

With this dual leverage, the Press and Money, The Jewish community can do anything. It knows this perfectly well. ment for having experienced it, and, in its moments of audacity or surrender, she... boasts. Also, it's about having a very clear vision of the reality than to say, as well as the fact

THE GOLD WAR 263

Mr. Arnold White: "The Jewish community in England, although not numerically strong Medicinally, dominates such a large part of the financial and journalistic forces of the country that any Minister who would undertake to fight against this power would immediately be infallible- Completely thrown off balance.

T1, it would require a popular movement, that indignation, disgust and extreme feeling The hardships suffered will perhaps provoke to be someday, but of which we are still very far.

In short, the destiny of England, no less than that of other states, is among the hands of the big Jewish financiers. We have I have already had occasion to point out that, Since the fall of the Baring house, no Christian credit house can no longer- corn to counterbalance them. That is to say that all the politics of the civilized world are conducted by them. It would be interesting to study by the menu the motives that make them act, and com-

They never lose sight of what can to bring in their coffers this gold, the possession of which sion ensures all "possibilities", such as say the English, adding a nuance of color their practical minds grasped the meaning of these words.

264 JEWISH ENGLAND

The exclusive adoption of the gold standard, the ruin of the Spanish colonies, the disorganization social and military of France, the preparatory classes factors contributing to the disintegration of the Austrian Empire, the progress of Prussian Germany, the momentum furious at the imperialism that swept away the States-United States and England (we are not talking about the speculation, strangulation, hoarding, unions and trusts of all kinds, including strikes, individual ruins, and misery (public are the most visible effects) nothing of all of this which is not due to finance international, that is to say, Jews.

Their policy is profound and long-term
They never distance themselves from their brothers of race and religion; it is to these that their works will go almost exclusively on charitable ones which are, after all, considerable and numerous. But they do not hesitate to sacrificeproud of the well-being of these wretched brothers, to delaying their release indefinitely, to their refuse to take the rank to which they are entitled in the "world's first aristocracy", to better pursue distant views on which only the initiate can form something else nothing but conjecture. It has been brought to light, and we had the opportunity to point this out to

THE GOLD WAR 265

In the course of this work, how easy it would have been to the high bank to force the government-Russian policy to limit Jews as well as its other subjects, when the Russian Empire had he had an urgent need for money and he couldn't to obtain them only from the Israelites. There were the beginning of a press campaign, proposals for a boycott, - hype and bluff, - which led to the success of the embassy

Russian pruning, without any serious attempt would have been done to prevent this money, provided through the intermediary of Israelite bankers, to serve in part to ensure the oppression of Russian Jews.

'It was apparently part of the plans of the cosmopolitan finance is causing this exodus Eastern Jews who spread out like dirty and corrosive water on our Western world, on America and, more than anywhere else, about England.

"As long as he has not obtained freedom and equality-
"The Jew is humble," said Mr. White Arnold.
more pleading and gentler than the others men; but, once equality is granted to him granted, the spiritual despotism of Rome
It is itself no more absolute than intolerance.
"The rancidity of the prosperous, but not spiritual, Jew."

266 JEWISH ENGLAND

Is it to bring in their core-religious figures to this equality, of which they make a so profitable use, that the bankers of Paris and London did not want to try to hinder Russia in a regulation which the effect would have been to unleash thousands of wretched circumcised men in Western countries where, without any transition other than the journey, from dogs that they were there, they would also be-
They became citizens at a young age.

Is it to introduce new and more powerful disruptive elements in a society whose decay, where they gorge themselves gent, is not yet fast enough according to Their vulture-like greed?

It's both, you have to believe it if you wants to reconcile what we know about their appetites with what is said about their spirit of solidarity.

The latest manifestation of the all-powerful Jewish health on the destiny of states and even peoples have endured for several years and has the purpose of the uncontrolled appropriation of . gold and diamond mines of Africa aus-trale.

Mr. Hyndman, President of the Association English democratic socialist, gave in 1900, in an interview with a journalist

THE GOLD WAR 267

Brussels residents, interesting assessments on the causes of the Transvaal War.

According to him, it was the Jews who were covered up.
pables.

"See," he said to his interlocutor, "how They seized control of our press, how They have corrupted our society. Here, take this briefly a list of Jewish newspapers in the current time (1900):

The Daily Telegraph, which belongs to Lewis; the Daily Wells, which belongs to Henry Oppenheim, of Egyptian renown; the Financial News from Harry Marks, member of the Parliament-ment; the Sun, which belongs to the same per-rings; the Saint-James-Gazette, by Steinkoff;
the Saturday Review, owned by Alfred Beit; the Stfatist, belonging to several fi-Jewish financiers; The Observer, by Ms. Rachel Beer, the Sunday Special, belonging to Spyer.

Well, all these newspapers advocated cynically, the war almost in the same terms.

Whatever their political opinion, whether they be Tories, Liberal Unionists, Liberals or radicals, they all say the same thing about of the Transvaal. Isn't that significant?

— Yes, indeed.

268 JEWISH ENGLAND

— Well, in London society, they exert as much influence as in the press.
Finally, suffice it to say that at the time
current situation regarding the South African question,
We are a nation dominated by Jews.

They don't know what it's like to play fair.
game. I'm talking, mind you, about capitalists.
London Jews, for I count among my knowledge of the Jews of a completely different character different facts and for which I have the most great affection.

The conquest of the two South African republics Caines is properly a Jewish company.
without the dynastic and historical complications risks whose main driver is hidden ordinarily. That's why it is interesting—here we will give a quick overview of the main points minor events which, outside of the action military, preceded and accompanied the war of the Transvaal.

This war of dispossession and piracy financial, business against honest cultiv-vators, brings to mind an old Mexican adage—cain, obviously imported from the dark Catholic—Spanish cism: "Behind the cross stands
the devil, but behind the soldier's sword crawls,
"Spying, hiding the despoiling Jew."

THE GOLD WAR 269

As soon as the gold fields were discovered,
The raid on the harvest was decided upon without delay.
by Jewish England. A first incur-
a union of unofficial, though disavowed, pirates
Having failed, Albion, with its long teeth, the Al-Judaized bion in its governing organism—mental, decreed the conquest of the Rand.

This decree is all the more monstrous because, all being determined to promulgate it and to put it to be executed as soon as the preparations would be well understood, His Majesty's Government the queen cynically denied the obvious, protesting his desire to maintain peace and doing everything to make it impossible for Boers.

It is easy to make one understand the role of the Jew in the South African Boom, organized in 1894 and in the creation of the Chartered Company, which contained the seeds war to the death against the Republics.

Let us just remember how the high society, impoverished by meager income lands, by death rates and general-heavily indebted, it eventually reached the point where it could no longer re-to push the Israelite world and, indeed, to the con-milking, opened his salons to him, welcomed him and there sold its securities as references to companies

270 JEWISH ENGLAND

financial gain, he was paid for the honors to be chairman or director in such or such Company Limited, mining or other;
how the Dukes of Abercorn and Fife, Lord Aberdeen, almost all the names of the Peerage took turns at the head of the ac- leaflets tions at 1 pound sterling which were successivelylaunched among the gullible of both worlds, well before the end of the 19th century.

Add to that Cecil's atavistic tendencies
John Rhodes, son of Reverend Francis W.
Rhodes, rector Bishop Stortford, in the Hartford county and an authentic mother-Jewish, it is said, and the Israelites, fraternal friends and associates of the great Cape exploiter:
Barnato, the clown-juggler, who began his fortune by swallowing stolen diamonds that he had to search in the vein-porting element of his excrement; Beit, a low-level employee at Porteur, then Eckstein; Werner, Naumann and how many others who, in less than four or five years, revealed themselves as the principal-main agents for counting small savings and amassed estimated fortunes From 200 to 400 million approximately. That will be enough to fully endorse the opinion of the Scotsman J. Keir Hardie, who was not afraid

THE GOLD WAR 271

to write in the journal L'Humanité nouvelle,
these energetic and sincere words:

"This war is a capitalist war," created by capitalists' money, supported through the lies of a capitalist press, perjurer and mercenary, sponsored by poli-

unscrupulous technicians, at their own mercy of the capitalist class. The Boers, a people of pastors probably have all the flaws of fine qualities that are characteristic of their kind of life; but, whatever they may be, these flaws are still virtues, compared to honor corrupt and refined cruelty that are inseparable from the shady operations of the capitalism. » |

Let us, on the other hand, borrow from a work by A.-G. Hobson, entitled The African War that of the South, its causes and effects, the considerations The following declarations:

The first and without comparison the most important industry of the Transvaal, that of The Rand gold mines are in their hands. (Read the hands of a small group of financiers) international companies). The brief list major companies, which represent the recently formed mining interests union, will to demonstrate the extent of their power. First then come the Wernher, Beit and Co., plus commonly known by the name of their director such as "the Eckstein and Co." group.

272 JEWISH ENGLAND

It includes twenty-nine gold mines and three other companies. The nominal capital value—The final amount is £18,384,567, but the market value at the beginning of August 1900, exceeded 76 million pounds (nearly 2 billion). This Eckstein group is the principle active, larger and more powerful combination health which contains the Consolidated Goldfields, S. Neuman and Co., Farrar and A. Bailey.

The Goldfields (Beit, Rudd and Rhodes) nineteen mines and a capital of 18,120,000 li—Neuman then comes in with a capital of £8,806,000. Acting separately, but virtually under the same control, there is two other groups, whose capital is in largely German, Gøtz and Co. and Albn and Co... There is, on the other hand, J.-B. Robinson with nineteen mines, and other affairs (issuance capital, 14,317,500 pounds), and the Barnato house, less important.

Under the leadership of the Eckstein Group, whose principal instrument is the chamber mines, this group tends not only to absorb the entire mining industry, but encore to controlling industrial and indirect life-political life in Johannesburg, strongly-forming the core of a monopoly that will become to Rand what De Beers was for some years in Kimberley.

THE GOLD WAR 273

This quick sketch is only intended to to prove the dominance of a small number of people across a vast industry including the capital was recently valued at 150 million lions of pounds (3 billion 795 million francs).

But, although the power of this capitalism whether based on gold, it is not limited to mines. As soon as we are in their presence of significant interest, we meet her.

The Johannesburg press is his property. It therefore appears that the industrial future and Transvaal agricultural land is mortgaged to a A small number of foreign financiers. A little further reflection will show that, while this the class of financiers abstained in other matters. very countries of active participation in the politically, she will pursue the politics of the Transvaal. And politics will not mean freedom for her. Exchange and good administration: the industrial sector Transvaal's management requires, in fact, the inter-constant intervention and the vigorous support of 18

274 JEWISH ENGLAND

the State. I] it needs a regular workforce, economic and subservient, which is here the stone The cornerstone of good deals. The rates of railways and customs regulations mining operations will force it into politick. She will bring the same qualities that made her happy in speculation.

one word, simply and inevitably, she will add to his other cases the politick.

We will not retrace the history from its beginnings
The Right Honourable's career, and already so profound-forgotten madman, the late John Cecil Rhodes, the founder-date of the Chartered British South Africa Company, into which he brought one of its previous creations, the De Beers Consolidated Mines Company, aided in these operations tions by the Rothschilds of London and by the Alfred Beiiit, a Jewish man, had known Rhodes since
For a very long time, Dr. Jameson, a practicing physician, bli to Kimberley, who shared his ambition,
often expressed, to fly the flag
English as far as possible, as far as the Zam-Beze and beyond. The doctor soon gave up his Kimberley clientele, and came to order Salisbury Fort in Matabeleland, in the name of Cecil Rhodes, who had him appointed administrator in 1891

THE GOLD WAR 275

Chartered's manager. Both of them took a trip to England, three years afterwards, and spread, through their conversations and public speeches, the idea of creating a federation of southern Africa under the sovereignty British royal family. It was during this trip that Cecil Rhodes was appointed a member of the Privy Council. For his part, Dr. Jameson receives-held the diploma of Companion of the Bath, dis-honorary distinction much rarer than We do not have the Legion of Honour. Thus Encouraged, the two friends returned to Cap, while the Uitlanders' agitation was starting to make noise in Johannesburg.
Dr. Jameson, under the pretext of protecting the children and women whom no one threatened It rushed over with police soldiers and volunteers, and entered the territory of Transvaal. But he was forced to give birth the weapons, taken to Pretoria and sentenced to dead. President Krüger pardoned him and his officers, which earned the head of state

Transvaalian: A Testimonial of Satisfaction of the Queen, at the same time as the Emperor Germany congratulated him in a letter that remained... famous for having been able to maintain independence dance of his people.

276 JEWISH ENGLAND

Naturally the English government.
Jameson confessed. Cecil Rhodes, while confessing that he had helped him with money and advice, he claimed to have remained uninvolved in the raid itself.
Chamberlain declared urbi et orbi that the D Jameson, without having done anything that could enta-dear to his honor, had committed the greatest a mistake that a politician could make.
The people alone, amidst this chorus of disavowals, didn't bother to lie, and when the
The doctor came to London to face his trial.
gave an enthusiastic ovation. A condemnation-
A sentence of fifteen months in prison was handed down.
against the lost child, who, disdaining to par-:
to take responsibility for his actions, not to comment promised no one, but couldn't help but to say at the end of the trial: "If I had succeeded,
"How I would have been forgiven!"

History does not have the same motives as him to be discreet, and certainty is acquired today that Dr. Jameson was only one instrument of Cecil Rhodes and Joe Cham-Berlin, the very same one who described his act as so harshly, and, let's say it, so precisely; for the biggest mistake a
A politician is a failure.

"The raid was an attempt, not by the government-

THE GOLD WAR 277

government, but from a minister of the Queen, to plunder the Transvaal once again
of his freedom and independence," he said Mr. Leonard Courtney at the annual meeting of the Cornwall Liberal Unionist Association.

And why this attempt, so large in scope?
responsibilities?

A brief analysis of the list of actions—
Chartered Company pairs, published by Mr. William Thomson replied, not without eloquence quence, to the question.

The Marquis of Lorne, son-in-law of the Queen;
the Duke of Fife, the Duke of Abercorn, the Earl Grey, Baron de Worms, Earl Coventry, Count Chesterfield, Lord Rothschild, Mr. Léopold Rothschild, Sir J. Sievwright, chief of the Rhodesian party in Cape Town, a rival of Mr. Schreiner; peers, members of parliament and bankers up to a number of 80, 350 officers generals, colonels, captains, most of whom serve in Africa, and, finally, a large number journalists from the yellow press, among the—which Mr. Alfred Harmsworth, of the Daily Mail, and the entire tribe of the same name.

The most recent events important ones do not leave in most of the memories that are more than an uncertain recollection, more than a

278 JEWISH ENGLAND

The general impression is that we no longer know how to support based on specific facts. Therefore, it is not useless.
to list the events chronologically
who proceeded and accompanied the tentative of the audacious D' Jim.

1895. September. — The petition of the Uitlan-requirements to obtain the "Franchise", that is to say the same civil and political rights as the Boers, signed by 38,000 people, is rejected by the Volksraad.

October. — President Kruger sends the D'Leyds, State Secretary, in Berlin and at London; Mr. Leo Winthal, representative of Reuters Agency and administrator of the newspaper official of Pretoria.

November. — Convocation of the National Union Transvaal national meeting in a large gathering for the December 27th following, in order to claim the "Basic rights of a free man."

December 16. — Mr. White, Trans- agent

vaal in London, telegram to the president Kruger to warn him of the vast conspiracy that was taking place form against his government.

December 18.— The President forbids the meeting and threatens to disperse it by force.

December 23 — Publication of the petition rights. The meeting is postponed to January 6th.

THE GOLD WAR 279

December 24. — Krüger holds a council with Kotze and Joubert.

December 28. — Apocryphal appeal of the Uit-Johannesburg landers at D' Jameson for The protection of women and children. A Civic guard training for preservation of the order. The correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, of Berlin, wrote to its newspaper that the The Boer government expects to see entry into his territory, D' Jameson at the head of 800 men.

Sunday, December 29. — Jameson leaves Mafeking with 500 men, 8 Maxims and 4 cannon Whitworth and heads towards Johannesburg.

Krüger, having been informed, concentrated his troops.

The Uitlanders are organizing and arming themselves. The civil servants and the Boer police are leaving Johannesburg without being harassed.

Krüger adopts a conciliatory attitude and allows claims to be addressed.

December 30. — Jameson advances quickly—lying across the Veldt. Exodus of women and children from Johannesburg.

December 31. — The pro- Boer government calls for a reduction in food taxes food and other reforms.

280 JEWISH ENGLAND

Chamberlain disavows Jameson's act and orders all British subjects to refuse assistance.

1896. January 1st. – Battle of Krügerdorp between Jameson's troop and the Boers, pen- throughout the day and part of the night.

The Times publishes for the first time the News of D' Jim's march.

January 2. – Jameson's retirement. He is forced to surrender.

January 3.–Letter of congratulations from the Emperor– German ref.

Chamberlain asks for Krü-'s indulgence ger.

This brief account shows that Jameson does not he didn't act impulsively, but he acted according to a pre-conceived plan. The agitation The Uitlanders were, in essence, very artificial. obeyed an order that came from the men powerful and greedy people who had an interest in putting the hand on the gold mines of the Transvaal, infi- richer than surface deposits open skies in Rhodesia. Johannes- Burg was already a Jewish town. Among the names- numerous houses that traded there successfully shares of mining companies, only one . was not led by a circumcised man. The Uit-

THE GOLD WAR 281

landers formed a population of decavators there, of heterogeneous beings from all points from around the globe, shady individuals, men and girls of joy, of which more than 80% were of origin Semitic. There were 12,000 Polish Jews there. most of them sold strong liquors. These people, as we know, did not have... Let's prove it, no real concern for the right to voting and naturalization, which was done to them loudly demanded it. They admitted it more late, and complained bitterly that the war, prolonged beyond all expectation, would have Stop their shameful trafficking and dry up the source of their fortune.

The slowness and the poor thanks to the Times' announcement of the attempt-tive and the failure of Cecil's handyman Rhodes. The city's main newspaper was yet aware of everything, because his correspondent Breeding in Southern Africa, Miss Flora
Shaw had ostensibly been involved in the en-undertaken, and was included among the accused tried for high treason at Westminster; she nevertheless remained committed to the editorial staff of the Times. This newspaper enthusiastically welcomed Jameson and Rhodes siasm after the Raid, and published verses in which the poet laureate Alfred

282 JEWISH ENGLAND

Austin sang about the band of heroes who had,
at the risk of their lives, defended women and Children in Johannesburg threatened with having their throats slit ment by the Boers (1). The Times had, in Indeed, this fable was launched based on the word of a television-a false gram, prepared well in advance, and published at the precise moment when the Raid could not-
It was no longer going to be kept secret.

This complicity of the Times is evident with the
the latest evidence of the letters found on the Major White, one of the prisoners of the RAID. These letters were delivered to the public without anyone could have refuted them. Two examples suffice.
On December 10, 1895, Miss Flora Shaw wrote went to Cecil Rhodes:

"Can you tell me when you start-
"We will put the plans into action."
"We wish to send at the next opportunity"
"sealed instructions to the representative" » from the London Times in European capitals
"Peau. It is very important that they use
"Of their influence in your favor."

On the 28th of the same month, Dr. Harris, who had served as an intermediary between the conspirators and

(1) Jameson's Ride, "The Ride of Jameson".

Joe Chamberlain, wrote to the same great chief in line:

"I already told Flora to go see Chamber-
"Alain and to tell him that we have the support of the "Times."

If we ask ourselves why this great day-
Thus, nal embarked on this adventure, one he couldn't help but think that he had just to experience very serious problems in the Parnel case losses of money, and that the Chartered Company was rich enough to pay generously such a competition. It's no mystery to per-sounds like, apart from the numerous supports 'that he had made sure at the Colonial Office and at War Office, Cecil Rhodes had been able to put in place
On his side, the majority of the English press, that he watered it so beautifully that it was called the Jupiter of this Danaë with the pen easily mercenary.

An anecdote recounted by the famous director-editor of Reviews of Reviews, MW-T. Stead,
#i unfortunately disappeared in the awful
the sinking of the Titanic in April 1912, to a writer
The Figaro editor finds his place here in full force.
question:

"One evening, after dinner, Cecil Rhodes addressed-

284 JEWISH ENGLAND

carelessly addressing Alfred Beit, said to him:

- Something is brewing at the Transvaal.

Taking a drag on his cigar, and without ask for the slightest clarification (they (understand implicitly), Alfred Beiit responds-said:

- I'm halfway there.

And they talked about something else. For a while
Then, the Jameson raid failed, you know
In what way. Then Cecil Rhodes left.
at Alfred Beit's:

– You know, my dear, you owe me 250,000 pounds.

– How so?

– Do you remember the evening when I told you said that something was being prepared.

– Yes, and I answered you: "I am from half. "

– Perfectly, but it still holds. Hey Okay! Here are the facts: this something was The Jameson raid cost 500,000 pounds.

"All right!" replied Alfred Beit, "here is..."
250,000 pounds, for my part.

Such an attitude is certainly stylish. concluded the late Mr. Stead, and all that without the slightest treaty!...

THE GOLD WAR 285

Ultimately, it's proverbial honesty.
bandits who operate together. But he
The fact remains that 500,000 pounds sterling makes twelve 500,000 million francs and that faced with such
The downpour meant many windows had to be opened.

Joe Chamberlain's complicity does not no more doubt than that of Cecil of the Times.
This Minister of Colonies is one of the strongest shareholders, either through him or his closest associates parents, Chartered and other compasimilar gnies. The denials have not did not prevent the evidence from being presented, and even, during the acquisition of the chartered company Niger, he eventually had to acknowledge what he did not could no longer conceal. As for the raidJameson, between the letters we have
As already mentioned, Belgian Independence has published everything correspondence exchanged between Mr. Haw-Kesky, legal counsel for the Chartered Company

Pany and Cecil Rhodes's personal lawyer,
Mr. Fairfield, head of the South African section
At the Colonial Office, and other characters Understood as Lord Grey, the D' Harris, the Major Willoughby, etc., who do not leave the the slightest doubt about the role that the head of the Colonial Office took part in the revolu- trial to operate the Transvaal for the benefit of the Chartered.

286 JEWISH ENGLAND

This correspondence relates to the investigation official proceedings that were then taking place regarding the raid and on those who, directly or indirectly, had played a part in it role, preliminary investigation for the trial, which was "the most odious comedy of the century," according to of the late Mr. Labouchère, the courageous and spiritualtuel director, in his time, of the London newspaper-
It shows that the av-Cat of Rhodes was kept informed of everything.
which was taking place at the Ministry of Colonies and in the government with respect to the perpetrators of raid, that he contributed to the choice of judges, that Joe Chamberlain was doing everything he could to saving the compromised characters, assisted by this by his sister-in-law, by Lady Dudley and other great ladies of the Kingdom, enthusiasticsiasts of Rhodes and Jameson, and that if He, along with a few others, was condemned to a nominal sentence, in the application of which all the usual rigors were rejected and which they did not accomplish until the
The fixed term was that the acquittal would have caused
In the English-speaking world, there are really too many scans.
dale. But, – and Belgian independence does not He certainly didn't fail to notice it when publishing his letters, – the tribunal was handpicked, from documents were removed from his examination, one

THE GOLD WAR 287

She falsified the truth as much as possible. She adds even that the English newspapers could have then resume the indignant articles that they had published about the Dreyfus affair:
Everything they had said about it does not apply.
by way of point to men who are both bold and hypocrites who have, in a particular interest-binding and unspeakable, cast the British Empire on a small, honest, hardworking, and harmless people defensive.

This publication of Belgian Independence has was, it seems, made possible by an employee from lawyer Hawkesky who had taken a copy of the pieces and who would have sold them to the newspaper of Brussels. There are many others; but influences that are easy to disentangle, without one so that we can know what figure they were taxed at, arrrent the course of these revelations.

When we think of righteous indignations, loudly demonstrated in England in the su-throwing out problematic irregularities committed during the court-martial trial of a
A proven traitor, one wonders with astonishment
Why the supporters of justice on the other on the side of the strait, having so much to do at home, did not consider using it elsewhere and their AI home activity, rather than ingenuity in

288 JEWISH ENGLAND

foreign issues that do not concern them did not know and to which they did not know Absolutely nothing.

This file was, moreover, deleted during the debates before truly select judges to Jameson, to Miss Shaw, and a few others perpetrators of the raid.

Is it any wonder that, in these circumstances... stances, President Krüger considered to put his country in a state of defense and that he has bought weapons and ammunition? A sta-technical information drawn up by Mr. Alfred Marks and that The fact that no one attempted to contradict him shows that
From 1882 to the end of 1894, state expenditures
The Transvaal was normal. It was only in
It was in 1895 that the Boers considered taking some Measures against imminent attacks. Who So could we blame them? It was their right.
and their duty.

Selfless politicians and good faith recognized it in England as everywhere. Mr. Leonard Courtney proclaimed it in a speech to the Cornwall Liberal Union-Nist Association. We know, moreover, with which repugnance the governments of the Transvaal and the Orange decided on war; the President Kruger finally agreed to donate

THE GUEBRE OF THE OOR 289

to satisfy all the complaints of Uitlanders, supported by the Colonial Office;
he even gave more than was asked of him said, and it was only when the Colony of The cape was full of troops and artillery.
clays, when the whole world could no longer doubt of England's resolution, that the presidents teeth of the Transvaal and the Orange resigned-rent to take the initiative and begin a action which, a few weeks earlier, would have had every chance of a resounding success.

One of the claims made by the English
To justify this war, one must have wanted to protect indigenous races, and also of having striven to protect the unfortunate Kaffirs and Hottentots under the cruel tyranny of Boers "who force them to work" and not
They are not ashamed to take advantage of this job.

Mr. Yves Guyot, former editor-in-chief . of the Century, whose Anglophobic sentiments
at least had the merit of not dis-
To simulate, is one of those who have done the most,
Without achieving much success, by the way, for to spread this way of seeing things in France.
We find in an already old cut of an anthology of our newspapers which we regret to Not having noted the title, a topical response

19

290 JEWISH ENGLAND

to this ridiculous accusation: "I have under the eyes, said the journalist in question, the report annual report of the British South African Company
In other words, Chartered, of which Mr. Cecil Rhodes, the principal instigator of this war,
He was the founder and remained the soul.

The author of this document examines the ways to force the Caffres to work at low prices in the mines and he offers one which we recommend to philanthropists English, to Mr. Rudyard Kipling, for example, the author of the famous poem: The White Man's burden.

It consists of increasing in proportions considerable reductions in the already existing tax on the huts of the Kaffres. A progressive nature of this tax will force the natives to work, the report says, because if they do not work – If they didn't have milk, they wouldn't be able to pay the tax. and the tax authorities would burn down their huts.

Mr. Rudd, director of Consolidated Gold-Fields, for his part, said that we need to find a method to force the Kaffres to trade to prevail even against their will. The goal that pursue those who wanted this war Therefore, among other things, this is obvious. to establish in South Africa, under a

THE GOLD WAR 201

in a more or less Jesuitical form, the slavery of The man of color for the benefit of the white man. This war, undertaken in the name of progress, is in in reality a crime that no amount of swindling can It can neither justify nor excuse.

Let us read Mr. Hobson's book on the social situation in southern Africa and so much other works written since then and one will have no trouble reducing to their value – that is to say, a daring maneuver hypocrisy – this display of human feelings discriminatory towards Black people. They were not mistaken about it. do not fall, as evidenced by successes – gives revolts; they still prefer to plow the fields and herding the Boers' livestock, rather than toiling for fourteen hours per day at the bottom of the mines where they earn Just enough to avoid starving to death.

Impartial minds, who did not solicit no appetite for money and to whom the fumes imperialism left the view clear, did not

They were no more mistaken about it, at the Cape and at London, from the very beginning of Transvaal; and what has happened since is not of nature to change one's mind. It is interesting- It is worthwhile to provide some concrete evidence here. victorious ones that would be easy to multiply.

292 JEWISH ENGLAND

In the aftermath of the raid, during the investigation of the Select Committee, Chairman Krüger, in conversations that have been reported reported by the Westminster Gazette, he said MJ Robinson, politician and financier considerable from South Africa: "Believe- that we do not know the true ones Raid promoters? How does your government- can he ignore that the first inst- Who are Messrs. Rhodes and Beit? The core the conspiracy consists of twelve individuals Vidus, whom we know, are associated for to divide our spoils and divide the Transvaal between them. It is them and their Companies that provided the money. Do you think that we are innocent enough not to knowing that Mr. Rhodes held a metaphorical view- ment the gun to the throat of certain per- English sonnages, and said to them: "If you do not Don't support me, I'll denounce you and Your involvement in the Raid?

What old Kruger declared at the time was enlightened and verified since then. It seems now acquired, but- holding that the original plan was indeed the hand- investment by financial and mining companies South African Jews in the Transvaal; but Minister Chamberlain, briefed on a project which was of primary interest to him, obliged the urged to show themselves under the English flag and thwarted the raid by changing the character; it thus compromised the Angle- earth inspired in him a desire for revenge. and, therefore, made war inevitable. conquest he desired.

THE GOLD WAR 203

A letter from an Uitlander, published in January 1900 for Mr. Labouchère's newspaper, mon- quite enough how much the agitation which served as The pretext for the raid was fabricated, and the result of a "set-up"... "The Boers, are they there?" said, if they judged Europeans by the specimens that they had before their eyes in Johannesburg, were perfectly right to oppose pose to any political change that might have given the Uitlanders supremacy in the country. The Boers were rude, but they were generally animated by good feelings- comments towards the Uitlanders, as long as they were not breaking the law. On the other hand, the the European population did not constitute a secret of his contempt for the Boers, and seem- blait always willing to believe that these were of an inferior race and had to... They were happy that they were allowed to live in their own country. The "grievances" were a

294 JEWISH ENGLAND

A setup. I myself signed the petition at the Queen requesting that this be remedied, because I I didn't care about running the risk of refuse my name; but I have never had no dispute with the Boers; I had not the intention to live, to settle down forever in their country, and I wasn't thinking any more about abandon my English nationality and to me to travel Transvaalien for the pleasure of enjoying the "frankness", rather than making me a Hottentot. In this respect I was similar to the majority of Englishman with whom I was in contact and who were employed in the gold industry.

As early as 1894, Lionel Philipps wrote to Alfred Beit: "I do not aspire here to have any political rights; and I believe that the population, taken as a whole, has no ambition along these lines... Our pro- The goal is to spend a large sum of money on to obtain a Raad (Chamber of Parliament) in the elections (deputies) more favorable to our views.

But corruption isn't always #i It's easy for Jews to imagine, even when You don't have to pay the price. You can, if you know how.
long-handed and skillfully taking advantage of the occasions, to seize all the press of a countries, and thus have at his disposal the instruments

\

THE GOLD WAR 205

elements that both express and shape public opinion. That's what Cecil Rhodes had done, as MJ-G. Hobson explains (1).

Long before the crisis, he had made sure, with Eckstein and Barrato, a preponderant interest-derent in the Cape Argus, the evening newspaper of Cape Town, which was then operated by a Company owning at the same time the Johannesburg Star, the Buluwayo Chronicle, the Rhoderian Herald and the African Review. The the most influential newspaper in the colony, the Cape Times, had half of its shares between the hands of Mr. Rutherford Harris, director of the Chartered and associate of Mr. Cecil Rhodes. Finally, Harris's brother-in-law, administrator-the general manager of the Cape Times, eventually succeeded in buy for 12,500 pounds sterling, the Diamond Field Advertiser, from Kimberley.

That wasn't enough. We didn't feel still master of the Raad. Versed in the electorate by virtue of naturalization instantaneous tion, 15 to 20,000 Uitlanders, without ties to the country and ready for anything, in order to to do it faster and more safely for-tune, would have changed its nature and allowed to bring into the Raadun a certain number of creations-tures of the Rhodes, Eckstein, Wher- union ner and Beit. But the process was slow and the impatience of the exploiters could no longer wait. Also, when, after the raid fails, the investigation and conviction of the leaders, Cham-Berlain had awarded Cecil Rhodes a certificate public tation of patriotism and honor-ity, while imperialist sentiments Overexcited cities made Jameson a hero, the

(1) The War in South Africa: Its Causes and Effects.

296 JEWISH ENGLAND

The war of conquest was decided in the Anglo-African financial advisory services and the Colonial Office.

On the one hand, as the writer noted
English, who signs Jan Maclaren, the people
The Boer pastoralist had a legitimate desire to retain control of his affairs country; and, on the other hand, a handful of millions-naires, to derive more profit from their gold and diamond mines, were resolved to to seize it. Poets, Alfred Austin, Rudyard Kipling, Swinburne, to name a few sea than those, statesmen like Lord Rosebery, husband of a Rothschild, and also Sir Alfred Milner, this high commissioner britannic at the Cape, who was not afraid of falto sanitize President Steyn's dispatches, for

THE GOLD WAR 297

to favor the views of Cecil Rhodes, pushed to war, they proclaimed it inevitable, him they gave before the haunted English nation by the proud dreams of an imperialism universal, the prestige of their talent and their authority, from their speeches and their verses.

Therefore, any effort to avoid conflict was becoming useful.

In vain did Krüger agree to do all the concessions that had been demanded of him; in vainly did he offer conditions of nature-easier and more immediate reading than those which he had been absolutely required to learn-the program was modified: nothing was sufficient-health; the Cape colony was filling up with English soldiers, and there were no more left for the two presidents, it cannot be repeated too often, that the resource to start hostilities before that these formidable preparations were pushed ses far enough away to make the attack irresistibletible.

Finally, Cecil Rhodes achieves his goal.
So tenaciously. The war has begun.

He immediately shut himself up in Kimberley, the city with diamonds, in order to better mark the meaning of this monstrous struggle. This man who found, to honor the English flag,

298 JEWISH ENGLAND

the brilliant idea of equating it with a stock market security calling it "the highest commercial value"
"the most commercially viable thing in the world," and who declares that the Boers' rights to own their homeland are "miserable nonsense about priority"
"Occupation" – that was the reasoning of the weasel in relation to Jeannot Lapin –this man honest and honorable, according to Joel's moral code Chamberlain threw himself into Kimberley, in order to that this war would be even more his war, and so that the victorious English would have it their head, or that besieged his deliverance was their sole objective. "General Buller, the general Methuen are his victims, it has been said with That's why they were going to him, for him.
They were the only ones who accumulated defeats. Saved,
Who will the Napoleon of the Cape lose? Cost Whatever the cost, he wants to rule Africa. We we will see them oppose any peace effort, to any proposal for arbitration. May the Angle perish!
land, rather than the African Empire that he has dreamed of building on mud of blood and on ruins | »

England ultimately triumphed despite the stubbornness in the heroism of the Boers; Might once again prevailed over right. But Albion had no prestige there, and the southern war–

THE GOLD WAR 299

African is not one of those of which she can showing vanity. The future of Africa
The south is still uncertain; the metropolis may to realize it.

Warnings were not lacking in the English nation. More than one Cassandra raised the voice, the student sometimes still, to make res–
to emerge from eyes clouded by false calculations otherwise by passion, advice marked at corner of simple justice and humanity.

John Bull, giving in to all kinds of excitement powerful over his sanguine nature, pride-
"Weak and violent," his mercenary launched.
Thomas Atkins' conquest of the gold mines and diamonds. This conquest cost him more dearer than she owes him.

England can remember today men who, from the very beginning, confronted the jeers, the slander, the accusations and the silent acts of hatred and revenge, in striving to make him see the truth. Indeed, alongside the mainstream press which dominates and tri-ture opinion, alongside the Times, of which we
we have shown the complicity in the intrigues South African financial institutions, from the Daily Telegraph which at the time belonged to the Lewis family, of the Daily News in possession of Henry Oppenheim,

300 JEWISH ENGLAND

The Sun and the Financial News, who were at Harry Marks, MP, of the Saint James Gazette, or-Gane de Steinkoff, of the Saturday Review, magasine by Alfred Beit, the Observer and the Sun-Day Times, owned by the Beer couple, of the Sunday Special, sponsored by Spyer, of the Statist, jointly operated by several financiers Jews, and most other newspapers and political periodicals drawn into the same orbit, there were publications like Truth, by Mr. Labouchère, the Review of Reviews of MWT Stead with its three editions, an-clay, American, Australian, Reynolds' Paper, the Westminster Gazette, the Westminster
ster Review, the Morning Leader, and others core, who vigorously supported the right Boers to defend their independence, and denounced the unjust greed of the millions aries that mobilized all the forces of The British Empire to abolish this right.
The much-missed WT Stead spoke in a public conference held in Westminster himself, and repeated some time ago in a Letter to Le Matin, these beautiful and powerful words:

"By giving their assent to this plot"
fraud before the Select Committee, conspiracy which aimed to impose this on the world

inept lie that Mr. Chamberlain and the Colonial Office knew absolutely nothing of the Rhodes-Jameson conspiracy, the two state parties (conservatives and liberals) (raux) have made the nation complicit in this men-dream.

"This lie has now come to light."
plant here. It's the primary source of all the countless lies caused by this criminal war. Wherever we turn-deny, at all the stages through which we we successively arrived at the position Given the current alarming situation, we are constantly encountering... days to a lie.

"We descended into the abyss" of an unjust war by a scale of which cha-that echelon is a lie.

__» Lies, lies, lies, just-below, corn starting from this first one and from this the most horrible of lies, a lie imposed on a nation without defiance, by the par-swears the most shameless and the suppression of testimonies, the most cynical that ever dishonored a court.

"It was the lie of lies, the in-supreme oath to human conscience. It is This is what we suffer from today, and that we will continue to suffer more and more-even more so, that we confess our sin, that we inflict upon the guilty a just punishment and that we do such things as-preparations that we can make for the innocent victims of our crime.

302 JEWISH ENGLAND

One could not better stigmatize in its origins of this abominable manifestation of the Jewish policy, to condemn it while deploring it in its execution, to predict, finally, the consequences sequences and the necessary atonement.

The London correspondent of a newspaper
French wrote in February 1900:

"We are convinced that finance
Israelite is at the heart of this whole affair.
We are aware that its resources are incalculable. One of its most beautiful ornaments, the German Jew Beit, Rhodes' associate, from Chamberlain and Lord Rothschild, owns,
According to the Morning Herald, six thousand billions of francs. The thing is not impossible-ble, if we consider that Bethel and Rhodes, principal-principal owners of the Kimberley mines, are the only two people authorized to to eliminate, by electrical processes, the excess diamond production capable of lower the price of the precious commodity

THE GOLD WAR 303

say. That also explains why, Beit being absent from Kimberley, Rhodes preferred to bury themselves there rather than allow Others might want to poke their noses into his diamonds.

By anticipating that the English government will be forced to appeal, in order to continue the war, to the coffers of those for whose benefit
He works, the journalist adds: "To get started under the tutelage of Jewish gold is a process em-long since bent by the unfortunate South American republics, always short of cash. We know where that is to conduites. Is England on the verge of
To follow their example? That would then be the dictatorship-
"Jewish jingo-turism in the near future."

Everything we have just read proves quite clearly that
The delay was not long in coming.

The Jewish dictatorship is now sitting on England; this is the great evil of which she suffers, as the president of the English Democratic Socialist Association, Mr. Hyndman, who does not object to to say: "We are a nation dominated by the Jews.

Let's hope this nation has it soon conscience, and having learned to know his

304 JEWISH ENGLAND

Even though he's ill, he still has the energy to want to... heal.

The American humorist Mark Twain – to whom humanity owes something to gaiety, thanks to his famous jokes and to tales filled with discoveries of an impre-seen and sometimes hilarious – solicited, by a day-New Yorker, to write a greeting of welcome in his own way to the new century, towards The end of 1899, it was carried out in these terms:

"Twentieth century, I bring you a respect-Matron table, Madame Chrétienté, who returns filthy, soiled and dishonored by many a pirate-territory in China, Manchuria, Africa Southern Ocean and the Philippines. Her soul is full of mediocrity: the pocket, of loot, the mouth, pious hypocrisies. Give him soap and "A towel, but it hides the mirror from him."

So far, it must be said, it's been kept from him.
the mirror to our vain Christianity: also Does she disguise herself with a multitude of euphemisms?
of hypocritical civilization; also she believes, with a strange infatuation, in his morality, in his perfection, its virtues, and above all its high superiority over the peoples of other continents that it strives to exploit, dominate, and to rot, under the pleasant pretext of indoctrinating them

THE GOLD WAR 305

to trainer, to protect them from barbarity and from to bring them up to the level of the revolutions of day. » |

Perhaps never, indeed, His Excellency Europe and their plutocratic Highnesses
The United States of America had not affirmed with more nonchalance than in the last few 19th century years their instincts to burn tales of conquests and universal tyranny.

The colonial expansion of the constituent nations yearningly organized will have, since five-how many years, caused more devastation, more murders and pillaging than the hordes of old neither Tamerlane nor Attila committed any. We could not confess frankly and in detail
how did the expeditionary troops behave?
English, French, Russian, German tionists Chinese, Italian, Spanish and American on territories and family groups and peaceful, which murderous soldiers noticed to go and civilize. We still remain in-
We are aware of these iniquities, for we are still without any real idea of the story noble or odious, which we produce daily
the day. But an hour will surely come, harmful but there will no longer be a corner on the globe that this so-called good-20

306 JEWISH ENGLAND

a developing railway civilization. At this
At that time, the last wise men will realize that we destroyed, without any real benefit to humanity nity, and quite the contrary to its detriment, the last regions in the midst of which flourish-knows, in a way, the primitive golden age, for bringing in exchange their anxieties, struggles, infamies, nameless morals of the silver age whose reign intensifies with the competition of the Jews.

These vague perceptions of infinite cruelty contemporary civilizations are mainly inspired by echoes of piracy
The bloody repressions carried out in China practiced in the Philippines, and especially the abuse of force by English soldiers and the mi-Sera of all kinds tolerated in Africa southern. We have just reread the summary of an admirable speech that the astonishing general boer Christian de Wet once pronounced in Klerksdorp and that the correspondent of the
The Frankfurt Gazette then sent to its day-
nal. This extract is more than suggestive.

"You have to love your neighbor," Chris- declares there Tian de Wet, quoting the Bible, but it is necessary to disapprove of English. At least, that's according to This is the principle by which I raise my children. They say that there must be some good English people on land, but they are obviously dead by now for a long time, because I've never met one.

THE GOLD WAR 307

"The final success will be ours. May the
The English are devastating the country while they can.
T1 will flourish again, because the capitalists themselves
They will fertilize it with their money. The capitals-lists will come to this territory, like the Pigs go truffle hunting. For the South African,
Truffles are like gold mines.

And de Wet was right, it's the War of Gold, the pig war of finance
Jewish woman who unleashed her fury against the brave men Republicans of the Orange Free State and the Transvaal. By-Everything, it's gold that attracts conquest; the fever precious metal, a veritable yellow fever has seized all nations and more particularly from England today much more deeply corrupted in all its upper classes that fifty years ago
years old and now devoted to megalomania less noble than that which, for so long, con-established his vigorous policy of successive conquests over the entire Universe.

The Jews have already left their mark on their work.
auspicious in the constitutional body, in social life and customs of the old

308 JEWISH ENGLAND

England. The British, who are not blinded excessive pride, they can already realize account by comparing their middle nation of the last century, its institutions, its grandeur undeniable strength, its prodigious vitality and their respectability with that which shapes them currently the Liberals in power and
The big financiers who are pulling the strings.

There's something rotten in the Kingdom-United. It was the sons of Israel who poisoned them.
by the treacherous ferments from which they are held the power of Old Albion. Every day, John Bull can see more of the prodromes of evil that must overpower him and that mine little by little, but surely. The colossus does not already felt the full integrity of its strength vis-regarding the Germanic peril which he sees emerging the imminence with increasing anxiety. The Jews are the ruthless microbes who ruin his constitution. Perhaps John Bull Does he have a premonition of it, and does he sense that he is already Too late to hunt down and destroy the tenacious ones infusoria, the voracious macrophages which 8th feed on its vital cells and compromise put this superb health that was yesterday still the admiration of the contemporary world.

CHAPTER VIII

The New Judeo-English Society. – The
aristocratic and financial plutocracy.
– The Jewish directory and the Associations or Jewish societies.– Freemasonry.
– The Jewish conquerors of London in all social classes. – The army and the Jewish marines.

Digitized by Google

CHAPTER VIII

THE NEW ENGLISH JUDKOY SOCIETY. – THE Aristocratic and Financial Plutocracy.
– THE JEWISH DIRECTORY AND THE ASSOCIATIONS OR ISRAELITE SOCIETIES. – FREEMASONRY-
RIE. – THE CONQUERING JEWS OF LONDON
IN ALL SOCIAL CONTEXT. – THE ARMY AND THE JEWISH NAVY.

A certain English Jew, having reached the top of his ambitions, he exclaimed one fine evening, opposite from a group of his coreligionists, upon leaving of the Fourth Zionist Congress, in London, in

August 1901:

"Why on earth! Could the idea...?"
having just returned to Jerusalem, if we can-we will continue, as we have so well started doing it so far, shaping it England, according to our customs and traditions?

This reflection, profoundly accurate in the
The cynicism of his humor testifies to the lack of Relative success achieved in the United Kingdom by the new known Jewish nationalist movement

312 JEWISH ENGLAND

under the name of Zionism. Zionism, which has with the aim of ensuring future security for victims from anti-Semitic persecution a safe haven in a country definitively reserved for regeneration-the development of Israel, which would find its full development intellectual and political development in a state Jewish, very normally determined in Palestine-tine (1).

Most of the Israelites settled in Europe and in the United States they certainly don't care to have a new homeland; they have too many advantages stages to take advantage of all the opu- homelands slow of Christendom where they know how to live and to become so lavishly wealthy. Those from Angle-land in particular hardly gives them any thought to be concerned about Zionism. For nearly For three-quarters of a century, everything has smiled upon them efforts. Not only have they acquired or acquire considerable fortunes, but no class of society being
With the enclosure closed, they can now spread out

(x) This problem was solved in 1896 by a young a highly talented Viennese journalist, the doctor Theodore Herzl. His book: The Jewish State, in which He presented his theory, earning him everyone's admiration.
his readers, friends or enemies. His supporters of the
The first hour was Dr. Max Nordau and Bernard Lazare. |

publicly displaying their vanities, showing themselves off everything, and in the front row, prancing about, to stir up dust, to receive the aristocracy, to appear at Court, in the drawing rooms the most lavish, participate in the politics of nations where they gradually established themselves defamatory lesson.— What could they possibly desire from more? — A Jewish state could not in any way from their point of view, which is infinitely unfavorable. Pleasure seekers first and foremost, eager for all feasts of pleasure and honors, enamored of luxury, a feverish lifestyle, and public tributes, having an immoderate taste for cosmopolitan relations politeness and constant travel for the spa towns, international beaches, large, sunlit cities in winter, where all the Enriched from both worlds, they meet They would find no joy in life. now in a reconstructed Jerusalem which, in their eyes, would be nothing more than a return to a Nationalized ghetto.

On British soil today, their triumph is complete, assured; it seems defiant native. Nothing stands in the way of their actions anymore. the most extravagant; only the kings of gold from United States, those famous multi-millionaires Americans, not all of whom are, many

314 JEWISH ENGLAND

Far from it, of Semitic origin, they humiliate them and They are worried because they feel distanced, both themselves and their Rothschilds, and already relegated to the second plan, by the major industrialists of the confederated States federated and the big money-makers who do—undermine the Wall Street market in New York.

Apart from that, they must recognize that Albion has greatly facilitated their expansion at Home and achieved all their ambitions. For us To convince them, all you have to do is open the directory. English Jew, or, to put it better: The Jewish Year Book, an Annual Record of Matters Jewish, published annually by the Reverend Isidore Harris, M.-A., and edited at the office of the Jewish Chronicle, 2, Finsbury square, at London. The latest issue is dated the Hebrew year 5672–73 (January 1st to December 31st)

December 1872).

The Jewish Year Book, in a few hundred dozens of pages of short text, expressing everything what Israel owns, serves, subsidizes, legitimizes to train or indoctrinate in the metropolis.

It used to be published in a luxurious format in a fort Comfortable volume, bound in soft leather.

Since 1912, its edition has democratized in order to achieve large print runs and the Directory, printed in small type and on papier thin, is now covered only by a layer of red canvas lops and costs only a simple shilling. It is very well divided, ingenious—well understood and very instructive for our teaching. The subjects it contains They provide us with extensive documentation on all questions to consider.

THE NEW SOCIETY 315

It contains valuable notes on all associations, groups, companies, institutions Jewish communities of London and the major English towns, the designation of colleges, synagogues, clubs, assemblies Zionists, the list of celebrities from the nobility or the arts and letters of which the Semitism triumphs over racial prejudices.

It contains statistics on progress Jews in the British Empire, index of events of particular interest the Hebrews, the list of births and of deaths and that of acquisitions made by the Jewish idea in all worlds and all the legal and moral spheres, since the Parliament up to the Court. It's a book sub-Stantiel, extensively documented and which does not leaves nothing to be desired.

For this year 1912 – (which, in the Calen-Israelite drier, bears the date 5672) – the Jewish Year Book presents us with a kind of bibliography of everything related to literature Jewish, rabbinic, Talmudic culture, to the history of history of the general Jewish community and of the Jewish community in England, to essays, novels and short stories calves, almanacs, rituals, music of the synagogue and to newspapers, magazines and magazines, which are weekly, monthly or quarterly.

The Jewish Review, the Jewish Club Magazine, The Zionist, the Hayehudi, printed in Hebrew, the Jewish Express (Yiddish), the Jewish Journal (Yiddish) are published in London. Jewish Herald, Melbourne, Hebrew Standard in Sydney, the Canadian Jewish Times, to Montreal, and the South African Jewish Church Nice, in Johannesburg, where Jews are numerous.

The Jewish Morning is published in New York. Journal and the Daily Jewish Herald, as well as the Volksavocat, very widespread among the Israelites-overseas beds.

This Jewish press is well served and gives a respectable print run (1); it also shines

(1) The circulation of Jewish newspapers is important. The Jewish Chronicle has over 40,000 subscribers and The Yiddish Express, from Leeds, is organized to fire more than 60,000 copies.

THE NEW SOCIETY 317

both in England and in the Colonies where the Jews are so firmly entrenched that nothing but In Bombay we discover two large reading rooms reserved for Jews: The Beni Israel Reading Room and Library and The Jew Free Library and Reading Room...

Catholics in India are, undoubtedly, housed in a less favorable position.

What this Yearbook of the Hebrew World tells us What is most characteristic is that Jewish friendly societies, the Friendly and Benefit Societies, which, for the British Empire-nique, numbering approximately one hundred and sixty, including the Metropolitan Charities, the literary societies and professional unions, the choral and socialist societies, sports clubs Hairdressers and athletic companies. Many These associations are Masonic and connected to the Great Order of Israel and to those of the ancients Maccabeans, the Shield of Abraham or the Brethren of Israel.

This reading shows how and com- strongly and closely linked stand our good Semites in all parts of the globe, what is their power of association, their esprit de corps, their shoulder to shoulder, as say our neighbors. Their battle front seems-clearly organized unit for both the of- defensive than for social defense; it is conceals, effaces itself, according to Jewish tactics, He never discovers the 8th, but he exercises it all the more His power is better understood because it is more occult.

318 JEWISH ENGLAND

The war that the Yuddis are waging in silence to Christians is a war of ambush, of supporters; each one works on it personally in the manner of pickpockets, but there is tou- days, behind the individuals, a community which facilitates operations and the concealment of stolen goods, a sort of fortified camp where people come to do to legitimize the plundered.

All these friendly associations, these s0- Hebrew-speaking fraternal societies cover themselves from a mutual aid society or they claim a charitable, religious purpose or of historical worship.

Here we find the Hebrew Order of Druids, the Ancient Order of Mount Sinai, the Order of the an- Ancient Maccabees, the Union of Peace, the Union of the Fraternity, the Friendly Hebrew Society hand in hand, the Jewish Society independents, the Society of the Daughters of Israel, the Friendly society in honor of Jacob, etc., etc.

The Israelites also found in Angle- land, the most favorable environment for development their associations more or less secrets.

The English people have been trained for a long time date towards occult societies; they abound-tooth in the United Kingdom where freedom of The meeting is relatively very large.

Father Rosea, of Madison, reported sixty who bear cabalistic titles and decorate themselves with medieval attributes which Astounding.

A playwright of the old Romantic school—who would have thrilled with enthusiasm at the audition of these mysterious names: The Iron Room, The Legion of Justice, The Princes of Chau-first, The Knights of the Golden Eagle or again The Sons of Saint George and The Order improved from the Seven Sages.

Trades Unions and trade associations Jewish veils would also merit a study long and thorough which could not find Place here.

The London Society for Promoting Christianity amongst the Jews, whose Lewis Way was the principal founder, between 1808–1814, – did a very large number of converts to the Protestants Anglican Tantisim; so that many Jews, who have lost none of their characteristics their race, are no longer considered Israelites, but like pure Anglo-Saxons.

320 JEWISH ENGLAND

In Margoliouth's time (1851), more than forty clergymen of the Anglican Church cane defectors from the synagogues. The first Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem, Alexander, had been the rabbi of the Norwich synagogue and Plymouth.

The Church of Scotland imitated that of England in his propaganda work among the Jews; – the various Protestant sects have do the same.

There are a very large number of Jews Christians in England, whose statistics is impossible to do.

Freemasonry should normally to be born in this England that remained to tra- towards the time so Gothic in age, in expression and architectural art.

It is understandable that an antiquarian alchemist, who was herald of arms of Windsor under Char- the II, Elias Ashmole, established the bases, imagined the cult, formulated the symbols using numerous borrowings from the Rosicrucians and to the Templars.

However, it was only in 1717 that it was instituted Freemasonry killed in London, with its large-scale operations

THE NEW SOCIETY 321

Lodges, as they still exist today.

Its cradle was the Auberge du Pommier in Charles Street.

From 1742 onwards, the royal family patronized this powerful company that was supposed to serve more in particular English interests that human- uniformity in general.

The Duke of Cumberland, Prince of the Blood, in was elected Grand Master on that date and, upon death of this one, his nephew, Prince of Wales and George IV succeeded him.

The Jews were excluded from the Grand Lodge of London and the Grand Orient for a long time- time; but, from the 18th century onwards, they were admitted to the other lodges.

The history of English Freemasonry which was written fifteen years ago by Jacques Georges-Gould is of rare interest and makes to blossom from melancholic and painful ob- reservations with the reader who knows how to find them the reasons for its harmful influence against Roman Catholicism, in other words popery.

Pius IX showed commendable energy in excommunicating this occult society as an anti-religious society.

21

322 JEWISH ENGLAND

But, under his Pontificate, the Catholics who They were present in large numbers, although they included there-built half-heartedly, deserted imprudently lying, leaving room for Jewish elements which burst into the Lodges.

Semitism is triumphant there today. as we were able to see at the time of the Dreyfus affair and also for-would reveal the influence of the Freemasons... in The Jameson Raid and the South African War.

Since the cosmopolitan Jews have having gained a foothold in English Freemasonry, Lecarac-The nature of this society changed considerably. ly. A number of new Lodges were formed there. for the purpose of showing Jewish favoritism.

11 there was the Dury Lane Dramatic Lodge which pushes forward Jewish managers and actors, the Savage Club Lodge which supports the yellow press and the small, fresh journalists-happily admitted into the News-company Papers Men. More than a fifth of Freemasons English people are Israelites.

We find Lodges, such as Shelley's, where Three-quarters of the F.:. are Jewish, others, like Hiram, are exclusively Semitic, This last Lodge caused so many scandals that the Grand Master of the Order Edward-Al-

THE NEW SOCIETY 323

Bert, since Edward VII, had to resign himself to

to excommunicate him.

What curious investigations could be carried out on the diabolical and Jewish order of the Arch-Berith, which includes the King Salo- Lodges my, of King David, of King Saul, of the baron Hirsch, by Lord Rothschild, by Henry Bern-Stein, by Sir Albert Sassoon and others. He is impossible, in a few lines of a passage-manages study, to say and to demonstrate by a sufficient number of facts the role acquired by Israel within English Freemasonry, especially since the Franco-German war.

The chief rabbi is a Freemason. The Times is "mason" to the point of including the symbols Masonic mosaic bowls in front of his door.

An interesting writer, who published on the question of England and France Masonry, several works that we would like perhaps a little better organized and condense, Mr. Louis-Martin Chagny, made, at this Subject, this worrying remark (1):

"The Jew who becomes a Freemason is immediately

(x) See the works of Mr. Louis-Martin Chagny very interesting on the question of Jewish England. This work comprises four volumes: Semitic ripe for Palladism, that is to say for the Satanism. The F.:. is merely an artificial Jew; The Jew who joins Freemasonry does not . therefore, in a way, causes him to fall from grace, if he puts on the same footing as his FF.:. of race Japhetic. There is the same difference between a Jew and a F.:. than between a Frenchman and a A naturalized French Jew. Similarly, the Englishman not finding the F.°. M.:. sufficient, created triangles and Oddfellowship, satanic to second degree.

324 JEWISH ENGLAND

It is curious to note that the high classes in England are of descent

Franco-Norman and that it is those which allow themselves to be duped by the Jews and the Freemasons lessons with the same nonchalance with which we others, French. The peasant, who is Saxon, keeps safe from these vampires. In Scotland,
We have the Celt. That one—why isn't he everywhere?
The same! — doesn't let anyone fool him.
He has his own Freemasonry and there is hardly of Jews in Glasgow, a city that is half Catholic, half Presbyterian, as one can see—

Albion, English Customs. Paris, 1898. — England and Freemasonry. 1 vol. — Is English a Jewish? x vol. in-18. — England, sovereign of France
by Freemasonry. 1 vol.

THE NEW SOCIETY 325

starter in our chapter I* entitled: The Jews around the world.

To fully understand ML-Martin's opinion
Chagny, it should be noted that in one of his books:
instructive, he supports this rather unexpected thesis—due to the fact that the Englishman was a Jew and descended of lost tribes of Israel, the Saxon word being evidently, according to a writer from the Pall Mall Gazette, a corruption of Zsaac's his, son of Isaac.

But what do we do with the element in this case?
Anglo-Norman?

The early Normans are said to have descended from the Tribe of Benjamin. Evidence of Jewish blood among Modern Normans. Mr. Martin Aubry curiously supports this thesis that we do not we would know how to analyze it here.

The preview is certainly pleasing, but it is One fact is that, like the Jew and the Frenchman
As a Freemason, the Englishman is always anticlerical.
in the religion of others.

England and Scotland have 225,600 masons, among whom nearly 43,000 were Israelis beds mounted in Lodge and which {pedestalized Chamberlain's imperialism.

All the large new hotels, erected with Jewish money, have a "Masonic temple-

326 JEWISH ENGLAND

"nice" specially designed for the accom-folding of the rites and for the banquets of Freemason brothers. Propaganda has never been also active; novices are recruited with ardeur; they are hunting down anti-Masonic booksniques; the movement intensifies as the followers become more powerful and more numerous, - a sinister snowball.

Scottish Freemasonry, whose claims-tions are perhaps excessive, is in its aims that are simultaneously holy, mystical, and atheistic.
She always strove to protect the revolutionaries revolutions that raged across the continent;
she played a role that is now recognized in the French Revolution and during the insurrections Italian rectious. Garibaldi and Mazzini were both affiliated with Lodges of the Eco- Rite
I know. The Jews, who cannot live in good contact with these canny scotches, as they they say to refer to these "Eco-Cunning Men"
"I know," are very few in number in the boxes
the Highlands, which are also the most su-fundamentally anti-Catholic winds.

In the excellent introduction to his ouwork on the Israelites in French society French, Father Lemann, a converted Jew, who inter-lends so skillfully what others cannot-

THE NEW SOCIETY 327

wind to conceive and who has the courage to state everything that so many other authors leave unsaid who were his coreligionists, brings us to valuable revelations about secret societies essentially Jewish and on the taste determined-mined Jews for mysterious associations laughing.

All militant Israelites used of Freemasonry to help their ambition
tion and support good business ventures.

"One thing worth noting," we learn Mr. Edouard Demachy in his important work on the Rothschilds (1), is the declaration-ratio made in the Mainz Report that the Rothschilds were already members of the lodges French and German Masonic lodges from the outset By 1809, it had become impossible to do anything. against this already powerful house without the parties concerned were not previously informed ses. The leadership of Freemasonry, observes Mr. Demachy, is essentially se-mite and the goal pursued by the order is annihi-corruption of great qualities

(1) The Rothschilds. A family of Jewish financiers in the 19th century. 2 vols. in-18, by EDOUARD DEMACHY. – Paris, 1896. Available from all booksellers and from the author, 48, rue Pergolèse.

328 JEWISH ENGLAND

of the Aryan race. To achieve this goal, the Freemasonry sought, before any other something, to destroy autocracy and religion Catholicism based on papal autocracy. tolerates Protestant Christianity because it realizes that his lack of dog- unity his matic deprives him of all power as a result of the endless division of sects. This is why we see in the Freemasonry, Jews and Protestants don- to join hands in a touching display of camaraderie to arrive more quickly at the destruction com- complete Catholicism.

The essential point that characterizes the situation modern Jew, writes the anonymous author of a English review (1), is its predominance in secret societies and primarily in Freemasonry.

"No one could seriously misunderstand- to be born that a secret society exists within of a sovereign community, does not become no more than an offense to this community that one could not deny that the only excuse morality for the creation of a secret society

(x) The Eye-Witness. The Jewish Question. Sep-September 1911. Various issues. Unsigned article.

THE NEW SOCIETY 329

a truly powerful manifestation any tyranny or oppression that can only be combated by means of the secret conspiracy.

"Nevertheless, these secret societies, with-which European upper classes display
They bonded madly one hundred and fifty years ago, have now had their day and have become naked, such an object of ridicule in the lands the most spiritual of modern times – especially in France – how ridiculous it would be to exaggerate their influence. Yet, there was one time when this influence was considerable;
It still is in England. And it is worthy of note that, in any country European, the Jewish element tended less to creating these secret societies is more about controlling them once formed. Some of them (and the most important ones) even adopted a a quasi-Hebrew rite. That's just a detail.
insignificant; but what is important is the extensive cooperation of Jews in the organization of Freemasonry in all countries. Today-from today that the time of secret societies is In the past, this trend began to take hold.
in the opposite direction; however, this is hardly more than for some years now. Although the Jewish race

330 JEWISH ENGLAND

and secret societies cannot be considered designated as having a similar significance-tion, we must recognize that there are between The two of them have such a correlation that anyone claiming to be versed in poli-European technology is obliged to observe it.
vation. And, the most significant finding of all, everywhere, secret societies attacked what exactly did the attack always Jewish and defend precisely what he defended always. The mere fact of having excluded the popu-
The role of these secret organizations is one of enormous importance, and, today, these societies secret territories, which are beginning to understand the ridiculous role they play in the eyes of crowds can only blame themselves—same as having, excluding the proletarians of their breast, cutting off the very principle of their vitality. They fell successively near—that all in the fatal and gross error anti-European, despising the man of little—and to exalt the middle class and its ambi—ideal, albeit material, concepts. These societies occult forces are already beginning to glimpse their punishment which, of course, will be their downfall

Total and fatal failure.

But we can only indicate here at a glance—

THE NEW SOCIETY 33x

wise the power of the Jew through associations countless things that he knows so well how to create and make prosper and all the advantage he knew how to derive from his multiplication in Masonic lodges.

Entire books have been written on the question—tion, which are mostly quite curious to to consult.

Let's return to our Israelites in England.
Mr. Arnold White, in his Modern Jew, the divided into four classes: 1° the New Aristocracy nelle. Nothing like it in Russia or in Ame—risk where the Jew is despised, mocked, excluded from society and has become, as so often in
The Orient, a subject of disorder and scandals.
Those from the English aristocracy have reached this point, Little by little, to hold the upper hand and to deal negotiated directly with the highest classes of the British nation. They make a great show of it.
a sense of patriotism, of charity. Nothing equals the subtlety and flexibility of their intelligence to offer themselves to everyone like enlightened patrons generous and discerning, lovers of taste, color—incomparable readers or lavish lords who understood wonderfully the noble gestures of hospitality.

To be received by these Jews di primo cartello has become a title for young men and smart women of the world. The exclusion of circles and clubs where they reign is considered as a calamity. These Jews by- Having reached the pinnacle, they only willingly spawn among They; they despise other Jews and have with them only official or pseudo- philanthropists. They strive to marry their daughters with the most illustrious descendants lords of the Peerage and they display a determined will to open all avenues honors, by lavishing offerings public and demonstrations of works of charity and philanthropy.

Some of the old queen's words are reported. Victoria, which proves how much she had the distance between the rich and the poor. "I admire talented people and the artists; but I don't have room at home "for millionaires," she once told a no one in his circle who was requesting the admission to the Court of some Naumann or of a vague and ambitious Sassoon.

Another time, it was pointed out to him that such a character excluded from the Court had given very large sums donated to charities which she was interested in and which he deserved Perhaps some consideration. "What is that?"

THE NEW SOCIETY 333

"What can I do?" exclaimed the empress nobly. and queen. Charity is given to God and to poor. She should only be entitled to the rewards Heavenly thoughts. If this person has not given large sums of money just to be received at the Court, this is no longer an act of charity. In In any case, I don't have to deal with it.

Queen Alexandra always shared the feelings of his stepmother; but they were the only ones at Court to disdain networking Israelite.

The second class of English Israelites is always, according to the author of Modern Jew, that wealthy, cultured Jews, often not very devout, but fond of the pride of race and marrying only among themselves. These aim to clutter high-level financial situations celebratory, commercial, political, even the fine arts, at least the professions of mar-antique or painting dealers who con- They are due to certain honors. They descend, generally, three or four generations established in England. They do skillfully their business and they don't make much noise about themselves.

The third class is composed, according to Arnold White, of German-born Jews or

334 JEWISH ENGLAND

Slavs in general (asehkenadim, opposed to the Sephardim). These Israelites, originally from Po-Logne, from Bohemia, from Russia, continue with a stubborn passion for material gain; They display a distressing cosmopolitanism And cynical. They shirk all their duties. patriotic and even commercial. Enjoy-sisters without prejudice, vain, full of desire to parade, to show off, to display oneself all places of pleasure and celebration, in the luxury hotels, casinos, meeting venues daiïns of all kinds, you see them everywhere eager to pick what they consider to be the The only material joys in life. They are hated. in all the circles they frequent; these are they are the ones who constitute the main danger to Israel at John Bull's.

Finally, the fourth class is that of the Alien destitution and miserable emigrants from Slavic nations and Germanic countries and who live in poor neighborhoods looking to happen, to rise above the plebeians and to walk to the conquest of gold by all means more or less scrupulous. They can be found in White-chapel, at Petticoat Lane and Garlston Street in London; they gradually annexed Ham-bury street, Fashion street, Pelham street,

Old Montagu Street and many other streets surrounding neighborhoods.

The alien destitution question has become difficult to solve. The company, well known under the name Jewish Bond of Guardians, found each day its task becomes infinitely more arduous and heavier. The Baroness de Hirsch bequeathed it to him formerly 120,000 pounds. st. and other gifts to him were made from various sides, corn, despite everything, its resources are no longer, for a long time-time, to meet its needs. Immigrant Russian grants continue to invade England-land under the pretext of the vexations they have to endure in Muscovite territory, but, in reality, by the reason that they know the marvel-the charity that awaits them in Albion. Also the destitute, the anarchists, and the Jewish swindlers are they multiplying more and more each day? number on British soil.

Moreover, we had, during the chapters, to make many attempts to the articles that he published in February and March 1900, in La Libre Parole, our distinguished colleague Octave Uzanne under the title: Jewish England. These successive studies, very well documented and which are certainly not not written by a known anti-Semite, really passionate to the point of blindness, but rather by an independent historian and scholar and sincere, they may have, over time, lost some their rigorous accuracy due to the fact that the England's appearance has changed since Joe Chamberlain's retirement and the advent-the formation of the Liberal Party and also as a result the death of many characters who are there cited. We could not do better, however, than to have to resort to it again at length Here. The situation will be very clear. exposed and certainly better than we know it we would know and could show it about of this Judeo-aristocratic and plutocratic so influential in the capital of

336 JEWISH ENGLAND

United Kingdom.

"The author of The Human Comedy, observes Mr. Octave Uzanne, in this curious study, made this judicious remark that, among the strangest men to observe in our society, those who are devoted to it money trading engages in efforts enormous to break out of their indifference and also from their environment.

"After having seduced Fortune and having _ Subjected to all their fantasies in the brothels of the Stock Exchange, the first wealthy English Jewish financiers, gorged with millets collected during the French Revolution, and drawn from the bankruptcies of the nobility, considered making their power flourish vulgar gold handlers in elegance and respectability of salons that had been closed for so long to their intrigues, of the old aristocracy of British Kingdom.

THE NEW SOCIETY 337

"They were devoured by the sacred hunger of the ambitious minds; they inspired titles, in social standing; they wanted to be admitted to to practice these laws of honor which govern the relations with people of the world, they strove to give a noble image to this foreign money hard-won and to make him play a role on the powerful theatre adjacent to the Court. In this traditional democracy British, they swore to create a second aristocracy, an aristocracy of the high thefts, that of Wealth.

"They found in Disraeli a strong supporter" serious, although the great minister made professional the public display of contempt for one's fellow human beings, especially when they were of German origin. The Jews, he would often say, are like the Lobster doesn't always go down well. You have to

to know how to digest it.

» Lord Beaconsfield taught at the high English society, the art and science of this digestion; it prepared the palate and assimilation of the lobster in the organism of the Kingdom. This He was the one who led the Rothschilds to Lady Emily Peel, stepdaughter of the illustrious Sir Robert and daughter of the Marquis of Tweeddale, the first great and honorable lady of England who has dropped her delicate, practiced hand into that of a yuppie brewer of banknotes and of Guineas.

Sister of the second Duchess of Wellington and the Marchioness of Dalhousie, Lady Emily, exquisitely beautiful and witty, was quite powerful enough to trip up old fashion and old prejudices. We were talking about some time after this sudden appearance the Rothschilds in a world that until then had been so furiously closed to the Israelites; but those— Here, as always, they found a way to to be accepted by an obsequious good grace and also by luxurious and almost oriental gifts that they gave in their palaces finally open to this can of smart people whose they had feared for so long that they would not be able to appease the rigidity.

"Following the Rothschilds, other families

THE NEW SOCIETY 339

Jewish women from London skillfully slipped through the net. in society. They were the Goldsmids, the Jessel, allied with the Rothschilds and the Goldsmiths Montefiore, whose father, created a baronet, was appointed chief justice or first judge of the nation; then the Solomons, devoted to the sciences and silently preparing the way; finally, the Sassoon, calling themselves Parsees (who are (still Semites), but, in reality, born Jewish from Bombay. These latter, of a tapa-bohemian-looking, fond of dressing up highlighting and displaying their relationships, at first in the ranks of which appeared for a moment the Prince of Wales Edward Albert, future Edward VII, who often associated with Arthur Sassoon in his castle at Hove.

Arthur Sassoon died in Ascott in May. 1912, in the residence of Leopold de Rothschild.

"Sir Edward-Albert Sassoon married a daughter of Baron Gustave de Rothschild; Sir A. Sassoon, very colorful, almost black, se married to a Perugia, sister of Mr. Léopold de Rothschild; on the other hand, Miss Sassoon has married to an Israeli journalist, Mr. Frederick-A. Beer, and, under the name of M^{rs}: Rachel Beer, became famous as an owner and editor of the Observer newspaper, which had, on remembers the run-ins with the famous per-Esterhazy, the man in the Dreyfus affair. The Sunday Times also belonged to this active woman, also a member of the institutes of journalists and Women Journalists.

340 JEWISH ENGLAND

"London still possessed at the beginning of this five centuries Rothschild. Since the death of Baron Ferdinand James de Rothschild, the more enlightened, the most gifted in the "amateur" sense and also the most generous, for he bequeathed to British Museum for over 3 million of art objects, they remain four.

Lord Nathan Meyer Rothschild, the grand banquier became the head of the household. His receptions in his Piccadilly Palace and at the castle of Gunnesbury Park, Middlesex, were the height of fashion.

The smartest people of the highest echelon were keen to honored to be invited. We met there long before his reign, Albert-Edouard

The Prince of Wales, rarely the Princess.

claims that the heir to the throne, formerly, to the time when he loved pomp and celebration which accompanied his youth, would have borrowed to the famous Jewish banker the large sum and that, Unable to pay, he ennobled his creditor-around 1885, pushing his favors to this extent that Queen Victoria was formally notified to visit the new lord, which caused a considerable noise in the select world which it is near Hyde Park.

An anecdote: Rothschild had lent 1,200,000 pounds to Loyd Bank, whose head he later became Lord Overstone. Hoping to ruin the credit of this bank, which he was bothered by it, Rothschild suddenly demanded one day the amount lent: he needed it all. a continuation, however pointless. "Have her take it," replied Lord Overstone; she is in sacks in our cellar." The banker, smelling the danger, had not used this money and had kept it intact. The old Rothschild had found someone this time who was cleverer than him and in it was at his own expense.

"Nathan-Meyer Rothschild, Baron of Emsworth of Austria, born in 1840, son of Lionel-Nathan de Rothschild, born in 1842, married the daughter of Baron Charles de Rothschild, of France, from whom he had a son, Lionel-Walter, a naturalist distinguished realist. From 1865 to 1885, Lord Rothschild was a member of Parliament for Aylesbury; since his elevation to the peerage, he made part of the Upper House.

342 JEWISH ENGLAND

"The latter's younger brother, Alfred-Charles de Rothschild, Austrian Consul General Hungarian, remained single and had an affair known to Mrs. W., with whom he displayed a long-time the girl - her daughter - in the foreground theaters before he married her to a noble and young eccentric and penniless lord who was for a long time the well-known admirer in Paris of Lady de G...

"A collector of art objects, he published" (for private circulation), two large volumes on its own collections.

"Mister Alfred's company, as we know it long appointed in London, was always very sought after by all partygoers and superficial people. We know that he put his pride on being the am-Phytrion of London and French artists and that, at his house, we were pleasantly encabotinized at Seamore Place and also in the countryside, in its Herts' residence: Halton House. The ends suppers in the company of ladies were frequent there. Mr. Alfred proved to be an elegant agent of contemporary English demoralization.

– This bachelor was often seen at Marlborough Club, which he frequented assiduously
Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, when he from Saint James's Palace, he only had to cross

THE NEW SOCIETY 343

Pall Mall to move on to this small club. Mr. Alfred was also part of Saint James's, the Bachelor, Turf and other clubs.

The third Rothschild brother, Leopold de Rothschild, born in 1845, who was very widespread In London, he married a Jewish woman from Trieste, Maria Perugia, daughter of a horse trader. This amateur sportsman, who lived in Ascott, where He has a superb property as well as in Newmarket, is best known for that of 'Hamilton-Place, in London. He did perhaps less People spoke of him only to his elders. He was credited with everything-sometimes rather eccentric tastes.

"All these Rothschilds are related to the Lord Lord Rosebery, former Prime Minister, who In 1878, she married Hannah, daughter of Baron Meyer, died in 1890. Lord Rosebery is, moreover, the the first English nobleman to marry a Jewish woman. After him came Lord Curzon, whose wife, Miss Leiter is American, but of American origin. Israelite, it is claimed. All these plutocrats Israelites demonstrate a generosity of apparatus, never alienating a capital sum without seeking immediate benefit, in a learned advertisement. There is none among them donors comparable to Tate, who abandoned gave the nation a gallery of works of art contemporary which constituted in London a a sort of wonderful Luxembourg Museum;

There are no charitable Peabodys, no baronesses Burdett-Coutts, Dukes of Norfolk or Westminster always has the money at the end fingers for the poor and institutions popular. Admirable benefactors, com-pant all the pleasure of doing good by ca-and expressing in the art of charity this ineffable language of kindness accessible to all, this penetrating language of Christianity that the mute people know how to speak and deaf people can hear.

"The Anglo-Jewish nobility list, of aristocratic plutocrats of the West End, million-Park Lane's development would be long, – continues the aforementioned columnist for La Libre Parole,
– (in 1900). Since Lord Wandsworth (Sydney)
James Stern) up to Baron Pirbright (Henry of Worms). The Sterns have often supplied testimonies of moral imbalance, some were cited one who had to retire to a home of health. Another recently married a beauty queen.
Bradshaw, who is not Jewish; her income are 150,000 pounds and he barely spends any of it 5,000. His sister is Lady Sherbone. In the parade we would see Sir George appear

THE NEW SOCIETY 345

Faudel-Philipps, son of the ex-alderman and lord.
Mayor of London, husband of Levy's daughter Lawson, director of the Daily Telegraph, then Sir Samuel Montagu, economist and financier, married to a daughter of Louis Cohen du Stock-Exchange, then Sir Francis Abraham and Sir
Joseph Sebag-Montefiore, grandson of the famous Moses Montefiore, then Sir David Salomon, son of David, first Jewish lord mayor of London, 1853. (11 there was indeed one di-(Zaïne since.) Finally, Sir Saul Samuel, Sir
Bernhard Samuelson and a host of others Gentle Baronets, holding offices in the State and predominant situations in the 80-society.

"We will also need to show the Batter-allied with the Rothschilds, the Lévy Lawson already named and having become the Lawsons, the Bis-choffsheim and especially the one called "The "beautiful Madame Biskh," the daughter of a jeweler from the court of Vienna and sister of the famous Bischoff, famous boulevard of Paris, whose salon would deserve a whole humorous chapter.

one would note, in this biographical account and anecdotally, the prodigious progression of Jewishness in London high society and the care that all these children of Abraham have

346 JEWISH ENGLAND

brought and still bring to make up their originally, to disguise their names, to convert to the Protestant or Catholic religion in order to as-to secure their marriages and to conceal them for all-days this Semitic strain which makes them blush.

"We will see how the Jewish network is having managed to surround it on all sides, today, the world's largest metropolis and how London is threatened with destruction by poisoning of this Israeli lobster, which has multiplied at point of no longer passing, despite all the spirit of Lord Beaconsfield, who professed the art of his Israelite assimilation. Not to mention the Cosmopolitan, the Jews are really too currently in London to be absorbed.
England will eventually, sooner or later, vomit them up.

"The appearance in high society of an-clay of a new Jewish- aristocracy financial quickly dismantled the for-polished steel ornaments that formed the orbeggarly citadel of the old nobility of kingdom. Behind these entrenchments, in the cant and the respect for a distinguished spleen, it once flourished like a flower of superior humanity, a little politeness rigid, prejudiced, and clad in cor-elegant reaction.

THE NEW SOCIETY 347

"The Jewish community of pleasure-seeking plutocrats," turbulent, always in action, needing of continuous movement to conceal their Moral poverty altered social customs, disrupted the laws of decorum, of high etiquette and good manners, and constituted a sort of heterogeneous company for the exploitation of pleasure by unionizing the inexhaustible capitals of boredom that are born and multiply in the idleness of the wealthy classes of modern civilizations.

"It was these new millionaires who brought to England a laissez-faire attitude and rather uninhibited Levantines, who outwardly social gatherings by attracting the smart people in lavish cabarets and hotels of a flashy and oriental luxury founded by their Care.

"They were also the ones who unleashed the fury" the genre of golden Bohemia by attracting, at the detriment of art itself and of social relations commercials, painters, writers, actors especially in the drawing rooms of gentlewomen. This were these former outcasts, eager for the spoils social, who organized these tea-evenings, literary and musical by whom were transformed the social gatherings where ago-

348 JEWISH ENGLAND

slowly and stupidly eases the spirit of cause-laughter. It was they again who installed in the world this terrible parasitism of the cabotism swimming in performance, which finally led to the desertion of the Home to go to good fortune dinner and supper at trendy restaurants in strangely mixed societies, cradled in their artificial intoxication through music Gypsies, thus preparing this decadence of the old British aristocracy threatened by died amidst prodigious luxury A flower that always surprises mainlanders on a trip to Albion en fête.

"Certainly, this new life game, pa-enthroned by the emancipated Jews, newly the reception in the high life was further exaggerated by the extravagances and vulgarities of appearance certain shiny and artificial elements of the American world.

"This other company, which is itinerant in its training-

tion, eager for joy, for unions and alliances, superficial, banal, welcoming to all dazzling showboating, blind to the origin fortunes, but judging a man by what he wins, is herself severely affected in its body by the fast-incubation virus of Semitism. It contributes, through its contribution

THE NEW SOCIETY 349

eccentric in the elegance market and from the luxury of London, to the disintegration of closed societies that were for so long the prestige and glory of "birth" in the United Kingdom.

"There is no high society without a prin-
a rigorous selection process. "It is important,
"as Shakespeare said, to choose one's comments well"
"Life companions. Folly and wisdom are win with the same ease as the sick-"Contagious diseases."

"One must believe that the day when the aristocracy England opened its bosom to Israel, it did not not a beautiful "chopin". She traded her res-predictable prejudices against an imbalance of beliefs and morality that all gold and the the splendor of modern Hebrews could not, alas!
no longer to compensate or buy back.

"What's pleasing to note is..." that the social breach remains open in The high-life and revolution are intensifying every day more in worldly customs and in the ways that are an essential part In the evolution of morals, there was no longer any distinction possible in the confusion of ranks and the uni-fashion form.'All Jews aspired,

"therefore, to become swells or "smart"

350 JEWISH ENGLAND

"Gentlemen." – "Let the pe-
"Tity Jews," the bigwigs seemed to be saying.
coming from Jacob's ladder, in their friezes gilded apotheosis. Make way for the Jews on all the practicalities of the social theatre's magical performances!

"Also, in the middle of the White- ghettos Chapel, in the scrap metal markets, at the secondhand dealers and antique dealers, the hearts pa-
The eternal memories of the old Solomons beat with emotion and ambition for the decisive successes of their offspring, especially for the last twenty years or more: Lords; are they also our sons?... Why not !

» Like Baron Hirsch not long ago, contemplating from the top of the stairs of his hotel where he receives-had all the high-ranking figures of Christianity European gentry, he exclaimed contemptuously before his children gathered together: "All these people, from here
"twenty-five to fifty years old, will all be our » sons-in-law or n08 Concierges | »

"The sons of the filthy usurers of Hounds-" ditch or Leadenhall street escape
So, en masse, their ancestral filth.
They are baptized, given a presentable name, they horse dealers, their origin, we strive to to get Rugby, Harrow, even admitted to Eton, then Oxford, or perhaps Cambridge where they

THE NEW SOCIETY 351

relate to everything that England account also chosen from among the sons of the young and old sporting, military or nobility policy.

"Upon graduating from university, they settle down" in the West End, are part of fashion clubs-nables, are named Barristers, doctors or high-ranking professors; they do not visit secretly their elderly parents, of whom they pride is at stake in these sordid neighborhoods that the very interesting Jewish novelist Zhangwill have so well described them throughout his work Main: The Children of the Ghetto.

"This struggle for high-life, this struggle for fashionable life stimulates and enhances taste of civil status fraud, today, all the Low-class thievery in London. The children Catholics and Protestants make changes their birth certificate. Those who were born

Abraham chose a name derived from the name originating from: Brams, Braham, Brayam; those those who are descended from Samuel call themselves: Sams, Sammy or Sammell; the Bernards choose:
Barnetts, Burnetts, Bennets, Bens; sometimes the
The transformation is absolute and turns into a pseudo-donymous: thus Moses Cohen, who launched his rep-tation in London and had his laundry laundered there and

352 JEWISH ENGLAND

his origins, became the musician Isidore of Lara.

"Once launched into high society, these young Israelites in disguise show themselves to be strong audacious: they slip into all environments and readily extend a hand to their coreligionists-pairs less skilled than themselves for the introduce into clubs frequently so-held by money from financiers who came from Frankfurt. They make it a point of honor to dressing at fashionable tailors with a severe correction, they aim for the supreme elegance and would sometimes achieve it if the feet and the nose, the indestructible nose, did not accuse too vividly their ancestry.

"However, it is not uncommon for some of these gentlemen, as circumspect as they are circumspect-concise people find no way to marry, very
In Christian terms, some wealthy heiress... insightful about the physiognomy of races; it is the consecration by the unacknowledged Jew who 8th he refrained from inviting its author to his wedding, the old Jacob, Aunt Rebecca and the little ones cousins Esther and Sarah, but we must be reasonable and know not to compromise to spend a lifetime of scholarly concealment tions, especially on the eve of starting a family

THE NEW SOCIETY 353

new, very Orthodox, a Jewish family unknowingly, and among which one encounters-will perhaps, later on, be vehement, fer-
"Winds and sincere anti-Semites-anything can happen."

Young Jewish girls from New Age families enriched in Whitechapel or elsewhere, like to marry Christians, who treat them— They say they are better than their coreligions. naires.

This is how it is in London, where the company is necessarily very mixed as a result of frequent— recent marriages between various classes seemingly very distant circumstances, the Jew can operate openly or insidiously by dissimulating its origins. — Everything that corrupts, ferments, and all corrupting leaven is found in the germ of Semitism which we certainly encounters excess in all the circles of the English metropolis.

To consider only the press of London, we can affirm that she is for a too large a part of it handed over to Israel. Many managers or editors conceal their religion, falsify their name or use of a pseudonym. Where there is none, at all evidently, from the director's point of view, there is a command—diploma to exercise the judiciary.

23

354 JEWISH ENGLAND

Each one, according to his character and his way to consider things will exaggerate or diminish— will diminish the importance of the Jewish problem, writes the anonymous author of a study on the question in The Witness, in September 1911.

"We hear," he said, among other things, declare from all sides that the Jews are the masters of the press. This is absolutely Not true. In England, which is notoriously the only country in Europe where they exhibit a Excessive respect for Jewish power, they currently hold only one important newspaper (The Times). On the contrary— We observe that if certain organs main ones, such as the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna and the Tribune, from Rome (as well as a or two dozen other leaves per garlic—their) are Jewish, there is, however, a censorship

a dozen others who make men's fortunes absolutely foreign to Jewish blood and do not feel-before any particular sympathy for the Jewish ideas.

There is a singular optimism there, Mr. Octave Uzanne, in 1900, reported in La Libre Parole the following newspapers having directions or

THE NEW SOCIETY 355

antisemitic ties. Let's look at the review that he was doing with it then:

"At the Daily Telegraph, we find as" owner Sir Edward Levy Lawson, who, pocketing the Levy, became before leaving his post Sir Edward Lowson. At the Daily News, Let us salute the capitalist director, Mr. Oppenheim, whose name is a whole program in itself;
while Sir J.-R. Robinson is the manager and ME-T. Cook, the literary editor. At the Saint-James's Gazette, behind Mr. Hugh Chis-Holn, the editor-in-chief, watches and monitors
the good Semitic landowner W. Steinkop.

"In the Daily Mail, Mr. Alfred-C. Harmsworth (since Lord Northcliff) would be, without that one can affirm, of Israelite origin.
In the Sunday Times, it's Sassoon's daughter, the active M F.-A. Beer, who governs with a number of Jewish editors. At the Observer, the same lady exercises her supreme authority, at the Woman. ME-A. Bennet is rampant, at the Young-Israel. Young Israel could not fail In London, ML-J. Greenberg heads the march towards the promised lands.

"We have seen, regarding the Jameson raid,
how the Times showed itself deeply attached and Masonically linked to the

356 JEWISH ENGLAND

the Jewish cause, and the role he played in the Transvaal financial war. We can see The triangle and other Masonic attributes depicted in mosaic at the entrance to his offices.

At the Standard, editor Sydney Law is Israelite, in The Sun, in the Westminster Gazette,
At the Sunday special, the Jews order
the cavalry of Saint-Georges.

"In all the English newspapers per-no one would dare, even now, to accuse the Jewish Bank, nor denounce the harmful influence of the Israelites in general affairs
The country's rales. Whatever the house of Chief Newspapers of London, to which one
If you are looking for someone, you can be sure to find one there.
mysterious veto for anything that might be sus-likely to harm the Judaizers.

Among the leading professional journalists Zionists – who are Hebrew-speaking in London, a little everywhere, perhaps with more authority than talent, we should in this regard draw up a long list, but we prefer to avoid the personalities and to avoid unnecessary controversies. Today, there are changescomments in the English press and the situation
It is no longer the same as it was twelve years ago:

The Daily News changed ownership a few days ago

THE NEW SOCIETY 357

a few years ago; he now belongs,
we believe, to George Cadbury, a wealthy manufacturer-cant of Maison Cadbury brothers Limited, famous for the preparation of cocoa. Cad-Bury is not Jewish, but he is a strong non-formative, and his newspaper became the organ from that party. A few months ago, the Morning Leader, a radical newspaper, merged with the Daily News.

The S'-James's Gazette no longer exists, having for some years merged with Evening Standard.

The Westminster Gazette is now de-came to be the property of a certain Mond. He is
He was designated Sir Alfred Moritz and he got married In a Christian manner. At the University, it seems, the students once gave it to him, as well as to his brother, nicknamed handsome Mond and half

Mond! Sir Alfred Moritz Mond is the owner-editor of The English Review, and chairman of a considerable number of industrial companies.

The Sun no longer exists.

There is now another newspaper of the matin, the Daily Express, whose editor is MR-D. Blumenfeld and the deputy editor Mr. Ellis Baker or Barker, who went by another name-both Ellembackher or Ellembackh.

358 JEWISH ENGLAND

They might be Israelites for nothing affirm.

Edmond Picard, in his Jewish psychology of Aryan-Semitism, signals the sin- aptitude the Hebrew gulière to networking, to push oneself to be, to insinuate oneself into a function that can highlight or provide him with opportunities of influence or profit. 11 exposes the boldness special Senate resolution to move forward, bri- to secure all advantageous positions without having awareness of the restraint of which the generality of those among whom he lives cannot 8th to defend, by a more moral impossibility often stronger than a physical impossibility. Nothing could be more accurate.

In London, the Israelites hold the keys. the most powerful tanks, those where humanity seeks to quench its thirst with the boredom of living; they possess gold, pleasures Sirs, the drug addicts of intoxication, the theaters, the caravanserais of fictitious societies, the art shops and temples of wealth.

There are few theatres in the metropolis, which escape them. - To the management of Covent Garden Opera House, after Sir Augustus Harris, who was from the Synagogue, we have seen the international Maurice Grau, whose Bar-

THE NEW SOCIETY 359

Numerism spread from London to New York and who loved to launch, support and promote dogs and musicians of her race, including the divine Sarah.

It was he who got Cohen to play, said Isidore de Lara, and who produced on her stage, the most select from the kingdom, the works of Erlanger and those of Frédéric Hymen Cowen, composerauthors as authentically Jewish as the late Meyerbeer and who strive to push their David's harp, reaching the highest heights ambitions, in this land of Saul. – Arthur Sullivan, the composer, so it is claimed he traded his name of Solomon for that of Sullivan. Is this correct? – Chi lo sa!

The Napoleon of Anglo-Saxon Theatres contemporary, in New York, and also from
He spent a long time in London, he is the American Jew Charles Frohman, who owns forty-eight theaters in the United States and four in England land, all managed by a syndicate of Jews.
Charles Frohman wields absolute power tyrannical over all Anglo-Saxon artists, forced to accept his conditions under penalty to be boycotted in all nations of English language. In London, he managed to monopolize numerous scenes. The authors, adapting-playwrights, dramatic translators, Israelites, and so on

360 JEWISH ENGLAND

that authors of the same origin are welcome-read by him with a marked preference.

The director of the Drury National Theatre
Lane was a Jew for a long time. Also Youd-Tom B. Davis, who presided over the destinies of the Lyric before taking the Apollo. Likewise Loenfeld of the Prince of Wales Theatre; let us mention also Loewenstein, who gathers in his hands crooked the direction of two great Guiimportant gnols.

The master tragedian Sir Herbert Tree, we-Knight, who left Haymarket for to have His Majesty's built where, as as director-author, he personifies with an uncontestable talent and a consummate art of putting on scene, all the great Shakespearean heroes,
He was said to be the son of a Semite: Julius Beer-

Bohm; but this cannot be proven.

Sir George Alexander, whose real name was George Sampson, author and director at St-James's theatre, could less easily deny its attached to the religion of Moses. Hugh Moss, who manages the new Hippodrome, built by the ar-Alfred Rothschild's gent, and who, on the other hand, is the head of a union for the exploitation of thirty-eight Music Halls, both in London and in the provinces, would also be, if our

THE NEW SOCIETY 361

The information is accurate; a very characteristic Jew... sterilized.

Among the theatre costume designers we find a number of Augustes, Nathans, and Mays important.

Jewish unions at the Alhambra and the Empire; at the Princess Theater in the past: E. Arthur, had a single trademark; in the Earls Court Exhibition, which is almost finished their career and in White City, Israel abounds; What to think of the Coliseum and Oswald Stolle? its director? Finally, if we were to open a-search in the English actors' directory, in the Players Directory, we would have a long list of Judeo-cabots and Anglo-American-cabots cains, which, incidentally, would be of little consequence It's important, if all these people are sometimes shady. did not invade the salons, and was not a a considerable factor in contagion by illicit legitimate encounters within high society, crossbreedings whose mysterious products in-will, in the future, be the anthro-po-socio-astonished journalists at the discovery of the expression Semitic sion of types and customs in the Protestant English capital.

In the art trade, the Israelites are kings in London as well as in Paris.

sd

362 JEWISH ENGLAND

Art Gallery, the Continental Gallery, the New Gallery, Mendoza, Japanese Gallery and how many others were and still are in their possession. All the major merchants of the Bond Street buildings exercise their skills Jewish people in the trade of high-quality linens brand. :

All of London knew Wertheimer, whose Sargent painted, fifteen years ago, the features joyfully hedonistic, eyes like lanterns, noses banana-shaped, with lips rimmed in sweet chili pepper which prompted Londoners visiting the Royal Academy: "This is not a portrait of a "Man, but of a race."

Next to this extremely wealthy and typical Wertheimer, deceased today we believe, we let us note the good forgers of chiefs-of artworks covered in grime, the major buyers From Christie's, the Davises, Benjamin, Joseph Dürbacher, Duveen, Goring, Cohen, Litchfield, Sedelmeyer and fifty others who earn what they want by speculating on the vanity of naive and candid millionaires amateurs.

There is no Christian who can help them to compete in the industry if it is not point firmly seated on the colossal fortune-dirty from an Agnew or a Martin Colnaghi. All those who venture a few steps in London meager capital in old master painting are cleaned in six months by the Jewish tribe of Old and New Bond Street.

THE NEW SOCIETY 363

All the new major hotels in London the Cecil, the Savoy, the Victoria, the Carlyour, the Hans Place, the Metropole, the Gordon Hotels are in the hands of unions more or less Judaizing. All have Masonic temples-niques fitted out in their hotels. The concessionaries of the Spiers and Pond establishments, who feed and alcoholic London and beautiful-a number of English cities were at the end of the 19th century foreign Yiddis, even French Israelites, Crémieux, Javal and Louis Léon. The Lyons company, which supplied Earls Court Exhibition, Crystal Palace and nearby forty restaurants, had as concessionnaires at its beginnings of the Hebrews who erected fantastic recipes while pressing their employees as well as several lawsuits. The public can attest to this.

The famous tobacco centralizers of In London, the Salmon and Gluckstein families have... supply agreements with a thousand debits tobacco companies which, in a way, tra-

364 JEWISH ENGLAND

are worthwhile in their name. – They are Jews. They ruin the freedom of this pseudo-monopoly sale of cigars and Virginia products and the Philippines. Bays- Le Bon Marché water "Whiteley" was an Israelite; he dominated and destroys the businesses in his neighborhood, as Barner, another Jew, forbade all competition in the Kensington district and as Har-Rold in the Brompton district attracted all to himself in his vast bazaars. We know What were the morals of this Whiteley? the universal provider, murdered by his son Illegitimate. A sensational, scandalous trial. in every respect, still remains in the memory of all the English.

The great tailors of Tottenham Court Road, Oxford Street, the Strand are almost all the Jews; as well as the jewelers, the goldsmiths and jewelers, ladies' dressmakers, including the decorated Isidore Jacob, known as Paquin, who owns 80,000 shares of the company Paquin (Limited). Also Jews 1582 pawnbrokers or pawnshops of London, antique dealers, many lawyers, of doctors, of professors. The dominant Jewish women show themselves everywhere, manifest themselves in every way. part in the orchestration of re- currencies transformed in the metropolis of the British Empirefuck.

THE NEW SOCIETY 365

And what if we talked about the Stock Exchange!
What an indescribable ghetto we are
we would discover in this temple of speculation!
How many Dreyfuses call themselves French and who come from Germany! Since the South-
In Africa, they speak more German than English.
and the Cohens, to name just one, tien-four columns of the Directory, as Brokers and various financial agents. The observers vators can, having noted the facts, assert-sea that everywhere in London there is noise,
There is scandal and outrage among the Israelites.

Indeed, we see them in the establishments debauchery discovered on Cleveland Street;
We are not surprised to encounter them in the case of the little telegraph operators and in that of D'Ardlemont. |

They can still be found as innkeepers of massage and beauty spas, unsavory businesses that flourished in London. In all places where the purulence of Morals begin to take shape where money can to be considered, in Tolstoy's words, as la the possibility of exploiting the work of others, of to create an impersonal slavery, of domestication-

[has

Pen

366 JEWISH ENGLAND

that the man and the woman, the Jew appears to harness, under any pretext whatsoever, these modern helots at the carousel which serves to drato wrest gold from all the depths of corruption tion, human vanity and folly.
Pawnbrokers, or pawnbrokers, and pawnshop directors are almost all Jews, there are nearly two thousand of them, but the
The percentage is regulated according to the law. These are the Money lenders who They are the terror of the country. For thirty years they swarm, and despite all the laws that were made to to moderate and regulate them, they all escaped. days with cunning. There was Zsaac Gordon, veri-Monster table, Polish Jew by origin. He arrived penniless in London. In four years he left-came to lend 42,000 pounds to some young people Nobles with a 60% interest rate. It was a scandal. This man owned thirty-two in London offices, all under false names. In a on one street his name was Barnet; on another, Edmunds: in a third, Charles. In short, he He counted fifty-two pseudonyms, because he had nearly twenty extra offices in the provinces. Every day, the name Gordon. appeared in the newspapers, but still without decisive result, because he always managed to esquiver justice, although justice has been quite harsh on him. This Isaac Gordon ruined hundreds of people, and it was a It was scandalous that he was never punished. He died. at 35, leaving behind nearly thirty million francs. There are others. Like Sam Lewis, who He had a palace in Grosvenor Square. More cunning Although Gordon was less of a usurer, he became The friend of all the impoverished nobles. At his table one met marquises, lords, young Squires of the countryside. His large wife, a good musician, patron of actors and the singers. The Sam Lewis were long-times, so to speak, fashionable. It was claimed that they helped the Isaacs with their finances Gordon and the other Polish adventurers and Germans.

THE NEW SOCIETY 367

German, Polish and Hungarian Jews which are found in large numbers in present-day London their elements are terribly vulgar, audacious and of dishonesty. They have neither heart nor guts. Arnold White says, in his book so often quoted in The Modern Jew: "These cosmopolitan Jewslitanies, without religion or morality, do not make absolute nothing for the poor, nor even for... the poor fellow believers. They are cos-Mopolites who abandoned France or Germany so as not to become more English. They have tougher skin than that of an elephant. You chase them from a gate and They come back in through the window. They have no delicacy. Very rich, they do not spend their money to satisfy their luxury and their sensual tastes. They throw away the dishonest money-gained in pleasure, in hotels, in restaurants and theaters. They are the ones who fill the opera house stalls. But ask them a shilling for a poor man, whether he is Jewish or Christian, and you will only get a laugh from it. sarcastic. Mr. Kisch, Jewish, director of the Jewish relief organization, said that these cosmopolitan Jews do not give Absolutely nothing for the poor. Materialistic and Heartless, they only corrupt the people in the midst of which they live, through the love of auspicious.

The Ashkenazim, or Polish Jews and Germans, arranged to meet in Johan-Nesburg, and it was they who contributed in South Africa unleashed this war which was so disastrous, from so many points of view.

When the police conduct a "raid" on the homes of "Disorderly" houses, or "clubs" of low-class people upstairs, we always discover that they are...

THE NEW SOCIETY 369

Jews who are usually the owners Polish or German Jews.

A district (suburb) of London that is ap-The pele "Highbury New-Park, and which was ha-formerly owned by scholarship students and wealthy newborns merchants, etc., is now entirely Jewish. and it is now called, ironically, "Highbury Jew-Park". Another neighborhood, outside central London, and to the northeast which is called "Stoke Newington" (it's very close of Highbury) has also become a new Ghetto.

There would be a curious study to be done on the Jewish quarters of London as well in Whitechapel is like the West End. But a

A single book would barely suffice to describe everything the types of the various Israelite colonies of the metropolis. The notes we took are so abundant that, in order not to overload In this chapter, we prefer not to invent them. torier.

The invasion of England by the ele-Jewish relations were quite rapid. There is just one In the 19th century, in 1812, the United Kingdom had no barely more than 8,000 Jews, of whom 6,000 resided in London. From that moment on, the Jewish population England's increased constantly, grew-

:

370 JEWISH ENGLAND

health slowly, but regularly, of elements coming from the Netherlands and Germany and who eventually occupied an entire neighborhood in the East End of the capital. Suddenly, towards 1887, the date of the great Russian persecution, the the movement intensified. Regarding immigration, in particular...
Individual immigration was succeeded by collective immigration.
Jewish masses flocked from the East to England-land and even its colonies. In 1901 (besides the emigrants who form a population-floating-point (escaping statistics), the Jews numbered no less than 160,000 in the United Kingdom and 100,000 in its colonies.
In 1908, their number was estimated at 250,000.
for Great Britain alone. In this name-London is half the size of Manchester,
Leeds, Liverpool to a significant extent,
each of these cities possessing a large community. In the colonies, the increase-the Israelite element was almost entirely parallel.

The Jews were indeed required, according to all logically, they flocked to the flag of England, which has become, according to the expression, but typical of Cecil Rhodes, the greatest active trading partner of the world. They developed a taste for it.
to walk under the shelter of this pavilion of the universal trade to practice all kinds of imginables of mercantilism, brokerage and exchanges that resemble schools of cunning and deception.

There was a tremendous surge around 1890;
more than 30,000 Jews from the lowest class emigrated from Russia to England, not en masse, but in small successive batches.
Most of them settled in London in the East End, where their wealthy coreligionists they first granted them a few se-courses. Living only on bread and water, they acc-accepted the lowest wages. This was the mo-where it flourishes most vigorously sweating system, which makes the work sweat at Poor, starving devil. The Jewish tailors – Brothers help each other – these demanded.
unfortunate twenty hours of work per day and they paid twelve sous for them. Public opinion was aroused; there were articles in the newspapers, studies in journals; and one could fearto say for a moment that the English proletarians do not they protested against such competition.
In short, nothing happened in T1 except that they lasted.
For their part, they resigned themselves to sweating a little more.

On this starvation wage, the wretched-
However, some farmers found ways to collect what

372 JEWISH ENGLAND

the money they lent to other poor people more prodigal wretches than them, provided they are reimbursed double before the end of the se-Maine. And, from then on, they were saved and the
The destitute of London fostered a plague of more.

These Jews soon found another way to exploit misery. They arrived with the socialist and anarchist ideas widespread in certain Russian circles where they had been more active of the ferments. They became the ap0-very similar ideas in the taverns and the English meeting places, and began a
A work of undermining and dissolution that goes unseen hardly yet, but which risks producing disastrous results.

Finally, in addition to these dissocial elements, they spread to London and the major English cities have elements of corruption and of physical degeneration, because they are almost all afflicted with neurosis and illness skin diseases; their women are more ill-healthy still and the sickly children they produce. They all create flaws that will worsen. and will multiply among their descendants.

Many of them had embarked for America; but the government of

THE NEW SOCIETY 373

The United States didn't want them and sent them back. to the hospitable Old England as indecisive rables.

Today, all these wretches hope to reach the pinnacle like so many of their predecessors Decelerators in their careers. They already see the upstarts who appear in the Chamber of Lords, in Parliament, in all the high government positions and even in all parts of the naval or territorial army British.

Let us, indeed, open the Jewish Yearbook and see the situation at that date in 1912.

In the Israelite peerage (peering) we remember. Let's counter the names of Baron Michelham, of Hellingly (Sussex), of Baron Rothschild of Tring (Hertford), of Baron Swaythling, of Swaythling (Hampshire), from Baron Wandsworth, of Wandsworth (Surrey); as a foreign-For example, let's mention those of Baron George of Worms, baron of the Austrian Empire, and of the baroness of (Goldschmidt) Palmeira (Portuguese baroness).

The Jewish Baronetage includes the characters next: Sir George Albu, Sir Herbert Benjamin Cohen, Hon Sir Sassoon Jacob David, Sir George Faudel Phillips, Sir Charles S. Henry (Member of Parliament), Sir Charles James

Jessel, Sir A. Levy Lever, Sir George Henry Lewis, Sir Alfred Mond (Member of the Parliament), Sir Francis Abraham Montefiore, Sir Sigmund Newmann, Sir Lionel Phillips, Sir Herbert Henry Raphaël (Member of the Parliament), Sir Edward Levier Samuel, Sir Marcus Samuel, Sir Edward Albert Sassoon (deceded in May 1912), Sir Jacob Elias Sassoon, RH Sir Edgard Speyer, finally Sir Adolph Tuck; in total, nearly twenty Baronets authentically Semitic, not to mention those who disguised their origins.

The Jewish Knightage, including cavalry to be linked to non-transferable titles, appears less flourishing. It includes: Sir Frederick Cowen, Sir David Harris, RH, Sir Rufus Isaac (Member of Parliament), Sir Otto Jaffe, Sir Sidney Lee, Sir Maurice Levy (of Parliament), Sir Joseph Lyons, Sir Philip Magnus (of Parliament), Sir Frederick-Louis Nathan, Lt. Col. Sir Mathew Nathan, Sir Nathaniel Nathan, Sir Harry Simon Samuel, (of Parliament), Sir Isidore Spielmann, Sir Edward David Stern.

The Israelite Companionship includes: Lionel Abraham, Charles Davis, Waldemar Mordecai Wolf Haffkine, Colonel Sir David

THE NEW SOCIETY 375

Harris, Hermann M. Kisch, Alfred Mosely, Robert Nathan, Alfred Charles de Rothschild, Leopold de Rothschild; Arthur Sassoon, Sir Isidore Spielman (already a knight), Mark Aurel Stein.

Among the members of the government and General Post Master, currently in power is an Israelite; the Right Honorable Herbert, L. Samuel, the Undersecretary of State for the Indies is also Jewish, he is the Hon. Edwin S. Montagu. The Attorney General is Sir Rufus Isaac Disraeli, – it must be admitted, – has largely opened the door to its coreligionnaires.

Sixteen Jews were appointed to the Chamber of Deputies: Frank Goldsmith, by the County of Suffolk, Sir CS Henry, by Shropshire, Sir Rufus Isaac (Reading), Captain Jessel (St. Pancras), Sir Maurice Lévy (Leicestershire), Sir Philip Magnus (London University). Sir Alfred Moritz Mond (Swansea), the Hon. Edwin S. Montagu (Cambridgeshire), Sir Herbert H. Raphaël (South Derby), Lionel de Rothschild (Bucks), Sir Henry S. Samuel (Norwood), Righb Hon. Herbert L. Samuel (Cleveland), Stuart M. Samuel (Tower Hamlets), Sir Edward Sassoon (deceased) (Hypothesis), Arthur Strauss

376 JEWISH ENGLAND

(North Paddington), finally, EA Strauss (Berkshire).

It's quite an Israeli record, let's admit it. in the House of Commons.

The Municipal Assemblies of the districts London's are "no less well distributed." Twelve prominent Jews took their places there, pro-municipal reformers and congressmen (Municipal Reformers). We see Franks there. Goldsmith, Jocely Brandon, Isidore Salmon, Percy Simmons and Percy Harris, Herman Gordon, Sébag Montefiore who are stirring in the municipalities of South St-Pancras, Hammersmith, Whitechapel, de Clapham, etc.

Let us now turn to the number of Jews in the army from the United Kingdom. This number seems to be increasing. grow more every day, especially among the troops of the Metropolis, where there are more more honor to parade than danger of combat. One detail can inform us: the November 26, 1910, being the Jewish festival of Shavuot, the Jews in the English army attended to a service in the Central Synagogue of London, Great Portland Street, numbering of approximately 300 officers and men (according to the Morning Post, which published the account of this ceremony). There were people of all kinds there. parts of the army, including the Guards, the navy and the (territorial) volunteers. There also had some Jewish-American sailors cains who were in London at that time. All these troops were under the command of letter from D. de Lara Cohen, colonel of the London First Division of Engineering (volunteers). The sermon was preached by the al- to deny Jewish soldiers in the British army, who spoke of the "ever-increasing number of Jews who joined the army and navy and among the volunteers." "The War Office (Mi- the Ministry of War) had recently asked him- "How many Jews had taken," he said. part of the South African war, and he had been able to to reply that the figure was almost 3,000, of which 116 had lost their lives. – This would be to be demonstrated.

Let us give the list of Jewish officers in the Royal Navy and in the regular army, without we will focus on territorial forces, where the The number of officers certainly exceeds the hundred. This approximate list has been stopped- established in October 1911 by the honorary chaplain sailors and soldiers of His Majesty, the rev- Michael Adler returns:

JEWISH ENGLAND

Royal Navy.

Com. CGR Brandon
Lieut. HD Warburg
Lieut. AS Susman
Lieut. VR Brandon
Lieut. CH Michaelson
Lieut. FE Fielmann
Sub-Lieut. GL Davidson

Midshipman Daniel de Pass
Major HE Blumberg

FOREWORD

A new current has carved its silence-age in literature.

It was probably bound to happen.
because that's what happened.

However, since this movement is anti-Semitic, it
A source must have overflowed somewhere part, or that a dike has been breached.

In any case, the current will go far.

Anti-Semitic literature is obviously the product, still somewhat hasty, of an instinctive and unconscious fear in the face of the constant invasions of Modern Jew. There is fear in the camps.
Christians; we count ourselves, and soon we will decide.

VI FOREWORD

It would be unfortunate if the timid attempts of a purely defensive literature fus-They felt slightly judged. The mockery, if incisive of the Jews and the guilty insouthe current generation's ciance will be able to in the long run, to overcome the generous soft-movement that makes its way through Semitic anger and the astonishing naivety Christian beliefs. The little ones and the humble, I mean the Christians and the Aryas, of Gallic, Germanic and race Slavic people, I imagine, have the right to defend themselves.
and even with a bit of roughness, the some remnants of their fortunes, which the the ever-rising tide of Semitism has not yet carried away. We shouldn't that the timid Christian might become too accustomed to to bear his yoke bravely and that, Poor, ashamed man, he resigned himself to the role of a vanquished man, all the more so, as they were astonished by their victory, the Jews will soon be embarrassed.

So let's get to work! Let's get to work! And since

FOREWORD VII

The path is open, let's move forward without hatred, but also without fail.

It would be regrettable if the movement literary, given the public's taste preferentially gravitated towards stories that repeat to the reader what he already knows or what he thinks he knows – all seasoned of additions that are more or less correct and more or less entertaining.

The general public doesn't much like to ap- to take, fears having to be surprised without understand, and hesitates lazily to- before the aridity of a serious study. However, The study of the Jewish Question involves a appeal to the forces of meditation and calculation.

The work we are presenting to the public The public is serious and profound. The author has par- ran through countries where large agglomerations Jewish actions revealed the game gears and the force mechanism driving force; the darkness that hid from the Christians, the folds of Jewish consciousness were uncovered by the author. But This is only a beginning, a pre- preparation for the study of the mysterious world where the weapons that enslaved are forged the economic independence of the Polish people, Russians, Hungarians, and Romanians hands.

VIII FOREWORD

The author has demonstrated great lucidity. cidity of mind by designating, without hesitation- without hesitation, the admirable and the Kahal's sinister institution, as source of all cohesion, community and Jewish solidarity. To the great evils of its proscribed and abhorred race, Israel op-

The great remedy was proposed: the Kahal!

The author studies this learned organism, not disdaining to dwell on the details and symbolic ceremonies, sometimes seemingly futile; devi-nant, with the intuition of a member of a proscribed nation, that everything is serious in the arrangement of a power called upon to save-towards the individuality of a race.

FOREWORD IX

And who knows if the meditations of the au-
the author sometimes did not lead him to fire from the study of the Kahal teachings for the use of many a more sympathetic cause-ethical?...

But for the Kahal to have been able to im-to establish, as a sanctuary of solidarity Jewish, it was necessary that the game of all organa-nism, superior to selfish aspirations mercantilism was diminished, slowed down, or
The kid was completely devastated.

The convergence of Jewish interests had to be reduced to only achievable desires by the community of action, to observe-advance of the rules of strategy of an inexorable discipline. The baggage that weighs down the the Aryan's march, - nationality, the Homeland, progress - so many burdens of which the Semite must not be and is not Not embarrassed!

Indeed, the Jews do not constitute a Neither nationality nor a state, and their religious life their very life is intertwined with their lives here-

FOREWORD

vile. But this is a richly endowed race endowed with everything that unifies, marks and acccentue the cruelly militant races.
Truths of a purely practical nature, these truths, these rules that guide them in the battles they wage against Christians, do not are neither numerous nor complex: the Ka-Hal is there to interpret them. No point is The need for codification. The respect shown to us.

surrounds the Kahal, less concerned with veneration-tion due to its religious character rather than its practical utility, in the entanglement Jewish interests.

Hence the tendency of Jews to respect the most outdated traditions and the law customary law is the least applicable. Civil or religious, often both, the cou-Jewish law is the only moral force, the
the sole source of existence for the Jewish people.
To be fair, it must be added that their obedience to the precepts of worship and to Kahal prescriptions often affect to the sublime. Such is the Jew, and such he will be

FOREWORD XI

until the end of the centuries.

Christian peoples, however, suffer higher-order obsessions and they allow us to be distracted from economic worries through the worship of things to which the Jew
He only offers a disdainful smile.

Since it's been bought and sold...
revival, – science, literature, art, –
The Jew buys and sells this and that. But the Jews do not produce!

Nevertheless, this scattering
The activity of the Aryans benefits the Jews, that these beautiful things do not absorb.

It was therefore entirely appropriate that the
An intelligent Jew, but of a different kind.
(because his immense intelligence is in-quiet and feverish), will choose her lot in outside the activities of his persecutors.
Vain, proud, and vindictive, the
The Jew wanted to be powerful and a persecutor.
in turn.

Excellent calculator, – since there is of the Chaldean and the Arab in him, – he has understood that the handling of numbers will always have subtleties which the study will be repelled by dreamy peoples. Therefore, He thought that this numbers game would impoverish the obtuse Christian and will enrich the Jew today awake.

XII FOREWORD

That was perfect reasoning.
and there wasn't a single mistake in Jewish prophecy.

There is something better – with the help of politics, the Jew was able to accelerate his race and arrive before the time to reach the coveted goal.

To subjugate Christian work, the Jews have found – always politics helping, – accomplices at the top of the social ladder. The emperors and the kings, who formerly pledged their jewels and their crowns among the Salomons and the Abrahams, passed through the Jewish school and became excellent slow borrowers, naive discounters of modern times. The age of borrowing. Once inaugurated, the Jews took hy-pottheque on all future mortgages: State revenues, Railways, Canals, factories, etc. Is there still a future free from mortgages? If so there is one, it is noted and approved by them.

FOREWORD XIII

Jewish power is therefore, in definition, a contemporary product, born in the turmoil of the early years of the century.

The Congress of Vienna, while peacefully trusting Europe, he signaled to the Jews, and they rushed to learn that the heavy liquidation of the wars of the Empire had need them.

Nothing is more ironically cruel than the twists and turns that accompanied the advent
The restoration of the dynasty today re-Rothschild clan!

At the fall of the greatest power political, represented by Napoleon, suc-
the hatching began, almost without transition.
of the greatest financial power, represented by a Rothschild.

XIV FOREWORD

Napoleon lands at the Gulf of Juan...
– Three months later, Rothschild de-boat at Dover, announcing to the English
The good news from Waterloo...

The boat that carried this singular Csar in London, – where he immediately the sweeping up of all French income – this
The boat was not armed for racing: no, but it nevertheless served the first A feat of financial piracy! (Which one we pass the expression, in favor of the truth.)

"All of this was wonderfully fa-"
"Cile," the founder of the pre-first race of our current kings. We do not will never know the judgment he had to bear to, in his heart of hearts, on the revoltaunt's inability of Christians for the liquidation of their accounts. As for the kings and emperors – more authentic,
but less skilled than him, Rothschild,
small broker of a small German principle
mand, – these emperors and kings, astonishing

FOREWORD XV

pastors of their people, have not com-assumed that they and their people would sit-to the emergence of a new power, and that the workers who were working on the construction-The powers of this authority were also geniuses. Crowned heads – more or less anointed, – do not have the knowledge infuse! They were going to have more soon worries. Their people, moreover, boring beggars of Constitutions, Charters and other freedoms of the same ilk, labor-intelligently ensured the game of Jews, by making... revolutions, – the-which always ended in trouble prunts, conversions and other... tri-Soups!

Well! This relentless war of Jews against Christian wealth, this war is silently directed by the modestes headquarters which have the name Kahal.

The author of Jewish Russia, despite his Slavic placidity, lets all the bitterness in his soul, upon realizing that the Semitic flow undermines, saps and corroams the Slavic countries, already cruelly tested by their disunity.

XVI FOREWORD

Mr. de Wolski's work should to be continued and embrace the whole of the Jewish organization, which certainly changes depending on the resistance of the Christians Look, from how weak and fearful she was, asserts itself with varying degrees of energy.

Mr. de Wolski's successors they only have to follow in his footsteps and search-dear to penetrate the knot of the Question.

Poland and Russia can further to identify the only true elements of the analysis, because the Jews of the Slavic countries are the specemeteries of the true fighters of the non-race transvestites. Jewish institutions have been there preserved almost intact; there has been there nor the friction that it brings in the Western countries contact with races natives, nor the influence of the ambient air which floats around a raf-civilization fine. The Jews of the West are all, at with the exception of the Portuguese branch, the descendants of the unfortunate people that the Pologne once welcomed them. That's where it's necessary.

FOREWORD XVII

to seek the secret of their power. The Kahal has preserved, in Russia and in Pologne, all its venerable primitif.

Let us, therefore, study the Kahal, – not for the satisfaction of archaeologists eager for research or scholarly work laughs at strange things, – but for our serious profit and for that of the ge-future generations, who will not have having to reproach ourselves for our sins of omission. Let's proceed with this study.
the salutary terror that befits the vanquished.
instead of pointlessly complaining about the su-Priority of Jewish armament, let's take their weapons, since they have some merit, and Let's use it against them.

Is it necessary to add that the Ka-Hal has given rise to a series of varieties, and

XVIII FOREWORD

that the Union, for example, is one modern incarnation. – The Trade Unions Jews have piled up ruins! Their history
The work also needs to be done.

Today, the danger is greater.
because the Jew is more vigilant, he observes himself;
If necessary, he will change his gait; he will ra-will slow down or speed up, as needed, the rhythm of its forward march.

The author of Jewish Russia concludes by indicating the means to combat the danger of X Jewish absorption. The share which is the responsibility of the State is defined.

None of this will be able to avert the crisis, without the company's cooperation, while-third, which should also be organized on the bases of Kahal.

And first of all, we should not hesitate to usher in the era of a robust and brutal national selfishness, and not allowing nothing but bouts of morbid sentimentality come to hinder the work of the defense.

This defense organization, it

FOREWORD XIX

is a painful necessity in Russia; but, if it is necessary to add a dose of Inevitable hardship, let it be done, provided that it be done methodically and consistently.

It is obviously up to the government, and to the enlightened part of the public, that this task should fall to, to the exclusion of any element that could generate disorders.

The rural population and the population of cities will have to learn that a vigorous repression will be inflicted on troublemakers, such as those who have dishonored so many Russian cities.

Given the intelligence of the Jews, he It is to be hoped that they themselves will indicate will give the government the paths to follow to avoid either mass evictions, either a series of vexatious measures including the resurgence would be equivalent to a cruel persecution.

In the very difficult question of the submersible work of the ovens

xx FOREWORD

Christian thousands, and in the presence of the Christian inability to stem the tide Given the nature of Semitism, it is natural that... delayed measures, and consequently frustrating gics, are proposed and discussed. There There is a new danger here. It is dangerous. to teach the people that its classes di-

Rigeantes did not see the calamity of far away, and that they were carefree at not to let the enemy attack the building social in its living works. Isn't it allowed today (the man from people), and isn't it up to us to repair The culpable oversights of our leaders? It was in Russia that the people held this reasoning and that he put it into action, by engaging in acts of barbarity and cruelty of which one would not have thought him capable-blue. The enlightened classes understood the danger; a severe crackdown stopped the Triumphant vandalism. That's good, but The trial is nonetheless still ongoing, because there is grounds for legal proceedings between the countries and their Jews. We would have to appeal to all the lights and to all good will-so that the Jewish legal case is complete, fair and impartial.

FOREWORD XXI

In the meantime, we can point out a great unrest in the Jewish camp. Fear is a good advisor. Some-once a schism arose among the Jews habiting the south of Russia; and the Jews, so-called "spiritual Jews", a sect that appeared Lately, they have decidedly stood out traditions of ancient Semitism.

Every country gets the Jews it deserves.

France doesn't know enough about her own, but she is about to get to know them.

That is why Jewish Russia is a Informative reading for those who will to address this same question, placed in a different environment.

THERE

JEWISH RUSSIA

The Jews have formed themselves into

A state within a state.

Schiller.

We do not claim to address here a a new and unprecedented question. Because, whatever-tion has not already been presented, analyzed, discussed, resolved even, from the most diverse, often the most opposed?

Since the beginning of the current century above all, the field of discussion and investigation
The gation has expanded prodigiously. We have 1

JEWISH RUSSIA

much has been written, particularly about a corporate-very large ration, very powerful by the capital at its disposal, and which, thanks to of the right to asylum and civil rights of which she enjoys everywhere, has constituted itself as a State in share in each state. Divided into each locality into autonomous populations, it obeys a kind of secret government, both administrative and judicial, represented
one by the Kahal (administrative commissioner), and the other by the Bet-Dine (judicial court).

This corporation is all of Israel, disse-undermined in body, but united in spirit, purpose and of resources.

The Book on Kahal, published in language Russian (Vilna, 1870) by Brafmann (Jewish converti), clearly demonstrates the organization powerful Jews in all countries, sur-throughout Romania and Poland, their ten-dances, the means they employ to par-to achieve their goal, finally the strict discipline with to which every Jew submits.
of its leaders.

This book on the Kahal has cast such a per-disturbance among the Jews living in Russia,

JEWISH RUSSIA

by revealing their most intimate secrets, that in a very short time all the copies of the first edition were purchased by the Jews themselves, and by them destroyed, or burned damaged, or hidden.

However, these clandestine book burnings did not could have prevented a few copies of this publication, escaped destruction, may not be fell into the hands of the Christians, and as we were fortunate enough to have To obtain one, we have translated the parts the most salient ones, which we will give in this work, which, in truth, is only a collection of translated extracts from different languages at different times. It will be his merit and the guarantee of its sincerity.

First, to get an idea of the goal that the Jews continue and their aspirations more intimate, we begin with the dis-lecture by a chief rabbi, delivered at a secret meeting. This speech, taken from a English work published by Sir John Readcliffe, under the title of Report of Events political and historical issues in the ten recent years, reveals the persistence with which the Jewish people pursue, from time immemorial and by all possible means, the idea of "ruling the earth." Here it is in its entirety:

JEWISH RUSSIA

"Our fathers bequeathed to the chosen people of Israel the duty to meet, at least once each century, around the tomb of the grand master Caleb, holy rabbi Simeon-ben-Ihuda, whose science delivers, to the elected officials of each generation, power over all the earth and authority on all the descendants of Israel.

"The war of the people of Israel with this power which had been promised to Abraham, but which had been snatched away by the Cross. Trampled underfoot, humiliated by his enemies, constantly under the threat of death, persecution, kidnapping and rapes of every kind, the people of Israel

yet he did not succumb; and, if he dis-Perseus covered the entire surface of the earth, that is what
The whole earth must belong to him.

"For several centuries, our scholars have read-they bravely and with perseverance rancidity that nothing can break against the Cross.
Our people are gradually rising, and each

JEWISH RUSSIA 5

[Day, its power grows] It belongs to us this god of the day whom Aaron raised up for us Desert, this Golden Calf, this universal Divinity saddle from that era!

"When we have gone
the sole owners of all the gold on earth, True power will pass into our hands, and then the promises that have been do to Abraham.

"Gold, the greatest power on earth,
- gold, which is strength, reward, the ins-instrument of all enjoyment, everything that Man fears and covets - that is the great mystery, the profound science of the mind which rules the world! That's the future!...

"Eighteen centuries belonged to our enemies, but the present century and future centuries must belong to us, the people of Israel, and will surely belong to us.

"This is the tenth time, in a thousand years of atrocious and relentless struggle with our enemies that gather in this cemetery, near from the tomb of our great master Caleb, saint Rabbi Simeon-ben-Ihuda, the chosen ones of each generation of the people of Israel, in order to con-

JEWISH RUSSIA

to be certain about the means of taking advantage, for our cause, the great faults and sins that our enemies, the Christians.

"Each time, the new Sanhedrin*1 has proclaimed and preached the merciless struggle with these enemies. But, in none of the previous centuries, our ancestors had not managed to concentrate in our hands as much gold, – consequently – power level, – than the 19th century we are part of it. We can therefore to flatter, without reckless illusion, to reach soon – our goal, and to look with certainty about our future.

"The times of persecution and humiliation" bonds, – these dark and painful times that the people of Israel endured with such heroic patience – are very fortunate past for us, thanks to the progress of civilization the adoption of the religion among Christians, and this progress is the best shield behind which we can to shelter ourselves and to act, to take a step forward quick and closes the space that separates us in – core of our ultimate goal.

"Let's just take a look at the state of ma –

JEWISH RUSSIA

Europe's territory, and let's analyze the resources that the Israelites have acquired since the beginning of the current century, by the only due to the concentration in their hands of immense capital at their disposal... in this moment... Thus, in Paris, in London, in Vienna, in Berlin, in Amsterdam, in Hamburg, in Rome, in Naples, etc., and at all the Rothschilds' homes, Everywhere, the Israelites are masters of the... if – financial tu – several billion; – not to mention that, in each locality of second and third order, They are still the ones who hold the funds in circulation, and that everywhere, without the sons of Israel, without their immediate influence, no financial transactions, no work important, cannot be executed.

"Today, all emperors, kings and reigning princes are burdened with debt, con – towed for the maintenance of large armies and permanent, in order to support their thrones faltering. The Stock Exchange lists and settles these debts.

yourselves, and we are largely masters of-stock market values on almost all platforms
These. It is therefore necessary to make it even easier, more and more so.

JEWISH RUSSIA

Furthermore, the loans that we need to study, in order to to make ourselves the sole regulators of all the values and, as far as possible, take-dre, in pledging the capital that we we provide countries with the exploitation of their railway lines, their mines, their forests, from their large forges and factories, as well as other buildings, or even the administration-taxation.

"Agriculture will always remain the great wealth of each country. The possession of large landholdings will be worth tou-days of honors and a great influence to the holders. It follows that our efforts must-tender wind also to what our brothers in Israel make significant territorial acquisitions riales. We must therefore push as much as possible to the splitting of these large properties, in order to make us aware of their acquisition quicker and easier tion.

"Under the pretext of helping the working classes, it is necessary to make them bear to the great landowners all the weight taxes, and, when the properties have having passed through our hands, all the work of the day-

JEWISH RUSSIA

nationalists and (Christian proletarians will become for we the. source of immense benefits.

"Poverty is slavery," said one poet. The proletariat is the very humble s-speed of speculation. But oppression and the influence are the very humble servants of the spirit that cunning inspires and stimulates. And who therefore could refuse the children of Israel the es-
"Took, prudence, and perspicacity?"

"Our people are ambitious, proud and Eager for pleasure. Where there is light,

There is also shadow, and that is not without the reason that "our God gave to his people chosen » the vitality of the serpent, the cunning of the re-nard, the falcon's eye, the memory of dog, solidarity and the instinct for association Beavers.

"We groaned in the slavery of Ba-bylone, and we became powerful!

"Our temples have been destroyed, and we have thousands of temples have been re-established in their original positions!

"For eighteen centuries, we were enslaved" ves, and in the present century we are-my statements and placed above all the i's
Other peoples!

10 JEWISH RUSSIA

"It is said that many of our brothers in Israel convert and accept Christian baptism
Well... Never mind!... The baptized can They can serve us perfectly; they can become-to provide us with aids to walk towards new horizons, which are in-core currently unknown; because the novices they still care about us, and, despite the baptheir very bodies, minds, and souls
They remain ever faithful to Israel. In a century
At most, they will no longer be the children of Israel.
who will want to become Christians, but rather the Christians who will align themselves with our holy faith;
But then Israel will reject them with contempt!

"The Christian Church being one of our most dangerous enemies, we must work with perseverance to diminish its influence.
Therefore, it is necessary to graft, as much as possible, into the intelligences of those who profess the re-Christian religion, the ideas of free thought, skepticism, schism, and provoking the religious disputes, so naturally fertile-divisions and sects within Christianity nism. Logically, we must begin with to disparage the ministers of this religion; to-

Let's declare open war, let's provoke suspicions about their devotion, about their con-private duite, and, through ridicule and mockery, we will be right about the consideration attached to the state and to the habit.

"The Church's natural enemy is the light-first, which is the result of the instruction, natural effect of multiple propagation of eoics. Let's focus on gaining influence on young students. The idea of progress has as a consequence the equality of all religions, which in turn leads to sup-pressure, in the study programs, lessons in the Christian religion. The Israelites-lites, through skill and knowledge, will obtain without difficulty in obtaining professorships and professorial positions sisters in Christian schools. Therefore, Religious education will remain relegated to the family, and as in most families- There isn't enough time to monitor this. branch of education, the religious spirit will gradually diminish and, little by little, disappear- will completely disappear.

"Every war, every revolution, every political or religious upheaval that occurred in the Christian world, bring the moment closer where we will reach the ultimate goal towards the- which we tend.

12 JEWISH RUSSIA

"Trade and speculation, two branches Fertile plants with large profits should not never to leave the hands of the Israelites. And first, we must monopolize the al- trade Cool, butter, bread and wine, because by there we will become absolute masters of all agriculture and in general of all the rural economy. We will be the dispens-grain sellers to all; but if it happened some discontent, produced by the misery among the proletariat, it will always be easy days to shift the blame onto governments.

"All public sector jobs must be ac-transferable to the Israelites, and, once they became holders, we will know, through obsequiousness and through the perspicacity of our agents, penetrate up to the first source of the true influence and true power. It is understood that this only concerns those jobs to which are attached the honors, the power and the privileges; for, for those who demand sa-

JEWISH RUSSIA 13

See, the work and the effort, they can and must to be abandoned to the Christians. The Magistrate-For us, ture is a first-rate institution importance. A career at the bar develops the most the faculty of civilization and initiates the more to the affairs of our natural enemies Christians, and it is through this that we can reduce them to our mercy. Why the Israelites- Wouldn't the lites become ministers of public education, when they have so often The Israelites had the finance portfolio? must also aspire to the rank of legislator. with a view to working towards the repeal of the laws made by the Goyim (infidel sinners) among the children of Israel, the only true faithful by their unwavering devotion to the saints Abraham's laws.

"Moreover, on this point, our plan touches to the most complete realization; for progress We were recognized and granted almost everywhere the same rights of citizenship as to Christians; but what is important to obtain, what must to be the object of our ceaseless efforts is a less severe law on bankruptcy. We will make a gold mine out of it for ourselves.

14 JEWISH RUSSIA

richer than the mines of old California.

"The people of Israel must direct their ambitions" tion towards this high degree of power from which des- They receive consideration and honors. the most effective way to achieve this is to have the ultimate control over all associations in- industrial, financial and commercial, by guarding against all traps and all seductions

which could expose him to the danger of prosecution your legal proceedings before the courts of the country.
He will therefore contribute to the choice of these kinds of speculation, prudence and tact, which are characteristic of his innate aptitude for business. We must not be strangers to nothing that earns a distinguished place in society: philosophy, medicine, law,
music, political economy, in a word,
all branches of science, art and literature, is a vast field where the successes must give us a large share and to highlight our aptitude. These vocations are inseparable from speculation. Thus, the production of a musical composition, not Even if it is very mediocre, it will provide for ours

JEWISH RUSSIA 15

a plausible reason to elevate on a pedestal it is to surround with a halo the Israelite who in will be the author. As for science, medicine
They must also do philosophy starting from our intellectual domain. A methe doctor is initiated into the most intimate secrets of the family, and as such, has in its hands the health and lives of our mortal enemies, the Christians.

"We must encourage alliances ma-:
triumviral relations between Israelites and Christians. Because the people of Israel, without risking losing to This contract can only benefit from these alliances.
these. The introduction of a minimal amount of;
Impure blood in our race, chosen by God, cannot corrupt it; and our sons and our girls will provide, through these marriages, alliances these with Christian families in possession-sion of some ascendancy and power. In in exchange for the money we will give, he it is only fair that we obtain the equivalent influencing everything around us. The kinship with Christians does not entail a deviation from the path we have traced; on the contrary, with a little skill,

16 JEWISH RUSSIA

She will, in a way, give us back the role of arbiter.

of their destiny. It would be desirable that the
The Israelites refrained from having as masters—these women of our holy religion, and that they choose them for this role from among the Christian virgins. Replace the sacrament of marriage in the Church by a simple contract before any civil authority, would be of very great importance to us, because then Christian women would flock to our camp.

"If Gold is the first power of this world, the second is undoubtedly the Press.

"But what can the second do without the first?"
primer?... As we cannot realize everything that has been said and projected above without The support of the press, we must have our own president in charge of all newspapers Daily life, in every country. Possession gold, skill in choosing and using it means of making capacities more flexible venal, will make us the arbiters of opinion public union and will give us empire over the masses.

"By walking in this way, step by step, in this

JEWISH RUSSIA 17

our way, and with the perseverance that is our great virtue, we will repel the Christians and will nullify their influence. We dictate—let us give to the world that in which it must have faith, that that which he must honor and that which he must curse.
Perhaps a few individuals will rise—will they turn against us and will they launch the inswears and anathemas; but the docile masses and ignorant people will listen to us and take our gone. Once they were absolute masters of the press, we will be able to change ideas as we please on honor, on virtue, on integrity of character, and to make the first attack and the first blow to this institution, sacrosanct—holy until now, the family, and in con-summon the dissolution. We will be able to extir-through belief and faith in everything that our enemies, the Christians, have until this moment revered, and, making us a weapon of the entrainment—the birth of passions, we will declare a open war on everything we respect and still venerates.

"That everything be understood, noted, and that chathat the child of Israel may be filled with these true principles. Then our power will grow

JEWISH RUSSIA

like a gigantic tree, whose branches
They will bear fruit which is called wealth, enjoyment, happiness, power, in compensation for this hideous condition which,
For many centuries, the tunic was a common item.
of the people of Israel!

"When one of our own takes a step forward,
that the other follow him closely; that, if the foot
He slips, he is rescued and helped up by his core-religious leaders. If an Israelite is summoned before the courts of the country he lives in, that his brothers religious people hasten to give him help and assistance, but only when the defendant will have acted in accordance with the laws that Israel observe strictly and keep for so long centuries.

"Our people are conservative, loyal to the religious ceremonies and customs that Our ancestors bequeathed it to us. Our interest (requires that we at least feign zeal for the social issues that are on the agenda day, especially those relating to improvement ration of the fate of the workers; but in reality our efforts must aim to seize control of this movement of public opinion and to the

JEWISH RUSSIA 19

to direct on public issues. The admission-regulation of the niasses, their propensity to to deliver to eloquence, as empty as it is sonorous, whose echoes reverberate through the crossroads, making it a Easy prey and a docile instrument of popularity and credit. We will find without difficulty difficulty among our own the expression of feeling-fabricated statements and as much eloquence as the Sincere Christians find them in their en-enthusiasm.

"We must maintain the proletariat, to subject it to those who have the ma-money transfer. By this means, we support
We will raise the masses, whenever we want;
we will push them towards upheaval, towards revolutions, and each of these catastrophes advances our private interests by a great leap forward and brings us rapidly closer to our unique goal: that of ruling the earth, as
This was promised to our father Abraham.

II

A prominent publicist, Toussenel, in a a work entitled "The Jews, Kings of the Fifth Era" published in Paris towards the end of the first half of this century, speaks in these terms of this great chosen people of God, a name that the Jews are awarded at all times and that they are awarded Again :

"I do not bestow the title of great people"
to a horde of usurers and lepers, charged to all of humanity since the beginning centuries, and which drags its way across the globe hatred of other peoples and his incorrigible pride.

"A race forever defeated, punished, enslaved, still regretting slavery and onions of Egypt, and always ready to return to the cult of the Golden Calf, despite the signs of the God's wrath!

JEWISH RUSSIA 21

"Just ask those Jews who are winning"
With us, hundreds of millions in one year
if they are excessively keen to see the walls again
So many tears from Zion?

"What if the Jewish people were truly the People of God, he would not have put to death the Son of God! He would not continue to ex-exploit, through parasitism and usury, all the workers whom Christ wanted to redeem and who are God's militia; and God would not have not marked with the seal of anathema, in him inflicting leprosy, as he inflicted leprosy to the pigs.

"Through charity, reason, and faith, anathema to all the impious religions that say Evil God! For these religions are of the invention of men inspired by the spirit of Satan, and who made their God in their own image; and the impiety of dogma can be measured by the inhumanity of its sectarians.

"Now, what people has been more bloodthirsty?" in his revenges, more persistent in his hatred and in his contempt for the rest of humanity

22 JEWISH RUSSIA

Manita, that the Jewish people? Wherever this lives race, we defy anyone to show it to us occupied-assigned to a useful and productive function; occupied-interested in something other than cheating and robbing the nation that received her into its bosom" (Auchean, France, Poland, Prussia, Paissia Romania, etc).

"Despite all the philanthropists" and charlatans of liberalism, we support-not that all these nations must atone cruelly the wrong of their charity towards the Jew; imprudent charity, deplorable charity of which the great thinkers of all centuries their had warned of the dangers in advance; for Tacitus, the most illustrious of the historians of the antiquity, already rising up against the indomitable pride and the spirit of deceit of the Jewish people. Dossuet cannot help but write "that the Jews are no longer anything to the Pieligion and to God, and that it is right that their ruins be spread across the earth, as punishment for their hardening; » Voltaire kills the Jew under the epigram; Fourier condemns the admission Jews granted citizenship, saying:

"It is therefore not enough for civilized people to

JEWISH RUSSIA 23

to ensure the reign of deceit; it was necessary to-

to call upon the nations of usurers for help,
The unproductive patriarchs. The Jewish nation is not civilized, it is patriarchal, lacking no sovereign, recognizing none secretly, and believing all deceit to be praiseworthy, when it comes to deceiving those who do not pra-
They don't flinch at his religion. Every government Therefore, anyone who values good morals should...
to compel the Jews and force them to work productive. When we have recognized – and this political science will not be long in coming – must focus on reducing the number of marchands, to bring them to the competition ve-ridiculous and supportive, it will be hard to conceive the incompetence of this philosophy which calls for his aid a completely unproductive race, mercantile, to refine commercial frauds already intolerable conditions.

He is the profound thinker, whose ruthless logic delivered the final blow to the comanarchic trade, denounced in the United States fifty years in advance, the advent of the mercantile feudalism and the reign of Judah.
And note that the governments of

24 JEWISH RUSSIA

Prussia and Russia (hardly suspected of utopianism) were brought in twenty-five years ago by the force of circumstances, to be applied to their subjects the Israelites the political principles set forth in the preceding lines. These governments did not want a separate nation in the nations they administered.

Napoleon I, in 1805, with his own hand then imperial, adds the following annotation in the margin in § 12 of the draft reform relating to the question-Jewish connection: "It would be absolutely necessary to search the means to tighten as much as possible Yagiotage practiced by Jews, to eradicate this organized fraud, as well as usury exercised by the members of a corporation which, by its religion, its customs and its traditions tions, forms a separate nation within the French nation (1). »

Look at the Muslims. They don't have, like we, to reproach the Jews for the torture of their Redeemer; and yet no people Christians have never professed their faith in Jews.

as much contempt as for the Arab and the Turk.

(1) Allgemeine-Zeitung. Der Juden-thumbs. 18ii, p. 300.

JEWISH RUSSIA 25

Why is that?... Because the Jew has never wanted to pursue no other profession than the traffic and wear and tear.

Europe is subservient to domination of Israel.

The Jew struck all states with a new old mortgage, and a mortgage that these states will never be able to repay with their income. The universal domination that So many conquerors have dreamed of it, the Jews have in their hands. The God of Judah has kept his word to the prophets and gave victory to the sons of Maccabeus. Jerusalem imposed tribute on all empires. The first part of the revenue pu-public of all states, the clearest product
the work of all, passes into the stock market Jews, under the name of interest on the national debt-national.

And note well that not a single Jew does any work useful with his hands. It must therefore be repeated that he
There is no possible alliance between this race-there and we Christians; and the proof of this is that most of the distinguished Jews of that time ab-
They swear by Judaism.

26 JEWISH RUSSIA

That the Jewish people produced brilliant individualities in the arts, poetry, the
From a scientific standpoint, this fact is undeniable; but How many could we cite from this number?
elite, however small, including the name and glory do not recall the idolatry of Gold, innate in this race?... That the people that a Jew was endowed with powerful organizational faculties satrices, we can no longer deny it; but we cannot deny that his responsibility is aggravated by the misuse he made of his higher faculties... Vultures are too large birds, and which soar high in the air; we admire it well sometimes in their flight; this nevertheless does not prevent that we do not feel a repulsion and a invincible disgust for these predators in worlds that feed on the flesh of Corpses!

Peace to the workers of all nations!
But get rid of these parasites, these usurers, these Monopolizing Jews!... these children of Israel, sons not degenerate from the Pharisees and scribes who crucified Christ!

III

Now listen to Brafmann, a Jew who-verti. Here's how he talks about his former coreligionists, in his Book on Kahal, that we mentioned above:

"Born and raised in the Israelite religion, that I practiced until the 34th year of my life. I was sufficiently initiated in the knowledge sources I had to draw from to execute the orders of the Synod of Saint Petersburg aiming to find ways to to use to paralyze the influence of cons-aunt and active Jews on those of their coreligionists who might intend to to become Christians.

"The intimate relationships I have maintained"

28 JEWISH RUSSIA

ves among my former coreligionists have facilitated the coordination of important documents which, in the Book on Kahal, which I am publishing, shed a vivid light on the situation and the tendencies of Jews in general.

"These documents thus collected, and consisting in letters, notices, deeds, correspondence, provisions, etc., are such as to lift the The veil and mystery that conceal the organization internal to Jewish society, make its reason to be an enigma, and allow, much more that all the research done up to this point-ment, to penetrate the secret means to which They resort to it to ensure their survival, too despite the influential position they claim occupy in Europe and throughout the world.

"The most important part of these documents" comments, completely ignored by the public, are being made the imposition of over a thousand Kahal ordinances, that is to say, of the administrative government of the Jews, and of the Bet-Dine, judicial court introduced by the Talmud, two authorities with-which the Jews are subject to and of which they exe-They blindly follow the prescriptions.

"The importance and significance of these documents are nothing less than demon-clearly outline the practical means that... how much the Jews struggle to live, and how much these methods deviate from the theory developed in the Talmud, a theory that formed the ancient Jewish society and which is understandable for only those who were raised in the Syna-gogue.

JEWISH RUSSIA 29

"Thus the Talmud does not clearly mark the share of authority attributed to the Kahal and to Bet-Dine in the regulation of life of the Jews. The doctrine or theory that governs the the conduct of Jews today is a theo-a completely new laugh, composed capriciously, without a foundation, neither traditional nor written, and we will be seen in the documents in question, how the Kahal understood and resolved this practical approach to life. The documents items classified under numbers 16, 64, 131, 158 that we give to chapter iv deserve a special attention should be paid, because they establish:

1° That the despotism of Kahal forbids the Jews to invite anyone to their parties family, such as preparing their food and their drink, without express authorization;

2.

"2° That to this question: What character in the eyes of the Jews take on the laws of the country in which they live? The Talmud answers: here, Dine demalhute Dine (that the laws of Caesar) must be those of the Jews); there, that the laws Caesar's laws only oblige the Jews in what It touches Caesar personally, but those who govern the country of which Caesar is the leader are not mandatory for them, as by for example, the judgments rendered by the tribes judicial and administrative bodies, which, under no pretext can compel the Jews living in this country. Elsewhere, the Talmud resolves the question in an exclusive sense, for So to speak, of the two solutions mentioned above, and said: Rabanon mikve ma,lke (The Rabbis) are Caesars). These different texts of the Talmuds can be, and often are, interpreted differently. Thus, being admitted the interpretation given by the Kahal, it follows— it was true that the Jews, fulfilling the functions of judge in the courts of the countries they live in, do not form their opinion based on the text of the codes, whether civil or criminal, who make the law in the country, and do not render their verdict according to the letter of these codes, but must simply comply with the pre-descriptions of the Kahal, and according to the opinion that the Kahal and the Bet-Dine were formed in advance in every case.

JEWISH RUSSIA 31

"3. On this other question: How the Should Jews consider real estate ownership? property and movable property belonging to those who Are they not of their religion? The Talmud answers in such an intelligible way, and by blending, so to speak, black with white, that all A Jew can translate this answer as he sees fit. tends, and thus attributing to itself the right to induce in error and to deceive any individual who is not not one of his own.

"In the acts and documents cited in the Book Regarding the Kahal, we will see that the Kahal, in each district he rules despotically, sells to the Jews Hazaka and Meropiié, that is to say—to state the right to exploit not only the pro—real estate and personal property belonging to individuals who are not Jewish, but "Even the people themselves."

In short, the documents cited in the Book on the Kahal (and of which we give extracts, translated parte in qua) demonstrate that the Kahal and the Bet-Dine, which for a long time—Time uncontrollably regulates personal life and public opinion of the Jews, hardly follow the prescriptions of the Talmud; and that the ordinances—opinions issued by these two Jewish authorities and confirmed by Hevem (oath or an—theme) are observed more strictly by the Jews than the laws written in the Talmud. They will reveal the secrets of mo—They mon—will reveal, even to the point of obviousness, by what means and by what circuitous routes did the Jews, who, formerly, were not allowed to enjoy civil rights in most of the European countries, however, have managed, in many countries, to supplant in the affairs, the element foreign to their religion, to amass large sums of capital, to mortgage to their advantage all real estate properties lières, and to become masters of commerce and of industry, initially exercised by the individuals genes; how this was finally accomplished and is accomplished daily in the provinces western and southern Russia,

32 JEWISH RUSSIA

JEWISH RUSSIA 33

in the Kingdom of Poland, in Siberia, in Romania, and even, at the beginning of this century, in some departments of the France (letter from Napoleon I to Champagny, dated November 29, 1806), where, despite the minority of the Jewish population, which does not exceed—It's not known if there are 60,000 souls, a significant portion of the real estate and personal property, appar—

attached to Christians, have passed into the hands of the Jews, who already enjoyed this Civil rights era.

"The best proof that the Jews for—" They have long pursued their goal, without No failure discourages them, it's the protestation of the inhabitants of Romania; protestimony which contains the same grievances as those already formulated in the complaints submitted to the authorities of Vilna, in 1865, by the inhabitants Christians. {Collection of laws by Dubenski, (page 222.) And that's why in several In European countries, sometimes they gave, sometimes they reinstated the civil rights granted to Jews, in order to escape their pernicious influence, to their intolerable invasion of all the branches of commerce, industry, of real estate and personal property.

34 JEWISH RUSSIA

"Finally, the documents we are talking about" show why the efforts attempted and the capitals sacrificed in the 19th century by several European governments, to transform the Jewish character and to shield from their deadly sitism, peoples and countries, have been unsuccessful killers. The publicity given to these documents and the reflections they inspire, however suggested, in 1871, to the civil authorities of provinces of northern Russia, the measure of suppression of Jewish institutions in Kahal and of the Bet-Dine.

"The authenticity of these documents is cons— felt by the age of the paper on which they are written; by the uniformity of writing of the notes to keep silent about who wrote them; by the signs of water on the paper which mark the letters B. O. F. EB; finally, by several signatures which are completely identical on the date documents different. — All the ordinances of the Kahal date from 1794 to 1833 and are classified, in the Book on the Kahal, chronologically, perfectly identical to the originals.

"A careful and thorough examination of these questions and answers regarding the rule-the way Jewish life is lived will lead to this cons-

In conclusion, the main purpose of these regulations, as well as acts which were the result of it
The sequence was to acquire the most influence.
'possible on Jews and Christians'.

IV

Here are the acts and documents if important ones that we have announced and which we have just shown the serious significance-tion. They are classified in the Book on the Kahal, under numbers 16, 64, 131 and 158.

No. 16.

Regarding the rules for party invitations family.

At the celebration held on the occasion of the circumcision
The following may be invited to the newborn's home:

1° Family members, up to the seconde generation inclusive.

2. Direct parents, that is to say, fathers and the mothers of the father and the mother of the newborn-
Those born are required to attend the celebration.

3° The Gevater-Sandeke (respectable character)

JEWISH RUSSIA 37

who, during the circumcision ceremony, holds the child on her lap).

4° The three operators, Mogel, Força and Ma-cice.

5. The one who recites the prayer over the cup after the operation.

G0 Five close friends and the Melamed.

7. Two neighbors on the right and two on the left living on the same side of the street, as well as three neighbors living on the opposite side of the street,

Right across the street.

8° Tenants of private apartments, of shops or boutiques may also be invited by the owners of these apartments, magasins or shops.

9. The shop partner; the employees and year-round workers, the barber and the tailor of the House.

10. The leaders of the Jewish corporation of the city, as well as the Jewish employees of the municipality.

11° A member of any confraternity has the right to invite the head of this brotherhood.

12. The servants of the synagogue, if they possess the Kahal certificate attesting to their functions.

For the celebrations held on the occasion of the weddings The invitations can be the same as for the celebrations held on the occasion of circumcision, and in addition, ten close friends of the groom and the bride's bridesmaids.

At the festivities held to celebrate the wedding or circumcision by the poor who cannot—
If

38 JEWISH RUSSIA

wind them execute them only with the help of a contribution of their wealthy coreligionists, we are not bound to observe the above-mentioned requirements.

It is prohibited, under the penalties mentioned and explained by Illevem (anathema), to dance the Sabbath day following the wedding day.

It is only permitted to celebrate the newlywed at following a formal invitation.

The Jewish tailor of the town who marries off his son or his daughter in another locality, and organizes the party weddings outside the city, cannot invite no one from the city he lives in, and he is forbidden to the inhabitants of this city to send to the new married calves Droche-Geschenk (gifts of wedding).

Under penalty prescribed by the Hevem (anathema), It is forbidden to the Chamochins (servants of the synagogue) to invite, to the festivals held on the occasion-sion of marriage or circumcision, others people other than those registered in the pa-rapped and signed by Schade-Mechamoche-iiakhil (one of the Jewish notaries of the city), who must certify-proud that the register was compiled in accordance to the prescriptions of the Kahal.

It is also forbidden for the one who gives the party to invite people other than those who have were entered in the register: as also it is expressly forbidden to any person of religious-Israelite group to attend the festivals given by their co-religionist, if she is not invited and called by Chamochin.

JEWISH RUSSIA 39

The violation of all the above requirements
This will be considered equivalent to perjury.
Whoever commits this offense will fall from severe punishments, fines, to which Nothing can take it away. Xi, his consideration personal, nor that of his family , nor any other exemptions will have no value. While those who will submit to these prescriptions, joy and all the approvals will always accompany them, and they will be blessed. Let them rejoice at the feasts don-born through their sons, grandsons, and grandsons of their grandsons.

Peace to Israel! May God's will be done.
pleats!

No. 64.

Rules to follow 'by those who want to give'
dances

(This document is written entirely in Jewish jargon,) so that the lower class of the Jewish population, which does not I don't understand Hebrew, but I can't grasp the thought and the sense.)

On Monday, the day before the 1st of the month Sivon 55^9, the
The following proclamation was made in all the bynagogu.es:

Listen, People of Israel! Your leaders and chosen ones, speak out!
consulted with the president of the Bet-Dine, ar-
They resume this following:

1. From this day forward, it is not permitted, to whom

40 JEWISH RUSSIA

throws a party on the occasion of the wedding or the circumcision, to offer to his guests, nor gingerbread, no brandy, but only meat dishes.

However, to the poor, if the Kahal grants it with express authorization, it is permitted to offer gingerbread and brandy, while conforming however, regarding the requirements relating to invitations.

2° Under the penalties stipulated and explained by the Hevem, it is forbidden to men as well as to women, during the congratulations of the Shaloim Zahor (the birth of a son), the first Saturday after the diapers, to taste the brandy, the gingerbread, jams, cakes and... very delicacies; and it is also forbidden to women to taste all kinds of delicacies on the occasion of the congratulations on the birth of a girl. An exception is made, however, in favor of the closest cousins. It is forbidden also for visitors to take with them into town
These treats. Sending gifts outside composed of similar things, by those who don-
The party is also prohibited.

3° It is forbidden to hold parties in the se-Maine which precedes the one in which the circumcision ceremony, as well as in that which follows it. The day before the ceremony, we can celebrate and receive the poor and, except the Savars (1),

(1) Savars (organizers of the festival). – The festivals, among The Jews have a unique appearance. Each guest receives a portion of each dish; the function of these Savars is

THE JEWISH ITALY 41

No one should touch or taste any of the food.

4. It is forbidden, on the day of circumcision, to invite people other than the bride to dinner Raine, the midwife, the mother of the woman in labor and her husband's mother, as well as the mother of the mar-raine if the latter is a young lady and has already been fiancee.

5. It is forbidden to celebrate someone on the day when The midwife leaves the house; these invitations are reserved for the day of the ceremony.

6° For the celebration held on the occasion of the circumcision, we can only invite other people those indicated by articles 1, 2, 3, 5 of the document ment (classified under No. 16) and three Savars.

7. For the celebration held on the occasion of the wedding, children and people can be invited and plus a Savar and the bridesmaids.

8. The head of the Jewish population in the city may also invite some of the leaders on his behalf of brotherhoods.

9° Invited members belonging to the con-funeral brotherhood may invite the head of this brotherhood.

10. The fiancé who arrives from another locality, to get married in the city, can invite the one to the-
which he lodged in before the wedding ceremony.

reduced to sharing and distributing larger portions larger and bigger for guests who enjoy a greater consideration among the Jews, either by their jobs, either through their honorary positions or through their fortune.

42 JEWISH RUSSIA

11° The following officials of the synagogue-
The following may be invited: the city rabbi;
the cantor with the choirs; the one who recites the psalms; the preacher of the holy brotherhood funerals and the Schulkempler (1). As for the other servants of the synagogue, we owe to them tipping is permitted, but it is forbidden to... invite.

12° Under the penalties set forth and explained in the Hevem, it is forbidden to the inhabitants of the city to celebrate the wedding outside the city, without an express authorization from the Kahal, which the fin- whether she was a young lady, a widow, or a divorcee. And those those who obtain this authorization will not be able to do not leave the city before paying in advance- the Rahasch (tax) equal to that which the new Married calves are obliged to pay when they They get married in the city.

13° It is forbidden to hold more than one celebration, before and after the marriage, either from the husband, either from the woman.

14° It is forbidden to have more than three at the festival musicians, except for the Beidhan (improviser).

15° It is forbidden to feed the mu- scientists more than three times a day.

16° For the dinner which takes place while we are ha-

(1) Schulkempler: the one who calls the Jews to the Synagogue- gogue, on ordinary days by striking with a hammer of wood on the shutters of Jewish dwellings, – and the days of celebrations, shouting loudly in the streets: In-schul-a-kidney (children of Israel, to the Synagogue).

JEWISH RUSSIA 43

For the new bride, it is permitted to invite young people of both sexes.

17° 11 It is forbidden to offer at the wedding feast a lunch consisting of a jam tart.

18° The head of the Schiva-Kirneim brotherhood (charity) can also be invited.

No. 131.

Regulations concerning feasts.

Saturday, 18 Sivon 5559. If those who preside at the celebrations held on the occasion of the circumcision They are poor, yet they must invite ten people, among whom must be the chan- to be and a servant of the synagogue, To those who would not comply with these requirements, the the cantor should not recite the prayer of Go- vahman, which is always recited during the ceremony marriage and the husband of the woman who gave birth will not be ap-peeled at Fova (piece of parchment where are (written different psalms) as is customary to do it.

Nn 158.

On the selection of committee personnel.

Saturday, 21 Tevese 5562. The representatives of Kahal and the members of the general meetingrale decided to choose from among themselves some

44 JEWISH RUSSIA

people whose duty it will be to draft laws regarding the holidays that Jews are accustomed to to give on the occasion of wedding ceremonies and circumcision. Therefore, the following were elected:
Rabbi Moses, son of Ezekiel; Rabbi Eleazar, son of Jacob; Rabbi David, son of Segula.

The regulations and rules, developed by these Three elected officials will be presented for confirmation.
the general meeting and will therefore acquire force of law.

V

We need to explain here what the agents, agents or commission agents, delegates
by the Kahal at the police stations, administrative, judicial, etc. – influence that the factors exert on the Jewish element and non-Jewish; – the system employed by the Kahal to corrupt government employees
ment.

The Kahal agent in charge of surveillance Jewish interests to the police, and offers gifts to employees to bribe them, is called a factor or commission agent Jews.

These factors are employed by Jews, not only in commerce, but in all business sectors. Thus, in the cities

3.

inhabited by Jews, one encounters at each not a postman; in front of the shops, in front of hotels, on the street, at police stations, administrative, judicial, and often also among employees of all other administrations public treatments.

All these factors are on the lookout for the at the slightest opportunity, to intervene in each—that negotiation and surrender, so to speak indispensable. They serve a dual purpose: their private and personal interest, and the good of the Jewish community in general.

The factors are divided into several classes its or specialties. Some are only for commerce, the others for businesses captures of all kinds; there are some, apart, which procure servants, others who negotiate marriages; these are their main attendance at the offices administrative officials; those, to corrupt the police officers; who, in order to pursue the cases pending before the judicial courts; which, for banking houses...

In short, each branch has its clerks Zionists or Jewish postmen. Of course, he

JEWISH RUSSIA

This is not about the Jewish lawyers who They provide consultations and plead cases; because Those belong to the bar. We do not We are not mentioning any of these individuals who, Having done no special studies, interposing himself felt, as factors, in any affair; race which is not found and which one does not meet—against that among the Jewish element. Their occupation—The main task is to search for the soliciting, to enter into negotiations with them, to to be well informed, and about the importance of the case for which they are pursuing a solution, and on the value of the subject to be exploited; and, once the information acquired, to have their in-covert intervention in the negotiation, .means-promised, agreed and agreed- retribution sale completed, at least in a down payment.

It often happens that the postman, in order to... to make necessary to both parties, fulfills of his role from the sole point of view of his interest-personal loan. The matter will become complicated if he sees his profit in a complication, in order to to charge for its services according to the measure of difficulties that he has often brought to light. The re-The result, moreover, only concerns him as much as satisfaction follows for his conscience, generously shaped, and for the influence which He is the instrument. – Thus, the matter is dealt with- Is it between Jew and Gentile?... this will be such a solution-tion.- Is it between Jew and Jew?... it is such other. – Is it between the Kahal and a Jew?... This is a third one. – Is it the Kahal and the Goïm?... that's an exceptional case, where prevails the caste mentality.

48 JEWISH RUSSIA

The main purpose of each factor is to note meticulously by what means it is managed to corrupt his Porric (employee of police, administrative or judicial), with in which he intervened on behalf of the petitioner-author. All these carefully reviewed notices The harvested fruits must be deposited at the Kahal, and He is thus put in possession of means action against the employee once corrupted, if he never dared to attempt any demarch against Jews in general, or of soul-to make a decision that was not in their favor.

The agents mandating the Jews are not often than the executioners of the Kahal, of which they follow the instructions to the letter, when he These are administrative orders of interest-

JEWISH RUSSIA 49

sant the Israelite corporations. The result that mixed interests of some importance between the Jews and the Gentiles, as well as the or- police and administrative data encompassing either universality, or simply one of their own (which naturally have spec- especially with a view to the fulfillment of the laws of the country, attract the greatest attention of Kahal. The most powerful shield of their collective and individual interests is, we de- wine, corruption through gifts and money. It was, from time immemorial, their weapon of predilection, and they owe him more than one success This is crucial, especially in Russia and Poland.

This system of corruption, through money, of officials specifically assigned to the execution cut of the laws of the country, is rather to cut The practice of Talmudic prescription. The pr- Tick introduced it into Jewish customs, and it is with the help of this voluntary tribute, and everything random, that they create a separate existence for themselves and outside of local legislation.

Great miracles have occurred and operate daily through the irre- irresistible to this talisman, stretched out so to speak

50 JEWISH RUSSIA

like a vast network across an entire country by so many skilled and practiced hands. It is to the help of this talisman that the Jews are having succeeded in paralyzing all measures devised by the civil and administrative authorities tive, in different countries, to protect the indigenous population against the overflow of the pernicious activity of the Jews. Also, in a In a very short period of time, are the Jews having managed to seize all the capital, to to create an advantageous position under beautiful- a series of reports, and to acquire influence decisive on the work and on all products from the country where they settled.

With the help of this talisman and the activity of the Jewish factor and of the Kahal, they dismiss, everywhere where they have established themselves, any competition from the proportion of the indigenous population, both in the trade as well as in industry and businesses shots of all kinds, even in the jobs that do not require strenuous labor trades such as sewing, upholstery, tinsmithing laughter, etc.

This talisman, in short, has become, among the hands of Jewish postmen (1), the fairy wand-

JEWISH RUSSIA 51

risk that once turned the seas into deserts of sand, and rocks with abundant springs; - with the difference that this legislative wand-
The leader of the people of Israel passed away today in the hands of the Kahal of each locality where there is a Jewish population, and in those from the anthill of postmen, who are unleashed like a pack on the trail of all the af-to do.

The picture we are painting here of this strange invasion of Israeli parasitism-Lite has lent itself to many other brushes. The Even the theatre has sometimes seized upon this subject. Thus in the play: A word in the middle-Minister, we see how Jewish factors are involved there they will do anything to achieve their goals;
What price do they pay for silence, where a word

(1) It must be noted that the Jewish factors are of difdifferent species, starting with dirty Jew who obsesses you to obtain a commission at the door of a hotel or restaurant, via a character serious that you encounter in a serious meeting, and finally, the elegant postman in a black suit and gloves white and patent leather boots, which you currently find almost in every living room.

52 JEWISH RUSSIA

a statesman's actions could harm the cause modern Israelites.

But what has not yet been revealed, this are the relationships of these factors with the Kahal. - Under what circumstances and in What proportion of donations are distributed?
fogs? - What are the sources where the Kahal
How does it obtain the necessary funds for its operations?

Whose hands are involved in the distribution?
Where do the orders that motivate originate?
and regulate these distributions for the purpose of common good? – Finally, whose responsibility is it to res-Responsibility for these acts? Is it up to the rab-Bins?... Is this in Kahal?...

All these curious and unknown questions
Nude in public, they are perfectly lightened in the Book on Kahal, through quotations of twenty-six acts and documents, conforming to the originals that Brafmann was able to produce to cure. We have translated fourteen of them more important, which are classified in the book in question under numbers 4, 17, 21, 33, 37, 156, 159, 260, 261, 280, 282, 283, 284,
285, and that we will find chapter vi.

JEWISH RUSSIA 53

The last five documents deserve further attention.
all special attention, such as the more importantly, in that they introduce to means implemented by the Jews to paralyze the work of the established Commission by the Emperor of Russia with a mission to study to address the Jewish question in its states. These documents are like so many pieces of evidence – supporting documents from the Derjawine report, Russian writer and one of the members of this Commission.

“We started,” said Derjawine (1), “to the account of the Jews, all sorts of intrigues, of approaches, of attractive offers, to ob-to maintain that the Jewish question was left unresolved where she was at the beginning, that is to say at the beginning-ment where, by order of the Emperor, the Commission-sion was established. A letter seized on a A Jew from White Russia, written by a great rabbi of that country and addressed to a very Jew influential in Strasbourg, enjoying an immense fortune, attested the powerful organi-the state of the Jewish people and their immense sacrifices

(1) Report and notes, by Derjawine. (Moscow, 1860, page 796).

of money that the Jews were prepared to support to carry out, in order to paralyze, by any means possible, and certainly dishonorable, actions of the Commission established by His Majesty the Emperor.

Next, Derjawine recounts that, in This letter stated that the Jews had mis-said Derjawine, as the greatest in-enemy and persecutor of the Jews; and launched on he is subjected to a Hevem (anathema) which is repeated by all the synagogues throughout the world, to the-which fact was communicated; that for to settle this matter (Commission) at their advantage, that is to say, leaving the Jewish question as it was at that time, in the status quo, all the Jews of all Russia and of other countries contributed and sent 1,000,000 silver rubles, to bribe everything that is corruptible and to make ren-voyer, of the Commission established by the Emperor, their mortal enemy, the prosecutor General Derjawine. But if all the means were powerless to obtain his expulsion from the Commission, the poison or any other means must eliminate

.A JEWISH RUSSIA 55

this world, this great persecutor and enemy of people of Israel; that, in order to carry out this order, Jews in Saint Petersburg were assigned charged with its execution for a period of time six years; that in the meantime, it was necessary to put in uses every expedient to win by money, - which would not be lacking, - the high-your influences, with a view to dragging things out in a long-the Jewish question, for all hope of a An advantageous solution was illusory, as long as Derjawine would be part of the Commission or would not have ceased to live; that in order to help to the efforts of the Jewish committee of Saint Petersburg, to hinder and confuse the Jewish question, the Commission established by the Emperor received-true from all countries, written in all languages, written by the most capable Jews, trai-both the question and demonstrating what ma-it was necessary to resolve it in Russia; ques-

This is indeed a serious matter for the Jews, since it does not it was nothing less than taking away their right to sell brandy in cabarets
The secrets of small towns and the countryside, where...
For them, the art of stupefying the peasants by drunkenness, abuse and adulteration of

56 JEWISH RUSSIA

alcoholic beverages, has become the most productive speculation.

And indeed, Derjawine continues, few
Some time later, the Commission established by The Emperor was flooded with a deluge of mismemoranda, brochures and various writings, sometimes in French, sometimes in German, sometimes in English, all aiming to provide a solution to the Jewish question in Russia, me-memoirs, pamphlets and writings which were, by order of the Emperor, the object of a [scrupulous exam.

While the Commission was exhausting itself by This arduous task, a Jew named Notko, who had managed to capture Derja-'s trust wine by an apparent conformity of ideas on the solution to the Jewish question, and by presenting a plan for the creation of factories intended to provide Jews with the means existence through work, came one day to do Derjawine, in the form of sympathy and dedication, this confidential proposaltielle: "You will never be able to," he told her, counterbalance the major influences that are stirring in the interest of the Jews; and, as

JEWISH RUSSIA 57

I am authorized to offer you 200,000 rubles money in exchange for the commitment you make-driez not to the area of opposition to the conclusions-decisions of your fellow commissioners in the Regarding the Jewish question, I sincerely advise you to accept the offer and keep quiet.

Acceptance of such a proposal was
For Derjawine, it was a triple betrayal: betrayal of his conscience, betrayal of the interests of unfortunate Russian peasants, betrayal of the His Sovereign's confidence!... And his refusal struck his opposition with impotence!... De-Faced with such an alternative, he sided with to address the Emperor directly, to him clearly and frankly state the state of things in the Jewish question, with the hope that the Emperor, impressed by his loyalty and his loyalty, would give him his support and protection in this delicate matter.

Indeed, the Emperor, in the first month-
He was deeply affected by these sad symptoms. revelations; but, to the new instances that Derjawine made himself available to him, in order to have a an answer that he could take as a rule of con-
The Emperor had simply told him,

58 JEWISH RUSSIA

with some unease: "Wait, wait-"
I'll tell you later when and how.
Action must be taken.

However, he had kept the letter that Derjawine had submitted it to him, where it was spoken of this million silver rubles intended for corto break the members of the Commission of the the Jewish question, and the planned attack against the days of Derjawine, to make them, he said-he, to verify the authenticity by the police se-Crete.

After this conversation, Derjawine res-was convinced that the Emperor would defy him.
now men in his entourage, if accessible to the gifts of the children of Israel.
But the family ties that bound the Em-father to Count Valerius, son of Alexander Zubow had informed him of everything this affair. Count Valère had, of his
On the other hand, for a friend, a certain Spéninski, director general of the Ministry of the Interior, by whom the minister himself thought, saw and acted even Koczubéi. Count Zubow had therefore Spéranski was informed of all the details relating to the Jewish question, which he held from the

His Majesty's mouth; and as Speranski had sold himself to the Jews body and soul (by the intermediary of a speculator named Péretz, with whom he openly lived in the intimacy, even occupying a dwelling in the (the latter's house), instead of a ukase severe from the Emperor, withering and reducing to nothing all the disgraceful manipulations that committed in the Jewish question, the Commission concluded that the status quo should be maintained. that is to say, the right for Jews to sell of Veau-de-vie in the cabarets of the small cities and countryside.

But, as Derjawine had not attended the Commission meeting where this The decision had been made by the pre-members. sent, this resolution lacking the most An important part of the required formalities is- to speak of absolute unanimity, remained unexecuted- and the question had not progressed one not towards a solution. Only since then, The Emperor received Derjawine with a more pronounced coldness, and, as for the letter that he had taken, under the pretext of making her verified by the secret police, not only he had not given any order for that purpose, but He even avoided talking about it.

60 JEWISH RUSSIA

A proposed solution to the Jewish question, written by Baranow and annotated by Derjawine, had been given to Speranski, who had modified completely in the direction of its personal opinions and with removal of remarks of Derjawine, whose name does not didn't even appear next to those of the others members of the Commission, in the ukase rendered by the emperor.

Derjawine, upon learning the conclusions of this report, he had jokingly told Baranow: "Judas had sold Christ for thirty pieces of silver. And you, to come- Well, you have sold the fate of the unfortunate Russian peasants?... " - To which Baranow had replied with a smile: "For 30,000 ducats to each member of the Commission, except all-Ibis me, because the project I wrote was completely redesigned by Sjeranski, whose "The prevarication is notorious."

VI

Here are the documents and records that we have...
no. to announce in support of the above:

No. 4.

The bonus intended for city sergeants and police subordinates.

Saturday, Noah section. 5555.

The representatives of Kahal decided that he
A gratuity will be granted to the three sergeants.
police for the entire elapsed time at a rate of one ruble silver per day to each person. This sum must be secretly handed to each separate person lie by the Jewish jurors and taken from the funds coming from the butcher's import.

62 JEWISH RUSSIA

Nude 17.
Order of the Kahal.

As a result of the new law which prescribes the re-population census, as well as the survey accounts from the cabarets where brandy is sold,
The Kahal and the General Assembly decided to choose eleven trusted members who will follow
step by step--this operation carried out by Christians, in order to address, where necessary, the damages which
The following would follow for the general cause of Jews. Provision will be made for the expenses incurred.
to the aid of a general subscription.

No. 2: .

Gifts to give to Christian authorities of the cille.

Tuesday, section 5 books Schelah 5535.

The representatives of Kahal having recognized the need to give some gifts to the chiefs the municipality of this city, have decided that the funds that are to be used for this purpose will be supplied by the butchers, who are either debit-members of the Jewish community spoke about their contribution that they then owe the concession to them made from the right to slaughter livestock. The sum

JEWISH RUSSIA t)3

The money intended for these gifts will be donated to the Scha-Mosche, who must take exact account of all this expense.

No. 33.

Thursday, section 5 books Noach 5555.

The representatives of Kahal decided to neck to consecrate the sum of 100 silver rubles for the purchase of rice, as well as other grains, including the destination is planned, and 50 silver rubles to secretary to the governor in reward for his good disposition towards Jews.

No. 37.

Wednesday, section of 5 Vaicei books.

5558. – The representatives of the Kahal have self-the Kahal's treasury was used to provide the necessary money sare to celebrate, with a splendid luncheon and the best wines, the judges of the Christian tribunal who must deliver the verdict in the case of Jewish workers.

No. 156.

Orders relating to the collection of V money necessary for gifts to give to the chiefs of Christian authorities, on the occasion of the feast of Christmas.

Saturday, 21 Tevese 5562.

In view of the very large expenses required

the donations to be offered to the Christian authorities at the occasion during the Christmas celebration, it is ordered that the person-secret receiver of the Jews to employ all the means at its disposal to make the payment in the Kahal's coffers of all the arrears of the tax called interest tax.

No. 159.

Orders relating to a review which must be to be done among the Jews by the Christian authorities.

Monday, 23 Tevese, 5562.

Given the need of Jewish society for a strong sum to soften the consequences of a revision that must take place among certain Jews by the Christian authorities, the Kahal orders that this essential sum will be taken from the funds from the Kochère meat tax already collected long available and currently available in the Kahal's coffers. The representatives of Kahal and the Bet-Dine agree to prohibit the use of this money for purposes other than the cause in question.

No. 260.

Financial aid to brandy sellers during their trial with the contractors and beverage suppliers.

Wednesday, Matat-u-Mese section, 28 Fanuze 5552.

The representatives of Kahal decided to come in aid to brandy retailers in the course of their lawsuit with the entrepreneurs of spirit-killers, by providing them with the necessary money to defend their interests. Consequently, the money needed to complete the sum of 100 ducats that the tax office was supposed to provide for illuminations according to Behal's law-taart, will be collected and given to the retailers for their present need.

No. 261.

Regarding the sale for the benefit of Izaack, son of Guerson, of right to operate the hospital and the adjacent square. Properties belonging to Catholic monks liques.

(This document is confirmation of what has already been As previously mentioned, and which will be discussed much more later amply in the following chapters of this book. – 11 As a result of this act, the Kahal sells to the Hazaka Jews and Meropiié, that is to say the right to exploit the properties Christian families, as well as their persons. – No one other than the one who acquires this right of exploitation, whether he is from this same locality, whether he is from any other part of the globe where Jews are dispersed, cannot and should not benefit from this exploitation. That's how it is. that at the general meeting composed of all the self-Jewish rituals present in the Kahal Chamber, it was unanimously decided that the sale of the right to exploit the hospital and the adjacent square, properties belonging to the Catholic monks, will be awarded to a Jew).

66 JEWISH RUSSIA

Thursday, eve of the new moon Acra 5562.

Representatives of the Kahal and the general meeting general, composed of all the Jewish authorities of this city, have decided: – The right to exploit the hospital and the adjoining square, properties located at one end of Kaïdany Street and ap- belonging to the Catholic monks, is sold to Rabbi Isaac, son of Guerson. He is also sold to the same Izaack, son of Guerson, the right to exploit the space belonging to the municipality of the city and located near the properties named above.

This right to expedite the property of Christians yours is sold to the said Rabbi Izaack, to his descendants descendants or agents, from the center of the from earth to the highest clouds in the sky, without that no one could ever dispute his right for the acquisition of which Izaack paid to the Kahal's cash box, the agreed price.

Consequently, this right is inviolable for eternity and the said Izaack can dispose of it as he sees fit. intention, that is to say, to resell it, to put it in pledge, to give it to whomever he pleases, in short to dispose of it as he sees fit. If the Rabbi Izaack gets along with the members of the municipality council to obtain authorization to erect some building on the square of which he having acquired the exploitation rights from Kahal, he will be able to building houses or any other kind of building, either made of wood, or of stone or brick. If the government were to seize these spaces to build barracks or anything

JEWISH RUSSIA 67

another public building, it is strictly forbidden to any other Jew to enter into any commitment whatsoever—conch shell with the government, and only Izaach, son de Guerson will have the right to enter into negotiations with the government to secure the contract of all work. It is further expressly forbidden—instructs every other Jew to take responsibility for all commissions, and only Izaach, son of Guerson, will be able to to be the factor either of the government, or of the municipality, for everything concerning squares whose exploitation rights Izaach purchased...

It is enjoined upon every Kahal in the world to fully protect this right acquired by Izaack, son de Guerson, for himself, his descendants or its agents; and each Kahal and cha—that Bet-Dine will have to prosecute any individual who would like to put some obstacle to the exercise to the full and complete exercise of this right, to treat him as an enemy and force him to pay for any damages that might result from his hostile interference, and in the event of ne—vigilance on the part of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine to to prosecute the offender and compel him to compensate for the losses he will have caused to Izaack, son of Guerson, or to his descendants, the Kahal will be required to reimburse from his funds, in as soon as possible, for all damages suffered by Izaack, son of Guerson, his descendants or its authorized representatives. The publication of this The deed of sale will be sent to all the synagogues. gues.

No. 280.

-On the question that concerns all Jews who live in Russia.

Saturday, Tevese's first date. The week according to the chapter Mikoë. - 5562.

At the extraordinary general meeting convened relment, and in the presence of the members of the Kahal at full complement, it was decided, - as a result of in-disturbing new arrivals from the capital, announcing that the fate of the Jews who live all parts of the great Russian Empire were entrusted to five high-ranking figures at court Saint Petersburg, with full power to decide what they would consider good for or against view of the Jews of this country, - that a delegation composed of some of the most learned Israelites will be sent to Saint Petersburg, along with the mission to throw themselves at the Emperor's feet, - that May his glory be eternal! - to beg him not point to allow the introduction of any innovation in the lives of the Jews, who are his most loyal followers topics. And given that this approach, however important-aunt, though indispensable, will cause immense expenses in the form of donations, gifts and other means of cor-rupture, and that, to cover all these expenses, he
It will require a very large sum of money, the members comprising the Kahal, as authority
The superior Jewish women decided that it will be perceived on every Jew living in this country an extraordinary tax-

JEWISH RUSSIA 69

naire, called interest tax, and that it is regulated by the
in the following way:

1° Capital, either in money or in market capitalization goods, either in insured receivables on mortgage-the library that each Jew possesses, one must pay 1/2 for 100.

2° Regarding real estate, each pro-
Jewish tenant will pay 1/4 for 100.

3° Various other incomes, such as rents, etc., we will pay 10 percent.

4. Young households who remain with their parents will pay 1 percent of all their goods.

Each Jew must confirm by oath the value of his fortune, of which he must pay so much for 100, according to the above-mentioned rate. However, if someone offers 50 ducats for this tax, he will be relieved of the oath, without further investigating whether the interest charged on its capital by the tariff must exceed to pay the sum of 50 ducats that he would pay immediately directly.

Among the sworn officers responsible for collecting all the taxes that Jews must pay to the six members of the Jewish community will have the monitoring the perception of this important tax, and these six members will hold from the Kahal the power to employ, if necessary, all the servants of the Kahal, who, in this case, must-wind blind obedience to their orders.

70 JEWISH RUSSIA

No. 281.

Taxation, to paralyze the government's project ment relating to Jews in general.

Wednesday, the fourth date of the month, Tevese, se-Maine according to the Vaigah chapter. 5562.

Like the 7 MPs chosen from among the most prominent Jewish figures must soon to return to Saint Petersburg, in order to implore His Majesty the Emperor and to beseech her that nothing is changed in the current position of Jews in Russia, and as, for this important And this is an urgent step; money is needed, and more. money, the full reunion of Kahal members have decided the following: A new-extraordinary tax will have to be paid into the Kahal at a rate of one silver ruble per inhabitant Jewish without distinction of sex or age.

Small towns, as well as districts, must pay into their coffers respective synagogues, the money coming from the tax, called the interest tax of so much per 100, which has was ordered in last Saturday's session, pre-

first date of the month Tevese, of the week according to the Mikoë chapter, and the coffers of these synagogues must send this money into the till general of the Kahal, ensuring that the sum of silver rubles, sent by the treasury of each synagogue, corresponds to the total of individuals from the Jewish population belonging to this synagogue; that is to say, if the Jewish population consists of a thousand individuals, for example, including women and children, the synagogue from this city must send to the Kahal treasury 1,000 silver rubles.

JEWISH RUSSIA 71

As for the inhabitants of the city where the Kahal has their seat, they must scrupulously, and under by oath, make the payments of the tax called interest tax of so much per 100, between the hands of the cashier chosen to collect the money coming from this extraordinary tax; which The cashier is the extremely wealthy Rabbi Wolf, son of Hirsche, very well-known and respected; assisted for the operation of bookkeeping, as well as for the preservation of all deeds and documents relating to this tax, by the extremely wealthy Aïzik, son of Judcl.

The cashiers and the envoys from all the synagogues-district toilets, upon their arrival in our city, will be able to, at the general meeting and of the con-Sentiment of the Kahal members, change the 7 deputies who will have been chosen to go to Saint-PéiersbDurg and replace them with others, such as aus.ii change the cashier and the bookkeeper.

No. 282.

Order to paralyze the government's project information relating to Jews in general.

Saturday, the seventh day of Tevese's date, according The chapter of Vaïgah. 5562.
At the extraordinary session of the meeting, embarrassed-

72 JEWISH RUSSIA

Ray and members of the Kahal in their entirety,
The following notice was published: Any individual of the Jewish population which, until next Tuesday, will not pay his share of the tax called tax of interest of so much per 100, which was decreed by the Kahal for sending 7 delegates to Saint Petersburg-town, in order to paralyze the government's project relating to the Jews who live in Russia, will be considered by Jewish society as an infidel renegade deserving of all pity, and will be persecuted and mistreated by all the faithful children of Israel. It will not be liable to various fines and punishable by tions of all kinds.

It was also decided that we would not enter into talks with anyone who had refused to lend-to take the oath relating to the valuation of wealth, this evaluation being the basis of the share that each individual owes the tax ordered by the previous difficult decisions – decisions that do not liberate from oath that those who, from the beginning, have paid 50 ducats. As for those of the owners of houses that want to appeal before Bet-Dine of the Kahal's decision regarding the tax of 10 percent which are applied to rents shops or apartments, and which seems to them excessive, they are warned that the lawyers of Kahal will be the extremely wealthy Wolf, son of Hirsche, and Aizik, son of Judel, and that the plaintiffs must appear before the court of Bet-Dine at later tomorrow; that, past within this timeframe, their complaints and legal actions will be reviewed. ideas as if they were non-existent.

JEWISH RUSSIA 73

No. 284.

On cabarets and brandy suppliers.

The same session also raised the question cabarets run by Jews and bakeries beverage suppliers; and it was decided that every Jew who would enter into business with these suppliers would be at the mercy of 7 retailers chosen by the Kahal, who will pursue him with their persecutions, will bring him misfortune, fines and humiliations of all kinds. The power of these 7 elected retailers will have the same value as that of the general meeting general.

No. 285.

On what little there is to observe.

Tuesday, tenth date of Tevese 55G2.

In accordance with the orders of the seven delegates, the
The following proclamation was issued: "A meager absolute authority is commanded for all Jews in general.
without excluding women and children, sa-
See: Monday the 16th, Thursday the 19th, and the 3rd of the month Tevese. This lean meat must be very strictly observed on par with the great Elizy Lenten feast. This meager whose purpose is prayer for the success of steps that must be taken by the seven de-bequeathed to Saint Petersburg, all the Jews must-5

74 THE JEWISH RUSSIAN

wind to go to the great synagogue for pray this prayer together, in order to avert the government's project hanging over their heads Jews in Russia.

"That of the Jews who, until these days of prayer, will not have paid the tax intended to paralyze the government's project relating to Jews will be persecuted by all possible means.
possible and, in addition to the fines he will have to to suffer on every occasion, he will be rejected from the bosom of Jewish society.

VTI

We now need to enter into certain essential characteristics of Jewish customs and speak:

1° Jewish slaughterhouses, kosher and tref; 2° of the influence of the kocher and the tref on the lives of the Jews; 3° of the tax, called the tax of the box, for kosher meat; 4° of the em-use of this tax; 5° of the protection that ac-
The Russian government is tied to the authorities
Jewish women, for the collection of this tax.

In all cities, large and small, where The Jewish population is starting to settle down, she had a slaughterhouse built at his own expense, where the Jewish butchers must slaughter the animals for slaughter.

nemes and other animal species whose meat
Pure, called kosher, serves as their food.

JEWISH RUSSIA

and the one that is impure, called treph, is ven-due to the Christians. This is partly the difference-rence of these two types of meat, qualithus enshrined by the Israelite religion, which invites Jews everywhere to seize and monopolize to their benefit the butcher's trade.

Besides this question of imagined hygiene,
but which their religion sanctifies in some way sort by the qualification of a meat which is not kosher, and that one only obtains if the animal is slaughtered by a Jewish butcher in a building belonging exclusively to Jews, there is yet another one, of an intemuch greater... It's the power of con-to avoid the return of a very important tax that the Kahal collects on the sale of meat Kochère; control impossible, without a beacon-separate. – This tax, in fact, very substantial Maple and very productive, it is destined to serve on many occasions to smooth over difficulties, to overcome the resistance, which must be ren-to counter in the pursuit of a result, such as the one he always pursued and never ceased-will be to pursue the people of Israel.

It is therefore known that Jews do not eat

JEWISH RUSSIA / /

not meat from an animal that has not been shot down by a Shochet (1). We also know that they do not eat certain animals prohibited by the Talmud. Of the 56 chapters that the law of the Talmud devotes to defining the mathe prohibition against slaughtering an animal in order to obtain kosher meat, – chapters which contain 642 paragraphs, included in the collection gé-
General of Talmudic Laws, Schalschan Aruh Zore Deia, – we choose a few-some, whom we believed worthy of a citation-textual tion.

And first, paragraphs 10 and 11 of chapter 1-pitre l,r, relating to the manner of slaughtering the animal evil whose meat must be consumed by the Jews, that is to say, those who must be kosher, prescribing that the knife used by the Sho-
It must be without the slightest breach, excess-sharply sharpened and even and polished throughout. If the
The knife does not have all these qualities, the meat
the animal becomes tref, that is to say that it

(1) Special Jewish butcher, who had to study in all its details the prescriptions recommended by the Talmud relative to the slaughter of animals, and to the killing poultry.

78 JEWISH RUSSIA

cannot be used by the Jews and therefore must be sold to Christians. Furthermore, if the knife, having all the required qualities and indicated above, when the Shochet pro-yields to the operation, retains these same qualities
After the operation, the meat is kosher.
but if the operation was done with a knife the most a small breach, or if it has been damaged at all another way, such as if after the operation it is no longer as streamlined, as even,
as polished as he had been before, the meat of the animal killed by such a knife becomes tref.

Paragraph 7, Chapter 18, states: "If the
The knife's cutting edge is perfectly even.
having no breaches and completely clean,
Although it is not sharp, the Shochet can to use it to kill the animal, and the meat could be kochère, even the operation would last a whole day, provided tou-once after this operation the knife con-to maintain the appearance it had before use.

It must be acknowledged, however, that, despite the bizarre and often incomprehensible prescriptions understandable aspects of Talmudic law, the operation executed cut by the Shochets is usually done with extraordinary skill and promptness dinners; but the preparations are quite savage and revolting. Thus, the poor animal destined to be killed, at any cost a kind of torture, as long as the victim time seems to retain some desire to resistance, and these tortures only cease at moment when the animal, losing all feeling of life, becomes completely immobile. Then the Shochet, getting rid of the hair that the covers the area where the incision, proceeds with the suppression operation quite promptly, quite briskly and quite adeptmentally, so that the animal cannot be subdued to eat by any movement the neckwater; for, in the event that this were to happen, in addition to the above-mentioned requirements, the meat would become trefoil.

JEWISH RUSSIA

Here is one side of the meat issue Kocher and Tref, which is for Jews only the cause of serious scruples, because for the Christians, it doesn't matter at all whether the animal is killed with such and such a knife, provided that this that the animal is healthy and that the meat has good taste. But the really damaging aspect for Christians, and which results precisely compliance with certain rules relating to upon the observation of the kochère and the tref poul-Jews, here it is: The animal was killed following all the meticulous conditions and rules relating to the knife, to the handling of the animal, preparations, etc.; but that's not all: because then the Shochet, having its sleeves of shirts rolled up, proceed to the second an operation which consists of a scrupulous inspection assess the condition of the viscera of the killed animal. This operation is performed by the Shochet. point by point, according to the indications of the Talmud on veterinary art, and if, by this Upon inspection, the viscera of the slaughtered animal did not offer not the signs by which health is recognized the meat is declared as Tref and must be put set aside to be sold to Christians.

80 JEWISH RUSSIA

Diseases that affect meat quality

(impure) are of eight species; namely: Derus, Nekuba, Habeza, Netula, Kenra, Nefula, Pesuka, Hebura (1).

(1) Schalschan-Avuh-o-Deia, chap. xxix on the Tref.

JEWISH RUSSIA 81

Demis points to Ranimai, who was injured by an animal. savage.

Nekûba means a hollow found by the Shochet, either on the skin that covers the cervical, either in the intestinal tract, or in chyle, either in the liver or in the heart.

Ilabeza, an animal with a birth defect session in the lungs.

Netula, animal that fishes through the liver.

Kenra means the cut belly of the animal all the way to the intestines.

Nef nia., an animal which, having fallen by accident-tooth, had something disturbed in his being.

Pesuka, an animal with a broken vertebral bone.

Hebura, an animal that had part of the damaged vertebral bone.

These eight points constitute the profound science on the subject, and which are dis-often cut by learned Jews, and inter-lent in different and contradictory ways toires.

These reasons make it easy to explain. why do Jews show such pro- disgust? announced, abstain with such perseverance

5.

JEWISH RUSSIA

rancid to order meat from Christians;

because, most of the time, it's just meat
The rejected trifle was sold to the Christians.
meat which often is nothing more to them than...
carrion (Nefula).

It's because of complete ignorance in which these Christians remained until this at the moment, in relation to the mysteries of religion Jewish community, with regard to the rules of the Kochère and the Tref, that the sale to the Christians hold only of this latter quality of meat, called impure by the Jews, and which, in fact,
is very often just carrion, has been tolerated. – But you have to ask these promoproponents of liberalism, who proclaim from the top public platforms and university chairs universities, in favor of equality for all religions, if they think that the sale made by Jews to Christians of spoiled and mal- meat healthy is a loyal and honest fact on their part;
And if, despite everything, it must exist and be always executed, because of the law of the Talmud contains, in chapter XIV, page 21, the confirmation of what Moses preached to Jews in the desert: You are forbidden to

JEWISH RUSSIA 83

eating carrion is permitted, but it is allowed to launderer abroad who lives among you.

Besides these two main operations, which contain, as we have been able to see, a number of minor details, there are indeed still others, no less meticulous, relating in the way of feeding the animal intended to be killed, at the separation of the blood and veins of meat intended to be kosher meat;
and many others that are subject to examination of a special employee other than the Shochet, called Menckevy.

This is a brief overview of the operations of observance and practice of which depend the kosher meat; operations and pres-descriptions which are also inconvenient and awkwarddistressing for the Jews themselves that harmful to Christians. For it is necessary to do here this reflection that the execution, in all its severity, of the rule which orders the Jews to eating only kosher meat is not not the result of Jewish fanaticism, as ge-Christians generally seem to believe this;

but that strict observance of this law is due to the very active surveillance of the agents

84 JEWISH RUSSIA

and servants devoted to the Kahal, as well as to very cleverly invented means that the Ka-Hal uses it to verify each book of meat consumed by the Jewish population.
On the other hand, like violations of the law on the kochère and the tref bring about pu-terms, persecutions and fines to to pay, weapons that Kahal possesses, all of that is infallibly effective against counter-Jewish arrivals who, for fear of incurring the Hevem, willingly or unwillingly, carry out the law on the kosher, imposed despotically by the Kahal.

The documents classified under numbers 148
and 149, in the Book on the Kahal, by Draf-mann, and which, translated from Russian, are reproduits verbatim in chapter VIII, give an idea of how the Kahal intends apply punishments and persecutions to Refractory Jews, as well as the Kevem, of which we will talk in great detail in one of the cha-following clowns.

As we can see, the law on the kosher, prescribed to the truth from the Talmud, but supported and strictly monitored in its execution by

JEWISH RUSSIA 85

the Kahal of each locality inhabited by the Jews, is observed by the Jewish population, well
no longer spoke of fear of punishment and persecution.
tions at the disposal of the Kahal that speak of fanaticism religious. As for the severity of the Kahal on the strict adherence to this law, she explains easily. If the Kahal, in fact, is an ins-institution or authority imposed on the population Jewish according to the Talmud, it is quite natural that he insists on the exact observance of the law on the Kochere, because this law, more than any other separates the inner life of the Jews from the rest of humanity must be preserved intact, and that is quite naturally the care that falls to the infidel interpreter of the Talmud, and this interpreter It's the Kahal in every Jewish locality.

But the Kahal knows perfectly well, from experience, which the Jews do not strictly observe the law on the kosher when they are found outside their homes, where control is introduced and closely monitored by Kahal agents does not permit any Jew to violate this law. Knowing, therefore, this tendency of the Jews in general not to strictly observe the law on the kosher, the Kahal took the determination not to rely on religious fanaticism, And he doesn't allow them freedom of action. Because, as already mentioned, many Jews prefer to buy and eat meat Tref, of course not the one rejected by the Jewish shields as unhealthy, meat that is not subject to the enormous tax provided by the Kahal on kosher meat, although this tax is used in many circumstances to preserve the law of the Talmud intact. If the Kahal limited himself to simply giving opinions and to make observations in a delicate, that would be wanting to build a large a house without ensuring it has solid foundations. Also, knowing the great importance of this law to maintain its influence on the inner life of the Jews, each Kahal in sur-monitors compliance within its radius with a Extraordinary rigidity.

86 JEWISH RUSSIA

Based on everything that has been said above about the Kochère, it is easy to understand why the Kahal, in every locality where there is a Jewish population, more or less large, raising at at his own expense a building intended for the slaughterhouse; for what the Jewish butcher's trade is surrounded by so much circumspection, watched by so many employees, burdened with a tax overwhelming, and finally what use can so much be? bizarre and inexplicable ceremonies that are carried out in Jewish butcher shops. acts and documents relating to this part elements of Jewish life are gathered in the Book on the Knhal, by Drafmann, numbering of forty-six. We will mention only two, classified under numbers 148 and 149, like the more interesting. The main purpose of the orders—the values cited in these documents is to contribute to serve the principles represented by the Talmud. If we add to this the tax on the hochère, said company tax, is used to pay all the individuals employed by this institution as well as providing the necessary funds for the cor-government employee strike (such as This is indicated by the extracted documents. from the Book on Kahal which have been cited more (top, chapter vi), we will understand how this institution, while being a burden burdensome for the Jews themselves, but useful to their cause in general, is very harmful to Christians, and how the strict execution of the law on kosher paralyzes the projects of European governments regarding reform of the Jewish question, a reform which would be so beneficial to Christian populations.

JEWISH RUSSIA 87

JEWISH RUSSIA

In Russia, a country which, since ancient times further inland, it was riddled with this gangrene. what is called employee corruption government, the Jews, with the address which characterized, have managed to guarantee the perforced acceptance of the tax on kosher meat by the legislation of the laws of the country whose execution cut was entrusted to government employees nement; they did so well that the authorities Russian civilians themselves were monitoring, from their On the other hand, strict observance by all Jews of the law on the kosher!

This question, so extraordinary and so bizarre, was motivated by the Kahal of the in the following way:

“Not relying on our moral strength,

which should help us maintain the inssuch an important provision of the meat law kosher prescribed by the Talmud of a ma-such a particular nière, and, anticipating the circumstances-practices in which those of our coreligions-

JEWISH RUSSIA 89

naircs who do not want to observe strictly the provisions of said law, deserving a reprimand and punishment from the Kahal, could appeal to the authorities
Russian civilians, in order to seek their protection
so as not to suffer the punishments that the Kahal claims to have the right to apply it to them, we we did everything we could to introduce in the country's civil laws a chapter relating to the collection of the tax on the kosher, in order to
to ensure its implementation by the authorities.

We can guess that the success of this introduction-tion of the law on kosher in the codes of country shouldn't have cost much trouble for Kahal, because it was only a matter of persuading to the Russian authorities that the tax, said injjôt of the box, which is perceived daily among the Jews, is nothing more than a safer way to make the Jewish population pay the taxes situations that every government demands of its subjects, regardless of their religion.
And that is how the Kahal has, for so to speak, forced the Russian government to introduce the law on the Jewish kosher into its
His own laws. He said it in these terms:

90 LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

"The tax that has long existed in the Jewish nation in Russia, under the name box tax, levied on meat called Kochère is intended for improvements that can be introduced into this population to know: a) for the establishment of Jewish schools wherever the need arises; b) to to ensure the collection of taxes owed by the Jewish population in government; c) and for to protect and assist civil and military authorities silences in the regular perception of this tax (1) which must be: 1° on each animal slaughtered in Jewish abattoirs, whose meat is kosher; 2° on each fowl killed and also intended to be kosher; 3° on each pound of kosher meat sold at Jews; 4° on the fines that must be paid those who do not strictly observe the law of Kocher, according to the prescriptions of the Talmud.

"During the operation, what do the butchers do?"
Jews by slaughtering animals and birds, whose meat is to be used for the kosher, we

(1) Supplement to chap. cclxxxi of the Law on Imports., art. 1 and 8.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 91

must ensure that the instruments and 1st utensils used in the operation, be in accordance with the prohibitions of the law of Talmud, which must be certified by the rabbi (1).

"The city and rural police,
as well as the civil authorities, must, at the legal request from Jewish entrepreneurs, aid and intervention, so that the perception of the tax, called the box tax, is made strictly-lying and without any delay by the Jews who buy kosher meat for their consumptions (2).

Thus, Kochère's law is today under the protection of the Russian government, which had become the support of this eminently Jewish, and which, as has already been said, separates the largest Jewish population of the populations Christians among whom she lives; and this
The law fears no enemy in Russia. – On the question of what advantage the gou-

(1) Supplement to chap. cclxxxi, art. 33 of the Act taxes.

(2) Supplement to chap. cclxxxi, art. 57 of the law on taxes.

The Russian government can thus find ways to protect itself. the statute of limitations for the tax on the kosher, here Something to enlighten the curious: The arrears owed by the Jewish population of the government of Vilna amounted, in 1869, to the enormous sum of 93,368 silver rubles (1,173,472 francs); and those owed by the Jewish population in the the Minsk government reached, in 1868, 341,097 silver rubles (1,364,388 francs). In All in all, for both governments: 2 million 537,860 francs.

The Russian government, by protecting the collection of this tax on the kochère and in having it carried out by the civil authorities Russians, cause the greatest harm to the popula-Christian traditions of the regions where the Jews, from a hygienic point of view, since it is eating meat often unhealthy, rejected by the Jews; on the other hand On the other hand, he favors and encourages the same Jews to resist him and to paralyze all projects reform that he would attempt to introduce in the Jewish population scattered across its vast States, which we have provided proof of through the authentic quotations given at the end

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 93

from the previous chapter, through extracts from Derjawine's report, and excerpts the Kahal ordinances of which we are to follow this chapter, reserving the right to return later on this question.

VIII

Here are the documents, filed in the Book surleKahal, âeBrafmann, under numbers 148 and 149, which we have just invoked in support of this presentation:

No. 148.

Regulations to ensure the authority of the tribune judicial treatment of Jews, which, as a result of offenses and the contraventions committed by our corelilegionnaires, risk losing all influence, this God forbid!

These regulations were discussed and approved.
by the general meeting composed of all the Jewish authorities, namely representatives of the city, members of the Kahal in full force and members of the Bel-Dine court in view to ensure the judgments of this tribunal have the force of law welcome from all Juii's.

JEWISH RUSSIA 95

1° If someone is mentioned as belonging to the Jewish religion three times by Samosh (servant of the synagogue-gogue) in front of the Bel-Dine, to deposit in the question which concerns him, and does not obey this appeal, as well as, if he does not submit to the judgment rendered by the Bet-Dine in the same in this matter... a Hevem will be launched against him.
The chiefs and representatives of the city acceded tooth in advance to all the expressions that embwill fold the Bet-Dine in the formula of this Hevem, which will be launched by a notary. against the neck-pable. – The Samoche will have to proceed that the Hevem launched was approved by all the au'ounited Jewish rites ("Begaskomusaloufeiveioznie Hakabal.

If such a Hevem had no result, then
The Bet-Dine must draw up a report, signed by all its members, and register this act in Pinkes's (book of deeds). Samoche is also required to register it in the Kahal's Pinkes.
After which, the Samoche will have to consult the Per-Secret seducer (tax collector), Neigih-Gamel, on what needs to be done and how we should act with the culprit who did not correct himself after the Hevem was launched against him. – What will come out from the mouth of the secret Persecutor (tax collector) must be carried out very respectfully by the Samoche.

If the culprit is a powerful man, danger-hollow and capable of causing some damage to Kahal, the Bet-Dine must, in this case, consult with one another.

with the monthly inspector, as well as with two the most experienced representatives (in which case no member of the Kahal or Bet-Dine may de- (to decline its cooperation), to take common ground a decision, which will inevitably become enforceable toire;

2° If the guilty party against whom the Hevcn persisted in its obstinacy for three days. and does not make amends, all his property, real estate and personal property, as well as the position it what was acquired in the synagogue, must be declared, by the Bet-Dine, as Hclker (dispo- (not suitable for the first buyer who comes along). Therefore all the compensation due to the Bet-Dine must to be ac,uiltécs by a parlic taken on the for- tune of the culprit, for all this fortune mobi- The property and land will be sold by appraisal (in the absence of the culprit); and what will remain, after paying the dukes' indemnities to Bet- Dine will belong to the Kahal's fund. If this- during which some complaints arose from the the share of the guilty party's creditors, the orders and the rulings of the Bet-Dine will settle these claims mations (I);

3° If the party that cites another, for ob- to hold a judgment of the Bet-Dine, in a trial

(1) This document has been translated verbatim from the Book on the Kahal. 11 It is probable that the sale of which he is ques- tion is limited to the sale of the right to exploit the properties the guilty party of the Jewish man, as is done for Christians hold.

JEWISH RUSSIA 97

any judge, finds only three judges, these three judges are obliged to begin immediately to conduct the trial, without any possibility of postponement, under using the pretext that the court is not at full strength. There is no exception to this rule except if he/she/it is necessary to... senses a very important matter, to which all the members comprising the Bet-Dine must to take part. But in general, it is desirable that all legal proceedings be concluded as soon as possible. representatives of the Kahal, as well as) the other Daïons (judges) will be required to accept and app- to prove everything that was decided by the three judges, without the right to observe or oppose.

And if one party, dissatisfied with the judgment rendered by the three judges, addressed to another judge to appeal this judgment, no one must to comply with this request; for the matter has been judged by three judges and cannot be replaced by another Samoche;

4° If the pursuer, that is to say the one who files a lawsuit, forces the opposing party to to present before a Christian court, with the help of Hevem, he will be summoned to appear before the tribunal of the Bet-Dine. One must first send him the warning that the Kahal and the Bet-Dine gave him would make them pay for all the costs and all the damages which would reach the opposing party in this trial; and that, moreover, he will have to undergo all the responsibilities arising from the Hevem. responsibilities required to support and to uphold the holy institution of the Bet-Dine;

98 JEWISH RUSSIA

5. It is forbidden for any Jew to serve as a witness to the one who cites one of his coreligionists before a court other than the Bet-Dine court; and On the contrary, every Jew is enjoined to bear witness-gner, if he is summoned before the Christian tribunal, in favor of the opposing party of the plaintiff;

6° If the plaintiff possesses a letter of changes the part he quotes, he can in this case to summon one's opponent before a Christian court if the latter did not want to submit to the decision of the Bet-Dine;

7° If the guilty party acknowledges their wrongdoing and fine by submitting to the judgment rendered by the Bel-Dine, before this affair was communicated to the secret Persecutor, the Bet-Dine can cancel the Hevem launched against him, but with this essential condition of obtaining some guilty the positive and indisputable guarantee that the latter will submit to the decisions of the Bet-Dine. – If, however, the matter had already been communicated to the secret Persecutor, the cancellation the Hevem could only be granted with the permission of the Kahal, the Bet-Dine and all the Jewish authorities of the general meeting;

8° The Samoches must once a month

To gather and choose from among them a secret Persecutor and he must solemnly swear that he will not scatter He will not be able to harm anyone in the world, not even his most vulnerable child. close relatives; and that by complying with instructions he will receive from his predecessors—sisters, he will do everything possible to support and to uphold the holy tribunal of Det-Dine instituted by the Tilmud. — Furthermore, he must swear not to divulge the secret of the election to fulfill this function.

JEWISH RUSSIA 90

No. 149.

Duties and means that must be employed by the secret Persecutor to succeed in breaking and to overcome the will of the defiant culprit Jewish court of Det-Dine.

1° The culprit against whom the Hevem must be deprived of the exercise of all functional duties. tion in the Kahal or in the Ilerveis (con—brothers);

2° His exclusion from all confraternities is absolute;

3° He must not be admitted near Fora-Bes—gamidrasch (1), no more than with the others places where holy ceremonies are celebrated; to Even more so, he must not be allowed to approaching, in the capacity of a cantor, the place where He prays. He is forbidden to buy honest things. ners, and common prayer cannot be inter—broken nor stopped by him (2);

(t) The Fora ceremony will be described in one of the following chapters.

(2) If a Jew has been harmed in his interests or in his dignity by another Jew or by some nonsense, and that he

100 LA— JEWISH RUSSIA

4. The guilty party cannot be invited to any general meeting, nor at any particular celebration, because whoever invited him would be liable to Hevem;

5. No one should praise the guilty party, nor nor any place where it could— would be able to carry on any kind of business; nothing— minus any arrangement made with him, before The Hevem, launched against him, must be strictly— observed until the expiry of the term came first. The culprit's wife cannot to be admitted to the ablution ceremony in the Mikwa, and it is understood that at the appointed time first and fatal, all misfortunes will fall like lightning striking the culprit. Upchito che— beïam pokdaï inlkadolof vastcï;

6. If the guilty party holds any position whatsoever, he it is forbidden for any Jew to make him work from his state;

7. If a father had promised his daughter in marriage to the culprit against whom the Hevem is launched, he is allowed for this father to break the contract and not not to keep his promise, without being for that obliged to pay some kind of compensation, as is usually done in pareil cas;

8° 11 everyone is allowed to shout at the

Having not received satisfaction for this offense, he surrenders to the at the synagogue, in Besgamdrasch, and there he interrupts the prayer and stop it until satisfaction is given to him data.

JEWISH RUSSIA 101

synagogue that the culprit ate trcf, or that he did not observe the lean and other accusations sations, and this can be falsely asserted, in order to to incite the fanaticism of the Jewish populace, and that the guilty party be subjected to all kinds of persecution possible cuts.

All of the above was decided unanimously. by the general meeting composed of members of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine and approved by the great Rabbi Garof-Gagadol. And all signed under taking the oath, required so that all of this be monitored on time.

You must have read the preceding material carefully.
to get an idea of a Jew's position which is under the immediate influence of Kahal, as well as Kahal's reports with the local authorities, and the value that can to have the testimony of a Jew under surveillance by the Kahal.

"

TX

Let's turn to the Jewish brotherhoods; let's see what are their relations with the Kahal and the influence that these brotherhoods exert over the Jews and the Christians.

There is no Jewish society in which There are only a few brotherhoods, and there are none almost no Jew who does not belong to one of or to the other.

The influence of these brotherhoods on the lives of the people
general and the private existence of each Jew, in terms of moral and material aspects, as well as on the social organization of the country where the Jews
They live in it, it is very large and very remarkable.
The Jewish brotherhoods are, at our service
In a very apt comparison, the arteries of the

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 103

Jewish society, while the Kahal fills the heart functions. For anyone who has not been able to pe-to intimately understand the springs of inner life laughter at the Jews and the artificial means they employ to exist amidst the different Christian societies and others, it is almost impossible to grasp the mysterious lil that en-chain and bind all the Jews spread out over the surface of the earth, like an all-powerful and invisible corporation.

In a work published in Russian by Brafmann (Mina, 1869), this question is treated with every possible detail. Here, we will only touch upon this interesting part of Jewish life by indicating some categories of the brotherhoods in question.

The first category is a brotherhood of the Talmud: The Learned One.

The 2nd category is a brotherhood of good-pheasant.

The 3rd, the brotherhood of artisans.

The 4th, brotherhood of religion.

The 5th, funeral brotherhood.

Then, several other brotherhoods, which are divided into countless local brotherhoods,

104 JEWISH RUSSIA

but which are all intimately linked under the national flag of the Talmud, which they serve faithfully supporting the Kahal institution on which their existence depends.

Each brotherhood has its leader, its institute-author, and quite often his house of prayer (branch of the main synagogue). In short, each brotherhood is a second Kahal. daire, most of whose members appear—they belong to the elite of Jewish society, forming a near-legion of fighters surrounding and defend the national flag of the Talmud. Always at the service of the Kahal, when he—he believes it necessary to punish a recalcitrant Jew—to obey his orders and to bring him back under its heavy yoke, — they are equally today ready to defend, by all means which they can use, a faithful Jew and subjected to the orders of the Kahal, when this Jew has some disagreement with the Goyim.

The relationship of these brotherhoods with the Kahal are recorded in great detail in 21 acts and documents published by Brafmann, in his Book on the Kahal. We have extracted and translated from Russian seven of the most interesting ressants, classified under numbers 7, 8, 14, 59, 79, 82 and 85.

Here they are:

No. 7.

On the formation of population statistics
Jewish community of the city, according to each person's position.

Wednesday; section of 5 books Ahro-Kerdochime
Iva. 5555.

Among the representatives of the Kahal, he was ordered to the Gabjims (heads of the brotherhoods) of to provide the true statistics of all members making up their society. In the brotherhoods craftsmen, they will have to indicate the counter-established masters, without mentioning whether they appear-are attached to the Jewish population of the city or if they are foreigners. The same order was given by the Kahal to all Jewish landlords or tenants principal Jews of this city, residing there, or the inhabitant only temporarily.

No. 8.

"On the choice of jurors."

To settle the outstanding issue with a few brotherhoods, in relation to Jewish butchery, Saturday, according to the Ahro-Kerdochime section, 13 Iva

106 JEWISH RUSSIA

5555: a), with the assent of the Kahal, were elected four leaders of brotherhoods who, with the Rabbi Samuel, son of J., must arrange and finish The case that arose between Hevra Kadische (Funeral brotherhood) and Hevra-Schive-Kir-nechime (a brotherhood of 7 elected officials). At the same session, It was decided that he would be delivered to Samuel, son deJ., the translation certificate of some decrees of Bet-Dine in Russian. If the Rabbi and the Bet-Dine consent, the Samoches (notaries) (of the Kahal) can sign this certificate.

No. 14.

On the construction of the Jewish slaughterhouse.

Saturday, section of 5 books Begaloscho. 5555.

He was enjoined to the Hevra-Kadische brotherhoods and Hevra-Schive-Kirnechime to build the a-Jewish beater at their own expense; and since the brotherhood Schive-Kirnechime withdrew, and that consequently- As a consequence of this retirement, the continuation of said Construction had to be stopped, the Kahal designates Rabbi Avi, son of R., Rabbi Nota, son of D., and Rabbi Samuel son of G., to stop the exact count with the brotherhood that refuses to continue of the construction in question, and of re- to demand from her the receipt for all expenses Do this up to that point. When this count will be finished and the delegates will have between They will have to hold the receipt in their hands.

JEWISH RUSSIA 107

to offer the Kadische brotherhood to buy some Kahal has the right to continue alone and at her own expense. the slaughterhouse. – The three delegates have power and have right to stop the account, as they- tend, along with the brotherhood that has withdrawn, thus than to reach an agreement with the one who would like to con- continue construction, as they might do the seven principal leaders of the general meeting. If the Kadische brotherhood wishes to continue the said construction and obtains authorization from the delegates as indicated above by the Kahal, she will have to rem- to fulfill all the conditions that have been prescribed to the Schive-Kirnechime brotherhood.

No. 59.

The monitory decision.

In the construction of the apartment which gives in the courtyard of the synagogue, the Semi- brotherhood tat-IIasodime did not fulfill the conditions im- posed in the authorization granted to him Déé speaks Kahal, – having built the windows, two of which face the side where the prayer house of the funeral brotherhood, and the other two on the side where the prayer is performed from the Zevah-Cedek brotherhood (butchers), which is completely contrary to the agreement made with the Kahal. – However, despite this contraven- tion to the o data of the Kahal, its members have decided that the cash relief, without interest, would be maintained at the Semitat-Haso brotherhood-dime, if she builds two in this apartment other windows, overlooking the eastern side; in Otherwise, the Kahal will withdraw the aid. interest-free money to the said brotherhood.

No. 79.

On the Kahal trial with the brotherhood of Aitisans.

Saturday, Bogar section.

The representatives of the Kahal decided to ar- to amicably settle the dispute between the craftsmen Israelis and the Kahal, by paying the former the sum of 200 silver rubles, to satisfy all their claims.

No. 82.

On the rights of the leaders of the Holy Brotherhood.

Saturday, Bogar section. 5559.

It is granted to the current leaders of the holy the funeral brotherhood the right that they possess seven elected officials from the city. For everything concerning the aforementioned brotherhood and until the new election tion, any decision that will be made will have the same force that if it had been taken by the seven elected officials of the city.

THE JEWISH ILLUSION 109

No. 85.

Circular sent by the Kahal to all brotherhoods.

Saturday, section of 5 Behukataï books. 5559.

City representatives decided to- to send to all the confraternities a circular por- From this day forward, until 18 Iva 5560, that is to say, for an entire year, he is de- eager to receive new members, except for the unmarried children and adolescents.

It is, therefore, forbidden for the leaders of these confraternities that are appointed for one month, thus that the servants should take steps to collect votes regarding admission in the brotherhoods, with the exception, however, of the Semitat-IIasadime brotherhood (loan brotherhood).

X

Let us now publicize the ceremony Alia, in which the Jews are divided into patricians and plebeians.

This ceremony, instituted by Ezdreche (1), and, according to others, by Moses the child, consists in the reading of five holy books and from the book of the Prophets, a reading which must to be done during the communal prayer (2). This Reading must be done on Monday, Thursday and Saturday medi of each week. On the ticket Ezdreche spoke of this general rule as follows: "He who, within three days, indicated, will not have read the five holy books, will be per- "Guarded by the Angel of Darkness (Satan)."

(1) Kolbo, The Rule of Reading the Five Holy Books- Chapter XV.

(2) Talmud, Treatise of Megil, page xx.

JEWISH RUSSIA 111

The practice of reading the five holy books, thus that the Book of the Prophets, was introduced during communal prayer, as well as during the new moon festivals and the May days- gres. The performance of this duty is prescribed by The Synagogue is for all Jews without exception. The fulfillment of said duty is as- The Kohen (officiant) and the He (assistant) (1), as well as any other Jew.

This reading could not be done otherwise that according to the law of the Torah (a piece of the par- path on which psalms are written and (some extracts from the law of the Talmud). These the most sacred object in every synagogue. The ceremony is performed in the following manner:

sells:

After reciting the prayer Chemina, Ezrei, a member of the audience removes the Kivot piece of the parchment in question, and which is called Torah, and gives it to the cantor or to his replacement. The cantor, after having received with profound religious feeling, re-quotes a short prayer and solemnly ascends

(1) Up to now, there exists among the Jews the distinction of the c'l.ss.s, which are divided into Levi and Zayodi.

112 JEWISH RUSSIA

the platform. The people then surround him and each must touch the Torah. On the platform, the cantor meets the Segan or Gaba, (the staroste) and the Samoche (notary).

After placing the Torah back on the table which the cantor is on the platform, at a sign
What does Gaba do to him, calling while singing?
the name of the father of the one to whom it fell, this
That day, the honor of reading the prayer first.

At this invitation, the designated person
he gets up from his place and goes up onto the platform;
then, placing his hand on the Torah, recites the prayer in these words: "Bless Jehovah, who is blessed; blessed be the blessed Jehovah.
in eternity! You are blessed, Jehovah, king of creation; you, who chose us from among all the peoples of the earth and gave us laws!
"Blessed are you, great lawgiver!" The people answers: Amen. After which, the reading begins-the cycle of the five Books, and when it is finished, the same person who had been invited by the
The cantor, stepping onto the platform, repeats: "Blessed
Be you, Jehovah, who gave us the truths Holy tablets of law! Blessed be Jehovah, the great legislator!

JEWISH RUSSIA 1 13

This is what the Alia ceremony consists of.
Being invited to read and recite the prayer means to be chosen to ascend Mount Sinai, represented in each synagogue by the platform, from where Ton announces to the assembled people the laws dictated by God himself.

And what about the right to receive Alia?

The first Aliyah belongs to the Kohen (of-benefiting, the descendant of Aaron); the second at Levi (assistant); the following are for the people. In the absence of the Kohen, the Levi takes The first; if the Levi is absent and the Kohen presently, this one takes the first two. In the absence of the Kohen and the Levi, their Alia are given to other people pre-paths to prayer, in the following order: Tal-Mud Hahan (the learned interpreter of the Talmud), Parnes (the representatives of the general meeting) general), which have the right to be awarded since the the third through the sixth Alla, that is to say-say Chelichi; the others Alia belong to the people present.

In this way, the AZia ceremony by-the synagogue's faithful dressed as patricians and plebeians; which often causes violent quarrels among this devout society; because, among those present, one felt offended because he was not invited to board the es-trade to recite the prayer and approach the Torah; another claims that it was his rightful place third or fourth A lia, instead of the cin-the fifth or sixth that he obtained; a third-the thirteenth would like to belong to the patricians, while-say that we relegated Fa among the plebeians; thus immediately. These various claims occasion-almost always cause scandals, which do not not suitable for a temple, intended for the holy prayer. The Kahal, despite its authority recognized by all Jews and his despotism weighing on the inner life of his coreligions-naires, by dividing Jewish society into the synagogues in two distinct classes, did not succeeded, on this occasion, in ensuring discipline Pliny needed.

114 JEWISH RUSSIA

We need to examine the following in turn:

1° The authority of the Kahal in his district;

2° The rules prescribed by the Kahal ready-eagerly to grant permission to the Jews fairground workers to remain in the district;

3° The sale to the Jews Hazaka and Merope;

4° Herem among the Jews.

Schiller's words: "The Jews..."
are constituted as a State within the States » de-conclude and summarize the historical picture of the life of the Jews in Egypt, 3,600 years ago;
which in turn perfectly retraces the life
Jews of today...

But, as a state without territory is something fictitious and which escapes con-

11 G LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

ception, the words of the great German poet could, until that moment, pass rather for a poetic idea rather than for a truth
historical.

In this work, we will encounter this ter-a fictional and elusive ritual, which has made everything time the covetousness of Kahal, and which cons-establishes a true domain... a kind of souve-Theocratic rule... And that's how the Schiller's words acquire the value of a indisputable truth.

Here is the idea that the law of Kahal gives us of this territory considered by the Jews not as fictional, but as real, under the name of Hezkat-Ischub, that is to say, of the authority that the Kahal claims over the properties comtaken in his district.

By the Hezkat-Ischub law, the authority of the Ka-Hal extends beyond all rules and known forms that govern conduct of any society. The non-inhabitants Jews, on whose goods, lands and properties

he extended his occult power into the district, are considered by the Jews as the inhabitants of a territory free from all occupation

JEWISH RUSSIA 117

previous tion (1), component, if we can—
Let us express ourselves in this way, the private domain
• Kahal, who has the right to sell it to the Jews in sections... or, to put it more simply explicitly (as does one of the most im—bearing the interpretations of Talmudic law, the Rabbi Kulun), like a free lake in which Only he can cast his nets for to fish, to whom the Kahal sold the right.

According to the Hezkat-Ischnb: "Every Jew who would like to live either in another city, or do a business in his birthplace, se would place in vain for this under the protection the laws of the land... He would fail if he did not obtain them.
does not have the permission of his Kahal, as well as from the Kahal of the place where he would like to transport to put away one's belongings.

The Code of Jewish Law, Hoschen-Hamis—chepot, expresses himself on this case as follows: "In the present times, especially when we are forced to live dependent on the na—
Christian traditions and in the restricted place where

(1) Property belonging to non-Jews is ass—miles to a free desert (steppe). — Talmud- Araklat — Baba Bulra, page 59.

7.

118 JEWISH RUSSIA

Jewish dwellings are generally located In large cities, it could happen that, some disturbances occurring in the city, a Jew, who came from another locality, not being aware of the secrets of the local community wedge, unwittingly denounced facts which should be kept hidden from Christians...
Each Kahal has the right to close the door to every Jew who is a foreigner to the district of which he is the re—presenting and the absolute master. To arrive To achieve this result, the Kahal can employ all the means at his disposal, even resorting to Tin-influence of the local administration of the Goyim.

A temporary stay is permitted for marchands arrived in the city, to carry out the temporary sale of their merchandise; but It is forbidden for any Jew to establish his residence density in a city where he was not born, without a formal authorization from the Kahal of this city. There is only one exception to this rule.
in favor of the Talmud Hahan (inter- scholar (reader of the law of the Talmud), to which it is per-
"It's allowed to settle wherever it pleases."

From the foregoing, it is clear that the Jews,

JEWISH RUSSIA 1 19

only superficially obeying the laws of countries where they live, are bound to obey passive and uncompromising attitude towards their tastes respective governments, represented in each that city by the Kahal.

Let's now move on to the sale that the Kahal, for the benefit of the Jews, properties ap-belonging to non-Jews, properties regarded like a large open lake, in which this-
Only those who have bought it can cast their nets there.
Kahal law.

To those uninitiated into dark secrets,
This sale may be due to the Machiavellianism of Kahal.
to seem an inexplicable enigma. – Indeed,
Let us suppose that the Kahal, according to the attributions that he gave himself, sells to Jaif A the property of a non-Jewish individual B, property which, according to the laws of the country, belongs inviolably to The latter. This sale has been completed, it will without saying, to Finsu and without the consent of true owner. Here is this Question: What benefit can Jew A derive from right to the property that Ka- sold to him Hal, the right for which he paid? The non-Jew B will not cede his property to Jew A, by this

/

the only reason Kahal invested in the latter of an alleged property right, and the Kahal for its part does not have the power to expropriate the Non-Jew B... What did Jew A buy and why did he pay into the Kahal's fund the amount of the acquisition of the property apparatus attached to the non-Jew B?

This is the Hazaka that Jew A bought from Kahal, that is to say the exclusive right to exploit the property of individual B, that is to say of to be able, alone, to rent the house and exercise any kind of business; to sublet it only to the other Jews parts of the property which he could not use; to have the exclusive right to lend at usury to the owner—to the other tenants of the house its; finally, – as specified in the act of sale, carried out by the Kahal for the benefit of the Jew A, – to employ all possible means possible and imaginable ways to get there as soon as possible that he will be the true master of the property from which he purchased the exploitation rights (1).

(1) See the act under no. 261, cited in chapter vi.

JEWISH RUSSIA 121

When the Kahal sells the right of Mero-piie (1), that is to say the exploitation of the individual duality of a non-Jewish person who does not possess sede point of ownership, it is stated in the deed of sale that only the buyer has the right to lending at usury to the non-Jewish individual whose exploitation was sold to him; that he is forbidden to the other Jews to enter, in whatever way that is, in business with this individual; that the buyer alone can and must invent all the ways to confuse the situation of this individual, in order to guide him more safely, and as quickly as possible, to ruin, or even to dishonor; for the properties of the Gentiles, thus that the Goyim themselves are, according to the Jewish laws, Hefker (free exploitation up to the ruin).

Here are the laws of Hezket-Ischub, according to the Talmud, as evidence of which Brafmann cites, in his Book on the Kahal, thirty-seven acts, and documents from which we have extracted and processed the most important ones, classified under the nos. 22, 23, 57, 77, 100, 101, 102, which are found

(1) Mcropiie literally means non-Jewish individual.

122 JEWISH RUSSIA

will be seen in chapter xn, as well as the act under number 261 already mentioned in chapter vi.

These acts and documents lift the curtain which, for so many centuries, hid from the eyes of world the impenetrable secret of the kingdom of Israel. These acts and documents shed light on this profound darkness with which Judaism is veiled; and, for the first time, Heder Kahal (the Kahal's chamber) emerges from the darkness – Raines and reveals the actions of this court secret to which, in all countries and of all At the time, the Jewish population was and remains, admittedly submissively.

The great power which the Kahal has seized prepared and whose results appear in the strange orders issued by him, – such clans as those already mentioned previously and those that follow this chapter and the following chapters – which has something to offer to surprise the reader and should seem to him/her how incredibly audacious and infernal calculation.

The exercise endows the acrobats with such flexibility, which, if we didn't see them at the work, the imagination would refuse to believe that we could get to this point. The exercise of subtlety, practiced by the Kahal for ten-Eight centuries, you made it so skillful, that it It is no more difficult for him to achieve his goal. by selling to a Jew the property belonging to a non-Jewish individual, that it was not difficult for him-city of hiding to this day, in Russia, in Poland, Romania, that is to say everywhere

JEWISH RUSSIA 123

where Jews abound, the true statist state tick of the Jewish population.

The Kahal still adheres to this principle simple, but infallible: that it is easier to catch only one fish at a time.
than having several hooks on the line and thus exposing oneself to the risk of breaking it due to overloading weight. Also, continuing this system of Since time immemorial, it has always attacked the in-Christian individualities separately, and it is arrived in the northern provinces of Rus-siae, Lithuania, Podolia, Volhynia and in Galicia, provinces where the population Jewish is great, with extraordinary resultsnaires... 23 percent of real estate properties today the lines belong to the Jews in these provinces, where they have also

124 JEWISH RUSSIA

made absolute masters of trade and the industry.

It is very rare for the attack to be directed by the Kahal, which is the representative of a powerful corporation, and which consequently possesses mysterious means against an in-isolated Christian individuality, do not end up the advantage of Jewish authority. Furthermore, the Kahal never risks anything: for, in suppo-even a Jew, after buying some Kahal, the right of Hazaka or Meropié, in his eagerness to promptly strip-lying to those over whom he acquired the rights that we mentioned above, employs illegal and excessively abrupt means, and thus falls under the jurisdiction of the country.
Kahal, a child in this case, throws at his sea pack of postmen, armed with the talismanman, whom we discussed in chapter VI, and false witnesses, who can, by the Jewish laws, perjury in court Goyim. What can a single isolated Christian do in this all-out war that everyone declares against him a Jewish population, represented by the Kahal, otherwise succumb?

If the Kahal does not encounter, within the radius of his district, no serious obstacle to strike taxes on commerce, industry and all branches of production, that's what we know his skill in making people pay for part of this tax, indirectly, by the popu-Christianization, and to bring him back into his cash register, although it seems much more It's difficult to scheme and act in the shadows. by obscure calculations; for here it would seem that the path forward was less favorable to the clandestinely. But the learned Kahal did not hesitate to Don't fuss over such a small thing. We saw, in the Chapter II, how he managed to attract in its subtle net the Russian authorities, and has made it an aid to perception of the tax called the box tax, which is done paid by the Jewish butchers, and how this perception has acquired the force of Russian law. We let us quote another article from the Russian code which provides the Kahal with the opportunity to collect many taxes for its own benefit and where Russian legislation acts for and on behalf of the Jewish Kahal.

Thus, in Russian legal codes, cha-

126 JEWISH RUSSIA

In pitre v, § 10, p. 281, it says: "Taxes that the Israelites must pay, in addition to that of the box, on the kosher, are: 1° so much for one hundred percent on the price of apartment rentals, shops, stores rented to Jews by the Jewish owners; 2° a certain percentage on the industries in which Jews operate, such as a) outlets serving hot drinks, tea, punch, coffee, etc. in the cabarets of small towns and the countryside; 6) the farmers of the distilleries glassworks; c) the farmers of the glassworks; cl) the iron-forge owners; e) tar manufacturers; f) wholesale livestock dealers; 3° so much percent on the inheritances of deceased Jews; 1° both for the permission to be able to wear the Jewish national costume; 5° both for a fine of non-payment of the taxes listed above; 6° as much for dispensing the brandy into the ca-"bars of state-owned land."

Thus the], Kahal in Russia has succeeded, by his cunning, to be made mandatory by the code of country, the payment of taxes by Jews taxes which he distributes and which he takes the lion's share. A few remnants they barely return to the country's public treasury; for the Machiavellianism that the Kahal employs in the composition of the list of Jewish contributors buables, which serves as the basis for perception taxes by Russian authorities, exceeds what the most subtle lawyer could imagine Christian. The Jews, for their part, are and must-vent to be submissive like very humble servants visitors of Kahal; for, with a stroke of the pen, he could ruin those among them who do not would not be subject and that he deals with René-gats, in the list he is compiling. The in-therefore subject to them could not claim any rights. civil authorities of the country, since these authorities collect taxes from Jews, according to the list compiled by the Kahal.

JEWISH RUSSIA 127

One example, among others, will highlight how the Kahal conducts itself with its unsubmissive coreligionists and of what scope is this phrase already quoted: "to force the Jew" disobedient or renegade to return to the gi-the principle of passive obedience to Jewish laws, even in Faide des Goïms.

In 1866, a Jewish widow named Broïda lodged a complaint with the governor of Vilna, regarding this that the Kahal of this city was making him pay

128 JEWISH RUSSIA

1,500 silver rubles (approximately 6,000 francs) for the burial of her late husband, under the protection of the state text that the funeral brotherhood had been forced to watch over the corpse for five days before the burial; she added that one had made him sign a statement containing that she was paying this enormous sum from her pro-pre will. When the Kahal learned that a such a complaint had been addressed to the governor

In the meantime, he ordered the plaintiff to pay again 500 silver rubles, like fine, alleging that she had not paid the amount of the subscription that is made between They, the rich Jews, to be freed from service military their poor coreligionists. The Russian authorities, neither wanting nor able to to meddle in the internal affairs of the Jews, no only could not do justice to the widow Broïda, but also, conforming to the articles of the Russian code that concern the perception of taxes from the Jews, they lasted lend a hand in collecting the fine of 500 silver rubles to which the Kahal had The widow was condemned.

Besides this great ease that the Kahal is managed to create a way to fit into his cash, through the Russian authorities, the taxes he imposes on the Jews, he has yet another indirect action, in truth, on Christian populations, to increase the funds in his account. Thus, by article of the law included in the Russian code, § 2, letter a, regarding the tax on hot drinks, It is clear that this tax does not affect the Jews. alone, because they only sell Teau-de-life in cabarets, and these are generally the Christians who provide the tea, the punch and coffee for travelers who stop in These cabarets were run by Jews. Part of it therefore from this tax paid by the tavern owners Jews for the benefit of the Kahal is acquitted by the Christian suppliers of hot drinks. In Vilna, and in the main cities of Lithuania, Kahal, through the intermediary of Russian authorities, perceive, in the markets Jews, a tax on provisions they sell Jewish merchants, supposedly only at Jews; but like many Christians buy various supplies from these merchants, necessarily the Jewish merchants make Christians pay, in addition to the value the actual value of the merchandise, the tax they owe—wind acquittal for the benefit of Kahal.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 129

About twenty years ago, the Kahal of Vilna managed to introduce to the Jewish market from this town the sale of fish, sale on from which he collects a considerable tax. sale of fish which, in principle, should not to happen that only to the Jews, took such proportions among the Christian population, than in 1867 the collection of the tax awarded to a... Jewish entrepreneur by the Russian authorities (1) a brought back 2,700 silver rubles to Kahal. Here, It is once again the Christian population that pays the price. indirectly a tax to Kahal, which does not ren— against no difficulties that its subtlety does not may prevail, in order to conform to the law of Hezkat-Ischub.

We would be mistaken again if we believed that The Kahal is content with the power that it is allowed to... sent the Russians to collect the taxes here— above indicated via and with the help local authorities, by strictly complying

(i) See the report from the government chancellery from Vilna dated September 19, 1355. No. 9J81.

JEWISH RUSSIA 131

subject to these laws. In the document included under number 57, which is cited among the others in chapter xn, we will see that the Kalial, wanting to introduce in Minsk the same tax which had already been introduced and perceived in a another city, he expressed himself thus at the end of his order: "After all that has been said above, the Kahal orders that the said im— The pot will be distributed among the Jews and perceived negatively. despite the opposition made by the civil governor "V. introduction of this new tax."

Everything that has been said so far about the Hezkat-Ischub law and what we will see, in browsing the documents cited below this chapter, and borrowed from the ordinances of the Kahal clearly demonstrates that authority and the arbitrary nature of the Kahal in these matters does not do not rely on the Talmud, whose laws

he complies punctually with regard to life interior and private of the Jews, but of course They bound it, which raises this authority to the dictatorship; for "whoever harms the Herem," says the Talmud, which violates and offends the entire law (1).

(i) Kolbo, § 139.

132 JEWISH RUSSIA

It's easy to understand what weight this oppressive dictatorial authority must crush the Jews themselves; but, according to what has been demonstrated, we see that Hezkat's law-Ischub reacts even more and weighs in more on the Christian population, which, in the first At first glance, it appears to be entirely independent of the authority. arbitrary of the Kahal.

For a legal expert, the cited documents contain more than one interesting question. We recommend these documents to those especially those who would like to delve deeper into the cause of the general complaint that is arising nowadays, everywhere Jews are numerous, as well as the because of the persecutions they faced have been on display for eighteen centuries.

It is now time to make known to the reader the form of the Herern (anathema) which the Kahal sometimes uses it as anathema and sometimes as an oath, both meanings sometimes becoming confused replacing one with the other.

Besides the Herem, there is also among the Jews Hindu or Chamto, oath or anathema to a lesser degree than the Herem.

JEWISH RUSSIA 133

Hindu or Chamto used as anathema means a temporary exclusion from the company Jewish, and if, after thirty days, the guilty party does not humbly repent before the Kahal, By admitting his guilt... the Herem is launched against him, and then he is completely excluded of the people of Israel. The publication of the linker is worded as follows:

"From the members of Kahal N. –"
to all the learned representatives of Eschubots (higher education institutions) Talmudic), greetings!... We are letting you know that The Jew A. – seized the money which is the property of Jew B. – and that, despite the order we gave to the first of to return this sum to whom it is due, he does not Fa Not done. For this violation of Jewish law, we imposed the Hindu on him; but, as He did not humble himself, and persevered in his forfeiture, we launched a legal action against him, and we ask you to do the same, by publishing every day that his bread is not the bread of a Jew; that his wine is the wine of Nescli (pagan); that the fruits which appeared to him hold are spoiled and soiled; that his books

134 THE JEWISH BUSSIAH

are books of witchcraft. – Order to cut off his Cice 1); tear from his door the Mesouse (2); you shall neither eat nor drink with him; you will not perform the ceremony of circumcision to his son; you shall not instruct his children on the commandments of God;
you will defend his acceptance as a member of a brotherhood; the cup he used will need to be cleaned with great care... In one word, you will look at it and treat it as We look at and treat a Nahri (non-Jew) (3).

Here is the form of Ilerem:

"By the strength and power that the Word holy exercise, we destroy, anathema-sounds, let us lower, humiliate, and curse, at name of the God of Kahal, in the name of the 613 articles of Divine Law contained in the

(1) Threads that are attached to the jacket worn by each Jew beneath his long black robe or cassock.

(2) A more .'oblong of wood which is placed obliquelyat the entrance of each Jewish dwelling, and on which nailed to it is a small roll of parchment on which is transcribes a verse from the five holy books. The Jews attach This talisman has the power to drive away impure spirits.
that Satan sends to earth.

(3) Sehaari, Cedek, t. I, chap. iv, § 14. Tesehoubat-Gago.iaie-Mdimonide, § 142.

JEWISH RUSSIA 135

Holy books; by this Herem of which Jesus Narvin cursed the city of Jericho; whose Elise)' cursed the kids who were chasing him—were, he and his servant Gohzi; of whom Baiafe cursed Moraz... By all the anathemes, curses, execrations that have been uttered from the time of Moses until the present moment; in the name of God Akalriel, of God Sabaut; in the name of the Archangel Michael, the great warrior; in the name of Melatron, who is called so by his Rabbi (God); in the name of Saldarifons, who braids the garlands for his Rabbi (God); in the name of this God, whose the name is written with 42 letters; in the name of this God who appeared in the bush to Moses; in the name of this God who allowed Moses to perform the miracle of drying up the sea Red so that the people of Israel can to pass...; in the name of Ee, through the secret passage—the name of God; by the power that wrote the tablets of divine law; in the name of the God of Israel, who sits upon the cherubim; in the name of the holy chariot and all those who are seated on this chariot in heaven; in the name of all the angels and archangels, celestial inhabitants who serve God... Every son or daughter of the people of Israel which would infringe upon this provision:

136 JEWISH RUSSIA

“May he be cursed by the God of Israel, who is seated upon the archangels, inhabitants of the heaven; may he be cursed by the holy and terrible the name of God, the name which will be proclaimed by Arch Rabbi on the Day of Judgment; May he be cursed by heaven and earth; may he be cursed by supernatural power; May he be cursed by the archangel Michael, the great warrior chief; may he be cursed by Metatron, which is marked by the name of its Rabbi (God); may he be cursed by God Arkantriel,

God of hosts; may he be cursed by all seraphim, all the angels and archangels who serve God is wind, and who are seated in heaven on the chariot!
"If he was born in the month of Nisan, during which reigns the archangel Uriel, whether he is evil-said by this archangel and by all the angels who
They are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month (TAoïra, during which reigns the archangel Capmùl, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

JEWISH RUSSIA 137

"If he was born in the month of Sivon, during which reigns the archangel Aruricl, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Tamuch, during in which reigns the archangel Peniel, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of 1660, during the-
May the archangel Darhiel reign, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of the Chosen One, during the-
May the reign of the archangel Elul be cursed.
by this archangel and by all the angels who
They are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Fischre, during in which reigns the archangel Curiel, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Herschvon, during which reigns the archangel BaschkicI, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels
who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Kislov, during the-8.

May the archangel Adouniel reign, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Teyvet, during in which reigns the archangel Enoël, whether he is evil-said by this archangel and by all the angels who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Schvat, during in which reigns the archangel Gabriel, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels who are subject to him!

"If he was born in the month of Adored, during the-
May the archangel Rumiel reign, may he be cursed by this archangel and by all the angels who are subject to him!

"May he be cursed by the seven archangels" which govern the seven days of the week and by all the angels; may he be cursed by the four archangels who govern the four seasons sounds of the year, as well as by all the angels; that he may be cursed by the seven sanctuaries of the Temple; may it be cursed by divine law which have governed since the beginning of the world crowns and seals; let it be cursed by the books of Almighty God,

JEWISH RUSSIA 139

strong and terrible! May all misfortunes be hasten to persecute him. Great God! Punish-the great Creator God, destroy him, massacre him and humiliate him! May the wrath of God be spread, with all its horror, upon his head. May all Let the devils come to meet him, let him be cursed wherever he turns his steps, that his His soul suddenly departs. May death impure, it strikes him and he doesn't live a month. May God punish him with consumption, a disease of chest, madness and the sword, by the rash and jaundice. That he pierces his chest with his his own sword and that his arrows be broken. May his journey always be fraught with misfortune. accidents and mishaps of all kinds. That he-against a profound darkness, and at the end the despair. May he be driven from the kingdom of light and precipitated into the realm of darkness. May misfortune and despair... gnaw. With his own eyes, he will see them all. The setbacks hit him blow after blow. He was... Loppera of the anathema that will weigh upon him, like a dress. He will destroy himself and Almighty God will destroy it. God will not... will never forgive, on the contrary; he will punish him.

140 JEWISH RUSSIA

His anger and vengeance will fall upon him and will permeate his entire body. His name will be erased from the space located in the heights of heaven. He will be forever exiled for eternity through all the descendants of Israel, according to the anathema written in divine laws. As for all of you who hold God dear, live "Happy and God bless you!"

Here is the prayer after the publication of the Herem:

"May he who had blessed our ancestors: Abraham, Israel, Jacob, Moses, Aaron, David Solomon and the prophets of Israel and the righteous, may a blessing descend upon this city and in all other cities, with the exception of the one who violates this Herem. God willing, in his mercy, protect all those who are faithful and protect their times and days For as long as possible. God bless. all the works of their hands and that he af-cross with all their brothers in Israel; that His holy will has been done! Amen (1).

Regarding oaths among Jews is very important to know.

(1) Kolbo, Rules on the Herem, § 139.

JEWISH RUSSIA 141

The Talmud divides the oath into three categories. categories:

1° Chebna-Deeraïta, oath that one makes pre-to be according to the law of Moses.

2° Shebnat-Geset, oath prescribed by Tal-mud.

3° Setam-Herem, investigation of the neck pable by threatening him with the Herem (1).

It should be noted that the Jews look at the oath as an act of great gravity, when required by the Jewish judicial authority, and above all they profess a very great respect for the first two categories of the service ment, which they find extremely dreadful.

This respect and this dread are pushed to a point where to such an extent that a Jew whose conduct has always- Having impeccable summer days is already frowned upon. within Jewish society, if there was only one once forced to take an oath before the court Jewish judicial system. He loses the trust of his core-religious people, and he is avoided like a leper. Therefore, considering the great importance that The Jews attribute to the oath, it is not

(i) Hoschen-lIamischpot-Meir-at-Eliaim, ch. lxv, p. 6, and Feschubot-IIaramileum, § 229.

142 JEWISH RUSSIA

It's surprising that a large proportion prefer sup-to bear losses, even considerable ones, that to be forced to take an oath by order of Bet-Dine. That is also why the third category of the oath, Setam-Herem, is especially in use and takes place before the Jewish courts.

This great significance that the Jews taking the oath would be a consequential thing slows and would reassure the Christians among in which live the countless populations Jewish, if indeed the Jews preserved it intact and gave him in any case and in front All courts the same interpretation... But, badly-fortunately for Christians who have affairs with the Jews (and this case arises frequently), the oath that Jews are called upon to testify before Christian courts tiens is considered by them as a simple formality, which has nothing in common with their conscience, and provided that the general good of Is-

Raël's result is that every Jew can commit before the Christian or Muslim authorities
He can make as many false oaths as he pleases.

To supplement the quotes from the intelligence services

JEWISH RUSSIA 143

Regarding the oath among the Jews, we add-Let us return to another passage from Maimonides, in which tells of everything that is said during-during the oath- ceremony, preserving for him in all its originality.

"We have heard that in your city
There are people who administer oaths to others at any time, and that there are some others who, at every moment, are capable to do it. Both sides are acting very bad, because they are preparing for themselves an inevitable punishment-
The punishment for perjury is... very large, though we wouldn't be wrong to someone for a penny: - If you If you want to impose an oath on someone, remove the piece of parchment that is nailed onto Mesouse, unfold it and show the passage of the holy law which is written in it; bring it here-a cart on which the dead are transported and cover her with the shroud with which they are covered; ap-carry the horn on which the day is trumpeted of the New Year; bring the children from the col-Lightly, bring the bladders, and throw them in front the stretcher." - Here, Bet-Dine must repeat to the one who swears that, tomorrow, he will be thrown in front of the stretcher like bladders.

144 JEWISH RUSSIA

"Light the candles, bring in some earth" and place on this land the one who lends and serves sound the horn and tell him aloud these words: "If you swear a false oath, all the anathemas contained in divine law will fall upon you.

Next, we read the formula of the Herem, and then-When F is finished, the horn is sounded; and all the everyone, even small children, repeat:
Amen (1).

(1) Cheake-Cedek, vol. V, chap. iv, §24. Teschoubot-Gagonine and Maimonides, § 142.

XII

Here are the documents, excerpts and translations from the Book about the Kahal, which we announced based on their text:

No. 22.

Debates between the Kahal and a private individual on the right to operate a place.

Wednesday, section of 5 books, Vorah.

As a result of the protest made by the representatives sent by Kahal, against the man named Eleazar, son of Ephraim, regarding the operation of the square and the buildings located therein, all belonging to Christian Zwanski, a furrier by trade, was decided, at the general meeting held by the members—the entire Kahal delegation must be sent two Toanimes (lawyers) who will have to plead the case—before the Bet-Dine and defend the cause and the rights of Kahal.

146 JEWISH RUSSIA

No. 23.

Decree of the Bet-Dine issued in the case of the Kahal against Eleazar, son of Ephraim

Kahal's lawyers argued that previous—already raises the question of exploitation rights the ownership in question had been debated, and that it had been decided that half of the buildings, as well as part of the courtyard (of the super—(ficie of twelve sagènes) was auctioned and sold to Isaac, son of Ber; and only the other half, with the part of the courtyard located at the rear, was left to a man named Eleazar, son of Ephraim; the latter possesses the deed of sale dated the 28th Sivan 5518, in which, among the seven representatives citizens of the city who had signed this act in fa—the sign of the deceased father of Eleazar, is found ture of Mecer, son of Joseph, who was a relative of two other representatives of the city; that in Consequently, this act of sale carried out in favor the deceased father of Eleazar was not legally In fact, since instead of seven representatives there are There were only six of them, who signed legally, then—that Meer's signature as a parent of two other was not valid. For these reasons, therefore, Kahal protests against the right to exploit that Eleazar exercises over all the property there—took the court, as successor to his father, to whom this right had been illegally sold, as demonstrated above.

JEWISH RUSSIA

147

For his part, Eleazar maintained that the signature de Meer, son of Joseph, can perfectly well not point belonging to the one who was a relative of two other representatives, signatories of the act of sale, since this deed dates from the year 5518, tan— Say it was the year 5560. Since that time, many of the people in question are dead; that it is still possible that in this At that time, distant kinship did not exist. no obstacle to the validity of the act; that since, on the deed of sale in question, are the signatures of the seven representatives of the city exi— governed by Talmudic law, he, Eleazar, as successor to his father, must legally enjoy the the right he claims.

The infallible and holy Bet-Dine, after having entense between the two opposing sides, decreed what follows:

“If Eleazar, son of Ephraim, cited by the Kahal before our court, proves 1° that the representative both Meer, son of Joseph, who had signed the deed of The sale in question was not the one that had two parents among other signatory representatives res; or 2° that the customs of those times per— were putting on the signatories of the pa— rents on a deed of sale; or 3° that the signatures res of the seven representatives of the city were, by any valid and legal reason, the right exploitation of the property in question ap—will leave completely. But, in the meantime, this

The right belongs to the Kahal, which can sell it to

148 JEWISH RUSSIA

a new buyer, to whom all the prerogatives that the Kahal grants in this kind business.

This Tuesday, 6 Tamuch 5560.

Signed by all of us, members of the infallible and Saint Bet-Dine... (1).

No. 57.

V. Tax on trade, decreed by the Kahal.

Thursday, the 5th day of Easter week 5558. A because of the large expenses that the Kahal has been forced to do so recently, expenses of which he cannot account, and consequently-due to a lack of money to pay to settle the tax arrears that must be paid for those who are poor, the members of the Kahal decided that a new tax will be levied on trade, calculated on the same basis as that which was instituted by the Kahal of the city of Sklow, without any variation in the mode of perception. We must start paying this tax since the 1st of next year. As for the sum of 12,000 rubles in cash that must be paid currently-to the state treasury, the Kahal will choose five members among the Jewish notables of the city,

(1) As a consequence of this decree of Bet-Dine, the law the operation of the square and the buildings located there has been sold by Kahal for 11 ducats to Isaac, son of Ber, by leaving part of the courtyard of a house to Eleazar.

JEWISH RUSSIA 149

to settle the distribution among the inhabitants, who will have to pay this extraordinary contribution, in order to fill in what is missing. We must in orto collect 800 silver rubles to complete the deficit that is in the Kahal's treasury.
The amount that each taxpayer will pay for the
the aforementioned contribution will be considered as a advance payment on the tax known as the company tax...

If the civilian governor of the city of Minsk members of the Kahal task the distributors with collecting it.
despite the governor's opposition.

No. 77.

From the sale of the right to operate the stores
from the Christian Baïkoff to the Jew Johel-Mihel, son (VAaron.

Saturday, Emor section 5559.

In accordance with the decision of the representatives from the town, it was sold to Johel-Mihel, son of Aa-Ron, the right to operate two built stores in stone, belonging to the Christian Baïkoff, who are located on the city's high plateau.
the adjoining carriage entrance, as well as the cellars and the first floor, that is to say all the space from the from the center of the earth to the clouds in the sky, is also included in this sales agreement.

The deed of sale, regular and in any form
The desired document will be drawn up by the Kahal and approved by the

150 JEWISH RUSSIA

Saint Bet-Dine and placed in the hands of the aforementioned Johel-Mihel, son of Aaron, who must, for this reason, pay the sum of 200 rou- to the Kahal treasury money. Everything must be done without publicity.
prior application.

No. 100.

The form of the Act of Truth given to Abel, son de Meer.

At the general meeting held in the chamber of the Kahal, which was attended by the seven representatives city residents and members of the Kahal at
In full, it was decided that the right of ex-exploitation of stores and the home with its dependencies, as well as the ease of passage through the courtyard, that is to say, all the space between the center of the earth and the highest clouds of the heaven, all belonging to the Christian Kister, is sold to Abel, son of Meer, to his descendants or representatives for all eternity, leaving not the slightest bit of said right to power of Kahal. And as the said Abel, son of Meer, has already paid into the Kahal's coffers, the amount from this sale, from that moment the said right of exploitation-the station belongs entirely to him, as well as to his descendants or beneficiaries, inalienably and exclusively, without anyone being able to wear it achievement.

He alone, his descendants or heirs for-

JEWISH RUSSIA 151

will resell, give away, exchange, hand over as dot, finally do as they please and act absolutely-ment, as well as an owner has the right to the the area with the object that belongs to it.

If the owner Kister were to demolish the buildings existing structures, and in rebuilding-knows in their place others bigger or more pe-tits, the buyer would still have the same right on the newly constructed buildings. And when Abel, son of Meer, his descendants or his heirs by right, will become the true owners of these establishments and stores, by contract If they purchase in good condition, they will have the right to demolish. rebuild and change the layout of the premises, ven-to do everything in whole or in part, in short, to do everything that will seem appropriate to them, without asking for a new permission or authorization from the Kahal.

If a malicious person dared to challenge these rights to Abel, son of Meer, his successors or his representatives sentients, the Kahal, the holy Bet-Dine, and the seven city representatives must defend him from all their strength and power. - 11 will also the duty of the Kahal to annul any dispute who could rise up against Abel, son of Meer, his descendants or heirs, so as not to... to worry, and to assure them for eternity the right legal owners. All losses that could give rise to claims from those which would soften the challenge to the legal possession of the right, which from this moment belongs exclusively-to Abel, son of Meer, his successors or his representatives, will have to be supported by the Kahal's treasury, and no Kahal from any other city will not support such claims; to the con-milking, he will have to defend the interests of the-said Abel, son of Meer, of his descendants or of his heirs. The members of the Kahal at large complete, and the seven representatives of the city, having acted within the full scope of their responsibilities and functions, without needing to apply to this sale, the use and the law of Kabolat-Kinion (1), unanimously decided and approved the sale below. above stated by affixing their signature.

No. 101.

Approval of the previous Vacte by the Samoches Venemines (notaries of the town).

We, the undersigned, notaries of the Jewish community, We certify, by this deed, that the sale effected killed by the Kahal in favor of the wealthy Abel, son of Meer, his descendants or his successors in title, made to the general meeting with the assent of Schiva-Tuvei-Gair (the seven representatives and leaders of the city), was written and regulated according to the holy laws, and that the Kahal, in fulfilling a pa-reille vente, is not in need of invo-to examine the uses of the Kabolat-Kinion law.

This Monday, Nisan 26, 5560.

(The two signatures follow.)

(1) See below for an explanation of the law of Kabbalah-Kinion in chapter XVII.

No. 102.

Approval of this same act by the holy Bet-Dine.

By reviewing the deed of sale carried out by the Kahal in the general meeting, with the consent-ment and the signature of the representatives and heads of the city, whose signatures were legalized by the two Samoches Venemines, in favor of the rich Abel, son of Meer, his descendants or his Having the right, the holy Bet-Dine acknowledges that the-said act was arranged and settled according to all conditions tions, clauses and points prescribed by holy law of Torah. And although the decisions of the Kahal do not are not subject to any control and have no need for anyone's approval, especially if the signatures of its members are... certified by two notaries of the city,... however-dant, to give more weight and value to the deed of sale in question, we, members of the Saint Bet-Dine, we approve and affirm it fully.

nement, in order to guarantee possession of the right of operation of the property, belonging to Christian Kister, for eternal time to the rich Abel, son of Meer, to his descendants or to his rightful owner.

In witness whereof, we sign at Minsk, 26 Nisan 5560.

Rabbi Gaon and four judges of the holy tribunal Bet-Dine.

XIII

This is now the Rosh Hashanah festival.
Haschana (The New Year) and the ceremony-
monie du Son du cor.

Jews celebrate Rosh Hashanah, in the day already indicated by Moses, the first Siechry day (corresponding to the first days of September).

Although after the fall of the Temple of Jerusalem
Salem, the Rosh Hashanah festival has been completed.
has completely lost its former outward character and interior, however, this festival has retained all its former prestige as an influence on the conservation and development of life national of the Jews.

No doubt, if you compare the day of

JEWISH RUSSIA 155

Rosch-Hashanah from the time of the existence of

The Temple of Jerusalem, along with the one we have now, we find the same difference as between glory and shame, between triumph and humiliation.

At that time, on that day, according to its meaning—the very cation, was for all the people of Israel on a day of great triumph. The Temple resounding with the songs of the Levites, accompanied—filled with the joyful sounds of the trumpet, opened, by the day of Rosh Hashanah, the period ten days during which the people, the the priesthood and the Temple itself were purifying themselves and were preparing for a majestic triumph, at this solemn moment when the high priest, having arrived, with the purifying burnt offerings, in the Temple of Temples, brought to the people upon their return the oubli and Jehovah's forgiveness. Upon the arrival of this day so desired and so long awaited, where hope to obtain forgiveness from the Invisible Jehovah illuminated it was damaging the eyes of the prostrate people of Israel, The high priest offered, during the sacrifice, the farewell of the entire nation to the past year, with all his suffering and all his ill-hours, and welcomed the news, which contained in within her the blessings and graces that God was to spread it among his chosen people.

156 JEWISH RUSSIA

Through this interpretation of thoughts and of the outdoor ceremony during Rosh Hashanah day Haschana, it is clear that this day had to be for the Jews a day of hope and triumph.

Now, everything has changed, everything has become daunting. Currently Rosch-Haschana is a day of sadness, tears, and affliction. The cause This change is visible; the nation, which has lost its independence and autonomy, resembles a sickly man who, in pre—the very sense of the danger resulting from this boulder-payment, would not however want to resist to believe oneself incurable and could not to consider the dark and despairing idea of death. The nation that finds itself in this situation Tuation needs to nurture its imagination of a hope that refreshes ideas, not even if only through dreams of the future and through illusions.

At the fatal moment, when the laurels adorn already the head of the victor, hope, this
The last friend of the vanquished and the oppressed, the

JEWISH RUSSIA 157

further supports, by confirming it in this the thought that, since he did not succeed in the companies of this world, he will be consoled by this power of the unknown world, towards which every unfortunate person, in their distress, raises his gaze.

In this fervor, patriotic ideas of the nation marry and merge as-completely in line with religious ideas, because these feelings are not inspired by the intematerial concerns and earthly passions, but they are warmed by burning rays lants that descend from an unknown world on the imagination shaped by religious ideas.

So the resurrection of nationality, the return to old habits, to lost freedom, occupation take first place in aspirations of the annihilated people. To support this indelible-bitter feeling, without which regeneration national would be nothing but a fiction, is forming a lyrical, legendary, traditional literature-nelle, mystique et patriotisme, pressé à l' highest exaltation, and which aims to ento keep alive the sacred flame of love for one's homeland lost. – It is perfectly natural that these songs

158 JEWISH RUSSIA

patriotic sentiments that strike the deepest chord sensitive to national life, inspire a great admiration among all unfortunate peoples reux, and take on the character of inspiration supernatural; but this is only among the Jews that these anthems and patriotic songs are an integral part of the liturgy and occupy an important place in prayer books,
as well as in religious ceremonies.

According to the Law of Moses, it was not permitted to celebrate divine service outside the Temple and outside of Jerusalem. For this reason, he procured a certain interruption in spiritual life ritual of Israel. With the fall of the Temple of Jerusalem, divine service undergoes a certain Interruption time. The skillful leaders of the the people of Israel, who (as history tells us-takes) always had as their goal the resurrection-taking advantage of this interruption of divine service to replace it to kill Moussaphe, that is to say, the service of the Synagogue. This service is largely composed of [unclear]. part of patriotic anthems, in which are recounted and depicted in a deses- This heartbreak, which tears at the hearts of the faithful, these dark, hideous, and sad days of the fall of the Temple in Jerusalem, of exile, of the per-Securitization, torture of all kinds, of the dead.

JEWISH RUSSIA 150

Thanks to this artificial means, which had for but to perpetuate patriotic ideas among The Jews, the words of some prophets of Israel: "And these festivals will be changed into "Days of tears and despair," they said. fulfilled (1); and this prophecy has been adapted perfectly suited to the current celebration of the holiday of Rosh Hashanah.

As this New Year's Day is in at the same time the beginning of the period ten days, during which the people of Is-Raël must perform his purification, the tears, the cries and lamentations aroused by the service Moussaphe, through this exaltation of the soul, does not do not cease. All of this is further enhanced by the distressing impression produced by the ceremoni-Fekiel-Chofère's denial, the sounding of the horn prescribed by the Talmud.

According to the conviction of the learned interpreters

(1) Ames., ch. vin, pages 10 to 12.

of the Talmud, the ceremony of Fekiel-Chofèr (1) had been instituted in memory of these Moses said: "And this day will be for you the day when Ton will sound the horn"; and the cabascholarly interpreters' glasses
 They still maintain that: Rosh Hashanah Day Chana, which begins with the ceremony of Fekiel-Chofèr, the Great Jehovah will be seated on his throne of justice, and, weighing in all impartiality will decree the actions of mortals the rewards and punishments that each of them will have earned;... who is yet to live, and who must die immediately;... who has time, prematurely;... which by water, which by The fire... All of this will be decreed, in detail, on Rosh Hashanah day. At this judgment, as-
 On one side will be the defenders of Israel, known as Delatrone, Hasen-hach, Hatzpatzious, etc. and, on the opposite side, Satan, with the account of the actions com-put into it by the victims who allowed themselves to be...
 to be lured by his subterfuges, and who are tom-gaping in the nets set by hell... And the

(1) The day the horn is sounded.

JEWISH RUSSIA 1G1

the sound of the trumpet will invigorate during this time
 the defenders of Israel, while he will terrify Satan, that mortal enemy of Israel.

Although this quote is confirmed by several passages from the Talmud Zoora, the good Meaning is enough to reduce its orthodoxy to nothing.
 Indeed, anyone who has had the opportunity to witness this ceremony, I cannot conceive how the sound of the horn, which resounds as if in a hunting, could have such a high significance-spiritual union among the Jews.

The 47th psalm, which is read seven times in succession to the people of Israel while the trumpet is blown, could lend itself to a more accurate interpretation
 The ritual of this ceremony: "Clap your hands
 as a sign of rejoicing! For the mighty terrible

Jehovah, the great ruler of the world, su-will place all nations under your authority and all human races, by throwing them under your feet... He will search for and choose your inheritance, that is to say, Jacob's pride, which he has loved so much for centuries, and so it rose-will hear the voice of God! (1) » The Jews consider-they interpret this psalm, not only as a

(1) IV* Book of Moses, ch. xxix, page 1.

162 JEWISH RUSSIA

prayer (1), but also as a prophecy significant achievement of the pro-masses of God towards his chosen people.

The meaning of this prophecy, which is recited seven times in succession before the people of Israel, with accompanied by the horn and amidst the tears and the heart-rending lamentations of the listeners, gives a much better explanation of the rationale for the existence of the Fekiel-Schofére ceremony, that the fog-lard that encases the text of the Talmud and the Cabal. In this sense, the obligatory ceremony-the territory for each Jew is presented as the quintessence of the sublime, patriotic anthem, by which the representatives of the people of Is-Raël opened the Rosh Hashanah festival and the beginning of the ten-day period of the expiation of sins (2).

(1) The Unsane-Toket prayer.

(2) To confirm the meaning we give
At the Fekiel-Schofére ceremony, we will recall that the day of judgment, which, among the Jews, begins in the evening of the last day of the purification period, also ends with the Fekiel-Schofére ceremony, accompanied by the words: "Lechana gabaa Biruchelaim (that we be in Jerusalem next year). We sees from this that this signal is the same patriotic signal.
tick.

JEWISH RUSSIA 103

It is certain that the original meaning of the Fekiel-Schofére ceremony felt-undoubtedly modified to this day, and yet-that the influence that this ceremony exerts on the spirit and feelings of the Jews remained very large.

After the fall of Jerusalem, Fekiel-Scho-
The brotherhood served as a patriotic stimulus for the leaders of Israel to precipitate the Jewish population in the continual revolts that were the the cause of his exile in Palestine, after the fatal insurrection under the command of Bar-khoba, during the reign of the emperor Adrien.

Today the Fekiel-Scho- ceremony
The iron makes it even darker, by exalting it.
the already rather bleak picture of the day of Rosh Hashanah and maintains among the Jews, this prejudice, which the skillful leaders of The people of Israel have introduced there since centuries keys, to keep away to be separated from the
the rest of humanity, as much through its religion as by its customs and practices (1).

(1) The gatherings of several enlightened rabbis, who took place in 1869 in Kassel and Leipzig, and had as their

164 JEWISH RUSSIA

After everything that has been said on this subject, it will be It's easy to understand why the law of Talmud had elevated the Fekiel-Scho- ceremony elevates ceremonies to the highest level obligatory for every Jew, and why the Kahal exercises such strict control over synagogues and other Jewish houses where the prayers during the Rosh Hashanah festival and the ten-day period following that day.

Here is the document classified under number 30 in Brafmann's Book on Kahal: ;

but to have all the Jewish prayer books removed quotes that speak of the coming of the Messiah and the return Jews in Jerusalem. They rightly argued that a-with these quotes that excite and exalt their corelilegionnaires, it will be very difficult and even impossible to every Jew to acquire the feeling he is a true inhabitant of the country where he was born, to cultivate it, and to become one of its people.
true citizen: as well, that one could not make him per-

to address these ingrained and deeply rooted prejudices against any religion that is not his own.

The opposing party supported, and with just as much reason, His point of view is that by carrying out these reforms the existence and raison d'être of the people of Israel ceases. From that moment on, some very curious details were published on this interesting discussion in the Israeli newspapers—lites Cumctguide and Libanon, The articles of Doctor Gornour 31st and 33rd Cama-gnide, 1869.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 165

No. 30.

On the prohibition of reciting prayers during the Rosck-Haschana day, in the houses particulars.

Saturday, 5-book section. Kito. 5557.

The Kahal decided that it would be published in all the houses where prayers are recited, the following: From the twelfth day of Sclihot (prayer recited) twelve days before Rosh Hashanah until Yom-Kipour (Day of Judgment) inclusive, It is forbidden for all Jews in the city to gather to recite prayers somewhere other than at the Synagogue. A Herem would be launched against the Hahan (cantor) and against the Baale-Tekiet (the one who sounds the horn), if either of them dared to sing and sound the horn in another location. Every prayer recited anywhere other than in the synagogue gogue, or at least in one of the buildings located in the courtyard of the synagogue, will be considered as an offense against divine law.

The homeowners, the cantor, and the horn player, who would violate this provision Kahal's actions would be considered and punished equally renegades who do not observe divine law commented on by the Talmud.

XIV

The synagogue courtyard, the buildings and the Jewish institutions located there are

These are still many questions worthy of examination.

In every Jewish community, the synagogue must be surrounded by a more or less courtyard spacious, so that the buildings that serve so that different institutions can find place. And first we will talk about the places ap- common peoples, which must be vast, con- built and maintained by the Kahal.

By analyzing each one in turn accessory institutions of the synagogue, which must be in its immediate vicinity and absolutely- ment in the courtyard where it is located, on com- will explain why we started with these places, which are generally not mentioned functions existence only indirectly, and all at it was at the end.

JEWISH RUSSIA 16'

Under the name of the synagogue court- gogue, we hear a larger playing area or less spacious located in the ha- district bitten by the Jewish population, where they must find :

1° The Bet-Haknest (the principal synagogue- pale) ;

2° The Bet-Gamidrasch (the house of prayer) and school);

3° The Bet-Hamerhatz (the baths with va- fear) ;

4° The Bet-Hakahal (the room of Kahal);

5° The Bet-Dine (judicial court);

6° The Hek-Dech (refuge for the poor- vres).

However, both outside and inside, the synagogue is the main one for Jews place of prayer, however, the most computer- Specifically, since this building is not heated, serves for the meetings of all the faithful that in major religious ceremonies, by example Rosh-Hashana, Yom-Kippour, etc., or on the occasion of the arrival of a person-

1C8 LA." JEWISH RUSSIA

a striking swim, like a famous singer, the chief rabbi, a famous preacher, etc.
In all other circumstances, the Prayers are recited in the house where it is so-called Bet-Gamidrasch, who has other destinations. Thus, this is where the scholars Jews interpret the science of the Talmud; that is it was only after the prayers that the various brotherhoods-ries hold their sessions; it is also there that the poor interpreters of the Talmud, who indulge-exclusively to this science and consequently-sequent cannot earn anything to pay rent, find refuge day and night;
This is where the so- questions are discussed cial in general, and it is there finally that we find-sells the public library and the books of different brotherhoods.

Right next to the synagogue and the Bet-Ga-Midrasch is where the steam baths are located, as well than ordinary baths. Around this center are located the private houses of prayer Eschabots, Talmudors, Klaouz, etc., which,
to a lesser degree, have the same destination that the Bet-Gamidrasch. Then comes the Kahal chamber, whose authority, actions,

JEWISH RUSSIA 169

the relentless surveillance of all Jewish activity, as well as Machiavellianism, are already known through the translated documents from the Book on the Kahal de Brafmann and cited following several-several chapters of this work.

Near the Kahal there is a council analogous to the ancient Senedrion, which perpetuates itself thus killed to this day under the tutelage of the Kahal, and who forms his justice section... that's Bet-Dine (which we will discuss in more detail later) (in the next chapter), headed by its rabbin or his PicLSch-et-Dine (president), whose family must be housed in a room in the building tinent.

Next comes Hek-Dech, or the refuge for Jewish vagrants, who are repellent-health, filth, and whose sight and society repulsive-even those poor people who, not having housing, seek refuge in Bel-Gamidrasch, Eschabot, Talmudor.

We can therefore see that in the courtyard of the synagogue gogue must find vast commons built and maintained by the Kahal. Braf-Mann cites three in his Book on the Kahal documents that relate to everything that has

10

170 JEWISH RUSSIA

was said in this chapter. We do not quote the first two as less interesting; As for the third one, classified under number 30, It is located following chapter xm.

XV

Let us deal with the Bet-Din (judicial court) (ciaire), a very serious and important question major.

In the preceding chapters, we we talked about the Kahal chamber, institute-Jewish tion which, in each locality, governs the public and private life of his coreligionists despotically and almost without any contrôle, admitting no recourse to another authority. This domination which, as we say, has no authority. As you can see, nothing constitutional extends to this-while on religious, inner life and private property of Jews, as well as on protection that the Kahal must grant, through its influence and even with his money, to those Jews who have some interest in untangling things with the Goyim.

172 JEWISH RUSSIA

But when it comes to making a judgment in a trial between two Jews, or between a

The Jew and the Kahal, that's the Bet-Dine (the holy one) tribunal), instituted by the law of the Talmud, which is responsible for making a judgment.

The Bet-Din, although called the holy one, is however, under the high protection of the Kahal, and forms, so to speak, only the judicial representative of this supreme authority, to which Every Jew must be blindly submissive. One Bet-Dine therefore exists wherever there is an ag- greater or lesser agglomeration of popula- Jewish tradition, and judges the various debates and con- controversies that arise and present themselves in the mercantile life of the Jews, which exempts these the latter resorted to Christian courts.

The Bet-Dine is, in a way, the painting of the ancient Senedrion, and it exists not by a consequence of the whim, or of self-love that Jews could have the right to possess a tribe- final without having to go to court Christians; but it has its reason for being in the dogma of Talmudic law, which governs life spiritual of the Jews. In support of this assertion- tion, to better understand the character of this Talmudic institution, we will mention some passages from the Jewish code under the title Hoschen-Hamischpot, which deals in detail with question :

JEWISH RUSSIA 173

"Jews are forbidden to have a trial" before Christian courts, as well as to pursue any interest before the civil and administrative bodies of Gozmé'. This defense must be applied even to questions on which Jewish law and those The Goyim agree both in meaning and in letter, and even though both parties are pleading would wish to be judged by Christian justice yours. Anyone who violates this decision will be considered a criminal, because such a that action would be blasphemy against the law of Moses (1). In this case, one must throw against the culprit, an Indian, will bear the brunt of it until- that at the moment he cancels his complaint filed before the Gentile courts; and if he persists still guilty of his crime, he must be anathe- tamed by the Herem (2). The same penalty will be

(1) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. xxvi, p.d.

(2) See documents 148 and 149, cited following the Chapter on wine in this book.

10.

174 JEWISH RUSSIA

applied as an advantage for the guilty party, and even to the one who would employ a non-Jewish authority to force his opponent to appear in court before the Bet-Dine.

"The document by which the Bet-Dine gives his authorization for the Jews to surrender justice by Christian courts, must not to be exhibited and shown to the Gentile judges. The violating this prohibition will pay the penalty. adverse (1) the excess of the fine which would have could be pronounced, by application of the laws Jewish, by the Bet-Dine.

"Especially in these times, where the Jews remain subject to the laws of domination foreign and cannot have their judges, the The Bet-Dine court must get involved in all matters. to do, of any interest, of any question, of any difficulty that arises between Jews. Thus He must judge: loans and borrowings, the marriage contracts, donations, inheritances cessions, complaints concerning per- your (2), etc. He must set the fines for the damage caused to livestock belonging

i^l) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. xxvi, p. 4.

(2) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. i, p. 1.

JEWISH RUSSIA 175

to another individual, as well as the losses incurred by the livestock of some to the detriment of others, when these losses were caused by The tooth or horn of the beast. The attributes The Bet-Dine also extends to prosecutions. thefts and robberies, but only insofar as concerns the investigation of these crimes and the compensation-

n H es which must be paid by the thieves, without aiming to punish the perpetrators of these thefts and plunder, nor to the punishment that should be theirs applied in accordance with the law of Moses (1).

"Although currently the Bet-Dine has not the right to condemn thieves and perpetrators of the plunder other than by making them without paying compensation to those to whom they have harm caused by theft and robbery, he may However, punishing them morally by launching against them an Indian, if they refused or delayed-were required to pay these compensations. The restriction-tion imposed on the authority of the Bet-Dine concerns only the application of corporal punishment to which the laws of Moses would condemn the culprits (2).

(1) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. m, p. 3.

(2) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. i, p. 4.

176 JEWISH RUSSIA

"But as far as morals and the conduct of the Jewish population in general, every Det-Dine, even the one who is not sanctioned by the Israeli ground authorities, possesses very broad powers. Thus, if the Det-Dine notices that the Jews are indulging in too inclined towards libertinism and a dissolute lifestyle,
He has the right to sentence to death, to penalties bodily harm, monetary fines, and so on immediately. To pronounce and apply these con-damnations, he doesn't even need to hear-
to give testimonies for the prosecution or the defense.
If the Det-Dine sees that it concerns a Jew in f tuent by his social position in the world non-Jew, who could defy his judgment, if he
It is impossible for him to use all the using tricks to humiliate such an individual, he tries, by consulting with the Kahal, to make sur-to seize a favorable opportunity to be able to do to accuse and punish the disobedient by Christian courts. Furthermore, its fortune is declared Hefher (pillage):
"In order to arrive as quickly as possible to completely annihilate and destroy the de-obedient to the holy laws of the Talmud, in-interpreted by Bet-Dine the saint and Kahal

"The infallible one."

Summonses to appear before the Bet-Dine are handed over to the parties by the Sa-ugly. Those Jews who are absent from the cities for business can receive them three; but if, after the third quotation, this-He who was summoned to appear did not obey. An Indian is launched against him. As for ceir who never leave the city, we don't send just one quote.

It is forbidden to be disrespectful and show signs of discontent to Samoches. For the offense done to these last-niers, Bet-Dine has the right to punish the offender-As for the physical aspect, and even the Samoche can beat him and inflict damage on him things, like breaking windows, smashing things furniture, etc., without having to compensate him.

If the Bet-Dine changes its premises sessions, the one who is summoned to appear does not can claim ignorance of the new premises. If the Samoche reported that the one who has was quoted as speaking ill of the Bet-Dine court that he refuses to appear, one would give credence to this declaration, and he would launch an Indian against the culprit and sometimes even the Herem (1).

178 JEWISH RUSSIA

Brafmann quotes in his Book on the Kahal 52 acts and documents containing judge-ments rendered by the Bet-Dine in different-rents questions; we have extracted and translated the most significant ones, which are ranked under numbers 24, 78, 120, 132, 146, 177, 203, 204, 239, 256, which we cite below, and we will point out that the documents cited previously and bearing the numbers 09 23, 102, 148, 149, 156, 260, also have a connection with the orders and provisions of the Bet-- Dinner.

After all that has been said regarding laws upon which inner life is based and intimate with the Jews, it will be understood that all these bizarre methods employed by the Kahal and whose purpose cannot be grasped when one par-short the documents classified under numbers 148 and 149,j may not seem so fanatical, in considering the safeguarding of the Bet-Dine

1) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. xi, p. from l to 4.

JEWISH RUSSIA 179

is at the same time the guarantee of one of the principals main dogmas of Talmudic science. In many circumstances and especially where the Jewish law goes against common sense and where the form and letter order to execute what Justice and conscience forbid doing this.
the trial is judged, not by the Daions (judges) of the Bet-Dine), but by experts who must to be more experienced in business matters, of industry and in other branches of in-practical interests of life.

The Daions sometimes also fill expert functions, but only when the two opposing sides choose them at this effect. Generally, however, in the circ-the aforementioned constants, we do not designate them point, because these Daions, almost exclusively devoted themselves to... exclusively to the study of the laws of the Talmud, few know the practical life in which common sense is often preferable to make fair justice.

To better highlight the action of Bet-Dine.
We must not forget to mention the question-tion which sometimes presents itself relatively to the referral to Christian courts of

180 JEWISH RUSSIA

Legal proceedings that arise between two Jews. Thus, the trials in which letters of protested changes, due to non-execution of donations or wills, as well as other Cases of this kind are referred from time to time in time by Bet-Dine before the courts Christians, not because of incompetence or the incapacity of the Jewish court, but because that the law of the Talmud prescribes to do so "as a means of action and as a brake against the strong, the insolent, and the disobedient health professionals who do not want to submit to decisions of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine and by Therefore, they must be punished by the justice system. "Goya."

The consequence of this passage of the law of The Talmud states that Christian courts are for the most part powerless to do justice to that of the Jewish litigants whose case is the better, because, to cancel any decision Christian courts that would not be con-shaped by the ideas of the Bet-Dine and the Kahal, these two Jewish authorities have letters signed change to white by both opposing sides before the trial begins before the Bet-

JEWISH RUSSIA 181

Dine. So when the one who loses before the The Jewish court is not satisfied with these decisions. Sion, it is then that the Bet-Dine sends back the litigants before a Christian tribunal; but In this case, the decision of this court matters. little to the two Jewish authorities, since they already possess, in bills of exchange signed in white by both parties, the a means of arbitrarily punishing the party that one wants to achieve.

Through these cunning and Machiavellian means, the Bet-Diiiie and the Kahal maintain their weighty power over the Jewish population, by employing as an instrument the justice system of the country where they live, in order to punish those of their coreligion-women who do not want to submit confessions complacently to their despotic authority.

he

Here are the documents and records that are found classified in the Book on Kahal, by Bralmann, under numbers 24, 78, 120, 132, 146, 177, 203, 204, 239, 256.

N°24

Regarding the summons to appear before the court Det-Dine.

Wednesday, section of 5 books Hukat 5556.

The representatives of Kahal decided to see the order to Reibbe-Leib-Vitouka to arrive in our city, to appear before Bet-Dine the saint, in order to explain himself regarding the debates that he has with his son-in-law.

JEWISH RUSSIA 183

No. 78.

Trial of private individuals with the Kahal.

Saturday, Emore section 5559.

As a result of a complaint from a man named Cevi-Hirsch, son of Jac >b, and of his brother, relative-information regarding the right to operate a house located in Iourguieef Street, he is enjoined to the two well-known wealthy men of this city, namely Rabbi Hazias, son of Elian, and Rabbi Johel-Michael, son of Aaron, to defend before the tri-Bunal Bet-Dine, the holy sacred rights of Kahal versus the two individuals above appointed.

No. 120.

Regarding the selection of two city leaders who will have to force Rebbe-fsraël, son of Jacob, to appear before Bet-Dine the saint.

Saturday, Chemina section, 28 Nisan 5551.

The representatives of Kahal decided: that the Rebbe Israel, son of Jacob, must appear from-before the holy Bjt-Dine to agree on the difference-makes what happened between him and Rebbe Leizer, son of Mr. But as the said Israel, son of Jacob, has not not much desire to obey this order emanating from the part of the Kahal, the two leaders of the city, namely Rebbe Isaac, son of J., and Rebbe Samuel, son of D., to compel by all the possible means, the said Rebbe Israel, son of Jacob, to the submission that every Jew owes to Kahal.

184 JEWISH RUSSIA

No. 132.

Punishment for disobedience.

Thursday, 23rd Sivan, 5551.

As a consequence of the disobedience committed towards the Kahal by Rebbe Joseph, son of D., city representatives decided to punish by excluding him for all eternity from the brotherhood of Nore-Tamde and by forbidding him to never to speak the title of Moreine.

N" 146.

Punishment for denunciation against the Bet-Dine.

Saturday, the second day of Kouczhi's passage, Feast of Tabernacles, 5562.

Since Rebbe Meer, son of Michael, had the insolence of denouncing the holy Bet-Dine to the au-Christian authorities, representatives of the Kahal decided to punish him by stripping him of his title Moreine, and henceforth for all eternity his name must be preceded by Havera (ill-born).

JEWISH RUSSIA 185

No. 177.

The dispute between the Knhal and private individuals.

As a result of the dispute that arose between the Kahal and the sons of the late Aria, in relation to the operating rights for stores belonging to Arbirei (prelate of the Orthodox religion), the re-Kahal presenters decided to award the power of the seven city representatives in Rebbe Moses, son of James, so that he may arrange and plead the interests of Kahal, either before experts chosen for this purpose, either before the tribunal of the saint Bet-Dine.

No. 203.

On the subsequent condemnation of a quarrel.

Sunday, Ahrensa section 5562.

Like Rebbe Faifis, son of Abraham, has beaten and insulted the wife of the tailor Isaac, son of Samuel, alleging in his excuse that it She was the one who started the argument first. The representatives of the Kahal decreed: if he is demonstrated by the oath that the the tailor's wife before the holy Bet-Dine, that It's not her, but rather ReLbe Faïfisch. first, who picked a quarrel with him and began to beat her, the said Rebbe Faïfisch will be condemned by Bet-Dine to recite for three days psalms in the Gamidrasch and will lose its title of Moreïne for all eternity. – Tuesday Next, the Samoches will publish in all the synagogues: that the guilty party was punished by this way for having wrongfully defamed a woman innocent. – This decree cannot be cancelled only by an express decision of the members– The combined strengths of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine.

186 JEWISH RUSSIA

No. 204.

Forgiveness granted to the guilty party.

Wednesday, Ahrensa section 5562.

Since Rebbe Faifisch, son of Abraham, condemned previously, repented by submitting– both with humility to the decision of the Kahal and the As for Bet-Dine, the members of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine, united at the grand complete, unanimously agreed to return the Moreïne's title, while retaining the power– nition, that of reciting for three days psalms in the Gamidrasch.

No. 239.

On the punishments to be inflicted on those who are disobedient to the decisions of the Bet-Dine.

Thursday, 23 Ira 5562.

The representatives of Kahal decided that all those who show themselves to be disobedient and re-

JEWISH RUSSIA 187

beautiful according to the decrees issued by the holy Bet-Dine would be deprived of the right to exploit the pro-privileges they had acquired from the Kahal since the beginning of this year and the acts of sale confirming this right which had been given to them submitted items would be considered null and void would resemble the shards of a broken pot.

No. 256.

On the punishment inflicted on a woman for her misconduct.

Monday 5 Famosse 5562.

The representatives of Kahal decided that, if Saint Bet-Dine acknowledges the scandalous acts which are reported on the wife's account rabbi of the small town of Douvitza, and if he decrees For these acts, any kind of conviction... The guilty party will also be deprived of the right to Kes-soba (dowry received in marriage), which will be entirely confiscated, except for 500 florins worth of robes and the belongings she possesses. Two delegates from Kahal will be present at the execution of this decree. decision and will monitor closely. That the representatives of Kahal, may God protect them, have nothing to risk for their just severity!

XVII

We will not make Kabbalah known-Kinion or Souder, that is to say the way in which Sales and purchases take place between Jews.

In the most remote antiquity, there existed

Among the Jews, a rather bizarre custom: when-that one Jew sold to another was a pro-property, be it any object, no matter what value, large or small, the buyer
He took off his shoe and offered it to the seller.

The Talmud introduced into its laws some something similar to this ancient practice, well intense, adding to this analogy as much meaning and strength that he was used to to apply it to all the provisions issued concerning him and his spiritual life, material and practical aspects of Jewish life. Thus, when Nowadays, a sale takes place between two

JEWISH RUSSIA 189

Jews, we apply the law of Kabbalah-Kinion.
such as the Talmud introduced, and which consiste in the following form: the buyer or his
The business manager offers the seller a portion of his
a long cassock, or a handkerchief, addressed to him-singing these words: "Take this piece of my dress or this handkerchief, in exchange for the earth, house or any other item that you sell me or "which you are giving me as a gift." When the seller touches with her hand the edge of the dress or the handkerchief presented, the act of sale and purchase is irrevocably accomplished, even the buyer would not have paid yet and would not be has not taken possession of the object he just to buy. That the property is located at a great distance, that the sold item is still in the possession of a third person eloignée, if the formality has been completed from the ma-
no. 1 cited above, none of the parties con-tractantes cannot, must not, back down; thus the wants the law of the Talmud. We can see from this that the Kabolat-Kinion is not a simple form-literate among the Jews, and that the Talmud hides a cabalistic meaning by interpreting it from the ma-next one:

he.

190 JEWISH RUSSIA

"If the seller touches the hem of the cassock"

or the handkerchief that the buyer offers him, that must mean that the seller is yielding to the buyer the material enjoyment of the object sold, and therefore the buyer enters into a an indissoluble link with this object.

It is certain that this interpretation tal-musical cannot be understood by that who is not familiar with the science of the Talmud, and we cannot guess what role it plays in this in this case, the panel of the long black dress they wear The Jews, or the handkerchief.

If, however, we want to enter into the direction that the Talmud gives to this ceremony, in admitting "that the hem of the dress or the mo-choir represents the amount of money that the buyer The seller must pay for the acquisition of the item. sold, and that the seller, instead of handing over this object touches the hem of the black dress or the handkerchief representing the agreed sum; so actually both parties established a material link with money and the object sold... of course, still according to the pro-foundation and cabalistic science of the Talmud.

It doesn't matter, moreover, that the ceremony ap-

JEWISH RUSSIA 191

Peleus Kabolat-Kinion comes from antiquity remote or that it draws its origin from the Kabbalistic depth of the Talmudic ocean; It is enough to know that this ceremony had took root among the Jews of ancient times and has retained all its prestige to this day. There is only this observation to add, t[iie the Kabbalat-Kinion is only applied when it comes to the sale and purchase carried out between two particular Jews: because the sales practices carried out by the Kahal against Jewish individuals are surrounded by such an aura of infallibility-lability that no one is permitted to doubt (1).

Brafmann, in his Book on Kahal, cites eight provisions of the Kahal which relate to they carry on at the Kabolat-Kinion ceremony; but since they are less curious, we we have not translated them, mentioning only-the fact that, in the documents cited below from the wine chapter and marked by numbers 100 and 102, it refers to the Kabo- ceremony lat-Kinion.

(1) Hoschen-Hamischpot, ch. xxn, p. 1, and Tchaubot-Garoché, §21.

XVIII

We need to give some details about the wedding celebration.

The celebration of the holidays on the occasion of the Marriage among Jews begins in an ordinary way. before the day fixed for the accomplishment of this important act.

When the sixth day of the week is already in its decline, and that, in the dwelling of every Jew, the troubles of daily life cease and are replaced by peace and the rests that precede the coming of the Sabbath, then, to meet this desired guest (the Sabbath), eagerly awaited, the musicians of the The community first arrives at the bride's house. and then in the future, by executing the me-

JEWISH RUSSIA 193

National lodies Kabolat-Schabat (1). That's it. the signal to begin the celebration a wedding.

The following day, Saturday, the entire synagogue goes to the door to meet the fiancé, who arrives with his father, his brothers and his cousins. While reading the passage from the prayer that is recited every Saturday, the The future only receives his brothers after his father and her cousins, an Alla, but who is very significant and called Maxtir, accompanied by a hymn performed by the cantor in a resounding voice and with repeated wishes by all the assistants "for many years".

During this ceremony, from all sides of the synagogue, and especially of the part where finds the place intended for the most beautiful half

(1) In every Jewish community there is an orchestra instituted by the Kahal and composed of musicians Jews. In this orchestra, there must be a violin, some cymbals, a bass, and a drum. Badhan, who makes part of the orchestra, is an individual responsible for making people laugh the society invited by his improvised poems, of the re- to enjoy his more or less witty jokes and his address by performing juggling, and this during for the entire duration of the wedding celebrations.

194 JEWISH RUSSIA

of the Jewish kind, one throws nuts at the future. almonds, figs, etc.

The little boys of the Jewish population those who are there rush eagerly towards these treats, which they so rarely have occasion to eager to taste them, they snatch them up from one another others argue and finally fight and pro- cause an uproar that is not at all cons- usable in a temple, a place intended for uni- [This appears to be a fragment of a larger sentence, possibly a fragment of a larger sentence]

The fiancé is escorted out in grand style. by his cousins and friends, who on that day wanted expressing it to him in his parents' house their most sincere and most warm. The parents thank them and their offer a light lunch. In the evening, the The musicians first go to the fiancé's house and then at the future woman's house, ending the day of the witches' sabbath through national melodies. Gay- how we sing and play these melodies at the fiancé, but they didn't last long, because the musicians hurry to go to the future, where, after having executed some har- Monia, they begin to play dances and The company begins to jump; these dances,

JEWISH RUSSIA 191

in which only women take part and especially virgins, are generally- very lively and extend well into beyond midnight; that is to say, until the moment where the small copper coins which are found in the pockets of the dancers no longer fit in the box placed next to it musicians, a box intended to receive the price of each dance performed by the virtuoses.

Finally, the big day arrives, the one that so many times The discussion took place in the families of both engaged. All members of both families are in great motion. These are buying still what is lacking; those are looking for what what should be done to enhance the celebration, the one way to make it sumptuous, the other ways to make it more attractive that which she gave for her daughter such or such a neighbor... Only the leaders of the two The families, the fathers of the two fiancés, are busy. more serious thoughts. To each of them the my head is spinning from the multitude of different ideas they are putting forward on a very important point So much so, namely: how to allocate the dowry intended for her child, so that the capital may yield sufficient interest, at the same time as long as it is securely guaranteed.

196 JEWISH RUSSIA

When these serious interests were arranged gés (which doesn't usually happen without a warm discussion and without the intervention- (ion of Bet-Dine the holy), one must first to satisfy Chadhan's (maker's) demands of marriages), which requires a reward for his efforts to negotiate the marriage; for if he was not paid, he protested would cite and summon the interested parties before Bet-Dine the saint, and by this quotation he could cause us to miss the celebration of the wedding. The Ra- tax must also be paid. attachment (1), because, without paying it in advance, the Nor could the wedding take place.

But now everything is already in order, the Chadhan paid, Rahache's fee acquitted the musicians satisfied with the promised price

(1) Rahache is a tax instituted for the benefit of the rabbi,

of the Hazan (cantor) and the Chcmat (city elder).
In Vilna, the collection of this tax was introduced in 1868.
adjudication, and the local police were ordered to lend their support for the Jewish contractor for its execution.

THE JEWISH 1KJSSIE i'J7 to give it to them, and the Ketebe (1) is ready. Then Schamosche leaves with a register in his hand and toured the city; after which the fiancé's apartments as well as those of The bride's house is starting to fill up with guests.

and at that moment we bring to the fiancé, of his future wife's share, Talet and Kitel (2) (two objects that Jews wear every day) days during prayer, and with which they are dressed after death). Badhan owes on this occasion to improvise an elegy, in which is ex-awarded the great significance of the day when the
The fiancé becomes a husband. When the fiancé, touched Badhan's poetry has already poured forth much-In tears, the latter, leaving him to care of the Schaffers who must prepare it for the solemn act by dressing both objects that his future wife sent him, he hurries to go with the musicians to her house, which is

(1) The Ketebe, a marriage certificate written in the Chal- language
The deian, in which the husband's duties are detailed towards women.

(2) Talet is a cashmere scarf on both ends of which are black stripes. – Kitel, white shirt whose style is in the style of the over-folds worn by Catholic priests.

198 JEWISH RUSSIA

sitting in the middle of the room on a kneading trough overturned. She is surrounded by women brides, who slowly dishevel her hair in a desant her braids, hair by hair. On the figures of all these women is painted a sense-moment of discouragement, and they wait eagerly awaiting the arrival of the Badlian shed a few tears at the sound of his lyrical song, because these tears would lighten their hearts oppressed by poignant sorrows

to come.

Each one remembers with pain that she had also been in the same position, and that she entered, with hope for the future and with faith in happiness, in this new life for her... And in the present moment, she said to herself-
She, barely twenty-five years old, I look of a very old woman, surrounded by a large family, for the maintenance of which I have to spend my days and nights tra-to watch... What, then, did this happiness consist of?
that I was promised?... I had been married to one more child, because my husband was of age barely seventeen years old, and, like all Jews
In general, he knew nothing, had no

JEWISH RUSSIA 199

state; so it's me who has to bear the entire burden
the weight of the heavy task, feeding my children as well as my husband, in whom I found neither a supporter nor a protector.

At the time when all married women,
Disillusioned, they make sad reflections, Badhan, returning from the home of the fiancé to whom he recited an [elegiac] poem, accompanied of musicians, falls in their midst, like an envoy from heaven... No matter what he decides-bite; that it be truly tender, that this be incoherent rhymes and without any
In this sense, they are all weeping bitterly.
Instantly, the door bursts open, and the Schamosche announces aloud: "Kabolat-Ponime, Lega-Hatan (Go ahead of the fiancé). He immediately enters and, approaching of his future wife, covers his head with the scarf she had sent him.

The married women present throw themselves on
He had hops and oats. Then the Schafirons, with music in their heads, open the triumphal march, to get to the place where is the Hoopoe located (a canopy or baldachin, usually placed in the courtyard of the synagogue

gogue). They are followed by the parents, by all the guests and the newlyweds who bring up the rear of the procession.

Upon arriving there, the newlywed stops under the canopy, and the new bride, after having circles the canopy seven times, then positions himself at to his right. Badhan calls out loudly first the two fathers and the two mothers of two newlyweds, and then all the other parents, and finally all the friends, for bless the new couple; what everyone executes, each placing their hands on the head of the new groom first, and then on that of the new bride. The moment solemn to pronounce the vow and the act of marriage Sailles approach. We begin with reading of the prayer over the cup. This reading does not can only be done by a very learned inter-based on the law of the Talmud, which the Badhan, with great respect, and giving him the The title of Rabbi, he calls out aloud. newlyweds drink from the glass on which prayer was said. Schamosche reads the marriage certificate written in the Kaldean language, followed by the ceremony called Kadou-

JEWISH RUSSIA 201

China; it is the handing over by the new groom to his wife with a silver ring or a coin of silver coins, saying to him: Gavéï at mekoudeschet li betabaat ziekedat Mosche Israel (With this ring, you become my woman according to the law of Moses and Israel). In As he uttered these words, he struck a glass placed on the ground, with the heel of his shoe, in memory of the fall of Jerusalem. After a a short prayer over the cup and when the new-The married calves drank a few more drops. They were escorted back, music playing in their heads, all the way at their home.

But the newlyweds didn't eat. since the morning, because on that day they must fast-until the moment the ceremony is ac-Compline; they are also served a light snack, composed of chicken broth, which, in this Occasionally, it takes the name of golden soup. Then

The most interesting moment arrives for the Guests: it's the one from the wedding feast... The Dinner is already ready, the tables are set.
the cutlery was set separately for men
And for the women, the candles are lit.
We expect a few distinctive characters...

202 JEWISH RUSSIA

tion, but these do not delay; and here
Da,dha.n, who announces in a resounding voice:
"We invite the world to sit down at the table."

At this call, all the guests head towards towards several basins filled with water, which one prepared for washing hands, because at-A Jew cannot touch bread before having having performed this ceremony; and... one begins to table. The newlyweds occupy that day the place of honor; alongside them are placed the distinguished guests, because, although the invite-tions were made in the same way and by the same Schamosche, and that in appearance all the guests seem to be treated with a a certain equality, however, each must estisea its own value and the position it occupies in Jewish society and to position oneself in a way not to occupy the place that should be taken by someone else, because it could happen to him a very strong inconvenience, such as to be forced to give up his place... and who knows?
perhaps, to be thrown out.

First place next to the groom is occupied by the rabbi, if he has deemed it appropriate-able to honor the supper with his presence; en-

JEWISH RUSSIA 203

Next come the members of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine; the scholars sit beside them interpreters of the Talmud and the aristocracy of ar-gent. Ordinary mortals are relegated to the at the end of the table, where a certain hierarchy and where a Mala.rn.ed (preceptor of the children) would feel dishonored to be sitting at a lower position than that occupied by the tail-their, or a brandy dealer, to be preceded by a baker, and so on. When Finally everyone is in position, let's begin.

by reciting the prayer, by breaking the bread pieces, and each guest takes one;
It's a kind of communion.

So the Sarvars (table servers) com-begin to distribute the portions, according to the di-dignity and social or financial position of each guest. The great art of these Sarvars consists of serving portions of pike and roasted fillet in such a way that the delicate portions, that is to say the aristocratic pieces, not they do not reach the end of the table, at the plebeians. When this rule is strictly observed, that of the prominent characters of the town, which had been forced to linger and not-

204 JEWISH RUSSIA

The riverbank, towards the end of supper, loses nothing.
for, as soon as he appeared in the hall of feast, a Sarvar shouting aloud: "Here an exquisite portion of pike for the Rebbe so-and-so.

To the material pleasures of a good supper
Spiritual distractions are also present.
Exquisite dishes are accompanied by poetry.
improvisations by Badhan and symphonies performed by the orchestra. Badhan, in this Occasionally, he does not spare eloquence; he imagines all kinds of rhymed flattery, which he debite of inspiration, starting with the new-married calves and continuing with the persons-significant nages that are present in the banquet. When he had finished praising all the aristocratic people who are at the wedding, comparing them to the heroes of the an-Jewish identity, Badhan changes his talent for im-proviser and versifier by profession of a conjurer, a showman, and astonishes society by his skill. In short, he is the man to to do everything possible to amuse and distract the in-avoidances. But everything in this world must end;
Suddenly, Badhan uttered a penitential cry.

trant: Drosche-Geschenke (i) (gifts from wedding).

All the items given by the guests are placed in a metal vase, prepared for this use by Badhan, who, by depositing them there One by one, name each object and its donor. Sometimes these gifts are of a certain value: these are tableware, or silver candelabras, gold clasps and diamonds, and even cash. During that this part of the ceremony, which is very interesting for newlyweds, is finished, we begin the dance called the Kochère dance.

Badhan's role is not yet over. because it is he who loudly engages all the men present at the wedding dancing with the new bride. Each person called approaches of her and, taking the handkerchief by one end that she holds in her hand, goes around with her

(1) Custom requires that all cousins and friends bring-tent with them, or send gifts before supper of wedding, supposedly as a reward for the prayer that the The newlywed pronounces his vows at his wedding; and, although it happens This prayer rarely takes place, the custom of making The practice of giving gifts continued.

12

206 JEWISH RUSSIA

from the room, after which he leaves and gives in his place to another dancer, a reminder of the Bad-Ha. When all the men have already danced with the new bride, her husband closing the series, everyone is renewing the new couple in the bridal chamber, including the The doors close immediately – and that's where the wedding celebration.

The four documents that Br&fmann cites in his Book on the Kahal (two of which are are found in chapter iv of our study under the numbers 64 and 158) prove in what way- pendance, one can even say in what state of slavery vage, each Kahal holds the Jews who live- tent the aisle where he reigns despotically. In meddling in the affairs of everyday life intimate with his subjects, Kahal forbids them to in-avoid attending family gatherings that they please.

as well as hiring specific musicians, such and such servants, to eat and to to drink such and such food, such and such drink-sounds.

XIX

How can we not now emphasize the Circumcision?

From the very first moment of a birth child among the Jews, members of the fa-thousand of the woman who gave birth, as well as the parents of the
The father of the newborn, first think of ga-to protect the child and the mother from the influence of Satan, who wanders around the bedroom of the ac-lying down and trying to get in to exercise its evil spells and to seize the two souls. The best way to destroy the ar-materials of this implacable enemy of humanity on earth is the Schir-Garmalot (talis-

208 JEWISH RUSSIA

husband) (1), which must be glued or attached with a
in a certain way above the bed of the ac-lying down and the child's cradle, as well as the-near the door, the window, the fireplace born or from the stove, that is to say, wherever finds some opening, through which the mind impure things could find a way to penetrate in the room, in order to seize the souls of his victims.

The evening of the day a boy comes to world, arrive at his cradle his future life companions (the Heder of Melamède, made up of little boys, with the Beguelfer); they recite the prayer so that the
to ensure the newborn has a peaceful sleep: we give them gives a puree of beans and peas, as well only gingerbread. The visit of the little ones boys and the prayer recited by them are renewed-they want for eight days, that is to say until the circumcision ceremony.

(1) This talisman is composed of a piece of parchment-min on which is written the 121st psalm, surrounded, by all on the sides, inscriptions that list the names of mysterious of all the inhabitants of heaven, including the Talmud and The Cabal speak quite often.

JEWISH RUSSIA 209

On the evening of the first Friday, after the birth a boy's appearance, towards the end of supper, arrive clans la chambre de la maternité ses knowledge of both sexes, for the Ben-Zahor (prayer in the style of that of the little ones) boys). The next day, Saturday, the father of The newborn goes to the synagogue, where, after Upon reading the Five Books, he is called to-near the Torah. During this ceremony, the the cantor intones the Nischebeirat (long years to the father, the mother, and the child). In-then the parents and guests escorted the father at home for the Chaleme-Zahor (fel-quotes to the woman who gave birth after having given birth to a boy). They are offered brandy and gingerbread; among the wealthy, liquarries, pies and jams.

The night before the day of the ceremony, that is, the eighth day after birth of the child, we watch over them (but only in the case of rich); it's the Wach-Nacht (night watch) in the postpartum room). During tonight, the Klæouznern (poor Jews who devote themselves to the study of the Talmud) recite the stanzas of Michny. And, as a reward, they 12.

210 JEWISH RUSSIA

in addition to a lavish supper, they receive the Newdova (alms).

Finally, the morning of the important day arrives when the newborn must receive the assigned stamp only to the children of the people chosen by God... Circumcision. So, in the morning, the midwife with the cousins of the delivery-

The mother bathes and washes the child carefully, in order to prepare him for the operation he will undergo.
to be submissive. It's a happy time for the midwife, because all people pre-The paths give him small change for the difficulties she experienced with the newborn from the day of his birth.

Around ten o'clock, after the prayer in the synagogue, arrive at the home of the woman who gave birth the Sandeke (a serious character who, during the operation (holds the child on his lap), the three Moguelims (operators), the K\cater (com-father or godfather), the Kwaterine (gossip or godmother), the Kantor (singer), the Schamoschem (notary), the parents more or less prothe guests. In any case, ten witnesses adults, at least, must be present at the ceremony.

JEWISH RUSSIA 211

When everything is ready for the operation, the Kwaterine takes the child in her arms and,
Raising it slightly above his head, he waited.
that the Schamosche pronounces aloud:
Kwater! To hand over his burden. Kwa-ter, upon receiving the child, pronounces: Boruh-Gaba (Be blessed, newcomer), words that everyone present repeats loudly voice. Then the Kwater, reciting the passage From the psalm: "And the Lord said to our Grandfather Abraham: March forward and be "Right," he slowly advances towards the Kisse-sel-Eliog, the place in the room where, as one might say supposes, there is the invisible shadow of the pro-Phetius Elijah, who is always present at the operation of the circumcision next to the Sandeke, on the knees on which the child is placed.

The three Moguelims (one of whom is attached to the one hand a double-edged knife, the other armed only with his sharpened nails, and the third operating with the mouth) surround the Sandeke, who holds the child on his lap;
Before starting, they recite the prayer:
"Thanks be to you, great Jehovah, King of the universe, who destined us for

to perform this circumcision." Then the first Moguelim, who is holding the double-edged knife-chants, makes an incision near the seputum and yields the second place, Torea, who with her nails sharpened blades tear the skin off the lower part of the member, and in turn gives way to the third sixth, Macice, who sucks with his lips the wound inflicted by the first two.

During this very painful and barbaric On stage, Tentant's father reads the prayer: "Glory to the Eternal, Master of the universe, who has consecrated by ordering the joining of the new-" "A calf born to the children of our father Abraham!"

If the child is of strong constitution and re-resists this awful operation (which he undergoes in (shouting heart-rending cries), they sprinkle the wound with sawdust; the Sandeke in getting up, he takes him in his arms, and repeating twice in a row, over the cup filled with wine, the words of the prophet Ezekiel: "And I will you "Say: 'You will live by your own blood,'" three drops of nec- in the child's mouth tar. All this drama unfolds with accompaniment-grouping of shrill songs, performed by the cantor and interrupted only by the sou-

JEWISH RUSSIA 213

repeated hatreds over many years directed at the child, at parents and all guests.

If the operation was carried out promptly and with address, that is to say if the first Mo-Guelim did not make too deep an incision. if the second one skillfully tore off the part lower part of the limb, and if finally the third did not have Cinga's infected mouth, the re-The result is declared satisfactory, and the little being born eight days ago has acquired the right to be a member of a for life a people who claim to be God's chosen ones. In re-enjoyment of what parents give a party, while complying with the orders of the Kakal contained in the documents cited in Chapter IV and which are classified under numbers 16, 64, 131, 158, in the Book following the Kahal, by Brafmann. If the Kahal had not the privilege of demanding the tax from the Jews, said tax on the kosher meat box, privilege which in Russia is practiced with the help of local authorities (as we have done (as mentioned in the chapter mentioned), he would not hasten not so much as reminding one's rights at every Jewish, in the most solemn moments of life, for example when he celebrates his parents and friends, or when he celebrates his wedding, or when he celebrates the birth of a male child culinary. In order to punish any disobedience to his "infallible" decisions (1), this Jewish authority almost always waits to exercise its vindictates the day of a party given by the culprit. Especially in Russia, where tax collection said tax on the box, is protected by the local authorities, one or two members of the Kahal, accompanied by the police, they arrive at the amphitryon and first conduct an inspection meticulous inspection of all household utensils, of all dishes, meat and fish, in order to discover if these dishes are kosher or trifle.

214 JEWISH RUSSIA

How will the master of the house be able to—he would demonstrate to these henchmen that the meat served at the table comes from an animal that was killed with a perfectly double-edged knife sharp and without the slightest flaw, and that the fish was prepared according to the meticulous Rules prescribed by the Talmud? So, besides the very great inconvenience that this import-

(1) See the document cited following the wine chapter, under number 149.

JEWISH RUSSIA 215

tune visit cause to the head of the family, besides the the disturbance caused among the guests presence of Kahal members who came for persecute the one in whose home they are staying, the The guilty party is almost always condemned to a heavy fine for breaking the law on the Kochère.

XX

We need to elaborate on the Moreïne, or hierarchy of dignities among Your Jews.

To study the hierarchy of dignities currently observed by the Jews, it is necessary take a retrospective look at the origin of this institution, as well as on its development successive loppement (1).

The organization of Jewish communities has Its source lies in a remote antiquity. begins immediately after the destruction of the kingdom of Israel, and its purpose is the pre-preservation and intact conservation of the na-

(1) The sources we used for the writing These chapters include: Enalt-Gesclrichte des velkes Israels, Part 7; Gractz-Gcschichte des Judentums, und Tectcn-Scherira Jouhsin-Schaare; Cedek, Cemah, Duvidc, Jhouda.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 217

lost nationality, until the long-desired day when It will please God to rejoice in his chosen people his immunities, his glory and of the country.

During the eighteen centuries of pilgrimage of the Jewish people, this organization, which remained unchanging, has developed and acquired a great power, changing salon the cir-constants, sometimes favorable, sometimes unfavorable vorables.

The seed of the organization is already there in this learned school which, with the authorization of the Roman emperor Vespasian, had was established in the city of Yamno by the Rabbi Yohanem-Ben-Zakai. During the short period that this school remained under the the direction of Rabbi Gamlielu, his tendency was to become, like the ancient Sene-Drion, the director and provider of the Public and private life of Jews. Although revolutionary conspiracies were brewing within its ranks. have often been born, she has retained for a long time the title of gymnasium; its professors had the right to use the titles reserved for scholars; such as: Hahan (scholar), Sofer (librarian), Amor (interpreter).

13

218 JEWISH RUSSIA

This form of organization was preserved until—that at the moment he entered the center of Jewish populations scattered throughout Asia the draskin of the conqueror of Arabia, of the founder of Islam, a time when Jews were subjected to this new dominance began to breathe more freely.

The early Muslims treated them as their equals. Dastanaï, the representative—so much of that time of the people of Israel in exile, having succeeded in rendering great service during of the expedition of the Muslim army against the Sasajids of Persia, the fanatical Omar, the very one who had prepared laws of proscription against the Jews, began to protect. Bastanaï is solemnly recognized as leader of the Jewish nation; Omar him gives the hand of the beautiful slave Da?—a, daughter of King Horzva of Persia, and grants him several privileges similar to those that had been granted to the patriarchs of the Chal— Church Albok&tholikos and Yezouïaba dean, (1).

(1) History of the Mongols. Uassan-Weil-Kaliff, Part 2, ch. in, p. -74, and Graetz-Geschii hie-Judenthums, 5° part;e» p, 133.

JEWISH RUSSIA 219

From that moment, a new era dawned for The Jews: Bastanaï appears for the first time times as a vassal of the Muslim empire, having the royal seal at his disposal; he is surrounded by a court and he has at his service a administration and a higher court, with authority over all the Jews scattered in Asia.

Upon the accession to the throne of Caliph Ali, at—which the Jews lent their support to his struggle for possession of the throne against Mou-Well, they see their privileges increasing even further. lèges, and the organization of communities complete. The first official Rosch-Falouta represents, before the caliph and his vizier, all the Jews of Asia. He makes the distribution taxes, collects them and pays them into the state coffers. The Jewish college is transformed into a separate parliament, consisting of de Gaon, first character after Rosch-Galouta, of Daïon-di-Daba, senior judge, and cVAb-Det-Dine, judge, who is by right successor to the previous one.

These first four dignitaries were submitted seven representatives of the company sa-

220 JEWISH RUSSIA

vante, Rosh-hala, and three members of a Another learned society, Habor. Then came an institution composed of one hundred members divided into two unequal parts. Sixty-ten members, recalling the composition of the former great Senedrion, had the right to to bear the title of Aloufîme (representative); the thirty others, recalling the composition of the petit Senedrion, bore the title of Dene-Keiome (candidate). These dignities were here-officials. This central council of Jews held its sessions, sometimes in Baghdad, sometimes in Suwa, sometimes in Pombadita, three residences of the chief Upper Rosch-Galouta. After that came... provincial councils.

Each Jewish community received from the head-place of the constituency to which it belongs held a Daïcn (a certified judge). This one he chose two assistants, with whom he would form-The Det-Dine court. This court... cupait, in addition to legal matters, of the legislation, marriage contracts, the review of divorce decrees, letters of change, deeds of sale, as well as the in-observation of some utensils used for Tac-

JEWISH RUSSIA. 221

complisscmcnt des cérémonies religieux,

such as Halef, a double-edged knife serving Jewish butchers, and Schofère, the horn which rings on the day of Rosh Hashanah.

Besides the courts of Bet-Dine, there exist—there was still in each community a co-mité which depended directly on the Rosch-Galouta. It was composed of seven Parnesses •tutors), elected by the community, and examiners all civil and religious matters are addressed. The current Kahal is the exact continuation of these committees.

We do not think we need to enter into the details relating to the mutual relations that exist—were between these kinds of tribunals of in—Given the established practice then, we will only say that the collection of taxes, paid by the Jews for the benefit of their own institutions, was made by employees belonging to a another religion, which allows us to assume that these taxes, the distribution of which had been established blocked by the Jewish authorities, were probably—very heavy, and that intervention was necessary—foreign element to the Jewish element to make them return. The Kochère meat tax, of which

222 JEWISH RUSSIA

The current Kahal derives such large profits, and which serves to maintain and sustain its despotism, as indicated in chapter [see], also existed then and weighed heavily on the Jewish population.

As a result of the improved lot of Jews at that time, an improvement due to the circumstances we have mentioned, the study of the laws of the Talmud, until then quite restricted, became general. For, according to the tradition, the Talmud, until the end of the 5th century of our era, was preserved only in the memoirs of some scholars, who were like a kind of scholarly library. In this way, the Talmud could perfectly—how to perish with the last scholar who possesses it sedated only by heart, circumstance quite presumptive, given that these scholars always put at the head of the movements revolutionaries. But when this danger was past and that the scholars who possessed in-

They could transcribe the Talmud by heart
On paper, the study of the sacred book met more obstacles, as a result of oppression and the persecution suffered by the nation

RUSSIA JL.'LVE

223

Jewish under the rule of the last princes Sassnīdc*. The Talmud, moreover, which is reclosed only on the field of theo-laughter, and which could not be applied to life practical, lost sympathy, not only of the Jewish people in general, but also of its representatives, who were beginning to weaken; he would have eventually died out completely, if the favorable change occurred in the fortunes of the Jewish population in Asia, under the domination-tion of the descendants of Muhammad, had not brought all the Jews back to these studies, allowing thus it is up to the representatives to apply the laws and to make them practical.

From then on, taking off and becoming the regulations governing the national and spiritual life of Jews, the Talmud became enthroned in the thought of the entire widespread population not only in Asia, but also among those who lived the Mediterranean coasts, in Europe and in Africa.

But, as nothing in this world is permanent,
this kind of national autonomy of which the Jews enjoyed for some time under the domination of the descendants of Muhammad will last

224 THE JEWISH T.USFIE

few. The successors of Omar and the caliph Ali having unearthed the laws of persecution ren-laws owed by Omar against the Jews, laws of which he-even though he hadn't used it, they began to to apply them to this population. Under the reign d'Almoutavakillc, grandson of Almamouns,
In 856, the central Jewish council was dissolved.

Rosh Galouta is gradually losing its privileges as well as its position, and towards the end of the 9th century—key, the parliaments of Sura and Pombadita are removed.

This painful blow to the autonomy of Jewish institutions, however, do not destroy the internal organization of this population. On the contrary, the Jews are rising up against adversity and begin to form these corporate intimate rations, a kind of se—conspiracies Cretan traditions which, throughout the centuries, have been perpetuated killed to arrive almost intact until our days. Rosh Galouta and the Gaons disappear—sent, and with them all the branches of the self—central authority; but the provincial committees and The Bet—Dine raise their heads. In these two provincial institutions, the government thinks they will find help for the perception of taxes among Jews, as well as guides in decisions relating to related issues gious. So, we keep them, we protect them and they are formed into a kind of council which authority is exercised within the area subject to their dependence.

JEWISH RUSSIA 225

If Ton considers these provin—ciaux, endowed with greater powers after the disappearance of the central council, did not receive no more orders from the latter, but almost in In all circumstances, consult the Tal—mud to pronounce a judgment or render whatever decision, we will see that the per—a sedition that was directed against their nation—The injustice had only been apparent for the Jews, and that on the contrary she had given them great services, in the sense that the laws of the Talmud penetrated further into the private lives of Jews.

From that moment on, the partial organization of Jewish communities with their committees for civil and religious affairs and their tribu—judicial matters, enters a phase of sta—bility and perseverance, and forms this aston—nante talmudo—municipal republic which,

unshakeable, it resisted persecution for ten centuries actions of all kinds directed against the Jews, and has remained intact to this day, with minor changes regarding external shapes...

To better publicize the forms
more recent developments in the organization of communities Regarding Jewish women, we will quote an excerpt from a document.
of Kiria-Nesseman (1), which, by its veracity,
had gained general trust.

On the duties of the rabbi and the parishioners
[members of the Kahal].

1° At the invitation of the members of the Kahal, the
The rabbi is required to go without delay to the assembly and to take part in the deliberations actions and decisions. Nor should it either refuse to participate in the judgments rendered by the Det-Dine.

2. The rabbi has no right to interfere in the matters that the Kahal undertakes for its pro-pre- accounts, such as sales and purchases, ren-

(\) liiria-Nessemcin, collection of historical facts of the Municipality of Vdna, by Fino, 1860.

JEWISH RUSSIA 227

collection of royalties owed by individuals, etc. It only needs to be presented the conclusion of these matters and affix his signature alongside those of the Kahal members.

3. If the Kahal wanted to institute a new tax, and that this tax was contrary to the rules-general ments, and if there were a single in-individual who wanted to protest against the new tax, the rabbi should assist him in his protesting and deciding wisely in the question-tion in dispute.

4° The Daions (judges) of the court of Bet-

Dine alone have the right to pronounce in the money matters, and the rabbi cannot modify— They are not proud of their decision at all. If, however, a Some parties require that the rabbi be present during the discussion of this issue, he cannot refuse to attend.

5° At the invitation of the Ba-ale-Takouet (re-actors of the regulations), the rabbi must to go to them to confer on the re-action of the new regulations, without however—and having the ability to introduce it by him—not even any change, if the writing is approved unanimously. But yes,

228 LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

among the editors, only two
If they hold a contrary opinion, the rabbi owes them his support, by demanding that this opinion be disclosed Cut and taken into consideration. If in the vote There is an equal number of votes for and against, the vote of The rabbi is predominant.

6° SU an unforeseen question arises by the general regulations, the rabbi could not to find a solution on his own. He will be assisted in this case two editors, two representatives times of the general meeting, and two Daions, with whom he will discuss the said question, in order to to arrive at a wise conclusion.

7. The rabbi does not have the right to give his Notice to the Chamoims (those who designate the voters) and he must in no way in—to flow over the elections.

8° During the general meeting of all the Jews who live within a certain radius, the rabbi cannot affix his signature to any protesting, whether collective or individual, during—that this protest is directed against the Kahal.

JEWISH RUSSIA 229

The dignities of Habor and Moreïne.

9. The rabbi, jointly with the head of the Kahal and the president of the Bet-Dine, can elect towards a Jew to the dignity of Habor; as for the Moreïne's dignity, it cannot be given that by a commission composed of four members of the Kahal, four members of the tribunal of Bet-Dine, of several representatives of the general meeting, which they themselves enjoy of this dignity and who have studied the Poskime (code of laws from the Talmud), and from the rabbi. All the members of the commission must meet to go to the rabbi's home, and nowhere else. In any case, a candidate for this dignity cannot to obtain it if he is not perfectly aware of the Hoschen- Hamischpot (complete collection of laws of the Talmud), as well as regulations of the last rabbis.

Only members of the Kahal may be elected those who enjoy the dignity of Moreïne. He who is merely Habor can also be elected, but only after several years of marriage.

230 JEWISH RUSSIA

The different degrees of function in the Kahal and the Det-Dine.

Here is the hierarchy of these two institutions:

- a) Candidate for the title of chief or representative smelling.
- b) Daï'on, judge in a brotherhood having right to sit in the sessions of the Bet-Dine.
- r) Gabai, dean of a large establishment of charity.
- d) Ykovim, actual member of the meeting general.
- e) Touvet-Kahal, member designated for choose the voters.
- f) Bosch-Medina, representative of the re-general union.

g) Baalei'-Takonet, the one who writes the new calves regulations.

h) Chemve-T&konet, the one who watches the enforcement of regulations.

It is only by going through all these degrees of the Jewish hierarchy that one can come to be member of the Kahal or representative of the re-

JEWISH RUSSIA 231

General union. An extraordinary case dispenses. only one of these lower degrees.

The order to follow in the elections.

10° The members of the Kahal and the judges of the Bet-Din are elected every year, according to the last-last regulation adopted in the year 1747.

A few days before the month of Kisslef (oc-(October), the Kahal designates five Boreims (elect-primary school teachers), who must choose several Baalei-Takonet (editors of the rules) guidance to follow during the next elections tions). The elections must be held six months after the free Easter holidays.

On the appointed day, after the prayer at the synagogue-gogue, the city chiefs, the presidents of Kahal and the Bet-Dine, as well as the presidents d^ds various brotherhoods, the editors of new regulations, the Chamochimes (no-service staff), the Sofère (secretary) and finally the five designated first-degree electors by the Kahal in the previous month of Kisslef, meet with the rabbi in the room of Kahal and appoint five new members to the ballot

232 JEWISH RUSSIA

Boreïms (second-degree electors), who are genuine voters invested with the power to elect read whomever they please for the high-ranking officials tions of:

4 Rochimes, representatives of the Kahal;

2 Roch-Medina, representatives of the country, that is to say, within a certain radius, district, borough
district, department;

4 Touvimés, privileged members of the reu-
general union;

2 Ykovims, actual members of the meeting
general;

4 Roët-Heschbouet, controllers;

4 Gaboïms, starostes of the society of goodpheasant;

12 Let us date, judges of the Bet-Dine court;

A total of 35 dignitaries for the entire year,
that is to say, until the free holidays of Easter next.

While the voting process was underway cute, it is strictly forbidden to anyone to address the Boreims (voters of the second degree), so as not to distract them in this important operation, which aims to the goal of giving a government to the people

JEWISH RUSIE 233

Jewish tion of a certain radius (canton, district-district, department).

Duties of the Kahal and the Bct Dine.

il0 The main occupation of the Kahal con-insists on the distribution of taxes that the Jews must pay, as well as in the collection process of these taxes. Furthermore, the Kahal is required to ensure that the respect that each

A Jew owes a debt to the members of the Kahal, of the Bet-Dine and to the Moreïnes. The Kahal also distributes help for those starting a business any, employing for this sort of encourageously the money that comes from the so-charitable society. In general, the Kahal handles all civil and religious matters gious and indicates to each Jew in his ray the path he must follow and the occupation he must fill in.

All branches of commerce are im-questions posed by the Kahal, as well as loans on pledges, bills of exchange and gold notes
dre. The collection of all these taxes for the benefit the Kahal treasury is executed through entrepreneurs.

234 JEWISH RUSSIA

The Kahal refers to the Shamoim, that is to say-to say those who are preparing the list of taxpayers, with the share that must be paid by them. This painting is examined by the Kahal and modified, approved or rejected. – It is recommended-commanded the Shamoims not to flatter or spare the rich and have consideration for the poor the poor. For the entire duration their work, they are obliged, under the herem, to not to communicate with anyone, in order to avoid any external pressure. Us must be locked in a chamber until-than to the entire execution of their task. One junior official of the synagogue is attached to their service to call the taxpayers,
so that they may explain, under the herem,
their material position, success or failure success of their business, companies, loans, professions, etc.

12. Every three months, the members of the general meetings must be held in the Kahal chamber to consult on the si-the destruction of the Jewish community and on what must be undertaken in order to prepare for the events adverse or harmful elements that are sur-

JEWISH RUSSIA 235

who came in the past or who might come forward lead in the future, as well as on everything that is of general interest to Jewish society. If all Members cannot be present at the meeting.
general union, and that it is only found twenty, the decisions taken under these conditions will have as much value as if they were decisions made by the full general meeting.

13° Every three years, the entire population of the male sex who lives in the country (a certain radius, district, borough or department- (ment) must meet in a designated place in advance to discuss and stop new regulations, as well as to examine the questions of great importance to the cause Jewish in general.

14° The Daions, judges of the Bet-Dine, with their president, have the duty: a) to estimate what place should they occupy in the synagogue the dignitaries and officials, and what is the one that suits the people; b) to sell, in some cases, the law of Meropius (law exploitation of a person of religion Christian); c) to approve and legalize the deeds of sale of real estate; d)

23C JEWISH RUSSIA

to ensure, jointly with the Kahal, that the accuracy of weights and measures, as well as the prices of basic necessities, of course, in the interest of the Jewish buyers only.

Brafmann, in his Book on Kahal, cites forty acts and documents that emanate of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine and which have a report with everything that has been said in this chapter. We chose the most curious, in number of nine, which are classified under numbers 18, 67, 112, 134, 170, 201, 210, 219, and that we don- no to chapter 21, noting that the documents of chapter XVI, under numbers 78 and 132, also relate to what has been men- mentioned above.

From the document extracted from the Kima-Nesse- man, whom we have just quoted, as well as by those who will find themselves following this cha- clown, we'll see what happens next. we have already repeated several times, namely: the The Kahal wielded considerable power over public life. inner and intimate life of the Jews spread out over all points of the globe; 2° the revenues that the Kahal collects taxes on Jews of its radius, income and taxes which de-Then a thousand years have been and still are and by-all the same; 3° the sale by the Kahal of this absurd, astonishing law, and one that seems impossible and incredible at first glance, exploitable of Christian properties and persons yours, and which among the Jews bears the names of Hclzaha and Meropïe (of which we have in-retained the reader in chapter xi); 4° finally of all these questions of inner life and in-time of the Jews, questions which, known only-lying in a superficial way according to some insignificant laws of the Talmud, were, until at this time, completely ignored by Christians hold.

The importance of the document we have just to quote consists mainly of what he explains and perfectly defines the function and role of the Rabbi. This explanation and definition, should enlighten the world once and for all Christian in relation to this Jewish official.
 It is this ignorance that has helped Judaism to last century to raise the flag of his gou-underground government, and to resist the power-health influenced by Christian civilization,

233 JEWISH RUSSIA

which was beginning to undermine it at its foundations
 comments.

We don't really know where Terror comes from.
 which makes the rabbi be considered a per-priestly ceremony of the Jewish religion. This childhood, nurtured by the rabbis themselves-same (1), has always been a true rock against which the legislators of all the countries that wanted to address the question-Jewish tradition to introduce reforms there; but Never was a time so opportune and so abundant in harvest for Judaism, ja-but no era provides for the dark kingdom of the Talmud such a brilliant victory than the 19th century; and here's why:

When, at the beginning of the 20th century, the problems that had existed for several years in France had calmed down and that Tordre com- threatened to produce its beneficial effects, the reorganization of the country's administration had also touched on the Jewish question. Napoleon

(1) As evidenced by the farewell speech addressed to Alsatian Jews by the chief rabbi of Cilmir, around the year 1872, which left the provinces; innes es to the German Empire and transported his home to the Vosges, in France.

JEWISH RUSSIA 239

Léon Pr, who was then in the full force of his genius and his glory, took an interest in this question; he wanted to add to all his other triumphs, the glory of being the great reformer of Judaism. The circumstances which, in 1805, brought the Jewish question to the forefront, res- will emerge even better from the words of Napo- Leon himself: "If part of this question- The problem was resolved, said Napoleon I in § 12 Regarding the reform of the Jewish question, it would be necessary invent a way to restrict as much as It is possible that speculation was practiced on a large scale. scale by the Jews, in order to destroy this es- croquerie and this wear and tear (1). And in the IVth cha- He adds, "Our goal is to carry se- courses for farmers in general and for deli- to increase the populations of certain departments of the dependency in which they are te- naked by the Jews; for the mortgages taken by these on the greater part of the pro- real estate properties make the owners completely dependent on their creditors, and In a short time, if you're not careful, the

(1) Allgemeine-Zeitung des Judenlhurns, 1841, p. 300.

240 JEWISH RUSSIA

Jews alone will own property in the departments units where they are located, since their su- Prematurity increases every day with the help of the u- Sure. So we absolutely must put an end to it. to this state of affairs." Then he continued:

"Secondly, our goal is to reduce essentially, if it is impossible to destroy it completely, the separatist tendency of the Jewish population, which makes it a nation in the nation, and to eradicate the taste that it professes this population for harmful occupations to social order, to civilization in general and to the inhabitants of all countries.

The preceding few words indicate perfectly the causes that have raised Then there's the Jewish question. In truth, these words Napoleon I's ideas say nothing new because This is the story of the Jewish people who, since the centuries repeat themselves invariably almost every the days; but what is noteworthy, it is that the causes that the defenders of Judaism cites to explain this dark tale—the blueprint of Jewish tendencies, could not at—can be admitted to France at this at that time, since, since 1789, the Jews have was admitted to enjoy civil rights on an equal footing with all French citizens.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 241

When, in the last ten years, we freed the peasants in Russia, and that one introduced several liberal reforms in this country Rales, the Jewish question also became a pressing issue. the reformer's examination, and she found herself in the same phase where she was in France time we were talking about. Of all the points of the great empire where complaints were heard following: "The Jews are ruining us; they exploit all classes of the population indigenous; they seized all the capitals rates that invigorate the industry, and have become owners of most of the May—sounds in large and small towns. They have concentrated in their hands all the commerce and Font ravalé, making it a sort of secondhand goods; they forced a large number of workers belonging to other three religions, by practicing their trades in vile price. "

It was in 1866 that the Jewish question was raised on the agenda in Russia, and it is to this

at the time when the same complaints were heard

242 JEWISH RUSSIA

due throughout the country. But immediately the Jews themselves, as well as some charlatans from the liberalism, they raised their voices, saying: "Give the Jews complete emancipation—passion, allow them to become owners of great wealth, compel them to speak the language Russian, scatter them throughout all the Russias, etc., etc., and you will see that they identify themselves with the country. They will be proud of the country, which they will no longer form a separate nation within the Russian nation, but that they will become true citizens, all while preserving their religion.

All these false axioms, repeated ad nauseam by those concerned found it too easy belief among the ignorant masses of the Russia.

But in France, in 1805, the Jews were citizens already for several years. The revolution of 1789 had granted them the enjoyment of possession of civil rights and citizenship rights, equal to those enjoyed by the regents; and yet, according to the words of Napoleon I, the Jews had not changed their system of exclusive existence, completely apart, and to maintain their nationality by the shameful means of usury, trafficking and mercantile depredations. This is an unknown fact—testable that, if the indigenous nationality feels its moral and material strength, the foreign elements germs living within it must necessarily—to succumb to its influence and become confused with her, at least as far as external forms are concerned. Jews. Subject to this common law, the Jews In France, they have long since become Frenchified. but only in terms of costume manners, language, and enjoyment Civil rights. The genius of Napoleon I had understood that all these external forms would not completely assimilate the Jews into French culture.

JEWISH RUSSIA?43

would not produce true French citizens, and that, despite its small number (not exceeding (not then 60,000 souls in France), this population-tion, concentrated and self-contained, for-would always be a separate corporation, a nation in the nation. Napoleon knew that this proud race, considering itself the few-God's chosen people would like to perpetuate themselves, by not contracting marriage only between co-religionists, and, by this means, would not consent to mix
his blood to the "impure" blood of Christians.

244 JEWISH RUSSIA

But, as nothing could resist genius at that time
He flattered himself that he could defeat Napoleon this iron will, guided by fanaticism religious... a will which, until then, had re-had endured so much persecution and had survived,
always unshakeable, for centuries and centuries.
To achieve his goal, Napoleon was thinking of employing rabbis, believers, like everyone else
the world, the priestly ministers of the re-Israelite religion.

His plan was very moderate and had nothing contrary to the most impartial justice; by Consequently, he seemed to have every chance of to succeed, because it consisted of engaging the Jews in consider all French people as their equal in every respect and to look at them like brothers of the same nation, with with which they could forge family ties through marriage. In short, Napoleon did not exist.
the Jews were concerned about reciprocity towards the French.

As we can see, this plan had nothing exaggerated from a humanitarian point of view; it was perfectly in line with the progress of the civilization. But, from their point of view, this plan,

JEWISH RUSSIA

245

which tended to weaken the dark kingdom se-

Paratist, was not very popular with the Jews. We will see shortly that, despite its great genius, Napoleon, instead of reaching the goal which he pursued, did not succeed, by this new-organization that he introduced among the Jews, than to provide them with a weapon which they would need rent admirably to use for their benefit fanaticism and their separatist ideas.

Sharing the general error relatively to the role that rabbis play in the Israelite religion, that is to say, considering them as priestly ministers of this religion gion, Napoleon I thought he could carry out his plan at the help of their spiritual authority over the popu-Jewish culture. It therefore seemed to him that by raising and by strengthening this authority, he could... to serve more easily. To this end he decreed, In 1806, the institution of a Senedrion was established in Paris. composed of seventy-one rabbis like of the great Senedrion of Jerusalem. The Jews, he believed, would find in this court this unlimited high spiritual power to which they owe-wind submit without a murmur, like the Talmudic law requires it. To complete this institution and so that it could function re- Regularly, several were created in the provinces consistories under the direction of the rabbis.

246 JEWISH RUSSIA

At first, the rabbis did not oppose No resistance to the orders of the Almighty. conqueror, whom nothing could resist at that time, and they signed with both hands everything that was presented in the name of the emperor, or even orders against which several Some of them were soon to protest. But Napoleon's illusion about the solution of the re-The Jewish form was not to last long. because, when one wanted to apply a certain ar-article on which the success of the re-formed in relation to marital ties between Christian families and families Jewish people were convinced that this question it was absolutely a dead letter for the Jews. and that he could never enter their that a child of Israel could consent to mix-pouring his pure blood into the impure blood of the Christians hold.

Only then was Napoleon convinced that with the sole help of spiritual authority
It was impossible to move the rabbis,

JEWISH RUSSIA 217

even on a seemingly the least important point—However, the inner life of Judaism, and that the idea of any reform could not germinate only in the imagination of those who were not familiar with the laws of the Talmud, religion, history and traditions of Jews. Convinced then that it would be impossible for him—able to break the bonds of this concentrated viciousness, underground and enclosed within itself, by the means he thought he could use in Napoleon's view of a solution to the Jewish question Leon changed his system, and, considering this question from a completely different point of view different, he decreed in 1808 "that he was de—split the Jews from lending on pawnshops; that the bills of exchange issued by Christians for the benefit of the Jews, for loans made by the latter, were to be limited to one a certain sum; which had to be surrounded by pre—cautions and difficulties the change of re—residence of Jewish families. » In short, Na—Poleon, seeking by this decree the means to preserve the Christian population of the sinister influence of the Jews, did nothing else that which had already been practiced several times

248 JEWISH RUSSIA

in previous centuries by the authorities
from all the countries where Jews had settled.
But all of this was just a passing cloud.
"God will send our enemy so many cha—grin that he will no longer be able to think of us in turn—
"Lie," repeat the elected officials of Israel when a
A new persecution descended upon them. And,
Once again, their prophecy was soon to come true.
to happen. Events were unfolding rapidly:
a few years after the fall of the colossus of—before which all of Europe trembled, its de—crets and his ordinances against the Jews were cancelled in France. Only the pseudoecclesiastical institution of rabbis in Paris and a few consistories in the provinces. The new

The power of the fugitive did not collapse with the one who established it; on the contrary, it took on a new impetus to rebuild and defend itself against a an enemy far more powerful than were Napoleon, Nebuchadnezzar, Haman and so many others
other persecutors of the people of Israel, con-Christian civilization, which, in the priest-first quarter of the 19th century, had begun to gaining a foothold in the dark kingdom of Talmud, by gradually undermining its internal forces

JEWISH RUSSIA 240

rieurcs and leading to decomposition,
slow to the truth, but for that very reason more Sure.

In the sphere of the Jews who had suffered
A faction of European civilization, reli-Israelite region, said Doctor Stem, resembleblait to the scattered pages of the Bible; the cere-
The religious monks looked like a chain whose rings would have been broken into several-several places, and whose internal connections which constituted this great power of Jews: one for all and all for one, they are completely broken. In vain, to the rescue of
With the Talmud weakened, talented individuals rushed to... first order, such as Mendelson, Friede-land and many other superior spirits, who tried to wake up in the classroom, enlightened
the Jewish people's patriotic and national sentiment
The people of Israel are not successful.

Soon even the most zealous defenders, trained by an irresistible current, having converted themselves (1) to Christianity, brought thus a very harsh blow to the foundation of Judaism

(1) Mendelson died in the Jewish religion, but all her children, with the exception of one son, as well as Friede-

250 JEWISH RUSSIA

that they had wanted to consolidate, and which, until
At the time, it had seemed unshakeable to them.

To save the Talmud's flag and with him, the underground corporation of Jews, the efforts of talents as remarkable as those Mendelson, Friedeland and others, were powerless; it required the complex force of a official representation, and that is the role that taken this pseudo-ecclesiastical institution Jewish woman imagined in 1806 by Napoleon I in A goal, as we saw, completely different.

People who have taken the trouble to study to dye, even superficially, the external forms the rituals and ceremonies of the Israelite religion Lite, know that in this religion the functions-priestly duties do not require an existence absolutely devoted to the practice of worship, but that they can be filled by anyone individual, both at the synagogue and in his house, and that every Jew believes necessary to his salvation to fill himself, as much as It is possible that these sacred functions, and thus, to be an officer, to pontificate in person.

land and several other zealous defenders of Judaism, converted to Christianity.

JEWISH RUSSIA 251

The meetings of rabbis that took place in the last few days in Brunswick, Cassel and Berlin, and which aimed to reform the Judaism by introducing several modifications cations, appeared to many Christians a serious matter. However, the Jews themselves- They themselves judged them from a different point of view. "What benefit have they brought to our cause," said Graetz, Jewish author, the Brunswicx meeting and all Those who resemble her?... » None; she It flew away with the wind, because among the people of Judah there is no difference between a rabbi and every Jew in particular, when he- git of religious practices and ceremonies- its (1).

Circumcision, marriage, burial, the celebration of Easter, the prayer over the cup, the purification of the woman, the prayer to the synagogue and at home, as well as all religious ceremonies were performed

(1) Letter from Doctor Graefz to his friend. – G uni a guide, No. 23, p. 181, 186'. – Dom's proposition having p mr the aim of submitting religious questions to the rabbis, futpojr le mène motif rejete par Mendelson. – Iost-Gcschichte des Judenlhum–, Leipzig, 1863, vol. III, p. 304.

212 JEWISH RUSSIA

by every Jew at the very moment of existence of the Temple and the great Senedrion, in Jerusalem. The right for every Israelite to exercise the priestly functions were enshrined in law even those of Moses, Mishni, and the Talmud, as well as by all the interpreters and commentators enforcers of these laws in antiquity. By fighting–relying on these former prerogatives, that the the laws cited above give to all Jews In general, each of them fulfills their duties. religious wherever he is found, without having need to wait for the arrival of someone exclusively charged with priestly functions; this idea is so deeply ingrained in the mind of the entire Jewish population that a modification any use for this purpose would cause a very great despair among all the people of Is–Raël.

It is truly astonishing that all these circumstances have been ignored by governments; accustomed as they were to seeing the offices religious of all rites celebrated by the ministers of the cult, they could not imagine that the Israelite religion was an exception and that every Jew read to himself his own priest; he is even more surprising than the government French persisted in this error, after what happened to Napoleon I during the creation of the Senedrion of Paris, who, changing soon in general consistory, functioning and acted in the interest of Judaism, while maintaining the French authorities in the question about the priestly role of rabbis.

JEWISH RUSSIA 253

In summary, this is the new organization

Jewish woman introduced to France in the first quarter of this century, an organization that has made it possible to maintain to hold the foundation upon which the people of Israel have traversed the centuries of his fanaticism... organization which unfortunately preserved this fanaticism of civilizing and fertilizing influence of Christianity in the 19th century Napoleon-Leo I, this declared enemy of the Jews, is conamazed by their historians as the savior of Judaism.

And indeed, this new organization, while leaving each Jew the right to celebrate to break up religious ceremonies, like this what had been practiced until then, served mainly to keep the patriotic spirit of the Israelites alive, The rabbis' speeches were very eloquent and very skillful, instead of glossing over the truths of religion, were filled with allusions to religion relatives whose purpose is to constantly remind us of lies to the faithful of Israel about the persecutions and the sufferings endured by the holy people, and whose Christians, according to the rabbis, were the authors. And quite naturally the Jewish speakers sought in these speeches to demonstrate supremacy over all others peoples of the earth, of this sublime people who have produces Spinosa, Salvator, Meyerbeer, Rachel, etc. (1).

15

254 JEWISH RUSSIA

This is how the organization created in a the goal of union only served to maintain the separation the ration of the people of Israel from the rest of humanity nity. By introducing it into all countries of European schools intended to train young people Jewish identity, the preservation was finally secured. tion in the future of the Talmud flag.

The various Jewish brotherhoods, which, by continuation of the great dispersion of the people of Israel in all parts of the globe, they began to disappear, rose again everywhere, thanks to of the new organization of rabbis created by Napoleon I. Finally, thanks to the powerful Jewish protectors who, by virtue of their financial position ceremonies, had acquired great influence in the political world, the new organization the sation established an "alliance", the goal of which was to protect the Jewish element wherever it was found. This can be verified by referring to both to the debates that highlighted the remarkable meeting held by rabbis from all countries, in 1869, in Breslau, and to the decisions taken by this meeting, and here are the main points points:

(1) We didn't want to admit the frank truth: that These great talents were formed by civilization Christian.

"We want to strengthen unity and freedom" from all Jewish communities.

"It was unanimously decided that all the Members present at the meeting must register write as active members of this alliance formed in the general interest of Judaism, and that everyone must act and support in every way "Its strength lies in the actions of said alliance."

"It was also unanimously decided to pro- to evoke in all German-speaking countries addresses and petitions to governments,

256 LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

requesting the appointment of a certain quan- a group of professors belonging to the religion Jewish educational institutions superior (1) ».

The Russian government had allowed with eagerness for the introduction of the new Jewish organization in the country and founded in Vilna and in Zytomyr two schools of rabbis, thus that a number of gymnasiums, exclusively intended for the preparatory education of young Israelite ness for these two schools. For sou- to maintain these educational establishments, we instituted a new tax, which fell exclusively on the Jews living in Russia, under the name-candle tax, the proceeds of which amounted to 327,000 silver rubles, a tax which It still exists today.

The question is therefore what result the government of this country obtained through the introduction of the new Jewish organization (organization, he thought, which was supposed to solve this the difficult and interminable Jewish question, a turbulent one. for so long in Russia, and whose solution-

(1) Gamaguidc, 1869, no. 28, p. 219.

JEWISH RUSSIA Z0i

A satisfactory solution could not be found. than now). And what had been the purpose of that enormous capital of 10,000,000 silver rubles, perceived over the last thirty years, mostly about the Jews of the class poor (1)?

In administrative reports, the rabbis themselves give the answer that Here is what they say: "The results of our actions, are for the most part insignificant; because 1° the police in each locality scratch with a The Melamèdes (preceptors) were extremely rapacious. in whose hands the national flag Judaism is weakening day by day; 2° the Civil authorities appoint inspectors belonging to the Christian religion in the Jewish seminaries; 3° this organization is "still too new."

The first ones were released in 1854 rabbis whose education had taken place in the

(1) For the maintenance of the rabbi and his family, cha- that the Jewish community pays a separate tax. Read. repair- The administration of this imposition is, in the hands of the Kahal, a new weapon he uses against those who deso- obey his despotic orders, as well as for to protect his very humble servants.

253 JEWISH RUSSIA

schools established in Vilna and Zytomir. Since

From that time until the present day, several reforms have taken place. Important changes were introduced in Russia. countries, over a period of eighteen years, has, so to speak, completely transformed; and yet not one of those rabbis who, in status of a public official appointed by the government to preside over the affairs of the Jewish population in Russia, did not have to take knowledge of the books where the information on the internal situation of Jewish communities; not one, we say, has not been able to provide the exact statistics to date the Jewish population, included in its radius, and this under the pretext of a lack of time.

However, the real answer that results from several reports, the quotation of which would be too long and boring, is that all the regulations and orders concerning rabbis, as well as their spiritual function, have suffered the fate of all the laws that had been promulgated in Russia with respect to the Jewish tradition; for the life and conduct of this population in the empire were always directed arranged by the Kahal in such a way as to evade these laws. The only difference that exists is that, since the introduction of the new organization, the Jewish population no longer remained under the control of the Jewish population. influence of fanatical and ignorant members from each Kahal, but many of the rabbis raised under the protection and supervision of government, which will not prevent them to always act, however, in the direction of the fanatical Talmudic ism... that is to say in the sense from the influence of those very people who had were tasked with directing the Jewish population, on whom they were to have acquired great credit through their science and their official position.

JEWISH RUSSIA 259

In these government-established schools Russian for the purpose, as we said earlier high, to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the Jewish question, from the very beginning, was given the not exclusively in the spirit of Tamuldo-national, and all the rabbis who came out of these schools, in order to occupy official positions within a certain radius, were penetrated by this exclusive spirit that influenced the conduct of their entire lives as well as their actions and on the principles they taught their own people. The Israelite newspapers Zion, Gamelitz-Hakarmel and several others, written by the new generation of rabbis emerging from both Schools established in Russia claim that the spirit and the trend are absolutely the same. In these newspapers, one finds only lamentations. accounts of the fate of the people of Israel, stories of persecutions to which this people is exposed on the part of Christians, atrocities committed—wars against Jews in the Middle Ages, as well as lengthy dissertations on the superiority of The people of Israel above all other peoples. Finally. These journals are filled with all these declarations outdated expressions, which have long been forgotten by the current generation of Jews, but which tend to maintain their fanaticism and the idea of a state of complete separation in which they must maintain with regard to the indigenous populations of the countries they inhabit bitent.

260 JEWISH RUSSIA

As we can see, the new organization introduced by Napoleon I in France, in the goal of exerting influence on the population Jewish by the rabbis, an organization which was imitated by Germany and Russia in the former Polish provinces, had part—A completely negative result.

JEWISH RUSSIA 2G1

If we add further that, of all the means designed to get closer and confuse the Jewish population with the indigenous population of In Russia, the best thing would be to raise the children of these two different elements in the same schools, where Christian civilization would deal a 'mortal blow to the fanaticism of Judaism, one will understand its importance

This establishment was for the Jewish leaders from two schools of rabbis and a quantity of preparatory gymnasiums, and how these establishments were contrary to the general interest General of Russia.

The Jewish historian Jost, speaking of an Israelite to which Charlemagne had entrusted an important mission, said that the Jews had to take advantage of such a favorable circumstance to serve the interest of their religion (1). This is not that the confirmation of this aphorism that the Jews always know how to profit for their religion and the Talmudic flag, not only—element of favorable circumstances, but also the most unfavorable events to their nationality.

(1) Geschichte des Judenthums, t. II, p. 384.

15.

262 JEWISH RUSSIA

21st

Here are the acts and documents, translated from Book on Kahal, published by Brafmann, which we announced, as serving as Material evidence to support all of the above:

No. 18.

On the election of the members of the Kahal.

Wednesday, 16 Sivan.

The representatives of the general meeting have decided to order elections for members of the Kahal which will have to operate the following year—boasts. These elections must be held according to the The method prescribed by Talmudic law. The voters nine members of the Kahal will be elected from the second degree; to know: four Rochims (heads), three Tuvins (representatives) and two Ykovims (actual members).
— Only one can be elected to the dignity of Rochim the one who has already been appointed to this dignity at least once. Voters must lend a hand.

 the need to have no other stimulant, in the
 The choice they will make, that of the general Link of the population. Elected officials will also have to lend a hand.
 the fact that in fulfilling their duties they do not act—will only act for the benefit of the general good, with the most perfect impartiality. Each elected official will renounce, pen-throughout the duration of his function, at accept any position within the brotherhood
 Hevra-Kadische (of the funeral) (1).

Each of the five elected officials will take the oath in the following form: "I swear, under penalty of Herem, not to use in the election that I will make nor hypocrisy, neither cunning nor any personal interest, and that I will use to accomplish this election all my knowledge and all my intelligence, in order to to elect only those who will be useful to the General Link-general of the Jewish population of this city.

May she forever curse the hour when we let's begin the voting of the five electors of the second degree who must elect the nine members bres du Kahal, cejour, le 15 Sivon 5556.

No. 67.

From elevation to dignities.

Wednesday, the fourth day of Easter 5559.
 The city leaders announced to the whole

(1) The Kahal having supreme power over all the brotherhoods, the participation of a member of the Kahal Joining any kind of brotherhood will paralyze free will.
 of this member.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 205

population that the man named Samuel, son of David, has was raised to the dignity of Moreïne (noble-born). From Today he will be invited to go to the synagogue.
 gogue and approaching the Fova, pronouncing
 the following words, Moreïne Gavav Rabbi Sa-Muel Begahover Reb David (the first high and very noble Rabbi Samuel, son of the Habor Rebe

David).

No. 112.

V authorization to become a voter.

The day before Thursday, 19 Nisan 5561.

The (heads) leaders of the city, the members of the Kahal and the actual members of the general meeting—rale decided to grant the right forever of elector to Rebe Mechoulam Faifisch, son of /saac.
From today, he is a member of the general meeting.
general and to take part in all the decisions sions. In addition, all the privileges that possess the city leaders who fulfill these important roles aunts fondions for two consecutive years, are also granted to the said Rebe Mechoulam, who has paid into the Kahal's treasury the entire sum required for the acquisition of these dignities. In faith of which the four notaries of the city signed the act.

26G JEWISH RUSSIA

No. 134,
From the loss of the liter of Moreïne.

Saturday, 25 Sivan 5562.

The members of the Kahal, after deliberation, have decided :

Considering that it was proven at the previous session—edging (1) that Rebe Josée, son of Aviel, by his denunciation against Kahal, had exposed this Israelite institution to support very large expenses, in order to mitigate the effect of said denunciation—ciation;

Considering that, for this reason, the Kahal has de—credé to take away half the place from the said Rebe Josée at the synagogue;

Having acknowledged that this punishment is not quite strong, the Kahal, in its session today—
today, wishing to increase it, decrees: that the said Rebe Josée, son of Aviel, will be forever deprived of the title of Moreïne. Therefore, when he will arrive at the synagogue to pray, we will invite him to approach the Fova after all the others, and whoever calls him must precede—der his name of Habor (boor, ill-born).

Furthermore, it is forbidden for Rebe Josée, son d'Aviel, never to appear before the saint Bet-Dine court.

(1) The act classified in the Book on the Kahal, by Brafmann, under number 132.

JEWISH RUSSIA 207

No. 170.

Punishment for disobedience.

Monday, 22 Elivat 5562.

The members of the Kahal, considering that the Rebe Haim, son of Abraham, having insulted a The president of Kahal has already committed this offense once, for example. for which he was punished by the loss of the title of Moqueen, and a fine of 5 ducats for the benefit of the Kahal's treasury; that the said Rebe Haim, instead to correct himself, had the misfortune again, in approaching the holy table, to insult with a in a serious manner, and this in the presence of some people, several members of the Kahal;

The Kahal decides, unanimously, that the said Rebe Haim, Abraham's son, will be excluded for always of the funeral brotherhood, of which he was part of it until now: that, moreover, it is sentenced to a fine of 10 ducats which he must pay immediately to the Kahal's cashier. — As for his title of Moreïne, of which he has already been deprived in the previous session (1), it is enjoined to notaries of the city not to use this title even in written documents, when they de—will mention the name of Rebe Haim, son of Abraham.

(1) Ibid., under no. 167.

No. 201.

From V elevation to the dignity of member of the Kahal.

Sunday, Ahvai section 5562.

The members of the Kahal decided that the Rebe Isaac, son of Guerson, will be able to take part in the general elections, and furthermore that it will be raised to the dignity of Mi-Chegoï-Fouvim (member of the Kahal and representative of the general meeting), to the condition that he obtains the Gaon's approval (President of the Bet-Dine).

No. 210.

From the election of the Daions (judges).

The day before Thursday, 13 Nizan 5562.

The members of the Kahal and the general assembly- They decided that the elections for the Daions will take place this year before the general elections Easter rallies; that in this election pre-comparative, made by the general meeting, does not Neither the current Gaon nor his son Michel.

No. 219.

On the election of judges for life.

Tuesday, the fourth day of Easter 5552.

The members of the Kahal, in a session

JEWISH RUSSIA 260

extraordinary, decided to collect the ballot secret the votes of all members of the assembly general assembly for the appointment of five judges immovable.

The votes will be collected in the following manner: vante: the Chamoche, equipped with a li.4e of candidates will meet at each candidate's home. member of the general meeting, and this one don- nera secretly revealed the name of the candidate chosen by him. He is forbidden to the Chamoche, under Herem's punishment, delirium, and demonstrating to others members the ballot they will collect from each member.

It is important to dedicate a chapter to the Melameds, Jewish tutors in general and at the Education among the Jews.

The first desire of the parents of a child of male sex is to see it one day Talmudi Hahan (scholar versed in Talmudic science—that). Consequently, every Jew, even the poorer, after waiting with a cer- impatiently awaiting the time when his son will reach at the age of five, he was taken to the Melamed, in the Heder (school), by bringing all the savings collected, penny by cent, since the birth of this beloved son; and throughout his education, which lasts until her wedding day, that is to say up to the age of seventeen, eighteen or nineteen, the father resigns himself to enduring all kinds of deprivations, in order to be able to provide for education of his son. It is therefore not surprising that, as a result of this general provision in the Jewish population in favor of education male children, there is a large quantity tité de Hedsrs en chaque communauté, et that very large sums of money are employees for their upkeep.

JEWISH RUSSIA 271

What is the cause that gives rise to among all Jews in general the idea of seeing ar- river their male descendants to the What is the position of a scholar in Talmudic science?

Jewish authors, even the most civilized, would like to persuade in their works, newspapers, brochures, etc. on the Heders and the Melamedes, that this propensity for education among the Jews stems from the strength of feeling—innate religious sentiment in the people... For we, after having delved into and studied life Jewish in all its phases, we believe that this general tendency has a completely different The reason. Here's why:

The Talmud, whose science serves as a guide to the Jewish people, shared, from the highest age-

272 LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

tiquity, the Israelites into two distinct classes yourselves; the patricians and the plebeians, and determine thus mina the mutual relations of these two classes.

Six points or conditions, says the Talmud, must-wind to be observed towards an Am-Gaaretz (plebeian or commoner):

- 1° No one should serve as a witness for him;
- 2° He is also not worthy of serving as witness to someone;
- 3° An Am-Gaaretz cannot be initiated into au-a mystery;
- 4° It is forbidden to appoint him as guardian;
- 5° He cannot fulfill the function of gar-dien in a charitable society;
6. It is forbidden to set out with an Am-Gaaretz.

In addition to these six points, the Talmud adds that one must not make a publication when a Am-Gaare^zperd money or an object which-conch shell, which means the object or the money lost by him rightfully belongs to the one who finds (1). – Even more salient are

(1) Talmudic tractate. – Pesachim, p. 98

the Jewish nussiE 273

the Talmudic quotations relating to the Am-Gaaretz in these words of Rabbi Eleazar: "He is permitted to stifle an Am-Gaarefzlejour du judgment, when that day would fall on Saturday;" – then he adds: "We can decide" in two parts an Am-Gaaretz, as one ha-

"Ball a fish." – The rabbis said also: "A self-respecting Jew must never-but to take as a wife the daughter of an Am-Gaaretz, for he himself is a reptile, his wife a toad, and as for his daughter, it has been said:
"Cursed will be he who enters into an in-time with an animal, and family ties with Am-Gaaretz are considered to be "Improper relations with animals."

These statements from the Talmud have made consito treat the Jewish plebeian like a slave, and, Unfortunately for him, he kept it until nowadays almost entirely this seal of re-early probation. The present or-work, supported by published acts and documents
by Brafmann, which make known perfect-This Jewish, Talmudic-municipal republic... pale, clearly demonstrates that near the Mo-queen (patrician) who takes part with delirious voice

274 JEWISH RUSSIA

ber- to all decisions in the re-
Let us be where matters of Jewish interest are being debated.
in general, and who has the right to be a voter and eligible, as a member of all the institutions
In higher education, the poor plebeian is deprived of higher privileges.
of all rights, humiliated, persecuted and almost evil-
He said. He's a complete outcast.

If we also take this into consideration a noteworthy question that in Russia, by
For example, the taxes that Jews have to pay are perceived by the Russian authorities according to the distribution prepared and carried out by the Kahal, ins-Jewish institution composed of patricians (mo-(rcinc), we can conclude from this what enormous weight is crushed in this country the poor ple-well... In vain will he seek justice from of the country's civil authority, in vain recri-mera-t ii sa protection, the powerful Kahal pos-at his disposal a quantity of resources which will always agree with him; he has factors with the talisman we spoke of at the chat-clown v and vi, he will provide false witnesses, he has the money in his till to stifle any an unpleasant situation for him, and, thanks to everyone using these illicit means, the local authorities, direct-managed, so to speak, by the Kahal, fill the sad role of Pilate in all the significance-tion attached to this name.

It should be added that, in addition to the tax paid in cash, which can only be paid at a very high price great deprivations suffered by the poor plebeian, this the latter is still intended to pay the tax of ^{san2}, that is to say, recruitment. It is proven that in the presence of this enormous quantity of Heders among the Jewish population, where mil-
Lazy people devote their entire lives to to study the law of the Talmud, one hundred thousand Jews in-over the last forty years, were incorporated into the Russian army; not one did not belong to the patrician class queen, but all, without exception, were part-tie of the Jewish plebeians.

We therefore believe that these are the reasons which most push the Jewish population to seek-expensive in the Heders the means of subtracting children with the ignominy attached to caste of the Am-Gaaretz, that is to say, of all those who are not Moreïne. And it is by the Heder only that a plebeian can, by becoming Tal-Mudi Hahan, erase this unjust stamp that

276 JEWISH RUSSIA

The Talmud was imprinted on every Jewish plebeian. In our opinion, based on the study this in-depth study of the Jewish question, this education-tion, professed by the Melameds in the Heders will have no influence whatsoever on the outcome current state of the Jewish plebeian, and no project, none reform attempt undertaken by the government ments of the different countries, relative to this serious, delicate and important question, hasn't it? will lead to a satisfactory result, because as long as the power of the patrician Jew over the Plebeian Jew, from the Moreïne on the Am-Gaaretz, power that will continue as long as the governments of Christian nations to-will be moved in large and small cities the ag-agglomeration of these masses of lazy im-productive, of which barely one in fifty performs a job that is useful to society, and whose forty-nine others must necessarily seeking ways of existing in the trade, in usury, in the agriculture and in a number of other occupations actions of this kind, so harmful to the inhabitants Christians of the towns and surrounding countryside Nantes, the power of the Jew Moreine (patrician)

JEWISH RUSSIA 277

on the Jew Am-Gaaretz (plebeian) must necessarily weigh wisely and last as long as The latter will not free himself from it by cultivating the land as cultivated by the natives of country, or by engaging in manual labor-true. Through this productive work, which will also useful to Christian society as to the plebeian Jew he himself will gain his independence and will no longer be subject to this tyrannical self-ritual which the Kahal has seized and which it exercises despotically among the Jewish population.

Let's now look, in a few words, at how is education carried out in the Heder and what are the Melamèdes that devoted to teaching.

The Jewish education system is not organized as an institution. No subsidies. tion is not included in the Kahal's budget. To become a tutor, it is not necessary to undergo any examination nor to possess a diploma. Every individual who believes they feel within him the sacred fire can devote its time to to teach. As there are no public funds intended for education, there is no rule-elements that impose a certain system to follow in intelligence. Every Jew can raise his son as he sees fit, provided that he agrees with Melamède regarding the price, number of students and choice of studies, that says it all. Between the large quantity of Heders, and consequently of Melamèdes, who exist in every Jewish community, there is no absolutely no agreement on how to- to teach. Each Melamède follows its own system to him, ii3 taking into account no method, even- she recannua bonne, nor of any program pra- tick, and provided he can manage to do to the detriment of its many competitors, it is satisfied- Done. Melamed's function and title do not are not too enviable, and it is only at the last- the last extreme that a Jew, who could not succeed in other branches of business, clings on to this thankless profession. In this regard, there are A Jewish proverb: "It is never too late to meet death and pro- Melamedes' festivity.

16

278 JEWISH RUSSIA

The Melamèdes school year is divided in two semesters. The first semester com- begins a month after the Passover festival, at the month of Nisan (April) and the second lasts until Rosh Hashanah (New Year), which falls in the month of Fishery (September). The second half of the year has been counting since the Rosch- Hashanah until Passover. A ebacune of These holidays, there is a month of vacation; of this In this way, the semester equates to five months. studies.

the Jewish nussiE 279

During the holiday month, the Melamède is busy looking for new students and his task is to find these students as best he can. among the wealthy class; but in this case the parents demand that the number of students be restricted. After having thus recruited the most of students possible, he starts the class every on days from nine o'clock in the morning to nine o'clock evening meals, except Saturdays and holidays of parties, for five months, teaching at these children, everything he is able to give them learn.

It would be difficult to define in a way certain the difference that exists between the He- dens of the various classes; however, one can to distinguish, with regard to all the studies, four categories:

t° Heder Dardeke-Melamedine, where lesgar-

2S0 JEWISH RUSSIA

lessons only teach reading and writing and where they remain until the age of seven.

2° Heder Houomuche, where One reads of the five Books, with commentaries by Rache, and where Ton must remain for three years.
up to the age of ten.

3° Heder, where the Talmud is studied with Rache's comments; we'll stay there for two years.

4° Heder, where the Talmud is studied with plu-several comments and the code of laws of Talmud.

In this last Heder, the students remain up until their wedding day, and even two or three years later, that is to say, as long as the new husband is supported by the parents of his wife.

The Heders of these four categories are further divided, each into two classes: the first, frequented by the sons of the Moreïne (patricians) and the second where there are only the children of the plebeians. As, in the synagogue-gogue, a plebeian wouldn't dare take his place at on the side of a patrician, the son of that one does not ha-would not, in a Heder, sit on

JEWISH RUSSIA 281

the same bench as his son. A pareille insults the dignity of Moreïne would be considered by this aristocratic caste as very humiliating for her; also such a forgetting the distinction of castes is not seen that very rarely among the Jewish population.

However, one should not believe that the elestudents who attend a category of schools remain required at all times in the same He-

They usually change every week.
and will study in another Heder of the same category, but where another teaches Melamède. In this way a Jewish child who begins his studies at five years old, travels, before finishing his education, at least twenty Heders, where twenty different Melameds were placed there.
They teach what they themselves know. It remains namely whether this continuous change is favorable suitable for the development of intelligence...

The price that Melameds receive for each student varies, according to the fortunes of the parents, from 10 francs up to 500 francs per semester. The number of students in both The first categories are generally 15 at 20; in the other two, it never exceeds-

16.

282 JEWISH RUSSIA

but 8 to 10. As has already been said more high up, one would search in vain among the Melameds any method in the mathey do not teach; also, generally, they do not retain only for one semester their students, who having learned everything that Melamède himself knows, they will look for a new instruction in another Heder di-erected by a more learned Melamède.

It is rare for a Melamed to be sa-before ever becoming a rabbi, because if he possesses
He was sufficiently knowledgeable for that, he did not fulfill-would not be the first arduous profession to which he
He dedicated himself.

The student examination takes place every Saturday.
The father, after the daily hassles of life...
Sunday during the whole week, rests the Sabbath day, and, taking advantage of this rest, wants to give himself the satisfaction of seeing for himself
if his son is strong enough in Talmudic science dic, or at least to attend, if he is not not versed in this science, at an exam that a more learned neighbor, invited by him, will do to be endured by the child. The success of the students is everything naturally the best recommendation-

tions for the Melamède. As for the premises of the No one in Heders is worried about it, nor are the parents, neither the Melamèdes, nor the children. On is not demanding on this point; these establishments—public education initiatives are located generally placed in the narrowest, the dirtiest rooms in the most badly—own, and, provided that these are found near the students' residence, all the The world is satisfied.

Calculation and calligraphy are not included in the curriculum. professors from these two branches go in private homes or in the Heders, and are paid according to the number of hours—res that they spend teaching. It also happens sometimes in the Heders frequented by the sons of Moreïne (patricians), we hire foreign language teachers, German teachers, of French, English, Italian, to give there—to learn lessons. The Melameds of these Heders are very fond of such occasions, because they They always take the opportunity to learn a little something from it. themselves.

Orphans or children of the poor

284 JEWISH RUSSIA

attend a public school located in community fees. This establishment It bears the name Talmudor, and the number of The number of students there is unlimited. The Melamède that is there—seigne receives his remuneration from the company of charity. The students who graduate from it are, in general, aspiring Melameds. are these poor young Jews who, not having to pay their rent, they are looking for refuge for the night in the Eschabots, Talmudors, Clauzers, etc., that is to say, in the buildings located in the courtyard of the main synagogue pale, and which was discussed above. A Another Jewish proverb says that these aspiring sa—"consume the days to feed themselves" laugh"; this means that every day they are They were guests and fed by another Jewish family.

Their existence is always difficult and precarious. Generally they only marry the daughters of the plebeians, who are flattered to possess in their family, a near-scholar. He arrives however, but rarely, that one of these ele-youths who have left free school and are wandering for a time in the Eschabots, Talmuds, etc., becomes He (true scholar) in Talmudic science), and then, obtaining the title of Moreïne, he marries the daughter ri-well endowed with a patrician; he manages a kid sometimes to be a rabbi; it's the ba-the tone of a marshal, like an aspiring Melamède.

JEWISH RUSSIA 285

XXIII

We draw the attention of our readers on Yom-Kipur (day of remission of sins) (chés) and on the Gatorat-Ncdovime ceremony (absolution).

In chapter xm we talked about the day-born in Rosh Hashanah, a new year at the Jews, in which the period begins ten days of national penitence Yom-Yom Kippur, which is the last and most important This is the tenth day of this period. day of the month of Fishery, dedicated to remission-sion of sins.

In the days of the glory of the temple of Jerusalem salem, the doors of the Sancta Sanctorn, fer-opened throughout the entire year. during this solemn day before the great-priest, who upon his return brought to the people, In the waiting and the worry, the forgiveness of Jehovah. It was confession day and of mortification, but at the same time the moment of the highest spiritual joy-tutelary among the Jewish people.

JEWISH RUSSIA 287

Today, like the day of Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur is an epoch—
What desolation, what groaning, and what tears. On this day, Jehovah confirms the fate befalling each Jew. If the one whose destiny was to suffer the following year could not, during the period of ten days of penance, to win over the good thanks of Jehovah, and that on the day of Yom Ki—
Once he has arrived, he will no longer be able to summon.
his mercy and will have to suffer his cruel fate destined. For these reasons, the day of Yom-Ki—for is a day of fear and great mortification among the Jews.

The strictest continence begins two hours before sunset the day before, and lasts until the evening of Yom Kippur.
For twenty-six hours, the entire population
Jewish (except for children under twelve)

288 JEWISH RUSSIA

years old) neither eats nor drinks, not even a drop of water, using all that time to pray and to cry.

To the prayers usually recited on the days of celebration, — prayers which are filled with memories patriotic symbols recalling the past glory of The people of Israel, their persecutions, their next greatness, and his imminent return to Jerusalem
— we also add the day of Yom Kippur certain formulas of confession. These for—mules are curious in this respect that the classification of sins, each of which is present on this day—where one must confess, is done in alphabetical order—Baetic. An original way that obscures even the meaning of sins, and of which someone said:
"The authors of these formulas probably had"
blemment in order to lighten the memory than the conscience of the sinner.

The most important prayer by which com—
The Yom-Kipur ceremony begins, is Kol—Nidre. When the previous evening the entire popu—Jewish population of both sexes, including the children children over twelve years old, in clothes of the feast, is gathered at the synagogue; when one has lit a large number of candles and that the cantor with the choir, having taken his place ordinary, is ready to sing the hymns, the one who, on that day, presides over the ceremony, discovers with a shared sense of reverence all the people present take the Kivot (ark) and remove the To?'a. Everyone sings and repeats in threes once the prayer of Kol-Nidre, whose meaning this-while does not fit with the profound collection element with which it is chanted. L<> The meaning of this prayer is a complete negation. tion, a withdrawal of all vows, promasses, oaths, commitments, that each was able to do during the past year and that he has not not filled, having the conviction that after having recited the Kol-Nidre prayer three times, he will be permitted not to hold during the year which vows, oaths, commitments will begin that he contracted during the year that just came to finish. In the face of this lack of speech, please- publicly confessed and transformed into prayer, the good faith, which is the basis of society, must necessarily be severely affected. This The fact is so revolting that it has even been... damned by some learned interpreters of the Talmud; but the old customs, so convenient

JEWISH RUSSIA 289

n

290 JEWISH RUSSIA

for those with less strict consciences towards themselves The same ones, however, were preserved. The ceremony Monasticism and the Kol-Nidre prayer occupy a an important place among the ceremonies of the Jewish religion.

Besides Kol Nidre, the Jews also have the Gatoval-Nédovme and Messirat-Madna, ceremonies that leave each Jew the ability to swear a false oath and serve as a false witness in favor of another Jew who is in trial with a Christian; thus the remorse of conscience, so powerful in the Christian and which sometimes leads him to spontaneous confession of his The fault has no effect on the Jew, who finds the calmness of consciousness... in the practice of this ceremony.

At nightfall, when the prayer touches at its end, and as a conclusion to the festival, the horn the bell rings and the entire audience shouts: Lechana, Gabaa Birou-Chelaim (next year, at Jerusalem!)

The Kahal took care that, on that day, the prayers grow weary together at the synagogue, and not in private homes, as happens Sometimes. This is how we achieve this dual goal, of perpetuate an important religious ceremony and to add to the Kahal's income.

JEWISH RUSSIA 291

Brafmann quotes, in his Book on the Kfihal, several documents that have some relation to what has been said in this chapter. The one classified under number 30 is located already mentioned in chapter xm.

XXIV

Let's move on to the Caporet ceremony, cere—a ritual of purification using an offering.

The Caporet ceremony is a customary practice. Completely pagan. Here's what it consists of: On the morning before Yom Kippur, The Jew* grabs a live rooster by its legs, and, raising it above his head, he makes three circle the room several times while reciting the prayer: "This rooster is going to be put to death, but I will live—" "Truly, eternally happy." After which, he He grabs the rooster by the head and throws it away. Jewish woman performs the same ceremony with the hen.

This walk around the room with the rooster and the hen, the Jew and the woman Jewish women are convinced they have gotten rid of

JEWISH RUSSIA 293

fed up with all their sins, by passing them on so much to these poultry, which are then killed and eaten probably with great relish tit, after the famous twenty-six-hour fast accomplished on the occasion of Yom-Kippour.

XXV

There is also the Mikvah, the ceremony of purification.
objectification of women.

The Mikva is a large, round basin filled of water, in which Jewish women must, for their postpartum recovery, as well as every month, to wash themselves to purify their bodies.

In ancient times, when the Jews regulated their life according to the laws of Moses and not according to those of the Talmud, the Jewish woman, for her during the postpartum period, she brought an offering to the great priest, and that same evening she purified himself by a few ablutions, without having betaking care to immerse oneself in the clear water of a stream bucket (1). But since the Jews have

(I) The Book of Moses, vol. III, ch. i, pp. 1-8, and ch. xix, pp. 19-33.

JEWISH RUSSIA 295

guided by the laws of the Talmud, the inter-Those close to these laws surrounded the ceremony of the purification of the woman from a quantity of meticulous inventions (which are found in detail) in the fourth book of Orah-Haim, of the para-(grapke 183 to paragraph 203). These hassles-sieres inventions, whose purpose was conservation elevation of influence on the intimate lives of Jews, through control exercised in the acts more secrets of intimate life, had a result-a state completely contrary to that which one is proposed, that is to say, currently the woman Jewish, by performing the ceremony of the purification, do not wash his body and do not It doesn't make it any cleaner than it was before, but She soils him even more, and here is what kind of manner:

The Mikva is a basin of capacity of approximately one cubic meter. According to the law of Talmud, this basin should be filled with water lively, but as, especially during the winter, it would be too painful to immerse oneself in the water cold, the basin is built in such a way as to n'v to make it so that only a very small part of this fresh water required by the regulations, ei to using a tinplate tube placed inside,

296 JEWISH RUSSIA

The pool is being heated.

The Mikvah is still located underground in a more or less spacious cellar, and the ceremony took place in semi-darkness, the cellar being lit only by one or two candles. The Jewish woman who arrives there for ablutions, one begins by undressing. She then combs her hair and detangles it. She delivers... following her hands and feet to the Negel-Schneidecke, the guard placed there expressly for to cut nails, and, in addition, to pull the scabs of the wounds on the bodies of those who have the misfortune of having them, and this so that he does not find anything on the body that could prevent dear the water of the Mikva to bathe him entirely-ly, otherwise the ceremony would be pointless. After this operation, the woman goes downstairs to the Mikva, and, after having done a short prayer, she immerses herself in it so that this that not a single hair of hers appeared on the surface; she must wait in this position at the moment when Tukek (the supervisor who remains) on the edge of the pool), pronounces the word Kaddish. One, two, three similar dives, and the ceremony is three-quarters complete folds, but there's still a fourth one left, and This one is the most difficult of all. The woman who has dived three times still needs to rinse off mouth with the water from the Mikvah, and that is not whereas she can go back up the stairs and give way to another. Two women do not They can perform the ceremony together.

JEWISH RUSSIA 297

Each one needs to do it separately.

In a single evening, about a hundred women thus delve into the Mikva, and, according to the Kahal regulations, ins-driven by a sordid economy, the water of the lower-sin is only changed once a month, and what-sometimes even more rarely. Thus, in this putrid water filled with miasma, hundreds Ten women must perform the ceremony the ritual of purification, and each of them is forced to rinse her mouth with this dirt. It's easy to understand that, in Under these conditions, the Mikva is a torment for the Jewish woman; this ceremony is a cause of diseases of all kinds, which perpetuate themselves
thus among this people doomed to filth.

Imagine hundreds of women

17.

298 JEWISH RUSSIA

naked, disheveled, and often bloodied as a result of overzealousness on the part of the Negel-Schneidecke, collected in a sou-ground where the flame of two or three flickers bad tallow candles, crowding at-around a pool while waiting their turn to go in tre (basin from which miasmas escape to (to make one nauseous), looking in horror that of their companions who has just accompanied to complete the mournful ceremony, and who, after having rinsed his mouth with this foul-smelling water, vomited ascending the degrees, and yields with ease sow the seeds for another with the same fate wait.

In the midst of all these women, Tokerke,
the horrible shrew who never delivers her patients that when he pleases to pronounce the word Kochère, and who, at his whim, can shorten or prolong the torture; this fantastic painting and horrible, like a scene from a story
Dante speaks divinely in his descent into hell.
would be worthy of the pen of a great poet and from the brush of an illustrious painter.

Speaking of this wild ceremony, bar-bare and worthy of pagan times, we are taken of indignation and one wonders if it is possible that such a ceremony could be required as a religious act. Is it possible that such a disgusting act should be carried out in the midst of the civilization of the second half of the 19th century?... Poor victims of fanaticism maintained and supported by the leaders of Judaism! Poor Jewish women! It is not It's astonishing that after the torture they put you through to suffer in the name of religion, your youth fades so quickly, that at barely twenty-five you You looked like you had fifty! He is not It's surprising that you have so little taste for cleanliness, since in the name of religion one prescribes you to get dirty every month in putrid water.

Every Jewish woman who comes every month to perform this revolting, imposed ceremony by religious fanaticism, that is to say the act of the purification, is obliged to pay a tax but a bid to an entrepreneur to whom Kahal sells, for the benefit of his fund, the right to collect it, and who, besides the income that this barbaric ceremony brings him in, still exercising strict control trôle sur la viela plus secrète des ménages juifs.

300 JEWISH RUSSIA

Brafmann quotes, in his Book on the Kahal, several orders that relate to this ceremony. Two of these orders, classified under numbers 133 and 149, have already been cited in the previous chapters.

XXVI

Finally, the Kiddesh and the Gabdalah (prayers on the cup).

The prayer over the cup is an ancient ceremony. Jewish community. It is, so to speak, the complement to the other prayers recited at the synagogue or at home. Recited the day before the On Saturdays and holidays, it is called of Kidesch; recited on Saturday evening after the Sabbath and at the end of each festival day, she is called the Gabdala (1); with the cup, on which the cantor recites aloud a prayer, we give a few drops of the wine that she contains for the young children present at the synagogue. At home, every head of household

(1) Gabdala means the difference that exists between a holiday and ordinary weekdays.

302 JEWISH RUSSIA

recites a similar prayer, and all those seated—so many, at the Friday supper which begins the Sabbath, and to the one on Saturday who concludes it, must—wind tasting the wine contained in the cup on which prayer was said. When there is no No wine, we replace it, for the Kidesch. with bread, and for Gabdala with water—Life or beer. Of course, wine never misses the ceremony of the synagogue, because every rich Jew makes himself a It is a great honor to supply them. It is even who pay Kahal the right to be able to offer the wine needed for this ceremony.

The Kiddesh prayer gives thanks to Jehovah... "because he elected for his people the people of Israel are the favorites above all others "Peoples of the earth"... The Prayer of Gabdala in turn gives thanks to Jehovah "for having separated on holidays and ordinary days, the light from darkness, and the people of Israel from the others peoples.

XXVI i

After all that has been said about intimate life and secret of the Jews, in the chapters which Previously, it was easy to explain the persecutions which, in all countries and in all eras, were directed against this people incorrigible, proud and fanatical.

The enjoyment of civil rights that are granted due to the Jewish population in certain countries for the nRturRliser, was, according to the expression of Napoleon I, an illusion, something temporary.

And that is why, earlier, we granted, and sometimes we have taken back this enjoyment to the communities of this people who, stubbornly resistant to common law, has persevered and continues to persevere in living isolated.

304 JEWISH RUSSIA

It is clear that the cause of this perseverance—France is in Judaism, that is to say in the national institutions prescribed by the Talmud and protected by the Kahal and the Bet-Dine. As long as the au—Despite the official authority of the Jew, there will always be a kingdom separate from Israel, with its Kahal, its Bet-Dine, its factors, its right of Hazaka and Meropiié, flanked by all these monst—tricks about which we have maintained the reading author.

Countries inhabited by a large majority of Christians, but where there is a population of Jewish culture, even as a minority, will always be considered by the latter, said Joseph Kuung, like "a free lake where every Jew can fish, that is to say, where every Jew, who buys Kahal Je right of Hazaka and Meropiié, can exploit and plunder a Christian Here.

In conclusion, we therefore reiterate that, as long as the governments of Christian nations will tolerate these large Jewish settlements Lazy people who do not work at any trade useful, and therefore unproductive, must—wind seeks the means of their existence in fraud, usury, speculation, mercantilism, the sale of brandy, etc., etc.,

JEWISH RUSSIA 305

agglomerations that facilitate and support the existence of the Kahal and the Bet-Dine, that is to say of the authority of the Jew over the Jew... that as long as the education of Jewish children will not take place in common with that of Christian children and will be carried out separately in the Heders and the rabbinical schools, at least as long as we don't force by the Jews to become farmers, or-vriers, etc., that is to say, to soak in their sweats the earth that nourishes them, all the measure that these governments will take for solving the difficult Jewish question will not be than a sterile desicleriw n pium!

To exempt the Jew from the right and duty of national political, administrative, educational caste nun and religious figure, like submitting him to the common public life by freeing it from usurping authorities that do not subsist and do not are perpetuated in him only by virtue of the fanaticism of a religion, hence the true morality social is excluded, replacing the tolerance of authorities, companies that it operates in para-

306 JEWISH RUSSIA

site, by the application administration rules-
The solution lies in addressing the needs of all citizens.

In short, communal living, shared responsibilities municipalities, common education, administration common with Christian societies, and in Exchange based on common law and equality.

XXVIII (1

We think we've said enough about the Kahal prescriptions, the oddities of the law customary and particular aspects of Jewish ritual. Let no one ask us how these parts-peculiarities and these oddities can constitute a danger. The question would be far too unintelligent-people; for a respected symbolism is a solemn acknowledgment of strength.

There was a time when Slavic lightness, instead

(1) The author of this work has left a series of studies which were to follow. We owe it to her dear mother-

It is my aim to gather here the ideas scattered throughout the writings. posthumous works that form an integral part of his very important study by itself. A gap of a few years separates what will follow from what preceded it, and the ideas of the other the author had to be somewhat modified, but the pre-dominant, that of the supreme danger of Judaism, of-dies and manifests itself with even more energy.

308 JEWISH RUSSIA

to draw fruitful insights from the study of the Jewish world teachings, found ample material there to mockery. That time is past and it seems suspecting that the last one to laugh will be neither a Neither Russian nor Polish.

Behind these oddities of the organization of Jewish world, the Semitic genius conceals the The grandeur of his designs. And all of this is very serious, very severe, and carries within itself inexorable consequences.

We need to repeat ourselves. We must, in order to to shake off the slumber of Christian peoples, who deny the danger in order to avoid having to Look straight ahead!

Let's talk again about Kahal. The spirit that gives life all the administrative and judicial apparatus of Kahal is an exclusive, jealous, and intolerant spirit. rant. A hybrid institution, concerned with purity of worship, it is at the same time an ardent pro-Securing the temporal interests of the race. Also Won't this institution disappear if early; and, seemingly disappearing, she re-would build by the force of gravity of all the affinities of the Jewish race towards an authority who is the soul and conscience of this world

JEWISH RUSSIA 309

Part. The predominance of the Kahal's authority that of the Rabbinate is at its very core of the Jewish religion, which grants such a wide contributes to the interpretation and takes into account the necessities of the present time. The Jew does not recognize-A regime is not born that issues decrees and which could go against the administrative system treatment, recognized as useful. It is up to the religion of to yield, or to compromise. This flexibility so readily- The fashion of religious dogma has led to some thinkers to find, between Judaism and the Jesuitism, a striking similarity.

The ideal of the afterlife, which exalts Christianity yours and the Muslim, is barely faded in Jewish teachings and passes almost imperceived through embarrassed explanations sacred books. From this point of view, religion- The Jewish community is not one. The Dream of Jacob and his Ladder summarize all the aspirations Israel's plans, which aim only at domination terrestrial. An idea of detachment from worldly goods could not even be understood by the Jew. This absence of the spiritual Is it a force? Certainly, when, in the clash of interests, one of the combatants was incapable of backing down in the face of any consideration higher order deformation and respects everything at plus the correction of processes.

310 LA. JEWISH RUSSIA

What should we then think of the proposed reforms? measures taken by governments, tending towards the transformation of the Jew? Governments are obsessed- They insist on demonstrating their powerlessness. The Jews, being more astute, pretend to be moved by it. and readily lament their fate. Childishness On one hand, hypocrisy on the other, this goes on for a little, then the commotion subsides and everything goes back in the order that should not have been disturbed. Brutal persecutions must be condemned. damned. Besides, like all the persecutions, they only exasperate and strengthen the victims.

Russia, generally very tolerant of with regard to its oriental races, seeks, since almost a century, transforming its subjects Jews as good Russian citizens, by filling with privileges and exemptions for those who pretend to abandon the ways of Judaism. What has not- Haven't we been tasked with transforming customs and Jewish customs! Nothing could be less successful than these attempts. The Jewish agricultural colonies, in southern Russia, they had a great success Stop laughing. Since then, certain necessities of a laborious liquidation, between owners

 The indebted Jews and their Jewish creditors brought
 The latter to devote themselves to agriculture. He A singular phenomenon resulted: it is not not the Jew who was transformed by agriculture, but it is agriculture that has become misunderstood unborn. It was perfectly suited. The discordance between the slowness of agricultural operations and the feverish impatiences, characteristic of the character-Jewish territory, necessarily produced a monstrosity. Agriculture, in the hands Jews, could do no other than bend to their commercial genius and take the the feel of a game with rapid evolutions. Don't Unable to accelerate the pace, agriculture, under close pressure, had to supply materials discountable and negotiable at will. Thus, land leases and sales purchases standing crops, farm markets and terminable or exchangeable markets, and above the deforestation of the country, through negotiated logging which can be considered as annuity securities, and finally-the sale of spirits, that was certainly something, and that something formed a menu that promised much. Appetites Jews had some food, agriculture did things right from the start. This Jewish idyll, singularly disguised, will last-

 Is she? That's doubtful.

We wonder what he was doing, what he is doing even today, the true, the legitimate pro-landowner, the naive Slav, possessor of the the largest domain that Providence has never detached to a race. Oh, the poor thing!
 great founder of this poor great estate was stunned at first, then trained, and finally crushed through the gears of this Jewish tactic, to which he continues to understand nothing about; he
 He is lost in thought. The man is stunned.
 easy, but, make no mistake, its Reflections can become fierce.

Let's continue. The industry would not have perished. clitoris in the hands of the Jews, but their activity-industrial activity was severely restricted; because they They reflected and concluded that they should abstain. Here's why.

All the productions of the industry going
As for the markets, it was enough for the Jews to ensure-feels the monopoly on purchase transactions and sale and previously invest the industrialist in the need to ask them for the funds bearing, so that it might be clearly demonstrated that it was best to leave it at that. Surprising discovery, indeed. Given this situation-tion, it would be ridiculous, the Jew told himself, to pro-to produce anything. Then, seizing a recently discovered and dedicated phrases to the exploiters, he had to add, that ultimately, He "produced the movement and the circulation-tion". That being said, the Jew, proud to see himself "pro-" "driver of movement and circulation" was able to strip the "producer" guy in the name of this theory that was whispered in his ear the complacent economists.

314 THE JEWISH HUSMA

It is certain that in Russia, as in Australia cheating and in Romania, Y industrial is subservient to the capitalist and intermediary Jew, who prelevies, on what is not owed to him, a tribute gulier, through his intervention in one of these roles. It's simple, but always effective. The Jewish capitalist allows industrialists to believe factory owners who work For him: as for him, he governs, - of a in a somewhat subdued, yet commanding manner, - the commercial and financial side of the business; He possesses the soul, and he abandons the body in the strong hands of the pseudo-owner.

Similarly, a landowner in the southern and western provinces of Russia, as well as in Poland, is not (without knowing it)

(moreover) than a simple farmer of the Jewish pr-author; for the greater part of the income goes to the Jew,

JEWISH RUSSIA 315

and the rightful owner of the land is simply-
They were provided with lodging and food. It's important to understand that... the thick stupidity of this rough Slavic worker is for many in its ruin and in its vassalage-that he himself forges his chains, that he-even stupidly indulges in insinuating tend-Jewish tator. My God, yes! He's stupid, and all those of his caste who do not know how to unite for the defense; but... is it necessary that he perish for that?

Because, you see the crux of the matter: without the intervention of the intelligent Semite, the poor man
The simple-minded Slav would have avoided the dangerous game of the madenials of funds advanced or loaned, it was contained within the simplicity of the mechanism centuries of his honorable work. The workings
The complicated aspects of the Jewish game led to their loss!

And, finally, the unfortunate aborigine is now nothing more than a defeated man, retreating before the Invading colonists, defeated by force of arms which he too imprudently wanted to use-
ment.

Here the concepts become confused and the definitions-tions clash. Written legality is complicit in a shadowy scheme, although

316 JEWISH RUSSIA

Correct; the perceived legality protests. The pact sacred land with the Aboriginal people, belonging mutual, the mysterious conformities that unite-all this, though, suggests races are linked to territories.
primordial and pre-existing, would therefore not be that a matter for negotiation falling under The application of a code? That's not it! What-something unspoken, but very powerful in
At the same time, protests are taking place everywhere against the misalliance of the Semite seeking to contract a union with the earth he treads, but which he does not Don't cherish it!

It is strange that the Jews, so intelligent and if keen observers persist in seizing land and wanting to become owners land, in defiance of the violation of a principlecipe which is stronger than all the legislations.

The cities and towns belong to them. They are there reign and govern, for such is the good pleasure-Lord of Kahal. The arrangement that ensures the the functioning of Jewish power is ad-marvelous. Under the influence of a warm atmosphere-sphere of benevolence and solidarity
In tuelles, the Jews knew how to organize a game

JEWISH RUSSIA 317

of constant ratios that replace before-terribly everything that the public authorities created for the use of the most civilized circles advertised. – Advertising, which so greatly facilitates the af-to do, – this costly and yet suspicious, – the Jews replaced it with the spoken advertising, through incessant communication cations from man to man, from commune to commune, from Kahal to Kahal. Our conversations banal actions, our mania for politics, our Even in spirit, they make us waste precious time.
heavens, which the Jew uses in his conversions from Jew to Jew, to establish his program of action and check its game. In the even small provincial towns, the Jews eventually adopt a meeting place, a street, a public garden, the area around a cafe, to communicate the news to each other new, establish agreements or stipulate the method sharing. This is certainly a stock exchange that exists.
and works, without it having been necessary to to create it officially. Whereas, in our Distrustful companies, business is the subject an avalanche of paperwork and an inter-a pathetic series of cautious formalities, the 8.

318 JEWISH RUSSIA

Jews from small towns unknowingly form corporations, administer them and They liquidate them, without a single stamp having been affixed to a single piece of paper. The Kahal resolves the difficulties, should they arise. Our justices of the peace, our courts, which we occupy with our pro-these, only intervene in very exceptional circumstances-lying in the quarrels between Jews.

XXX

It is still necessary, in order to penetrate the secret of Jewish power, to draw attention to the unique aspects of their division of labor.

And first of all, we can say that the work is not divided point, at least it is not specialized,
It does not dull the individual's senses.

Even the priesthood is not a specialty.
Every Jew is a merchant, first and foremost; an industrialist or farmer, if necessary; broker, intermediary-Diary or negotiator, always.

In this latter respect, he has his major [supporters] everywhere.
and his small connections; he is the unavoidable godfather of all matters; disdaining none of them;
knowing, perfectly, by virtue of his A- instinct Rabe (inventor of numbers!), that between the little
And the great, the distance is only a concept conventional.

320 JEWISH RUSSIA

The Jews, contrary to popular opinion, have...
Pandue, very sensitive epidermis; they are
They are meticulous, and they are proud of it.

Their vanity, or their pride, consists in to maintain at the level already reached, hence their cold and clear gaze sees and directs the footsteps
They are the formation of the races occupied in serving them. They are maintain at this height by infiltrating in the currents of human activity through the taking possession of very modest roles in Appearance... How deep this system is, clans
Its simplicity! Broker, intermediary, lender-Name, funder: actual situation, or something substituted or fictitious, - but always with a powerful plate. This function-the movement overflows the goal to which it seemed to be destined, and the metamorphoses appear very quickly; the intermediary is replaced suddenly to the founder; the intruder, to the owner-to be silent; the prompter, to the actor; the editor, to the author author.

And that's understandable. Jews are beautiful.
players. No pettiness in what they con-receive and in what they accomplish. The the flexibility of their designs is not limited

JEWISH RUSSIA 321

overwhelmed by numbers. Where a Christian gasps and breathes, the Jew meditates well a little on everything.
edge; then there he is at work. We are small, we Christians, in our en-petty, selfish behavior. They have nothing not afraid to give their ideal a broad scope imposing. "The figures, the millions, the "billions, we know that!" (they say and "What do the Jews think?"). Question of a zero to Add to the right! Aren't we "Not associated? We'll see about increasing the dividend"
"Sister, if it's a bit heavy. That's all!"

How can we be surprised, then, that the Jews, Armed with this argument, they seized railways, the press, inventors tions, of movable and immovable property,
Literature, and even art?...

And to think that this is in conditions of ina similar inferiority to that of the working world between in the period of the "struggle for existencetence!... »

We will certainly not bargain.
our praise for the virtues and qualities of the emi-Jewish interests? We only add to that the wish that they have less of it, or that we have less of it

322 JEWISH RUSSIA

Let us have more. This will equalize, from less, the part.

When, defeated on all fronts, we
We will see that we too need a Kahal, Well then! We'll have it! As for reforming the Jew, that's out of the question; therefore, we must re-to educate the Christian!

It would be better, after all, to revise the for-Jewish tunes, declare all Christian hives yours bankrupt, and invite the hornets to
To compose. And that, before long.

Jewish books speak of a very beautiful ce-closing ceremony, accounting, in large liquid-donation, which, among this also religious people (?) that good accountant, used to accompany the Jubilee, the Jewish Fiftieth Anniversary (Shenat Hai-jobel.) Then the town criers proclaimed, at his of trumpets, to the delirious crowd, the handing over of everything that was owed to the rich, the return to debtors of the lands that the creditors det-were given as pledges, the emancipation of slaves, etc., etc.

But it was truly beautiful, stunningly beautiful.

LA. JEWISH RUSSIA 323

necessary; this provided a remedy for the violeni is disruptions of equilibrium. Today, a false shame only prevents Christians to ask the Jews for the restoration of this pious custom. – By the way, was it really piety?...

Nevertheless, this custom is still practiced today.
even today the only possible liquidation method Possible. The world would be reborn. Then, we would start again!

Otherwise, we Slavs, we will see a Jewish Tsarism to emerge, alongside Tsarism a policy we already enjoy. And if there is Conflict between the two powers?... We're getting there Thus, to the point of absurdity. Clear proof that This cannot last. The lowering of ca-characters, and to the humiliations inflicted upon us money, this debasement could no longer be but to continue without causing an explosion
"Anything at all... That's enough!"

Henri Heine describes spiritually, in his Romancero, the dispute of the Augustinians and Jewish Rabbis at the court of Peter the Cruel.
The Rabbis seek to seduce the Monks through the description of the immense fish "the

324 JEWISH RUSSIA

Leviathan," whose flesh is succulent and that the Eternal Father will bake for the great a meal that will celebrate his triumph chosen people. In fact, there will only be guests Jews. Part of Leviathan will be ac-
One will be served with garlic.
in a fish stew.

Thus the large and indolent Leviathan will be finally devoured with gusto by these wriggling slow-moving, small freshwater carp. Like That's right!

This immense fish, this indolent Leviathan-
Then, wouldn't that be you, naive Christian? You Above all, a very naive Slav?

What sauce do you want to be eaten with?

What does that mean?... You reply that "you "Doesn't want to be eaten at all"?

But, you wretch! What are you thinking?

YOU'RE GETTING OFF-TOPIC!

END

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword

I. - The Jewish Question. - Occult Government

Jews. - The Kahal and the Bet-Dine. - The Book on the Kahal, by Braf i;ann. - The Discourse of a Chief Rabbi. - Goal pursued by the people Jew in every country. - The Golden Calf, always-end. - The promised omnipotence of Gold to the sons of Abraham. – It is coming to pass and We are approaching the long-awaited result. – Table of the financial situation in Europe. – The Jews are everywhere the masters. – 11 if he lies for them to complete the work of domination

In everything and everywhere. – To whomever wants the end, all
The means are good. – 11 is necessary to enr'ai.Ier. .. between Jews. – Social issues and the false democratic zeal, to act on the masses and lift them at the right time. – The revolutions, clandestinely provoked and fo-Mentioned by them, the Jews II >is of the Earth.

II. – Toussenel it The Jews, Kings of the Era.
– They are God's people!... Come on now!...

19

326 TABLE OF CONTENTS

– Bunch of jokers, tricksters, and...
grugrurs. – Tacitus, Bossuet, Voltaire, Fouricr, unanaiâs on this subject. – Read the Jews, refiners
In commercial fraud, that's where they excel.

Prussia and Russia know something about that thing. – Napoleon I had sensed it well, from the 1835; and yet!... – Traffic and customs, mis-exclusive third of the Jews. – They do not employ their ten fingers only to handle and squeeze money.

– Monopolists and hoarders, parasites and True vultures, such are the undegenerate sons

Pharisees and scribes of Israel 20

III. – The Jews as painted by one of them. – Their Mysteries unveiled. – More than a thousand orders finances of the Kalial and the Bet-Dine. – The old man Talmud discarded, it replaced, for the new needs, through an arbitrary doctrine and despotic. – Everything to dominate, by force and was not. – Demonstration by facts and conclusive documents. – What happened in Russia, Poland, Syria, Romania,
Even in France. – Overly motivated protest Romanians and residents of Vilna against the invasions of the Jews. – In vain has it been wanted to abolish the Kahal and the Bet-Dine 27

IV. – Do: umenls serving as evidence in support of all of the above 36

V. – Jewish factors, agents commissioned by the Kahal. – Surveillance agents and agents of corruption. – They are always everywhere, and Nothing escapes them. – Agents of the legal profession.

– Employer salaries. – The relationship to

TABLE OF CONTENTS 327

Kahal. – Jews and Goyim. – Jews and Jews. – Jews and Kahal. – Kahal and Goyim. – The Gifts and money: weapon of choice, talisman Irresistible. – The play: A word to the Minister.

– How does the Kahal proceed? – The commission-
The investigation by the Emperor of Russia.

How she became paralyzed. – The contribution Jewish, of one million silver rubles. – The ultima ratio du poison. – The tempter repelled.

– The Emperor's delaying tactics. – The director-General Spiranski. Minister Koczubéi.

– The Peretz snake. – Reform Ukase put away and the status quo maintained. – The turn is played: Vivat Mascarillus!... – The poor pay-Without Russians, they will continue to be poisoned by good cash 45

VI. – Documents providing authentic proof tick of everything that preceded 61

VII – The kitchen of the Jewish slaughterhouses. – The meat supposedly pure and impure meat good for Christians. – Kochère and Trcf. – The im-Pot from the box for the Kochère. – The Sbochet, or privileged butcher. – Revolting barbarity and marvelous address. – The eight species of Impure meat (Tref). – Profound science on the third. – It is forbidden to the Jews, by Moses, to eat carrion, but it is permissible for them-set about selling it to the n-Jews. – Rigorous Kahal's surveillance in this regard. – This is before It's all a matter of taxation. – Importance of the company's tax. – We managed to obtain government protection to authorities

328 TABLE OF CONTENTS

Jewish people for the collection of this sect tax.

– Harm thus caused to the populations of countries where Jews live 75

VIII. – Documents extracted from Brafmann's book on the Kahal, giving evidence of what precedes. – What value can emotion have? The signing of a Jew under surveillance by the Kahal...* 94

IX. – Reconciliations of the Jewish brotherhoods with the Kahal. – Influence exerted by these confraternities on The Jews and the Christians. – They make of all the Jews spread among the Christians a cor- invisible and all-powerful corruption. – The con- Talmud Brotherhood: The Learned One. – The Brotherhood de Renias incj. – The Brotherhood of Artisans.

– The brotherhood of Rel'g'on. – The brotherhood of Funeral, and*. – Aulant dj pslils Kahals, blind instruments of the great Kahal. – Acts and supporting documents for the above 102

X – The Jewish ceremony Alla. – Sharing of the Jews in patricians and plebeians. – Obligation to read the five holy books, under penalty of being pierced- Cut down by the Angel of Darkness. – The law of the Torah. – Kohen and Levi; Levi and Zarodi. – THE Segan, or Gaba, and Samosche. – Bénédic- tion of blessings. – The scale of Allas. ■

– Quarrels and scandals among devout, patri- Cians and plebeians 110

XI. – Authority of the Kahal in his district. – It clearly demonstrates the truth of Schiller's rule: The Jews are a state within states. – All the properties included within its jurisdiction for him- a fictional territory, actually belonging to his dominion. – The Kahal is the owner in partibus of the goods supposedly possessed by He has the right to sell non-Jews in parcels. to the Jews. –Every Jew is the liege man of his Kahal. – The Jews only obey superficiallysubject to the laws of the country where they live. – Ma-

TABLE OF CONTENTS 329

 The Chiavellianism of the Kahal. – The law of Hazaca or of Meropiié. – Between Gentile and Jew, it is a a struggle for existence, because the Goim is like insolently delivered by Kahal to a spider, to an octopus, to an invisible vampire. – Acts and documents that put for the first time highlighting this terrible truth. – It is in Russia, Poland, Romania, what funcit especially animates the devouring monster of Kahal.
 – The cunning of the Kahal ju f in Russia him submitted, like a docile auxiliary, the self-civil rite of the Empire for recovery of its religious taxes, which are its source of strength.
 The poor widow Broïda, beaten and paying
 The fine: the Russian authority acts as policeman to Kahal. – He managed to get paid an indirect tax even by the population Christian. – 11 has come to enact taxes recoverable notwithstanding the objection of Civil governor of Minsk. – In short, he has managed to trample everything underfoot and put the Christians themselves in its dependence.
 The terrifying form of the Herem, both ser-Lie and anathema (supreme excommunication).
 – Prayer that follows the publication of the Herem.
 The three categories of the Jewish oath. – Republic

"19.

330 TABLE OF CONTENTS

the Jews' initiation to take the oath. – The ser-
 The matter only matters to them insofar as it is brought before a Jewish court. – Everywhere
 Elsewhere, a false oath matters little. – Amen. 115

XII. – Documents translated from the Book on the Kahal and demonstrating the truth of what has just been

said. 145

XIII. – The holiday of Rosh Hashanah (the New Year)
 born) and the Fekiel-Chofère ceremony (of the Son horn). – The Rosh Hashanah has little reason for being since the fall of the temple of Jesus rusalem, since it was a day of triumph.

– The skillful leaders of Israel have appointed Mussaphe, synagogue service, fu- service darkness, tears, cries, and lamentations.

The thin sound of the horn (hunting horn?)
adds nothing to the painful solemnity of this day-there. – All the exegeses of the learned Kabbalah
They can't do anything about it. – We don't dare reform...

And for good reason. – Document 154

XIV. – Ancillary institutions of the synagogue.
The courtyard and the commons. – The Bet-Haknest or Main synagogue. – The Bet-Gamidrasch or House of prayer and school. – The Bet-Hamerhatz or steam baths. – The Bet-Hakahal or Kahal's chamber. – The Bel-Dine or tribunal.

– The Hek-Dech or refuge for the poor sor-ideas 166

XV. – The Bet-Dine, judicial section of the Kahal.
Jewish jurisdiction established by the Talmud for to shield Jews from the courts of the Goims or non-Jews. – Severe penalties against con-

TABLE OF CONTENTS 331

Trevenanls. – Exceptional authorizations and secret. – Absolute power of the Bel-Dine, consulting with the Kahal. – Fortune of an influential litigant declared by Hefker, that is to say: abandoned to pillage. – Proceedings Duration of the Bet-Dine: citations, indauis, schamos-ches. – The Dates, skirts and experts. – References before Christian courts, as a last resort and punishment. – Blank signatures canceling by advances the judgments to be rendered 171

XVI. – Acts and documents proving what pre-yields 182

XVII. The Eabolat-Kinion or Welder: Sales and Purchases between Jews. – The buyer's shoe offered to the seller. – A piece of the cassock, a mou-
The toe, today, replaces the shoe.
This is the Kabolal-Kinion, operating translation immediate right of ownership of the seller to the buyer. – Even greater is the prestige of a sale pronounced by the Kahal 188

XVIII. – Celebration of Jewish weddings – They begin the eve of the Sabbath with the Kubolat-Shabbat, a serenade of national melodies.
The next day, Alia-Maxtir. – Rain of nuts,

of almonds, figs, etc. on the future. –
 Finally, the grand ceremony. – Placement of the dowry. – Salary of the Chadhan, negotiator of the marriage. – Right of Rahache, for the benefit of the rabbi, cantor, and elder. – Salary musicians. – Tulet and Kitel, dressed in the clothes of the prayer and death. – Badhan, fimprov sa-
 Their prankster is starting to work. – You-

332 TABLE OF CONTENTS

The bride's letter, which is made on a bed of dough overturned. – Arrival of the fiancé, who covers the head of his future wife, the scarf she was wearing sent. – They throw hops and Oats. – Triumphant march towards the Hoopoe (canopy or baldachin). – The bride and groom take their places there.

– Order and march of the procession. – Blessing, Vow and marriage contract. – Prayer of the cup.

– Ring handed over. – Back to music.
 head. – The golden soup. – The wedding feast.
 Precedence and equality. – The art of servitude
 staff to cater to elite guests. – Badhan and the orchestra take turns performing. – The linear cry: Drosche-Geschenke! – The enumeration of ideal c. – – The Kochère dance. – Recon-
 The couple's escort to the bridal chamber. – The Kahal, sovereign master of his subjects in their private lives 192

XIX. – Circumcision. – Precautions against Satan. – The Schir-Garmalot talisman. – Visit and prayers from the acquaintances of the woman in labor.
 Prayer at the synagogue and honor paid to the father.

– Chalemc-Zahor, congratulations and courtesies.

– The Wach-Nacht, the vigil of the eighth day. – Preliminary steps to the operation. – Meeting of hui: participants, ten witnesses, and parents and rented. – The practice of The painful circumcision. – Prayer and hymns the shrill ones who accompany him. – One more elected official by the people of God. – Feast and rejoicing under the Kahal's good pleasure. – Beware of the trefle. 207

XX. – Hierarchy of dignities among the Jews. –

TABLE OF CONTENTS 333

Autonomy of their primitive institutions.
The provincial committees and the Bet Dine replace. – The Talmud increases its empire.

– Talmudo-municipal Republic. – Organized tion of the Jewish communities. – The rabbi and the Parnesses. – Habor elMoreîne. – Degrees of Kahul and the Bel-Dine. – Elections. – The Rabbi

'He is not a priest.' – Napoleon I and the Jews. – The Jewish question in Russia, in 1866.

– Jews are always Jews. – A grave error of Napoleon p>r. – Every Jew is a priest. – All this
What was done to reform the Jews was worthless.
Napoleon I made a huge mistake. – The Jui's sa parent des Spinoso, des Salvator, des Meyerbeer, of Rachel, like the jay of {.lu born of the peacock – Long live the Talmud and the Alliance Israelite ■ ! ... – Jewish schools are a stain of oil. – Errors of the Russian government, who also poked himself in the eye 216

XXI. – Supporting evidence 263

XXII. – The Melamedes, schoolmasters and preceptors-Jewish men. – The Heder or school. – Plebeians and Jewish patricians. – These are condemned to be the subordinate and very humble servants of these. – The pupils of the Melamedes.

– State of the school question among Jews.

– Everything by and for the Talmud. – Eschabots, Tabnudors, Clauzers: school slums 270

XXIII. – Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement sins, and the Gatorat-NedoiHme, ceremony of Absolution. – How to lighten the memory
instead of easing the conscience of the Jewish sinner.

334 TABLE OF CONTENTS

– The famous Kol-Nidre prayer that releases from all the commitments and oaths of the year:
annual jubilee, very convenient and quite scandalous.

– The Gatùval-Nëdovme and the Messirat-Madna, other equally convenient ceremonies, which permit perjury and perjury-involvement in the Jew versus Christian trials.

– And now, to Jerusalem! 286

XXIV. – The Caporet ceremony, purification. –

– The Jew catches a rooster, the Jewish woman a hen; or throws them far away, then they are read; and Eat them with relish... and you are purified... 292

XXV. – The Mihva, special purification for women.

■ – Once a stream of clear water, now a a large basin of dirty water, a sordid vat, where The women will do two or three dives.
sushi from a horrible mouth-rinse operation right there. – All of it under the watchful eye and with the baton of a hideous shrew in charge of this torture Worthy of Dante's Inferno. – You have to see it.
To believe it, but it's true, and... it pays off big time
at Kahal 294

XXVI. – Hidesehel Gubdula, prayers over the cup. – Wine or bread, brandy or beer. – But wine never fails, and it is a great honor to to offer it. – We give thanks to Jehovah for what we

is his chosen people 301

XXVII. – Jews are not naturalized. –
He must be stripped of Talmudic law.
a system for robbing and exploiting Christians.

– We need to put an end to these agglomerations of Jews who do nothing but fraud and usury,

TABLE OF MATERIALS 335

stock trading, 1> rmcintilism, the venge of water-of life, etc. – We must make farmers of them, useful workers, and abolish, eliminate these auusurping authorities who oppress them. – It is necessary to make them citizens and fellow citizens 303

XXVIII. – It's no longer time to laugh. – Who knows who
Who will laugh last? – Instead of denying the danger,
Let's turn around and go back to the other side. – The Kahal is tough and has a hard life. – Rabbinate, Judaism and Jesuitism. – Jacob's Dream and Ladder. – Not of burning persecution, but no illusions, nor

no more consideration either. – That 1 1 R issie seriously advises. – Let her see what the Jews practice agriculture. – The Jewish Idyll can it last and does it not threaten to–
Is a fierce drama about to unfold? (307)

XXIX. – The Jaif in its relations with the included! rie.

– By producing movement and circulation
tion, he strips the poor real producer.–
The Russian landowner is quite simply– ply the farmer of the Jewish praetor. – Slavs and Semites. – The Jewish arrangement; advertising by– the spree; street and cafe markets; the expedition

Business done in minutes, without paperwork... 313

XXX. – Does the Jew specialize? – Is he always that he does not become dulled by the division of labor.

– The successive and rapid incarnations
They quickly become a merchant of opera glasses.
A walking millionaire. – The figures don't
They never stop: you're either a partner or you're not.
No. – Also, what does not belong to them?
Not at this time? – Yet it is a question of

336 TABLE OF CONTENTS

to fight for existence. – We must reform, not the Jew, but the Christian –Why not pro–
Wouldn't this be a revision, a Jubilee, or Jewish fiftieth anniversary? – Beware of Czarism Jew! – Heinrich Heine and his parable of the Lithuanian– than. – 11. Ultimately, it's a question of knowing which sauce the naive Christian and the utterly naive Slavic want– slow to be eaten by the J.if not at all naive and Very cunning! 355

EMILE COLIN PRINTING WORKS, IN SAINT-GERMAIN

Bookbinding
F. Rosenhain

Charlottbg.

'antstr. 56

;:<

French

English

Full text of " The Protestant Peril Renauld "

See other formats

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google Books

<https://books.google.com>

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work that has been preserved for generations on library shelves. It is made available as a precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing internet users to discover the world's hidden treasures.

Because this book is relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and is now in the public domain. "Belonging to the public domain" means that the book in question has never been subject to copyright. Expiration. The conditions required for a book to enter the public domain can vary from country to country. These are all links to the past. They bear witness to the richness of our history, our culture, and our knowledge, too often difficult for the public to access.

The footnotes and other marginal annotations present in the original volume are reproduced in this digital edition. The long journey the book has taken from the publishing house through the library to the internet is a testament to the power of the written word.

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize works in the public domain and make them thus accessible to all. These books are indeed the property of everyone and we are simply making them available. However, this is a costly project. Therefore, and in order to continue disseminating these works, we have taken necessary measures to prevent potential abuses by third-party merchant sites, in particular technical constraints related to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

+ Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We designed the Google Books Search program for personal use. We therefore ask that you use these files for personal purposes only. They may not be used for any commercial purpose.

+ Do not perform automated requests. Do not send any automated requests whatsoever to the Google Books Search program.

research concerning translation software, optical character recognition, or any other field. For large amounts of text, please do not hesitate to contact us. We encourage the use of public domain works and documents belonging to the public domain and we would be happy to be of service.

+ Do not remove the attribution. The Google watermark contained in each file is essential to allow them to access more documents through the Google Books Search Program. Do not delete the watermark. No cases.

+ Stay within the law. Whatever use you intend to make of the files, remember that it is your responsibility. Be sure to respect the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume that it is in the public domain in other countries. The legal duration of copyright for a book varies from country to country. The works whose use is authorized and those whose use is not. Don't assume that simply posting a book on Google Book search means that it can be used in any way anywhere in the world. The sentence to which you are subject. The penalties you would face in the event of copyright infringement could be severe.

About the Google Books Search service

By facilitating searches and access to a growing number of books available in many languages, Google Books Search contributes to promoting cultural diversity through Google Books Search. Indeed, the Google Books Search service allows internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and publishers to promote their work.

online searches of the full text of this work can be found at <http://books.google.com>

+

x DA al +
nt

GO

THE

PROTESTANT PERIL

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

The Expulsion of the Jews, current events (1898). 3.60 francs

ner qe RE

D alXT-AMAND, CHER. – BUSSIÈRE BROTHERS PRINTING HOUSE

ERNEST RENAULD

The Peril
Protestant

Essay on Contemporary History

SIXTEENTH EDITION

Carey Foe me

PARIS |
+ BOOKSTORE. SAINT-JOSEPH

TOLRA, BOOKSELLER-PUBLISHER
28, rue d'Assas and rue de Vaugirard, 76

1899

The policy that con-Europe today
three objects:

40. Dismemberment of certain states in which Catholicism left roots ju-
'aged too deeply; the France, Spain, Portugal
tugal;

20 The preponderance Protestant states
worldwide;

3° The domination of Jews in pro-states
testers.

His Majesty the King of Prussia and His Majesty Britannic... they believed that he was appropriate for con-

| to balance this large

league (the Franco- alliance Austrian), to reconnect | by a new treaty, the commitments which sub- were already between the Berlin and Lon- courses dress... to support the Protestant religion.

He promises and commits, his Her Britannic Majesty, of pay each year a million pounds sterling to act effectively against the common enemy.

He promises and commits, his Prussian Majesty, of to make peace, in order to act with all his strength against France.

THE PROTESTANT PERIL

CHAPTER ONE

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

Is there a Protestant question? – The Coli- Society gny. – Everything for the Protestants. – Those who want Religious war. – We accept it.

Taine wrote about the Jacobin conquest; Drumont, about the con- Jewish quest, we will try to write the pro- conquest testating, under our sole personal responsibility, thus revealing, as in our last work: The expulsion of the Jews, that of the newspapers of which we are Editor-in-Chief or those to whom we adhere- borons. 4

This conquest, which many good minds...

They don't even suspect it, we propose to do it to touch the reader's finger and demonstrate what constitutes a real danger from all points of view.

The aim of this book is therefore to unmask the enemy, the Protestant, allied with the Jew and the Freemason against the Catholic, a victim today of this diabolical alliance lique.

4

2 THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

Is there a Protestant Question in contemporary France? temporary, as there is a Jewish Question?

If it exists, why is it so little known? general public? wondered the Ardé- Réveil- chosen on November 26, 1896.

France is currently exhibiting a series of phenomena singular behaviors, which elude observation- perficual, but which an attentive viewer will not take long to discern.

Unfortunately, there are few attentive viewers.

In most major cities, manufacturing countries killers, shopping centers, a significant portion business, especially in high-level trade and banking that, is in the hands of a particular group, a ge- group Generally correct and rigid, moreover, living a bit in part of the rest of the manufacturers and traders.

Most have southern names; a few- Some are Alsatian emigrants; several derive their origins from England, Germany, Switzerland.

These merchants, these bankers, these millionaires for- the head of the Protestant Colony in the city question.

You browse the Parisian press and the newspapers of province; you come across leaves, usually a somewhat bland in their language, moderate in their politics, and of an anti-clericalism that was sometimes veiled, sometimes blatant, but always pronounced.

These newspapers are Protestant publications that maintain in their pockets their religious flag and who address to the general public, whether opportunistic or radical. In all cases, with varying nuances, you will find the same writer: a Protestant bourgeois, very bourgeois and very Protestant, fearful of socialists and horrified by priests.

You are staying in a small town: you con-
Soon all civil servants will be born by name.
After a few days, if you have a good nose and a knack for...

tions, you will make a singular discovery: that at 7

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION 3

tribunal or court; at the high school, at the municipal college: at the teacher training college, at the university, in the administration of Finances, at the prefecture offices, there is a quarter, a third, half of Protestant officials, sometimes more.

So, if you belong, by birth, to the East, in the West, the Center or the North of France, where the Re- Those who have been trained are hardly more than beings known by hearsay. like the followers of Buddha and Confucius, you you will think:

"That's a very strange coincidence; but, after Everything, what does it matter? It's pure chance, without doubt, who has gathered here such a large number of Re-formed.

However, when Sven tours France provincial, you will find that the same chance occurs provincial. It was almost everywhere; when, back in Paris, you there You will see all the ministries crowded with senior officials Huguenots; when you, Serge, realized that this is the case with even in Parliament, and that some Cabinets counted half of the members are Protestant; so, if you have With the habit of thinking even a little, you will tell yourself:

"There is something unnatural about that."
According to the most authoritative statistics, the Protest- Christians of all kinds, Calvinists, Lutherans, Independents of these, there are 650,000 in France, out of 38 million inhabitants. so many, one in sixty. So that this small minority occupies so much space in society and in the state, it His moral and intellectual identity must be crushed. health.

However, I do not realize that those I have fre-
The figures collected so far rise above the common run of fatal; several are even below the threshold that they occupy.

So, go on, why are they so good?
rented, so well settled, so dominant? The fact is uncon-
"Testable, how can this be explained?"

When you said that to yourself, you asked yourself in your innermost thoughts on the Protestant Question; you are a wall to study it and to solve it.

4 THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

But not everyone is there yet, not by a long shot.

Many people have no other horizon than that of their locality, and do not know that what happens there is repeated-led everywhere, from the point of view of the protesters' control many things about public functions. Many others attach no political or social importance to the Calvinist origin of such a prefect, such a president of tribunal or such a headmaster; they see in them only the supporters of the political regime who have their own sympathizers Many are even unaware of the cult to which belong such and such agents of power.

Because they don't write it in their hat, and their
The spirit of propaganda or caste is more active than it is displayed.

That is why, if the Protestant Question is posed
In some astute minds, it is hardly so in the
The general public, naturally distracted and superficial.

The most militant Catholics are housed in the same teaches that the indifferent and the freethinkers, this which clearly proves that this is not a re- question religious. Everywhere, except in the southwest, the clergy and the militant Catholics do not see, as adversaries true, that the Jew and the Freemason.

When we talk about the Protestant Question to French people from the North, the Center, the West, it seems that we were using an unknown language, he wrote with Rightly so, two years ago, the Messenger de Valence.

Do you want, indeed, absolutely tc- proof?
A spade? Here it is:

In 1896, a congress of the Demo-Christian cracy, composed of the most active among Catholics. The program has been published; it was as energetic as it was comprehensive: Anti-Semitism, anti-Freemasonry, social reforms, journalistic meetings lists, etc. |

But what becomes of the Huguwenot, this old friend, in the middle of...
link to. your. that?

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION 5

Where is the Protestant Question?

She is conspicuous in this program by her absence.

For what ?

Because the Congress organizers are housed at the same brand as the majority of Catholics and French conservatives. They see the Child of Israel and the Son of the widow, because it was shown to them clearly for a long time.

They don't notice the Protestant at all, the good protesting, which no one has reported to them, and which continues behind the scenes, a much more active job than the masons and the Israelites – his allies, moreover, against the traditions and the true interests of France.

However, you only need to open your eyes to see the changes, in the twilight, all these excellent Huguenots by throughout France and in the colonies too, alas!

The government knew perfectly well what it was doing by suppressing the census includes any mention relating to religious practices.

He, very wisely, from his point of view, prevented the public to note that Calvinists and Lutherans were, Proportionally, fifteen to twenty times more numerous than Catholics by origin in public functions ques, especially in the higher ranks of the hierarchy Shit.

How can this unusual phenomenon be explained?
To get the key, you have to go to Paris.

There, everything becomes admirably clear.

Parliament is packed with Protestants whom the candidate-Official customs have crammed in: opportunists, radical SO-Specialists, even those on the center-left, all fundamentally agree. all working for their chapel.

The ministry, in general, contains even more: one They were sometimes seen there in the majority. There is one Protestant in sixty Frenchmen; there were as many as six Protestants out of ten ministers. The usual rule is two or three, at less.

In the offices, in the upper management, it's better Again,

HAS

6 THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

The three divisions of the Ministry of Education
The church has three Protestant directors.

At the Ministry of Colonies, Huguenots were everywhere, admirers of England, including Messrs. Binger and You.

At the foreign affairs office, the high-ranking officials are in a...
A large proportion are Protestants, coreligionists more or less zealous of our rivals in England, of our enemies of Germany.

If we leave France, we find at the head of most of our colonies of the Laroche family, children born of Catholic missionaries, who are par-all the pioneers and supporters of our influence, by-Natural herbal remedies from English and American preachers, Germans who spread both Protestantism and hatred of France among the natives of our possessions-sions.

Here it is, the Protestant Question.

It is not only in the southern departments-
They became, despite resistance from the major labels, Huguenot fiefs.

It is in Paris and throughout France, with pre-readings, offices, courtrooms, colleges full of sectarians and propagandists.

Î
She is in Algeria with the Methodists who are distributing

Bibles and gunpowder for the natives; in Madagascar, with the preachers who recite the holy prayer against

we, in front of the Huguenot officials who let them | to do; it is in all our colonies; it is in our embassies, in our consulates, etc.

The Protestant question was raised by republicans clerics like Thiébaud and de Mahy, in the name of sentiment-national ment.

Every well-known danger is half avoided.

The Israelite invasion has lost half of its perils of- since Jewish France and La Libre Parole have done so one of the commonplaces of conversation, current and of the daily press.

r

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION 7

In Napoleon's profound words: i

"We see our Jews," and when we see them, they don't are no longer much to fear...

Well, we don't see the Protestants anymore, no one- more active, more powerful in France, perhaps than the children of Israel, and that is because we do not see them not that they are to be feared.

We want to bring them, their ambitions, their actions, their power, and their goal final.

But we believe we are already hearing these accusations stu-
feet:

– You are a cleric and you want to rekindle the Religious passions that were not fully extinguished.

– No, a thousand times no, we are not here to do
call to religious hatred; we come to demand a Make way for the sun in our country, in the name of Catholics.
stripped by the Protestants; we come to ask.
simply to be treated on an equal footing the law that they; we. come to assert our rights to same rights as them.

And since we have none of that, for this
The only reason we are Catholics, we denounce-cons with supporting documents the Protestant peril.

If obtaining justice requires unleashing the co-Let these dormant angers be unleashed and that the consequences fall on those who will be affected the primary cause.

And, if you still persist in believing that we have the aim, by attacking the Protestants, of inciting the Religious passions, well, that's up to you.

Furthermore, even if that were the case, wouldn't we have-
We wouldn't laugh at a thousand good reasons to offer for ourselves just-tifier?

We have been treated as pa- for quite some time now.
rias, we have been vain-
cus, when we would seek to become victors,
Who, then, would not find this claim legitimate?

3 THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

We are the majority. And if the majority can im-to impose their will on the minority, why Catholics Wouldn't those 36 million, who are, impose themselves on the pro-who are testing, numbering 650,000?

The exact opposite is happening. The protests
These factors occupy, let us repeat, preweighty: in politics, in the councils of government, in the press, in the judiciary, in industry, in commerce, in banking
ques, etc., etc. |

In the Gard, the Catholics, although three times and half as numerous as the Protestants, do not occupy not a quarter, not a fifth of judicial jobs or others.

A Catholic lawyer was languishing without clients in a town in the South of France. He abjured his faith and became a Protestant. He was appointed public prosecutor immediately and we have given jobs or scholarships to his five children.

It must therefore be concluded that, in the magistracy and in administration in general, belonging to a faith, a thousand Catholics create a prevention against the French that belonging to the Protestant religion is, at the contrary, a title of admission to favors, in a country supposedly without a state religion.

In all circumstances, Protestants are protected by the government to the detriment of Catholics.

It makes sense, a government of Freemasons could not act otherwise, but we could not accommodate it.

Thus the sectarian Brisson, known as the austere one, took for secretary a Protestant. Then, when he had done this, he took for secretary a prefect, who, in turn, filled his prefecture with Protestants, the son of his parents and his coreligionists, The former Speaker of the House has taken another Protestant for secretary. That started to intrigue me, he said Mr. Thiébaud.

And when that other secretary became a member of parliament and...

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

pushed all his people, it is a third Protestant who replaced his fellow believer in the president's office Brisson.

So, it's a system.

We could multiply the examples and say, in particular, that the Protestant colonization society, the so-called Coligny company, including Mr. Eugène Réveillaud of Versailles, is secretary general, has obtained from the government

Algeria has great advantages that have never been achieved. attached to Catholics, since he wrote in October 1894, that two-thirds of the Terga concessions are— would have been reserved for Protestants sponsored by the Society.

Do you doubt it? Here's the proof.

Protestant Colonization Society

Versailles, October 15, 1894.

Sir,

You have been identified to us as requesting a transfer to Terga (Algeria), and at the same time it was reported that you were Protestant.

If that's the case, please let us know, because as The Governor General has kindly decided that the two a third of the Terga concessions would be reserved for the protesters sponsors of our Society, we would be completely disappointed. We are here to help you understand our list of protégés, if are you indeed Protestant or willing to have your children, when they are grown, the instruction of the pastor.

Looking forward to hearing from you, etc.

Signed: Eugène Réveillaud.
Secretary General of the Coligny Society.

This is a document that leaves little room for uncertainty. study, wrote Mr. Thiébaud on this subject in Le Matin.
4°

10 THE PROTESTANT QUESTION

Mr. Eugène Réveillaud is not a myth, he writes, if I am not mistaken, in the Protestant newspaper Le Signal, at— Mr. Albert Le Roy also collaborates with him.

If the Coligny Company had not obtained from the government general manager of Algeria, or of his close circle, who is, to a considerable degree, Protestant and English, the promise of this exorbitant privilege granted to confessional cliques, he would not commit, I suppose—pose, the lie of writing it and deceiving colonists or emigrants.

11. It is quite possible that the general government has granted this concession of two-thirds of the French lands Terga's straits to a colonization society, without taking-otherwise, it retains the confessional character of this Company.

But this one, once endowed with the privilege wrested from the credulity or government negligence, has not He didn't hesitate to impose his conditions... and what a load of crapeditions? Mr. Réveillaud's letter testifies to this: to be Protestant or take the pledge to raise his children in the Protestant religion.

Henry Maret's Radical (90,000 francs) published at this time subject the following short article in its December 20th issue- in 1896, after he too had reproduced the letter from Mr. Eugène Réveillaud:

The document, being more than two years old, does not is no less interesting, and one might wonder about this once, in agreement with Mr. Georges Thiébaud – how the The promise of such an exorbitant privilege was granted to a religious clique.

Or the Protestant colonization society, with the aim of to deceive the colonists, she boasted of advantages she did not possess-did not;

Or the Governor-General granted this concession to a colonial society whose religious character he was unaware of
gieux;

Or did Mr. Cambon knowingly favor such a party?

THE PROTESTANT QUESTION 11

this society, by virtue of its very religious character ieux.

Which of these three hypotheses should we accept? It is what we would like to know.

In the letter reproduced above, we could see how and in what spirit did the Protestant colonization society intends to use the rights which are so unduly granted to him granted.

It is because we are determined adversaries.
of clericalism, whether dogma, of a cult, of a confession any reason whatsoever, it is because we rise without cease against the encroachments of religion in the do-civil matter, which we protest on this occasion and that We demand information about this strange case.

You will see that soon the most violent against the Protestants will be those who accuse us today to foment religious war.

And moreover, declaring religious war would be relaying everything down is not the same as for the sectarians of Free Pen-sea.

Who created the school, military, and access laws?
Crossing?

They are the ones who provoke it.

Where are the fanatics, the torturers?

Yes, anti-Catholic sects want war on Christ.

And they will never give up, whatever the concessions that we make to them.

When a state is determined to wage war on a no other state could deter it.
The sects want war, a war in which
We will succumb, or they will succumb.

We accept this war. And we will fight it without
No truce, no thanks.

Our enemies will be treated as enemies.

And those who will be here, more particularly the
The honors of our lances will be the Protestants, the pre-
First revolutionaries in the world!

CHAPTER IT

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION

Luther. – The Bull of Indulgences. – Calvin. – The Protestants. – The Huguenots. – Civil Wars. – Revolutions. – A million corpses, – Ment VIII. – Geneva, Protestant Rome.

To fully grasp the interesting aspects of a so- study
In the case of a commercial issue, it is essential to go back to the source.

We hope you will forgive us for summarizing here, briefly, the reference points that it is essential to take into account when We are talking about the Protestant Question.

We need to go back to the reign of Francis I*.

On September 15, 1515, Pope Leo X published his fa-
Meuse bubble of plenary indulgences.

The proceeds from alms given by the faithful for
To obtain these indulgences, one had to be assigned to a crusade.
against the Turks and to the completion of the basilica of Saint-Pierre.

In principle, the idea was good.

Europe was then in relative peace, and the Turks alone,
as today, seemed threatening.

The Papacy hoped that its moral influence would loud enough that her voice would be heard clearly enough.
in Catholic Europe, to divert attention internal rivalries and desires, and to...
to rally all militant forces against the Crescent.

\

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION 43

But abuses did occur.

The sale of indulgences, scandalous in many ways of places, was a pretext for all those who took overshadowed by the ecclesiastical power of the time – it would seem today, clerical power.

And this nothing unleashed a veritable revolution upon the world.
a solution that led to the deaths of countless Christians, hundreds of thousands, if not millions, and of which the

The far-reaching consequences were certainly, after the religious wars, the political upheaval of the world and the fall of Rome's temporal power.

This revolution was "in the air."

An infinite number of factors had obviously prepared her for it: the corruption of the German clergy and perhaps even more its riches that the powerful coveted.

Without this, the monk Luther, despite his eloquence the rather trivial tribune on a jaunt, would never have had more disciples than, for example, Hyacinth Loyson.

So that the reformed populations have become practically naked, without initially suspecting that they changed their religion. The dissensions raised by The Reformers did, in fact, have a character and origins gins that were more social and political than religious.

This is what has led people to say, quite rightly, that the Protestantism had always been a political party and not a religion.

And if all political parties are, at their core, parties Religious groups, but not Protestantism, Much more of a political party than a religious one.

If Luther had come and said, "I want to found a religion-"new legion," no one followed him and he would have been the-pidé before recruiting followers.

Everyone worshipped the religion of the true God and the Reform, in Germany as in France, became more against church property as well as against the religion of Christ, his symbols and his divine mysteries.

Martin Luther was the son of poor German peasants. from the province of Saxony.

"44 THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORM

He was born on November 10, 1483 and was raised by the church who pulled him out of poverty. To express his gratitude to him sance, he bit her like a snake and sought to em~ to poison with its venom.

Augustine, the monk, supported indulgences, but he did so by attacking the Dominicans tasked with implementing their subject: the true intentions of Leo X.

The Dominicans, naturally, took up the theses of Luther. The quarrel, which many were stirring up rival personalities, the situation escalated terribly in the year 1517.

The Pope tried to calm tempers, but his opinions... Slow to arrive, they were misinterpreted. Finally, Luther, openly protected by the Elector of Saxony, Frederick said the Sage, breaking irrevocably with Rome in 1520.

He had no doctrine at the beginning, and one can to say that the Reformation had none until 1520, of the Diet of Augsburg.

Moreover, on the eve of removing the mask, the monk at-Augustine was still writing to the Pope:

"- I protest before God and before all his creatures-practices, which I have never wanted, nor do I want today "to attack the power of the Roman Catholic Church."

In 1520 he preached the futility of good works, and his The formula is as follows:

"We are all priests, every Christian is a priest-tre."

In 1521, he wrote a translation of the Bible, and from then on He becomes terrible against those who transgress his rules. his teachings: He thunders against the celibacy of priests, against monastic vows, against purgatoire, against the priesthood, against indulgences, against Catholic tradition, etc., etc.

Meanwhile, the religious revolution was taking place. chemia, recruiting followers everywhere.

It was so easy, the new religion allowed it: deviations from proper conduct that the Catholic religion defends:

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION 15

Wanting to block his path in his own states, Henry VIII, King of England, refuted the new theories in a book entitled Defense of the Seven Sacraments against the Dr. Martin Luther.

In his rage, he wrote a pamphlet in which the king was called "the grossest of all pigs", which did not prevent Henry VIII, a few years later, to fall out with Rome because of his divorce with Catherine of Aragon, and to have herself proclaimed by the parliament x supreme head of the Anglican Church" (1534).

Protestants, who like to portray the Reformation as a mask...

It is worth recalling that, in terms of austerity and virtue, it is not useless to recall. to recall that this King Henry VIII, between his divorce and the excommunication launched against him by Pope Clement VII, had married one of her ladies-in-waiting, Anne de Boleyn (1533), with whom he had a daughter, the famous Elisabeth.

Less than three years later (1536), he had Anne beheaded of Boleyn to marry, the next day, Jeanne Seymour who died in childbirth (1537).

He then took Anne of Cleves as his wife, whom he repudiated. dia vite (1540); replaced her in her fifth marriage with Catherine Howard, whom he had condemned to death (1542), and finally he himself died shortly after having married Catherine Parr.

It might also be worth adding that Henry VIII did to behead, hang or burn, an incalculable number of people. In about ten years there were, in England-land, more than 50,000 death sentences.

Chancellor Thomas More was beheaded. The bishop Fisher was assassinated. Ireland revolted, and there were... rivers of blood. The lives and livelihoods of citizens... hung from a whim of the gloomy tyrant.

Upon the death of Henry VIII, England was prepared to accept all the doctrines of the Reformation.

The Duke of Somerset, protector of the kingdom of England during the minority of Edward VI, he devoted himself to this artwork.

16 THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION

e
oo

We are now far removed from Luther, to whom we must return in-
For a moment.

In 1523, thanks to the preaching of Nicholas Storch, by Thomas Munzer, by Carlostadt, by Zwingli, by OEcumenism. Following Calvin's lampade, several sects had formed. all enemies of each other.

The Lutherans entered into a struggle against the anabaptists and sacramentarians.

Peasants were restless in Saxony and Swabia.

Civil war broke out.

It spread successively into the Black Forest, Alsace, Tyrol, Styria, Austria.

The German Jacquerie was crushed in the blood of 400,000 peasants while Luther married Catherine Bora (1527).

Of all the political events of the time, we must mention the second Diet of Speyer (1529), a meeting denied by Charles V and who issued an edict, a Recept declaring that the Protestant Princes should leave to their Catholic subjects complete freedom to practice their religion, Recept against which the Lutherans protested energetically, which gives an idea of their spirit sectarian, which, moreover, is still the same. That's where it comes from that's where the name Protestants comes from.

In 1530, Charles V convened the famous Diet of Augsburg. town which he himself presided over.

Melanchthon, a disciple of Luther, presented the Confession of Augsburg, known as the Augsburg Confession, rejecting transubstantiation, private masses, the communion in both kinds, auricular confession, ecclesiastical jurisdiction, monastic vows, the Priestly celibacy.

She said nothing about indulgences.

Then came the Council of Trent in 1545 and death of Luther in 1546.

—æ wee 8

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION. 17

The origins of the Reformation are therefore notably the question of ecclesiastical property and the laxity morals.

The clergy were criticized for being rich and dissolute.

That the clergy should be rich is perfectly legitimate; that he
If it is dissolved, that is much more serious.

Also, we would have liked to see a thunderous Luther against the customs of certain religious orders, reminding them of their duty and to the solemn vows pronounced.

That was the real Reformation to be accomplished. But Luther he didn't exactly have the soul of a saint and he preferred to pre-to establish a new religion that flattered the bad passions and allowed all earthly pleasures defended by the Catholic religion.

Thus, he could, without scruples of conscience, in taste the delicacies.

He therefore aroused the covetousness of the German elite.
by showing them the church's possessions which they could seize it, and created a less severe, more accommodating, from which confession of faults was excluded, which made it easy to practice and allowed for...
to give free rein to all the impulses of passion.

The ex-monk Luther gotta them until they were full.

He says (Luth. tome V, ferm. de matrim., f. 119) that he cannot be without a woman, in the same way that he cannot be without-
It is not due to him that he is not a man; and he adds, that he cannot do without it, nor can he do without providing for all the basest natural necessities; he will even going so far as to say THAT THE SERVANT MUST SUBSTITUTE IN DEFAULT OF THE TEACHER (A).

(i) This was undoubtedly also the opinion of Pastor Dide, senator-sectarian leader, as well as the following news item borrowed from La Libre Parole of April 13, 1894, will demonstrate this: failing its his own wife, his maid, or his concierge.

Mr. Matral, the caretaker of Pastor Dide, had a wife; his wife annoyed him; he left her; and how bored he was Alone, he took a mistress.

The abandoned "legitimate" wife caught the unfaithful man and...

Some of Luther's statements, as reported by the cardinal Richelieu in his Treatise on the Moral and Mental State of the four principal authors of the Protestant Reformation, are typical.

First point: Luther complains that the devil co-che more often in her bed than Ketha, the first name of Catherine Bora, his wife.

Second point: Some pretty women have the de-
It's a shame not to know how to cook and make a bed...

The German princes who supported Luther were Moreover, tainted with the most shameful vices.

This is not exactly to the credit of the Protestantism, based, as we can see, on envy and covetousness
The revolt of the senses, the property of others.

– We want to seize your property, gentlemen.
the clergy; we also want the church allow his ministers all the enjoyments of the flesh, the revolutionaries of the German clergy said Luther's future school.

"We oppose it," the naturally replied.

followed for adultery, no doubt in order to put a good and Effective little piece of evidence in the upcoming divorce case.

Here are our sworn enemies in the dock;

The husband, sitting on the bench of infamy;

The woman, standing at the bar, implacable like justice.

The president proceeds with the questioning. R

D. You abandoned your wife to take a mat-braid?

R. Yes, Mr. President.

Mr. Lagasse, the guilty party's lawyer, intervenes:

Mr. President, perhaps it would be a good idea to ask
My client, why did he abandon his wife?

The president agrees... The poor man! If he foresaw the answer!... After all, perhaps the answer matters little to president...

D. Why did you abandon your wife?

RM, the president, she knows it well! One morning, I found her lying in my bed with Senator Dide!... (Violent explosion of hilarity.)

Mr. Lagasse. – So, it is indeed true that Matrat found in his own bed, Senator Dide is operating 1 rightful owners; as for the Decalogue and the dogmas of the Holy Church, they are immutable: coupables, those who break free from it.

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION: 19

– Well, we will unleash the revolution.

And it was unleashed under the name of Reformation.

Theft, civil war, lust, such was So the motto, this is the basis on which—poses the question of German Protestantism, the father of Protestantism.
French.

We have now arrived in Switzerland and France.

Ulric Zwingli, parish priest of Zurich in Switzerland, preached con-between Indulgences from 1516.

He was the founder of the Evangelical Religion.
lique and the head of the Sacramentaries with Carlostadt and OEcolampade.

He denied the existence of the Real Presence and outlawed the ceremonies.
of worship, mass, confession, purgatory, fasting,
celibacy, etc.

Like Luther, he unleashed civil war between Catholics and Protestants, but, less fortunate, he was killed at Cappel at the head of his people (1531).

In Geneva itself, there were two parties: that of Mamluks, subject to the bishop of the city and recognized—sant the suzerainty of the Duke of Savoy; and that of the Hugenots (from the word eidgenossen, meaning "confederates") by oath"), who wanted the independence of the city.

The Huguenots embraced the Reformation at the call of the French preacher Guillaume Farel.

Civil war soon broke out and the Bishop fled from—before the riot.

That's when Calvin made his first appearance at Geneva, where he had taken refuge after being expelled from the Catholic Church because of its misconduct.

Calvin was born in Noyon in 1509. Parish priest of Martheville,

\

20 THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION

then from Pont-l'Évêque, he had learned, in this last—nth cure, Luther's doctrines by a German, Melchior Wolmar. ue to Like his mentor Luther, Calvin was, morally,

Everything that was most immoral. Before his heresy,
He had been punished because of his depraved morals;
He was even sentenced to death for his incontinence, which they carried it to the very depths of vice.

However, the king granted him a conditional pardon.
to be decorated with fleur-de-lis on the shoulder, a mark of distinction that existed in at that time, as some fifty years ago brand, also on the shoulder, of the letter F. for the convicts.

The Reformation, of which Calvin became the apostle in Geneva and in France, did not reform its morals in the least.
world. On the contrary, he was able to free himself from all control, to give free rein to it. His orgies cost him his life.
And Arènes, a medical student and Huguenot, had remarked, during the illness that took Calvin in 1564, at the age of 55, some symptoms that had surprised and frightened. Left alone to watch over his corpse, he dared to lift the shroud, and convinced himself that the legislator—
The author and the theocrat had succumbed to everything else something other than smallpox. Calvin, in fact, died It's simply syphilis.

Like Luther, he adhered to the Bible as his rule of law.
faith, but he went further than him on three main points
skins: | |

4° He denied the actual presence and replaced it with a symbolic presence;

2° He supported the predestination of the elect and the damned born;

3. He rejected the priestly character and wanted election ministers of religion by the faithful.

Let us note in passing that this last idea of The election of priests by the faithful is today very widespread in France, as a result of incessant propaganda health made in this sense by the religious leaders of our

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORM 21

650,000 French Calvinists. All the newspapers of the lo-newspapers and all Protestant or simply Li-leaders of the school of economists, like Léon Say, re-periodically break this thesis with the hope of to gradually implant it and discredit the Catholic religion that.

Calvin (1) was, in Geneva, a despotic dictator governing by means of spies, defending the games inno-hundreds, burning those who did not think like him.

He handed over to the stake Michael Servetus, his friend, who denied the mystery of the Trinity and who persisted in saying Son of Eternal God, instead of saying Eternal Son of God. For For this great feat, Calvin received the congratulations of Melancho-Tuna, the Lutheran (2).

So did later the torturers of our great Revolution of which many were, moreover, pro-testators such as Alquier; Bernard Saint-Afrique; Boissy-

(4) This man, who ruled Geneva and made this city, at his one of the most cheerful and lively arrivals in Europe, a a cold and dreary place, like a tomb, pursued by hatred fierce, the only tolerant and gentle man the Reformation had known in its ranks, – wrote Mr. Mauriez Maindron in the Review Mame of March 28, 1897, – Sébastien Castellion, whose scholar-tion, more than the persecution of Calvin, was enough to make him famous.

Calvin was then governing Geneva through terror, and, sheltering "Under the guise of a committee, he was having his enemies killed under the with the executioner's sword, he imprisoned or ruined them at his pleasure, exiled them or deprived them of their citizenship rights, striking them only, moreover, "to ensure success in the elections" municipal elections, »

(2) Melanchthon's mother had been trained by her son, and had followed him into the so-called Lutheran Reformation. On the Not wanting to die, she summoned the reformer, and, in this moment— At the supreme level, she solemnly questioned him:

"My son," she told him, "it was on your advice that I abandoned" given the Catholic Church to embrace the new religion. I am going to appear before God, and I adjure you by the God who— before, to tell me, without hiding anything from me, in what faith I should to die." Melanchthon lowered his head and kept his silence; the love of the son struggled in his heart against the pride of the sectarian. "My mother," he finally replied, "the Protestant doctrine" "It's easier, Catholic doctrine is more reliable!"

23 THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION

d'Anglas; Boussion; Cavaignac; Payne; Rabaud Saint-Etienne; Rabaud-Pommier; Dentzel; Jullien; The source ; Cloutz; Marat, etc., etc. They congratulated each other—the drownings in Nantes or the guillotinations of public safety, and it was to which of these butchers would spread the most human blood.

And perhaps he wasn't as wrong as we would like to think. to make believe, this historian who saw in the Revolution the continuation of our religious wars!

The Genevan Protestant, Necker, prime minister, playing along with the riot, fomenting this riot in the manner The cunning agent of the modern minister Bourgeois was the Calvinists (1).

(1) At the Constituent Assembly — 1789 — Necker no longer knew Where to turn when it comes to your budget. The contribution, known patriotic, a quarter of the income, met with resistance passive. It produced barely 40 million.

The Protestant Necker then turned his attention to the assets of clergy, and it was Talleyrand, Bishop of Autun, who, at the session of October 10, 1789, dealt with the question, without however denying categorically the clergy's right of possession over its property.

On October 12, 1789, Mirabeau submitted a draft decree stating—"glove :

i 19 That the property of the clergy would belong to the nation, to the responsibility for her to provide for the subsistence of the members of this order;

2° That the disposition of these goods would be such that no priest could not have less than 1200 pounds including accommodation (thanks To this second paragraph, many country priests rallied... (rent to the spoliation of their order).

The Protestant Barnave, on October 14, 1789, gave a speech from which These ideas stand out:

"The clergy is and can only be a profession; it exists for the service and benefit of the nation... The nation could... destroy... The nation can take property out of the hands of the clergy which were given only for her.

Abbot Maury (same session) spoke out against speculation and exclaims:

"Here is the great secret we are revealing to you to restore the finances. It's simply a matter of putting the beneficiaries in the place capitalists and capitalists instead of beneficiaries... The behavior of the speculators seemed inexplicable to us, when

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION 23

Oh! I know very well that the people, understanding that the Treachery surrounded him, he faced the combined forces of Protestant peoples who wanted to invade and enslave it. For a few years, this people, made anxious by the muffled rumors, the sounds of defections, by the crimes deliberately committed to blind him, do not could no longer distinguish between his real and his fake friends !

The motion by the Bishop of Autun suddenly revealed their design. The ruin of the clergy was their great ambition; they They were waiting for this rich prey that was being prepared for them in silence. They were already devouring our properties in their minds as they talked to each other. in their conquest plans; they were waiting for the sale of Church property raised all public assets to par and their fortunes suddenly increased by a quarter, while we Let's all offer a quarter of our income.

This regeneration of paper benefits speculators and foreigners, this scandalous triumph of speculation was the benefit they sought from the representatives of the nation. The Jews came after them, with their treasures for to exchange them for territorial acquisitions... (Tablue of stock trading in Paris)

There, says Abbot Maury, people from all extremes gather from the kingdom and from all the lands of Europe, an army of lenders, speculators, financial schemers, always in activity between the royal treasury and the nation, to stop the circulation of cash through the unlimited extension of public effects.

There, a trade based on usury discourages and impoverishes the true national commerce, the productive industry of the kingdom, and, condemns the administration to Vinertia, sometimes by starving it under the weight of need, sometimes by displacing one's idleness.

Listen to these credit merchants who are raving about destiny of the State, of the increase or decrease.

They do not ask if the harvest is abundant, if poor people can raise the wages for their work to the level of common price of bread, if the owners are scattered throughout the provinces invigorate them through their spending or their generosity. No, that's not what interests them.

They only inquire about the state of the stock market and its value.
EFFECTS. i

THIS IS THEIR ONLY THERMOMETER of prosperity general. They don't know that the opulence of the capital is me- always sure about the misery of the provinces, and that it is not in the greedy portfolios that constitute the national wealth, but that it is in the furrows watered by his sweat that the la- The boureur makes the greatness of the State germinate.

24 THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORM

But whose fault is it again?

The Protestant Barnave, of whom the Calvinists have so much -praised gentleness, gave a hypocritical speech on October 44th 1789, speaking before the House, to demonstrate that the clergy was and could only be a profession and that the nation could wrest from the hands of the clergy the assets which he held solely in the interest of the nation.

Abbot Maury also developed this argument that "if the nation considered himself able to trace his lineage back to the origins of society to strip a class of citizens of their property, the logic which would engender and legitimize all agrarian uprisings or popular.

Count Stanislas de Clermont Tonnerre (non-pro- speech) (nonce) refused the clergy the right to possess, in the very name of religion, under the pretext that the son of Man taught the poverty..., but the clergy being the administrator of the property of poor people, he concluded, in practice, that the motion should be rejected plunder.

On October 30, 1789, Mirabeau took the floor and delivered a speech written by Pellenc, his principal secretary.

The thesis is utopian and revolves around these ideas:

"Only what is just is useful... By appropriating the donations from individuals subject to the inviolable condition of repayment by fulfilling the agreed obligations, the nation does not infringe upon the Property rights... It is the law alone that constitutes property. since, originally, everyone had an equal right to what only one possesses... The clergy are civil servants... »

In short, on November 2, 1789, by roll call, by 568 votes Against 346 votes and 40 abstentions, the assembly adopted the proposal Mirabeau, thus modified:

"1° All ecclesiastical property is at the disposal of the nation, with the responsibility of providing, in a suitable manner, for expenses of worship, the upkeep of its ministers and relief the poor, under the supervision and according to the instructions of provinces.

2° In the provisions for providing for the maintenance of the ministers of religion, it cannot be guaranteed to provide for the endowment of others a cure costing less than 1200 pounds per year, not including accommodation "and the gardens that depend on it."

Nora. – The crowd, during the long discussion of the goods of the the clergy, was constantly agitated by ringleaders in the pay of the

has

THE ORIGINS OF THE REFORMATION 23

Doesn't it sound like we're hearing a Brisson or a Another one of our fierce anticlericals?... When the goods had the clergy's possessions been looted and squandered, the starving that The convents no longer provided food, they turned away from

on the side of those who had promised them a new era and prosperity, and, disappointed, they give free rein to their anger.

The Protestant Barnave was guillotined like so many others others, while, for example, another Protestant, Billaud-Varenne, organizer with Robespierre of the regime of the Terror, saw himself deported to Cayenne with Collot d'Herbois (1).

Necker had been careful to get to Fabri in time, after making his fortune with us. Treated as an apostate in the clubs, he retired to his beautiful land of Coppet in Switzerland... His wife, born Suzanne Corchod de la Nasse, was the daughter of a Calvinist minister in Switzerland.

These are many things that are too often forgotten now, which are, however, more relevant than one might think. assumed.

Jewish and Protestant finance and cosmopolitan speculators. On October 30 and 31, 1789, there were tumultuous gatherings killers at the door of the assembly.

On November 2nd, a multitude armed with pikes and sticks threatened members of the clergy, and the priest who was a member of parliament for Béziers. Mr. Martin received a blow that required his transport to him. 1,

Some deputies, who were known to be sympathetic to the clergy, were threatened, and dared not return to the session. (See on this subject PHis-Book of the Civil Constitution of the Clergy, by Mr. Ludovic Sciout, t. I, p. 118).

This document simply establishes that these are the protests—so many through their coreligionist Necker who are the cause of the confiscation of clergy property.

Thus, the origin of the reform, its primary cause, was the desire to seize ecclesiastical property, and two hundred years later we still find the hand of the Protestants in the pocket of Catholic clergy.

(1. By shedding rivers of blood, these Protestant guillotined | The thugs were only seeking revenge for the violence they deserved. of which their sect had been a victim under previous reigns.

Calvin, whose neurotic activity makes me think, I don't
I don't know exactly why, in Jules Guesde's case, it had this-this eventually turned Geneva into the Protestant Rome.

The disciples of Theodore Beza (1), in France, and Jean Knox, in England, contributed a great deal to to spread the Reformation, but in France it failed almost completely because of the Concordat (2) signed by the Pope and Francis I". (The Concordat settled the
the question of ecclesiastical property which also existed in our country at that time, as it existed in Germany Magne and replaced the unpopular Pragmatic Sanction at Rome.

And now, since the French Calvinists
they themselves admit that Geneva has remained the Rome Protestant, while England and Germany in
They are the bankers, that's one more reason for us.
French Catholics, open your eyes wide.

(1) Theodore Beza was a native of Vézelay in Nivernais. The ou-Richelieu's work teaches us that, as a good apostle of Luther and Like Calvin, he too was profoundly immoral. He wrote a piece of obscene verses inspired by Volmar, his teacher Hebrew in Bourges.

Theodore Beza dedicated it to his mistress Candida. He had not Only 16 years old! He was also prosecuted along with Volmar for terrorism to good morals and he fled to Geneva where he began to re-Calvin's morque. Birds of a feather flock together.

(2) By signing this concordat, wrote Mr. Hanotiaux in his Richelieu's story: the Pope and the King had claimed this for themselves.
him, the one authorized over the bishops, this one, the disposition of the ecclesiastical fortune. The clergy thus found themselves deprived of a with a stroke of the pen, of its independence and its riches, the Re-This form therefore became useless. Historians have de-asked what would have happened if the King of France had been pro.testing. A futile question. It was a party the king could not to take. The break with Rome would have led to the denunciation of the Concordat, that is to say, the voluntary abandonment of the advantages that the
The success of a centuries-old policy had just been secured for the monarchy.

CHAPTER II

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

Looting and revolts. – Appeals abroad. – War
Civil and foreign. – Religions are races.
Coligny. – In Alsace. – Letter from Ducrot. – Extract Memoirs of Mr. Claude. – Beware tomorrow.

The patriotism of Protestants is highly questionable.
Go back in time for a moment and you will see Protestants as they have always been, as they are still today: rebels and antitriotés.

The reform originated in Germany.

By 1534, French Protestants had already formed the plot to destroy churches and loot the Louvre.

In Provence, they organized an armed revolt and allied themselves with the Lutherans of Germany, which led Francis I" to wage war against them known as the
the war name of the Vaudois.

If the Protestants had been content to believe and to practice the new religion which seemed to them better than the Catholic religion, we would never have considered fighting them by force, and in any case the civil war would not have been unleashed on our evil-happy homeland. But the Protestants wanted to make followers. Now, the French nation, in its immense majorité was deeply Catholic: she professed the

28 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

his most vivid horror against heretics, which was his right after all, as it was the right of the Calvinists to be heretics. Which was not the right of these lastniers, it was their claim to make the nation apostatize To achieve this, they asserted the right to resort to the strength, like the Huguenots of the south who said, speaking of King Henry II:

"What king? We are the kings. That one is a Little king of nothing. We'll give him rods and a a profession to teach him how to earn a living like the others. » |

Wherever they were in large numbers, they set fire to the churches, violated the relics in the tombs, killed and They were driving out the priests.

In Rouen and Caen, they desecrated the tombs of the dukes. from Normandy; in Poitiers, they desecrate the hunt of Saint Radegonde, in Orléans they ransacked the cathedral and they don't even respect the monument to Joan of Arc; In Bourges, they reduce the magnificent to a lamentable state. the cathedral's iconic portal, after attempting to demolish it the pillars of the structure. Pushed by foreigners to declare openly declaring war, they are provoking a massacre (?) de Vassy. They then appealed to the Germans and the English and, in exchange for their SPpuL, deliver Le Havre to these "last ones.

Defeated, they do not give up. They form a com-plot to kidnap King Charles IX. The war recom-It began. It was ended by the Peace of Saint-Germain.

The Protestants were then showered with favors by the king.

This does not prevent them from conspiring again and from wanting to attempt a coup that had everything quite simple- the aim of dethroning Charles IX under the pretext that Guise, to avenge his father who was killed on the orders of Coli- - gny, in turn, had done - retaliation for retaliation which is very easy to understand - to shoot the Admiral (4).

(1) If, by good fortune, Coligny had been killed that day, the Saint-Bar-

Thélemy would not have taken place.

nc

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 29

The St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre was the king's response, who, by This extreme measure preserved power and saved the France's dismemberment was anticipated by foreign powers. already under our walls.

The Protestants nevertheless continued the war with the help of Germany. In short, Henry IV is proclaimed King of France. He grants the Huguenots the Edict of Nantes which constituted a series of privileges in their favor dangerous for the country by making this sect a veritable state within a state. And, instead of working as all good Frenchmen for the unity of the nation, the Huguenots, despite their privileges, persisted in rebelling. under the following reign against authority and to conspire against their own country.

It's in order: religions are races; now, Protestantism is an anti-German import French, therefore, which explains why, despite all the favors they enjoyed, the protesters many sought and still strive to do so. France as much harm as possible (1).

(4) As one gains a deeper understanding of ideas In general, one acquires this conviction, which is confirmed today. through the new insights of anthropology that there are hardly any in the world than racial conflicts, which engender religious conflicts, economic conflicts, and, at the end of political conflicts, the ultimate expression, and pure appearance of the other antagonists. This is how Mr. Thiébaud during a conference, on November 19, 1896, in Privas. Nothing could be truer.

The history of human events cannot be interpreted with some certainty that if one traverses it with this master key, which opens pretty much all doors.

The so-called Celtic-Latin races are Catholic and include France, Italy, Spain, Belgium, part of the pro-Austrian Vinsces, Switzerland and the Rhineland countries, Ireland, with extensive branches growing into the new world, including South America, Central America, the Mexico...

The so-called Slavic races are of a religion described as Greek, orthodox and, together with the immense Russia, occupy the states of the Lower Danube,

has

+

30 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

We have not forgotten the struggles Richelieu had to endure. to fight against the Protestants and the famous siege of the Ro-ladder.

In 1627, Rohan, aided by the Duke of Buckingham, friend-King Charles I of England takes up arms again.

a part of the Austro-Hungarian provinces, with extensions Asians, to the very edges of the yellow and Buddhist world.

Finally, the so-called Germanic and Anglo-Saxon races, of religious Protestant legion, occupy: England, Germany, Holland, what remains of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, portions of Switzerland and the Rhineland countries, and finally part of the provinces Austria-Hungary, which thus finds itself reunited, in its agglomeration, in varying doses, the three ethnic elements and religious figures of Europe.

Add to that the very modern and vigorous Anglo-Saxon, naturally Protestant, who occupies, in America From the North, the United States and part of Canada, we will have the arrangement of the encampment of the Christian races and the configuration of the battlefield, of rivalries and of competitions where the history of Europe unfolded.

Following a kind of law, comparable to that which governs the flow and the periodic ebb and flow of the oceans, it occurs, within these races, alternating and periodic oscillations that give birth to extensions or depressions, for some country.

Sometimes it is the Latin race that prevails and spreads, and, at After a while, it is overwhelmed by the Germanic flow. nique; sometimes it is the Germanic flow that is repressed by a Latin reaction.

The Slavic element seems to play a role in this incessant antagonism, the role of regulator.

We see it shifting sometimes to one side, sometimes to the other, to to restore the balance, and England's role will be somewhat almost the same, if England were not preferred, by its ethnic and religious constitution that invalidates its arbitration rather supportive of the Germanic races.

These major racial conflicts corresponded to different religions. verses, do not exist only on the borders of states, on the borders, the dubious pores of which everyone disputes under the common pretext that ethnic groups still exist there and religious institutions to be attached to the main center.

These conflicts extend within borders, into the States themselves, in the privacy of their peoples, in proportion of their degree of homogeneity and unification, and the parties become-

TT ar ee

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 31

Buckingham landed in the town of Ré, while the Calvinists organized the resistance in La Rochelle and in the Cévennes (July 1627). They were defeated and we signed the Peace of Alais. From 1562 to 1598, that is to say in 36 years, Protestantism has sparked eight civil wars.

thus almost always constitutes the current political expression of these old ethnic and religious antagonists.

Which means that we must consider it as nothing, as null and void, and as worthless. value from a philosophical point of view, the vain differences of purely political and governmental labels, by which they try to classify us, divide us, and... to conceal the true nature of things.

All of this is superficial, variable, and meaningless if we don't go not beyond.

Republicans, Imperialists, Monarchists, what else? are merely borrowed qualifiers brought by circumstances trances and almost by fashion; it's nothing!

The true fundamental ranking would rather be in the diver-religious agencies that appear to be the most perfect national unity re nce porte dans son organisation, because of these differences Religious differences almost always correspond to disagreements ethnic.

So, both inside and out, one can affirm that there are only racial struggles.

This soothes nationalist instincts, nationalist sentiments, nationalist ideas, awakening almost simultaneously under the influence of the same needs, in Russia and France, which have gradually brought to light the latent mutual sympathies between The two peoples have determined the irresistible current, by which, far better than by written treaties, is certified and guaranteed the existence of the Franco-Russian alliance. And who doesn't remember the hostility of Jews, Freemasons and Protestants at the moment the preliminaries of the alliance. The lodges, partly composed of composed of Jews, Freemasons, and Huguenots, protested; but the The nationalist movement prevailed.

Here is how Mr. [Name] expresses himself on the subject of racial struggles
Dr. Jean Laumonier, author of a remarkable work on French nationality, in an issue of the Review
National:

The 1500 years of French history are merely the continuation-tion, we would almost say repetition, of millennia of the Gaul.

Whether against the Cymric hordes, against the legions
Roman, against the English, or against the coalitions of Europe,
It is always the same man, the same people, by his blood and

$ | THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

We know how savage they were.
Who doesn't remember the exploits of the Baron des Adrets?
causing the garrison to be thrown from the top of a tower Montbrison on the pikes of its Huguenot soldiers? And Coligny, wrote La Croix on June 10, 1897, having attached

by his soul, which fights for its independence and its complete autonomy.

And he's not just fighting for that.

Inside, he also fights until he has won them back.
for its vile customs, for its native idealism, for the free development of his own genius.

And the enemy, in this case, is still and always the foreigner.
the foreign conqueror and political enslaver.

So that the ethnic struggle continues within the Laughing as outside, one can say: "There are no struggles"
"There are no classes, only racial struggles."

The entire social and political history of a people is but the translation of physiological phenomena appropriate to the processes of defense and expansion of races.

Defeated and conquered, this people tends towards the reconstitution of its ethnic homogeneity, through caste rivalries or conflicts military conflicts, which are nothing more than racial struggles.

Victorious and conquering, he knew how to resist the nationalists of its momentary subjects, which always end, when they do not shut down, by regaining their autonomy and by reoccupying alone the optimal area of convenience which constitutes the Fatherland.

Everywhere and always, he pursues the fulfillment of aspirations of his race, who seek to express his political organization, its customs, its arts, its laws and its worship.

His internal revolutions, the troubles from which he suffers, do not demonstrate nothing more than a lack of understanding of these needs or their incomplete satisfaction.

"There you have it," exclaimed Dr. Jean Laumonier, "the basis of everything." social, historical or political science, the common thread which allows one to recognize oneself amidst the complexity of events to unravel the causes or to provide a remedy.

This is the affliction from which nationalism has suffered for twenty-five years. French.

D is certainly suffering from the territorial and financial consequences the unfortunate war he waged against the invaders Germanic Zion, he suffers from the mutilations that were the price From our misfortune, he suffers the sacrifices to which he is bound. train for its preservation and defense; but its discomfort and His intimate suffering is complicated by the predominance that the

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 33

the religious figures to beams coated with sulfur to- which they would then set on fire! Let's not forget that Coligny embraced heresy out of hatred for Francis of Guise, his old friend (1).

the triumph of the Germanic invasion brought to Germanic ideas. niques in our country.

And these Germanic ideas, both English and German, in traditional antagonism with Latin ideas and ideas Slavic peoples are represented in our society by Protestantism.

(1) On this subject, Bishop Freppel wrote to the author of: Les deniers Coligny's days, these few courageous lines that confirm what we write about the traitor to France, compounded by a vile and cowardly assassin, whose Protestantism, not difficult to discern, makes its great man: |

"How can we forget that, in order to satisfy his hatred and satisfy his ambition, this strange Frenchman, invested with a military charge of the most important, did not hesitate to call the foreigner to the very heart of the Patric; that, as a result of an infamous pact, he has delivered to England, Dieppe, Le Havre and Rouen, in return for this that she promised aid in the form of men, money and ships, against the cause of the king and the nation; which he flooded France, with its German mercenaries bribed for pillaging and For the assassination?

Let us follow Coligny throughout the course of his military life; He is constantly busy making deals with foreign powers in order to to have his homeland invaded by the troops of Elizabeth of Angles land, of the Prince of Orange, the Duke of Zweibrücken, and the princes Germans.

Every time we are given the opportunity to read one of these numerous small, sectarian, and anti-French Protestant newspapers that good Huguenots receive from abroad, it is rare that We couldn't find a single tear for poor Coligny, the victim Clericals.

In his time, this traitor did not exactly inspire pity in his | contemporaries on his fate.

Here, indeed, is Coligny's epitaph, which can be consulted. at the Record Office:

4

Passerby, you will learn from the death of him
What in France we can call Oloferne today,
Rather than one who lives wickedly and detestably,
The end is commonly similar to its customs;
For the same torments with which he was martyred
The faithful Christians themselves endured it.

34 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

He envied his military successes, his great popularity and even his outward gifts, which led people to naively say to a contemporary: "How handsome these Lor- princes are rains; beside them the other princes seem only "Common people."

Guise was the recognized leader of the defenders of the Church, Coligny was meant to be the leader of the innovators: his ambition It commanded him even more than his biblical studies.

From then on, the French sentiment of which he had made proof at Saint-Quentin, by saving France from invasion Spanish sion, died in his heart.

Queen Elizabeth of England was the hope of party which she supported in France with all her power.

In 1562, Coligny and Condé surrendered Calais to him, the glo-
the joyous conquest of Guise in 1558, after two centuries of foreign occupation.

Rouen and Normandy were to suffer the same fate;
But the traitors were outmaneuvered and could not accomplish their goal.
their plan.

François de Guise, in charge of the siege of Rouen, almost to be stabbed by a Huguenot gentleman; despite
He stormed the city, taking the English by storm.

Some of them he threw alive into the flame

Or in a pistol, made their souls blow out $
He was struck by a cannonball;
Like the monks, he also tested it by cutting it.

We cut down his and the river inside
Thus, as he drowned it, he was dragged away not long ago
With a rope... some had their eyes gouged out,
Cut off the nose, the ear...

The same thing was done to him. Just like he had hanged
We see him similarly stretched out at the gallows
Tied by the feet where he feeds the crows.
As he exhumed the dead from their tombs.
Thus, he was deprived of the honor of a proper burial.
Buried for a long time in the streets in filth,

He looted the revered temples of the saints,

He looted the decorated palaces of kings:

He has nothing left but the worm that eats him;
Into which his rotten body, broken into large pieces, is transformed.

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 35

The Protestants had unleashed civil war on France; they were to be crushed at Dreux in 1562.
despite Coligny's efforts, whose unfortunate valor
Reuse was constantly marked by defeats.
The winner was none other than his abhorred rival, François of Guise.

Some time later, in 1563, the Lorraine hero fell-bait struck by Poltrot de Méré's ball. Coligny had bribed the fanatical assassin through Theodore Beza. Despite vehement denials, this crime is historic. absolutely certain.

It was confessed by the assassin Poltrot de Méré: "That who struck M. de Guise, Chantonnay wrote to his friend Josse de Courteville, frankly confesses that he did so, and similarly so, as did Admiral and Theodore of Beza "They persuaded him to do it and gave him one hundred crowns."

Isn't that enough to judge the man who should for another 9 years living amidst incessant com-Plots against state security?

Should we be overly surprised that ten years after the Treaty of Hamptoncourt, a treaty that bound the cause of Pan-England to that of the French Huguenots, and by which Condé, commander-in-chief of the Protestants, whose troops were reinforced by Germans, handing over Le Havre to the An-England; – should we be overly surprised that the people from Paris, suddenly exasperated, had pushed the monarchy to commit the purely political crime of Saint-Barthélemy (1) ? .

(1) The Protestants had resolved to put an end to their advers-seers. Gathered in large numbers in Paris for the king's wedding In Navarre, a coup was supposed to give them power: Coligny had consulted with the Prince of Orange, his son-in-law, leader of the reformers in the Netherlands. Everything was ready when they were preceded by the terrible catastrophe which eradicated them so op- nement. This catastrophe was the consequence of a terrible crime, Let us say it loud and clear: but the dreadful crime was inspired by the fear of other crimes being planned, no less horrific. What Sad times, and so much blood spilled for having listened to the falsehoods prophets |

36 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

Catherine de Medici obtained the consent of Charles IX, and he gave it reluctantly, Vhis tells us= toire.

But as soon as he had given in, the signal manifested itself in Paris.

And Admiral Coligny, who was also known to have received subsidies from England, is killed.

His son-in-law, Téligny, also died, as did La Rochefoucault, La Force, Pardaillon, Soubise, Ramus and many others. In total, 700 or 800 deaths in Paris and the surrounding area. both in the provinces.

Obviously, the process, although political, was Cruel. He must be blamed.

It should be noted, however, that its purpose and for reasons of state to prevent the civil war from prolonging ger.

In any case, we don't understand at all lindi-artificial generation of French Protestants when they speak of Saint Bartholomew's Day.

These Protestants represent only the sixtieth part of the French population, and it is found, at the moment-where we are writing, that there are more than 60 of them in the Chamber of Deputies, that is to say, the tenth part of this Chamber.

However, these Protestant members of the House almost all hold seats at the center, and several are ministers in rotation. And It turned out that all of them, with two exceptions, we believe-we applauded Hanotaux's policy (1) in Tur-

(4) When we knew, without a doubt, with a thousand proofs to the support, that the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Cabinet Méline had allowed the events in Armenia to unfold by par-became aware of the situation; when this complication was observed tacit agreement that united him with the "Great Bloodletter"; when one has seen France's tarnished reputation in the East and its prestige diminished: one has sought all sorts of explanations.

We imagined deep calculations, complex combinations yelics, by which Richelieu's successor intended to at-to achieve an amazing result. It was believed that he was sacrificing a lot

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 37

quie and let Sultan Habdul-Hamid slaughter tran- . three hundred thousand Armenian Catholics in ` two years.

They are strangely unfounded, after that, you You will admit it, to commit a crime against the Catholics of Saint-

Bartholomew. What, indeed, was this in comparison Of those massacres in Armenia? Barely a few drops in a river of blood?

But in addition, it is certain that the Huguenots have always did, in France, everything that was necessary to attract reprisals.

to earn more. However, he was only sacrificing to his admiration.
for the Sultan and his anti-religious fanaticism.

We should get into the habit of remembering the acies and the words of politicians at least for a few years.

Before joining the Government as a renowned diplomat,
Mr. Hanotaux had been a member of the Chamber as a deputy.
at that time, during a budget discussion, regarding the cr-said to be intended for Eastern works, he declared loudly that the France's traditional role in these regions no longer had its reason for being and that it did not belong to the secularizing Republic to take an interest in the Christian populations of the Ottoman Empire.

Once he became a minister, Mr. Hanotaux simply passed on In practice, his former theories. This is to affirm his contempt for traditions and his indifference to the salvation of Christians
I hold from the East that he has, on a point of view, delivered three hundred thousand to Abdul-Hamid's henchmen, says the National Correspondence of April 1897.

When he was only a candidate for parliament, the future great
A man once spoke to the voters in these terms.
from Soissons:

"The clergy is a danger to the Republic, and, since..."
We were unable to achieve the separation of Church and State,

It is up to us to do it.

Never set foot in churches, reject the ideas religious practices propagated by priests, and the separation of the Church and the State will create itself; it will be your work.

The exhumation of this all-too-forgotten past sheds new light on new on the guiding ideas of the man in whose hands had fallen to such a large extent the destinies of country.

38 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

Henry IV, by the Edict of Nantes (1), granted them liberty of conscience, civil equality, a chamber at Parliament of Paris, 70 secure places. Not satisfied with this, they constantly maintained intelligence with England and they never disarmed a single half-nute. So that Louis XIV, urged on by the people, one day found himself under the absolute obligation to revoke the Edict of Nantes (2) and to compel them, always by reasons of state and to restore religious unity in the kingdom, either to convert or to emigrate.

How many Protestants left French soil?

Five hundred thousand, claimed Voltaire, the author of the famous saying: "Lie, lie, some of it will stick" "days something."

Five hundred thousand, that's it!

And now, by the Protestants' own admission, come—
Are they well on our soil?

Listen to the opening lines of the report on churches synodals presented by Mr. Dupin de Saint-André to the synod of Sedan; we copy them into the Echo of the Synod from Friday, June 5, 1896:

"The Protestant population of France and Algeria is rising to the figure of approximately 650,000 people, including 80,000 Lutherans and 400,060 members of independent churches. We can estimate that two-thirds of the reformed population are evangelicals. The synodal organization encompasses 381 parishes, 25 minorities or independent churches and 70 recognized church annexes; which gives a total of 476 parishes served by 529 pastors (registered and assistant). or evangelists.

Thus, the Protestants are certainly beautiful—suddenly more numerous here than they were at the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes.

(1) April 13, 1598.

(2) October 22, 1685.

They are more numerous, and let's face it, just as animated mes of the spirit of domination.

+
* e

During the revolution, we see the Protestant of Geneva, Necker request the confiscation of the assets of Clergy: Protestants Marat, Billaud Varennes, Collot:
d'Herbois and associates organized the terror; the protesters members of the constituent assembly are demanding that their coreligion- | citizens who left France following the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, that is to say, a century and a half before so they can return there at their leisure.

And this article of law was passed:

All persons who, born in a foreign country, descenddant in any capacity whatsoever of a Frenchman or of a French women living abroad for religious reasons are declared natural French citizens and will enjoy the rights attached to this status.
if they return to France, establish their residence there and take the civic oath.

All Protestants, all cosmopolitans of the world were then able to land at our place and became as much agents of trouble and discord. These people, indeed, they came with hatred in their hearts against a country which, according
They had persecuted them.

Under Louis-Philippe, we see France with the Protestant minister Guizot practicing the policy of humiliating concessions to England and Europe, which settles the Eastern Question in London without consult France.

And the Pritchard compensation, that famous English preacher
Guizot's fellow believer!

This

In 1848, a retired officer wrote to us, I was stationed in garrison-his in Colmar at the 4th Lancers Regiment when the bicentenary celebration commemorating the reunification of Alsace to France. While the troops were assembling on a seat for the review that was to follow, I accompanied the general staff of my regiment which, along with the various self-military and civilian rites, he was obliged to attend successively to a religious service at various Catholic temples, pro-Testing and Israelite. Well, in the presence of all these people of civil servants, the Protestant pastor had the audacity and the im-modesty in indulging us in a lengthy panegyric of separatism Alsace ration of France. My comrades and I in outraged girls!

Here is another letter, dated December 5, 1866,
by General Ducrot, then governor of Strasbourg,
to General Trochu:

For some time now, many Prussian agents travel through our border departments particularly the area between the Moselle and the Vosges: they are-They influence the minds of the people, and affect the Protestants.
who are numerous and much less French than one might think generally believes. These are the sons and grandsons of these | the same men who, in 1815, sent numerous dispatches puts to the enemy headquarters to request that Alsace returned to the German homeland.

In his Memoirs, Mr. Claude, former head of the po-
The security law shows us the role of the Alsatian Protestants.
a few years before the Franco-German war.
This is about the crime committed by Jud on the first President Poinot, a crime on which Mr. Claude made an investigation...
A quest in Alsace. Mr. Poinot had been murdered on the way

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 4i of iron and the assassin had stolen papers from him concerning National defense. Here is how the author expresses himself, pages 115 and following, volume 2:

But we had to go to Ferrette. I already knew, from the rapports of the police in these regions, that the border of Germany

Magne was being worked by Prussia.

What I didn't know was that these reports were indeed at-beneath the truth. I was able to convince myself of this upon arriving at Mulhouse, a French city, as they were saying again there-bottom, in 1860.

Prussia, envious of our conquests, then stirred up the old grudges of Protestants against Catholics, in view of a revenge which, far from giving us later the Rhine provinces, were to take back Alsace and the Lorraine, to begin again, on the new defeats of Waterloo, the critical situation of Louis XIV atoning, him Also, its crossing of the Rhine!

Upon arriving in Mulhouse with my agent, who, although Alsatian, he must have been less surprised than me by everything he He could hear and see, we were both very surprised by what we saw and heard.

The victories in Italy did not generate enthusiasm. the population of Mulhouse. Outside of official society-In this city, I found a population that was only concerned with... trade disruptions that our exchange rates would bring border details.

Napoleon III, lauded in the prefecture's newspapers, was reviled in the German-language newspapers which were born in Switzerland.

In the Haut-Rhin, religious fanaticism was reawakened to Prussian jealousy plotted against them. The Protestants formed a band except with Catholics.

Under the guise of progress and humanity, the Protestants The wealthiest people in the country renewed their attacks against the Catholics. the old quarrels of the 17th century. They remembered... the plan that Mulhouse, before Louis XIV and Napoleon I", was a free city. I recognized, in these political divisions-nuns, the hand of Prussia; she was preparing to act at a time when an exhausted France could not have sustained, as under the reigns of Louis XIV and Napoleon I*, the first display of his weapons.

42 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

I confess that I, a Parisian, was amazed to experience everything suddenly, in the middle of the 19th century, in a past that sent me back at the Saint Bartholomew's Day Massacre and the Dragonnades.

It is true that Mulhouse, in and of itself, is well made to set you back two hundred years.

Apart from the new town, the factory town whose May-square sounds, aligned with a string, recall, at its center, the barracks or the workers' housing estate, we do not find in Mulhouse than the Swiss city. Deliberately, it claims on all its walls, where the legend of William Tell is written, its former municipal franchises, when they were defended by a crossbow.

An incident to which I didn't attach much importance. that he deserved came to open my eyes to the underground work-rain of Prussia in Protestant Alsace. Barely arrived In Mulhouse, my agent, a former soldier in the Crimean War, was apostrophized trophy, in a brewery by Baden Protestants.

My Alsatian, who had become a Parisian, had risked a plea-health issues which, in Paris, could not have been provoked by him, because the object of his sharp retort dated from the other world.

He had joked about a Baden man who had refused to greet a Strasbourg resident named after the man who, under Louis XIV, had opened the doors of Strasbourg to the French.

My agent found this Baden man's observation so bizarre that he made jokes about it.

He thought he had all the beer drinkers on his side. country. Great was his astonishment when the Baden man had, at On the contrary, for him, the whole gallery.

The man from Baden was an officer. He offered a cartel to my agent. He would gladly have drawn his weapon if his service had not forbidden to be anything other than an agent.

A meeting was arranged for the next day & my Alsatien. |

That same evening we were leaving for Alkirch and from there For Ferrette, my Alsatian deemed it unnecessary to warn his té-less so since his police status forbade him from giving following this altercation.

When he told me about his unfortunate affair, 11 me said he had noticed that this German, for two st-tions, had not lost sight of it, and that he seemed to have searched by entering at the same time as him in the same brewery:

This remark that he communicated to me, I had already made.

As my Alsatian was not by nature very perceptive—
Therefore, I judged that it was time to leave Mulhouse.

For the first time, in Paris, I remembered those words from my clerk, his compatriot:

– “May you not repent of your zeal |”

For the first time ever, since I had been approaching from the German border, the crime committed on a president—the nature of the imperial court's tooth was changing. I understand—born, in the minds of the people of Mulhouse, that Jud could well be something other than a common assassin, that is—, that is to say, a spy for the Prussian chancellery.

I would soon be convinced of that.

Once we left Mulhouse, after several hours of march to reach the Ballon des Vosges, we meet—Weaving, in a valley, the Baden man and his witnesses. IIs had not lost track of us since our departure.

They were three against two; night was beginning to fall.
nir; they dominated us in the deserted valley, bordered by mountains covered with black fir trees, at the summit of which one sees sections of ruined tower, reminding Alsace of the disasters of the Palatinate War.

*

The three men rushed at us, swords in hand.
Before we could defend ourselves, my agent was killed.

The Baden man had pierced his heart with his sword, into him shouting:

– “Coward, you run from me, I’ll kill you!”

At the same time I was preoccupied by the other two who They gagged me, blindfolded me, and dragged me to bottom of a mountain.

When I saw the light again, my eyes unblind, when I
I regained my senses in the midst of this horrible ambush, I I found myself at the back of a cave, occupied by several officers in Prussian uniform.

These officers were lined up in front of me, around a table the place where maps of the region were kept. The one who it seemed the head of this general staff resembled by his hair
"Deur gourmée, to a medieval lansquenet. He told me, with an obsequious, almost benevolent smile, which recalled the smile of my clerk

Regarding the patriotism of Protestants:

— Mr. Claude, pull yourself together! I] will not be done to you No harm done. If your agent is dead, it's his own fault. He hadn't than to offend the national spirit of our former comradestriotés. For Alsace was German, and it will become German again.
Order, rest assured.

I wanted to reply, to protest. Then the officer changed his tune.
physiognomy; he resumed that commanding and dis-particular attention to the Tudesque when he no longer has to capture his cnonemi.

— I've told you enough, Mr. Claude, that You did not continue your search. Your spies are spied on. Now you know what we do with that when they want to fight with ours.

It would, however, repugnant to us as gentlemen that we are, to act with you as we have done with that brute. Go back to Paris. We know what you are going to do in Ferrette, and your efforts would be futile-tiles. Jud isn't there anymore. He's abroad. It's no longer Jud: That's, as you yourself have so aptly discovered-Same. Montcalli or Matricore! Come on! But if you can-continued your research, if, by some impossible chance, you were to return Safe and sound from Ferrette, you would still be punished in Paris for I warn you about your overzealousness. The Emperor of
The Frenchman himself would not take it into account.
A magistrate like Mr. Poinot died for having wanted to get our state secrets. A Matricore or Jud Go killed. Do you hope to be happier? Out you
You are free, think!

I hadn't had time to reply & my judges im-
I assumed they had disappeared from the cave, and I remained alone.

Stunned, dumbfounded by the strange events that had just occurred
it produced around me like a thunderbolt, I
I was trying to escape from the crypt.

Doubting what I had seen and heard, I rushed off
In the valley, I called to my unfortunate companion. I I could not yet get used to the reality that had been so fu-neste to my agent.

I had to convince myself that I hadn't been the toy of a terrible nightmare.

My agent was no longer there, not even his corpse was there.
more. :

THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS 45

I never found out what became of him.

I hurried, beside myself, my mind troubled, to return to the Mulhouse road.

I saw a city in celebration, whose gaiety contrasted with My pain and the tragedy that unfolded before my eyes. The inhabitants they said that Mr. de Moltke, with his daughter, came from Baden to pass through Mulhouse and visit the Ballon des Vosges.

And the German city of Mulhouse, and this news, was celebrating like the French city had not been, the city Catholic, following our victories in Italy.

I understood everything. Rage and shame in my heart, I departed from the city of Mulhouse.

Back in Paris, I saw the prefect again, I saw the prosecutor again imperial, I put at the bottom of the two reports Jud, lassassin of a court president:

– “Nothing to be done?”

In 1870, who could have forgotten that it was a pro- newspaper?
testing the most authorized, Ze Temps, which indicated by a criminal advertisement, to the King of Prussia, the march of Mac-Mahon's army, which was attempting to join up with the one from Metz?

Ask yourself how it is that this newspaper has was informed of this secret movement by

Mac-Mahon and that Time fell as if by chance between the hands of the King of Prussia, who took advantage of it for us cornered in the Sedan funnel...

The patriotism of the Protestants was once again on display.
in the Dreyfus affair, where the most qualified Huguenots, Scheurer-Kestner, in particular, took up the cause of the traitor. We will return to this subject later.

Finally, our current rulers, the Protestant Wading-ton, Ribot, Trarieux, Freycinet, Lebon, etc., etc., seem-they could have only one concern: to humiliate the France in the face of foreigners, to such an extent that a patriot, Déroulède was right to say that in front of the Angle-earth we have open hands, and before the Alle-Magne, the joined matns (4).

(4) Mr. de Chaudordy in his book Europe in 1889, had gso

46 THE PATRIOTISM OF THE PROTESTANTS

Ultimately, this is not surprising, the religions, once again, being races and all the struggles, race struggles.

In any case, the Protestants become every increasingly cumbersome day by day.

Until now they had gone almost unnoticed. Because they had managed to hide more or less, and to to remove the designation of the cult of the leaves censuses.

But now, with their cautious hypocrisy, they exasperates again everyone.

Like the black man who, in the aftermath of the abolished decreeabolishing slavery, he sent a petition to the Convention, By signing: "so-and-so, ex-Negro", they convince themselves that they sprang from Jupiter's thigh.

Their tendency to hoard makes them major nuisances.
order.

And the people are beginning to apply the method to them investigation, so well described by Drumont for the Jews.

What will become of them tomorrow? Their turbulent spirit Will it bring us another revolution? Or will their Will this intriguing minority always be in control of
Is our democracy too generous?

Who knows?

But just as a dammed river always ends, if However vast the lake he spread across the iron valley, mée, by finding a way out and resuming its course interrupted, likewise the blood of the children of our race will rediscover its atavistic principles at the moment when Gentlemen who are Protestants will least expect this.

In my humble opinion, they would do well to be cautious.

quoted this saying which had been spoken to him by Lord Lyons: "What's the point of discussing any issue with the French foreign minister, –since since
How long have you burdened Germany with your interests?

CHAPTER IV

~

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Richelieu and the Protestants. – The St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre compared to the massacres in Armenia.– The protesting between England and Germany. – The An-England and the French Protestants. – Transformation social wars. – In Brittany, in Auvergne, in Paris, Alsace, Alpes-Maritimes, Corsica.
– Foreign pastors. – Race struggles.
Against France.

The days are gone when Cardinal Richelieu sent subsidies to German Protestants for maintenance to end the civil war among the German princes, but History is constantly repeating itself, they say, and we will-
We laugh perfectly well, believing ourselves to have returned to a few years before the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre.

France, in fact, is once again being invaded by the Protestants, in greater numbers than ever before, and these Protestants, not content with having regained their freedom, vile since the Revolution, they abuse this freedom, they—relatives of all honors and public powers, do dismiss the low-level officials who have the misfortune to send their children to the Sisters' schools or the Brothers, they hunt down Catholics like true wild beasts.

This is not an exaggeration. It is the pure truth.
Nothing will be easy, especially proving it.

48 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

The invasion happened slowly, quietly, but it is now complete, and it is important to France
Catholics need to wake up as soon as possible.

To close our eyes, they cleverly stoked our internal quarrels, created skillful diversions, stirred up the clerical spectrum, grouped interests into retained unions
by a gold chain.

But the real political question, the one that dominates
all the others, the only one so to speak, is the ques-religious union, or rather it is the only one that will be intimate-linked to all our actions in the future, whether we wish it or not lions or that we did not want it.

Strange as it may seem, we affirm, with the Raymond Dubasty's anti-semitism review, which a polimysterious policy is leading Europe, and that this policy-that has three objects:

4° The dismemberment of certain States in which Catholicism has left roots deemed too deep:
France, Spain, Portugal.

2 The preponderance of Protestant states in the worldwide.

3. The domination of Jews in Protestant states.

Secret services do not threaten independence from Italy because they obtained its accession to the alliance of Protestant states, and because they hope one day replace the Pope and the King with their great a master who, according to their statutes, must be Jewish.

It is also certain that the Jews, the Freemasons lessons and the Protestants formed an alliance against Catholic nations to ensure their supremacy in the whole world.

Evidence?

The treaty of January 14, 1757, more in force than ever—but, treaty passed between Prussia and England for to act effectively against France, and to support in the world the Protestant religion.

It is easy to bring new evidence to bear for my—
To convince the unbelievers that we are not exaggerating.

= PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 49

If we look for the origins of Freemasonry
As a secret society, it is clear that it goes back to to the most ancient times. Its origin is Jewish, he said
Mr. Edouard Drumont in his remarkable work, Jewish France.

Open any ritual, and everything speaks to you of the Judea. Kadosh, the highest rank, means holy in Hebrew. The seven-branched candelabrum, the ark of the covenant, the acacia wood table, nothing is missing from this re—Figurative representation of the Temple. The names of the year Masonic are the Jewish months: Adar, Veadar, Nisan, iyar, sivan, tammouz, ab, elou, tischri, heschvan,
keslev, tebeth, shebat.

The famous phrase exchanged among initiates, and which Mr. Andrieux ridiculed: "the acacia is known to me," also relates to the most distant Jewish traditions.

"The acacia," replies a Freemason, to a question...
sée in the Intermédiaire of June 10, 1885, is the branch
The gold standard of modern initiation. According to Holy Scripture, this tree, often referred to as Shitiah, was considered sacred among the Hebrews. Look, if You want it, the engravings of an ancient ritual from the highlands Masonic degrees, you will recognize all the symbols of the old law. Study the admissions ceremony,
You'll think you're in Jerusalem.

In 1862 a Freemason from Berlin, in response to a Solz's brochure, he wrote:

"The Jews run all the lodges in the whole world."
In London, there are two Jewish lodges; in Rome, another.
composed entirely of Jews, is the supreme court of the Revolution; from there the other lodges are directed,

as if by secret leaders.

Freemasonry requires its Grand Master to be a Jew;
Today, it is the Jew Nathan who presides over its destinies.

That's one point established: Freemasonry is
It is allied with Judaism. It is also allied with Protestantism.

If we want to know in which year she ap-

50 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Peleus Freemasonry and where it originated, he
It will only take a little work to learn that she formed, around 1771, in England, a Protestant nation aunt.

It is worth adding that the English are very inclined to secret societies; and besides, all peoples Protestants are too.

In the United States, out of 60,000,000 inhabitants, that is
. 45,000,000 adult men, there are 5,454,329 members of secret societies, one in three inhabitants (1).

The same proportions are found in England.

Freemasonry flourished as if it were at home in the middle of...
place of this Protestant people.

To give you an idea of the space it occupies there,
I will limit myself to quoting a few newspaper clippings English. i

We read in the Pall Mal Gazette of November 14th 1896:

A Masonic service will be held at Saint-Phi- Church
Lippe (2), Earl's Court Road, tomorrow evening, in which Mr. Salmond and Miss William will sing.

(1) Here are some instructive figures:

There are approximately 750,000 Freemasons; and Odd Fellows.
are 810,000; The Knights of Pythias are 475,000: the Fo-remains are 36,825; the Knights of the Ilonneur (Knightsof Honor) are 118,827.

Taken together, all of America's secret societies group 5,454,329 members.

These figures are interesting to know. Let's add that there are In the United States, according to the latest statistics, nearly 70,000 lodges that spend, on rent alone, more than 300 million francs annually. This shows us that a the only US citizen who spends more than 250 francs annually ment for the Lodges.

And don't think that the propaganda of the Lodges is close to to stop; on the contrary, each year the number of members-Rents increase by more than 250,060, says the Revue des Deux Worlds.

(2) Protestant church, of course.

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA If

From the Vienna Journal, dated April 2, 1897:

The Church of the Holy Saviour (1), in Southwark, will obviously-how to become popular. There will be a great service ma-conical. There was talk of building one in Saint-Paul, but it didn't happen. It didn't happen. There aren't many Freemasons in the clergy. of London (2). However, the archdeacon of London is included. (D" Sinclair), the pubendary Kitto, of Saint-Martin-in-the-fields, Mr. Brownrig of the National Society, Mr. Buckland, Mr. Pearce, morning preacher at the Foundling Hospital, chaplain-the Lord Mayor's wool, and other well-known ones.

Do you want more facts? As you wish.

Let's open the Pali Mal Gazette of April 9, 1897:

The Rev. D'Childe, parish priest of Christ Church, Chilternham (3) was chosen by the Grand Master (4), the Prince of Wales, as one of the two chief chaplains, at the meeting annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of English Freemasons, in next June.

Finally, let us quote the Pall Mall Gazette of May 28, 1897:

The Grand Masonic Office of Saint-Sauveur Southuvark, Yesterday's was picturesque and interesting. Many churches-ticks (5) present showed an intention to enter the order.

Meditate for a moment on the Israelite Universe which, after having said that the Catholic Church had accomplices – in his struggle against the Israelite forces, calls for his helps the dissenting churches and exclaims:

To us, therefore, Jews, Protestants, Freemasons and

(1) This only refers to the Protestant church.

(2) D is only referring to the Protestant clergy, the Catholic clergy – a lique having nothing in common with Freemasonry.

(3) Protestant priest, let us not forget that we are in a country Huguenot.

(4) Of Freemasonry.

(5) Protestants, let's not get confused.

awe m

92 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

o

Anyone who wants light and freedom, to tighten our grip elbows and to fight so that France, as one of Our prayers, may it preserve its glorious rank among the nations, for already a dark raven has sunk its claws into the skull of the Gallic rooster and sets about pecking at its feathers eyes.

Good Jews, do they love France!

They love her so much, they desire so intensely that she retains his glorious rank among the nations, that the Jew Dreyfus betrayed her in favor of a Protestant nation. doing everything in her power to ensure that she invade us again.

Naquet, the Jewish Freemason and a bigwig in Panama, Israel's strong supporter, he himself has very strong sympathies for Protestant England.

At the hearing of December 2, 1896, before the pre-First chamber of the Seine court, it was given reading a letter from Naquet to one of his friends, who had striven, in his work on Joan of Arc, to demonstrate that the role of the good Lorraine had been harmful to France.

This friend is a declared and enlightened Freemason: this shows once again that Protestant England and France Freemasonry is not without very close ties, writes Mr. Louis Marthin Chagny in his book: the semi-Albion tick.

Here is Naquet's letter:

October 8, 1896,

I read Joan of Arc. It's perfect. Your ideas are conforms similar to mine. What a great people we would make, the An-England and us, united in one nation, if Joan of Arc pay did not exist.

And now we see it, the Judeo-Masonic alliance-Protestantism? Do we see that Protestants have for But what about their preponderance in the world?

Yes, it is obvious that Jewry, Freemasonry-

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA ~ B3

Christianity and Protestantism are united by the ties tighter.

Having established this, it remains for us to show them acting by concert against Catholic nations and in particular against France, which is of particular interest to us.

If you take the time to follow us, you you will see the instruction and education. Catholic of the en-child, replaced by Protestant instruction and education aunt and atheist; you will see Protestant propaganda manifest themselves in all parts of the country; the protests sacrificing France to the goal they set for themselves in acting time and time again against its interests pa-Trio-colonial and colonial; you will finally see them occupying the highest offices of the State, thanks to special favor-the social standing they enjoy with public authorities, ministries, always composed of a certain number of Protestants.

Perhaps then people will believe in the Protestant peril.

Perhaps it will be believed, which is the truth, that one wants to Protestantize us, to attempt what the Reformation has been powerless to accomplish!

Is there anyone among us who could have made a mistake? on the recent massacres in Armenia, of which we have mentioned incidentally in a previous chapter? Three hundred a thousand Christians massacred by the Turks in 1896–1897, in Vinstigation of England (1). The European nations

om SD

(1) If the reader doubted this truth, the Official Journal is which attests to it (session of November 3, 1896).

The Minister of Foreign Affairs. – In 1878 and 1881, in the Treaty of Berlin and in the Cyprus Convention, the EU–rope and especially England, took care of the situation of the Armenians. However, it was only in 1885 that anyone heard to speak for the first time about an Armenian movement. Those which were scattered in France, England, Austria, and America organized itself.

Committees were formed, newspapers were created and They engaged in active propaganda. Demonstrations were held in Saint–Denis, on the tomb of Lusignan.

In France, the movement was shallow. But it had one joining forces against Greece, which wanted to prevent these appalling horrors.

54 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Listen to a conversation on this subject with a Russian prince. as reported by Aurélien Scholl:

Nothing, he said, can give an idea of the scenes abodespicable, monstrous carnage we are witnessing. More than thirty thousand children, boys and girls, have been Stunned or with their throats slit. Here and there, heads, little ones Hands, thrown on the ground, clots of blood; everywhere, ruins still smoking or sections of walls blackened by the smoke.

A feeling of horror grips you as you pass by, you obsesses and haunts you. Here, an Armenian has been bound to a Stepladder, hands behind her back. Her three young children, frantic with terror, uttering cries of horror, had the severed head on their father's thigh. Knee on the— which they used to sit down to play their service was a chopping block.

And when the torture was over, one of Abdul-'s subjects great expansion in England. The Bible societies are involved in it. parent. Various causes contributed to the disorders: condition typical of a region whose populations are exposed, without defense, against incursions by nomadic Kurds; suffering pro— caused by the abuses of poor administration; engineer— foreign influences and incitements maintained by agents irresponsible, widespread in large numbers throughout the country; the despair of a population pushed to the limit, struck in its priests, in his convents, in all the objects of his faith; im— power or ill will of local authorities, and perhaps meme, as has been said many times, regrettable instructions leaving Too much leeway given to authorities without prudence and without humanity. (Very good! Very good!). As soon as the news arrived at Constantinople, the ambassadors had to deal with the question— tion that had just arisen so abruptly. For a long time, British diplomacy is closely monitoring a region which is so close to the Caucasus, the Black Sea, the shores of the Bosphorus, and whose location, at the sources of the Tigris and The Euphrates River may be decisive in the problems affecting to the destinies of Asia. Large—scale evangelical missions many are widespread in the region and are the corresponding natural teeth of consuls and diplomats,

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 53

Hamid cut off both of the father's hands with a single stroke of his sword. that the tears were stifling, and joyfully waving them "Pig's feet for sale!" he shouted.

In most of the villages, the Muslims buried _Standing, live young girls aged 15 to 20. The head only one emerged, and on that head they overturned one of those Wicker baskets in which bread is carried: They would lock rats and wasps in there, then drive the basket in the ground so that rats cannot the to spill.

And what was the attitude of our Government towards of these shows? Breaking with all traditions of Catholic France, he joined our ships to those of England and Germany, playing the role of the mute in this unique European concert, maintaining a neutral-odious behavior in the circumstances, causing crushing in the streets of Paris and at the exit of the Tivoli-Vauxhall the game- The importance of our schools was outraged by these acts of cowardice.

Well! We can boldly affirm, never the same This would not have happened in our country without this inoculation. tion of the Protestant and English spirit to which we belong saturated. | :

In 1889 Bismarck did not hesitate to assert to the Tribune that Protestant England and Protestant Germany had never stopped marching in agreement for one hundred and thirty-four years, and he added that there was no there was no reason for the pact to be torn up.

However, the pact he was referring to was that of the 44 January 1737, that all independent newspapers reproduced when Thiébaud republished the This text, too often forgotten, notably stated:

"His Majesty the King of Prussia and His Britannic Majesty... they thought it was appropriate to counterbalance this grand league (Franco-Austrian alliance), to renew by a new treaty the remaining commitments already between the Berlin and London courts... for support nir Ja protestant religion. »

"...Promises and undertakes His Britannic Majesty to pay

56. PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

one million pounds sterling each year, to act effectively "Affection against the common enemy."

"...Promises and undertakes His Prussian Majesty to do the greater efforts to force the Viennese court to do the peace, in order to act, with all its strength, against France."

Such is the alliance that still remains, Bismarck affirmed.

Is that clear enough, categorical enough?

However, as early as 1889, the efforts of "His Majesty Prus-. his own to force the Viennese court to make peace," had been successful. Germany had even achieved a double victory, because Austria and Italy were linked with Germany by the Triple Alliance.

And now England and Germany were free < TO ACT WITH ALL THEIR FORCES, AGAINST FRANCE" (1).

We would undoubtedly have the opportunity to show how- how they acted against France in Egypt, in Madagascar Gascar, in Tunisia, in Algeria, everywhere in short where our influence could be exerted.

But for the moment let us ask ourselves if, even at
In the heart of France, Protestant propaganda was able to res- ter inactive.

That would at least seem implausible at first glance and

(4) What philosophical reflections do not come to Tes- taken from the thinker and politician worthy of the name, upon reading of this pact, and in the presence of the certainty of the Triple Alliance admitted, moreover, by the three powers.

Certainly, this pact is a formidable one for France; but isn't it
Not big and beautiful enough for England and Prussia?

And how much does it not testify to the spirit of continuity in the opposing political views of these two great nations with the muddled minds of our improvised statesmen since that the revolutionary spirit leveled everything.

England and Prussia took two centuries, continuing stubbornly pursued their goal, to achieve Austria was no longer a danger to the success of their plans!

So ask this spirit of consistency from the governments that have emerged revolutions which, for a hundred years, have taken on a particular character in France periodic nature:

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 57

The more you think about it, the more untenable the idea becomes.
Let us reread these sentences from the pact of 1757:

PROMISES AND PLEDGES – HER BRITISH MAJESTY TO PAY
ONE MILLION POUNDS EVERY YEAR... TO SUPPORT THE PROTESTANT RELIGION..., TO ACT EFFECTIVELY AGAINST THE COMMON ENEMY... AGAINST FRANCE,

Can there be the slightest uncertainty? When we
As we mentioned earlier, Richethe place subsidized and supported the Protestants of Alle-Magne to prevent German unity from achieving to fold; when one remembers that Louis XIV supported openly, by sending troops and subsidies, the Catholics of Ireland against the Protestants of England land; when Elizabeth of England, for her part, entered-held the troops of the Prince of Condé, commander-in-chief of the French Protestants, and signed with him in 1562, the treaty
the Hamptoncourt alliance, by which, let us repeat, Condé ceded Félix Faure's homeland, Le Havre, to England, in exchange for the assistance he had received; when Many similar examples could be cited, older or more modern, formerly in the form of munitions and war expenses, perhaps today in the form of press allowances or electricity costs tions, who would dare deny that our enemies are acting around us?

Who, unless deaf or blind, cannot hear or fails to see the incessant propaganda of the Protestants
In France?

Who, having learned from the war of 1870, is not wary?
more or less of those shady-looking people, those day-occasional journalists, these temporary workers, of These high-flying scoundrels, ready to disappear tomorrow like their predecessors who suddenly disappeared from France, the day after the first blow struck...
No, it wasn't fired upon on our borders?

58 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Since then, war has changed form. The fields
The battles are no longer the same.

The fight is on the Stock Exchange; it's in the councils administration, in bills, in disparliamentary debates, in public meetings, in the ministerial chambers, in the meeting rooms newspaper activity, in influential salons; it is around the gaming tables, the circles, at the Palais de Justice.

Of course, it would also be childish to see spies everywhere.
all that's needed is to sleep soundly.

But we encourage people who sleep to do well persuade that economic wars are also fun-nests for the people than armed wars;
They all have this in common: they are mixed leading to bankruptcy, to the exhaustion of nations, to the cosmopolitan invasion, the civil wars and the wars religious.

We said that the Protestants wanted their pre-weighting throughout the world, the annihilation of Catholicism in France, Spain, and Portugal, and the dismemberment of these nations; we have published the text of the treaty signed by England and Prussia Protestants against Catholic France; we have argued that, in order to eradicate Catholicism from French customs and hearts, Protestants of all the countries were carrying out anti-Christian propaganda in our country ticne ct anti-francaise.

We will prove it; for what will characterize our the work, it is precisely the facts, the documents which we will provide in support of our thesis.

We report the Protestant Peril; but we do not we are not content with simply saying it; we will prove it, in citing our authors, the very existence of this peril.

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 59.

We read in the valiant Cross of Côtes-du-Nord of Sunday, March 22, 1898:

Everyone who was at the market on Saturday was approached.
by individuals, with a demeanor as strange as their language, who
They distributed handfuls of newspapers to them free of charge.
And, as these sheets bore, on the first page,
the image of the cross, a large number of people accept them
They were happy and unhesitating.

Ah! If only those good people had known what was in those things.
pages, they would all have acted" like this courageous Christian tienne who slapped the astonished peddler across the face, cra-
He sang his contempt.

For what was the newspaper thus lavished?

It was nothing more than a wretched little leaf Protestant, containing, amidst sweet words and hypocrites, abominable blasphemies, against everything that We venerate: against the Blessed Virgin, the saints,
'holy things.

The author of this odious publication is known; and this re-negative, sold to the enemies of our faith, who are at the same time those of our homeland, earn from this sad profession of large sums of money |

We know the thousands of francs he receives each:
year of English societies.

The renegade mentioned in the Côtes-du-Nord Cross Does he know a Mr. Lecoat, a Protestant pastor, whose Shall we talk further?

+
as

– Last week, we read in the same newspaper, Very polite travelers, they showed up in several religious institutions in our department. They offer-knew how to give a recreational cinematograph session.
They were received everywhere with an especially gracious welcome because they declared, with touching modesty, that money rethe harvest was intended for "a good cause" [He]

60 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Now, do you know who these travelers with projections were?
Anglican Protestants |!

What good cause were they working towards?

– For the benefit of an establishment intended to combat the Catholics in Brittany.

This is how the Cross of the North Coast expresses itself.

We find the same note everywhere, indicating the en-invasion of Catholic France by the English and the German Huguenots.

'@

Under this title, the Protestant Missions in France and English money, one read in the Croix de Paris of May 7, 1897:

It exists in Trémel (Côtes-du-Nord), a locality situated on the bordering Finistère, a Protestant mission that strives to do to the Catholic religion, by all means, the most of possible harm.

However, in response to an indiscreet question from La Résistance de Morlaix, the Protestant pastor of Trémel, Mr. Lecoat, relaid:

Am I being paid by England?

Answer :

Neither by England, nor by any foreign company, no even the slush fund. I am the director of an evangelical company—a purely Breton lique, which has a newspaper, schools and annexes in several departments, which is approved and recognized by the government of the Republic, and to the—which one should not send Pandora's disciples to to force someone to pay what is owed to the tax authorities.

Breton independence responds with good ink to pastor:

If we consult the Protestant Agenda of 1896, by Henri Gambia: Fischbacher bookstore, 38 rue de Seine, Paris

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 61

which, we are told, is the official agenda of the Protestants of In France, we find information on the Tré— evangelical mission mel the following information which seems to contradict the above statement by Mr. Lecoat.

"Breton Evangelical Mission. Its aim is evangelization—sation of Breton—speaking Bretons, through the use of members indigenous peoples, places of worship, biblical cars, schools, from the translation of Scriptures and Treatises, from Homes for the sick and the elderly, shelters for widows and asylum for beggars.

This work is supported by:

4° The Trinitarian Biblical Society;

2° By the Evangelical Society of Geneva;

3° Through the Society of Religious Books, the union of schools on Sunday, the special mission for children whose seats are in London;

4° By M: Ball;

5° By a non-salaried committee formed on the basis of the alliance evangelical and composed as follows: |

President: Dr. Ed. B. Underhill, Honorary Secretary of the Baptist Missionary Society. – Honorary Secretary: Rev. Dr. Bullinger, secretary of the Trinitarian Bible Society. Treasurer: Mr. Ch. A. Gisborne, 25, New-Oxford Street, > London.

Mission Director: Pastor Lecoat, in Trémel, near Plestin-les-Grèves (Côtes-du-Nord). Places of Worship:

4. Trémel with several annexes. – Missionary: MG Somerville, in Trémel. Boys' school and agricultural orphanage. school; teacher; ME Harioo. – Girls' and orphan school– Linat: Director M'l: MA Savoye. Workshop and hospice, Director M^m* Lecoat. – Biblical Car, Director MJ Droniou. – Book and treatise depot, custodian: Mr. So-Merville. – Asylums for beggars.

2° Pont-Ménou. – School and adult education courses, teacher ML – Workshop and lessons for young girls, director Ms. M... |

3° Brest. – Evangelist, MJ-B. Guillou, 46, rue Navarin.

4° Carhaix. – Evangelist MJ-L. David, in Huelgoat.

10th Convalescence – Evangelist MJL David, in Huelgoat. Organ of the Mission, Le Trémélois, monthly newspaper, paid on the 25th of each month, 1.25 francs for France, 4.50 francs. Postal Union. Editor: Mr. Lecoat, pastor.

Subscriptions: M@*° Somerville, in Trémel, via Plestin-les-Greves (Côtes-du-Nord).

Total mission expenses: 24,000 francs per year.

After reading this notice and comparing it to Mr. Lecoat's assertion that he receives nothing from the An-England, we remain dreamers.

So where do they get the 24,000 francs a year, if they don't? They don't come from the English.

You must be thinking how much these good Englishmen of the Protestant missions instill Huguenot values in their students from Brittany, the love of France.

It should be noted that foreign Protestants Gers, through their missions in France, employ the only a practical way to achieve the de-Catholicization of our country and to its dismemberment.

It is through religion that one conquers influence and when you are influential, you can easily reach the em-public offices and the highest dignities of the State.

So we imprint on a country's politics its aspirations. Rations, his tendencies, his self, we guide him slowly, but surely on the slope that will lead him towards the a-bime (1). That's what Protestant missions do. And My Dicu, they would be quite wrong to hold back since we let them act with complete freedom. Therefore, you... Look everywhere.

From Brittany, let's move on to Auvergne. Here is what was written from Clermont on the date of February 27, 1897 in La Croix.

(1) Extract from the Masonic Ritual of the 33rd degree of the Scottish Rite I know: "The man fell victim to three assassins." which are law, property, and religion. Of these three enemies in-fames, it is religion that must be the constant focus of our deadly attacks. Why? Because a people has never He survived his religion.

: PROTESTANT PROPAGANDI 63

The Anglicans continue with more audacity than ever. their activities in Auvergne. A pastor preaches in Issoire for the past few weeks. Nevertheless, the campaign is starting—created in Clermont by Thiébaud, and continued by the newspapers local Catholics, is not only a source of concern for the preachers. Pastor Réveillaud du Signal arrives to their aid. He will give a series of lectures in our city which will... will take place over eight days at the evangelical temple.

The radical newspaper of Clermont, the Moniteur du Puy-de-Dôme is pleased to lend its advertising to this company. of dubious patriotism.

Despite this coalition of Masonic radicalism and anti-French Anglicanism, the Catholic Auvergnats do not are not willing to be swayed. It is good, however, to point out the relentlessness with which the agents of the Angle-earth attacks the old faith of the sons of the crusaders.

What are these Anglicans doing in Clermont? Who is paying them?

Where does the money come from? It doesn't come from the State: Our pre-The tense minister does not belong to any recognized religion. It doesn't come from the listeners, since these Anglicans are making themselves the glory of receiving nothing from the faithful and taking from there an opportunity to attack Catholic priests.

Where does the money come from? It's quite simple. Would you have forgotten the Anglo-Prussian pact and the commitment made by England to pay one million pounds each year Sterling to act against France!

*
RE |

It seems that England is not the only one making sacrifices handsome, hard cash. The King of Prussia shows also some generosity.

Here is what Mr. de la Sizeranne published on this subject: October 20, 1896.

I was in Haguenau in 1869, and here is what was being said there fluently :
The former free city of Alsace, Haguenau, was traditionally—

Functionally, essentially Catholic. So much so that the law enacted after 1830, concerning Protestant worship and which did not authorize the erection of a temple and the installation of a minister, paid by the State, but only on the condition of having a certain number of non-Catholics called Protestants, in residence, with legal domicile in the city, where one claims or organizing Protestant worship could not be applied there.

However, the required figure is quite low, around sixty
At a minimum, if I remember correctly.

That was the situation when, all of a sudden, it was after 1852, the small Huguenot group, what homogeneity did it possess? I Vignore, but which included some wealthy and influential, he launched his campaign, presenting himself to the administration a request to have temple and minister, the number rule-comment from Protestants who have exceeded the above limit, without which minister and temple could not be installed.

How did this unexpected increase in supporters of Could anti-Catholicism have taken root within a population whose Catholic sentiments, sometimes bordering on intransigence Were siege proverbial?

The explanation came quickly: the surplus newly appeared system was supplied by a group of workers whose the workshops were in Bischwiller, a small town some distance from a few kilometers from Haguenau, the two cities being connected by a railway.

The workers in question had therefore suddenly found powerful charms, exceptional advantages in their legal residence in Haguenau, where, suddenly, they had taken up residence; although strangers to the population of in their new homeland, they made the necessary expenditures for imposing upon themselves this significant material inconvenience of remaining in Haguenau while working in Bischwiller.

The answer was neither long nor difficult to find.

The costs of this religious zeal and enthusiasm patriotic, strange, were done in full view of everyone, by His Majesty the King of Prussia, providence not only of protestants of Prussia but of France, in whatever variety they may belong.

Isn't that pretty good?
Moreover, we have no shortage of documents;

We have enough material to write several books. And if we the tenons carefully hidden, here and there, in fear that the secret police in the pay of the Huguenots did not pay a suspicious visit, however, we are free to spread out some of them.

Meditate on this passage from the speech of Count d'Hugues, during his questioning about the Protestant congress which was held in Lyon on November 2, 1896. It is still-days of Anglican missions in France.

This is how our friend Hugues expressed himself at the Chamber session of March 11, 1897:

Currently, it exists in France and next to us in Algeria, and further afield in Madagascar and in almost all French possessions, propaganda organizations who should warn us against this English party which Mr. de Mahy and several of our colleagues were talking about here.

Yes, there are organized groups at certain points in our territory, from which an active Protestant propaganda campaign originates. Note that I am not accusing anyone and I would not want to, In my turn, I won't accuse anyone of bias. when there are bonds as strong as those of religion, which link countries to a neighboring country, it is easy to to understand that the propaganda of these countries can be exerted more easily in the midst of these people.

Moreover, this has been pointed out many times by several of our colleagues.

Here is what Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin said, the year lastly, in his report on Algeria's budget:

"Our duty is to report to the Government Vabilité with which, under the guise of Protestant missions, the English Methodists, aided by zealous (H PCONESERS) do in Algeria: anti-French propaganda.

"They extend their action simultaneously to the natives and on Europeans of foreign nationality.

"To the former, they offer a glimpse of the purported benefits" of an English occupation and say that the administration French continues to be subjected to harassment and per-
ER

...TO the second group, they dangle the chimerical hope-

4°

66 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

the establishment of a powerfully independent state protected.

"11. The Government absolutely must decide to ex-to immediately rouse from the entire colony these apostles of dis-rope and revolt.

But Mr. Pourquetry de Boisserin was not the only one who denounced this danger.

Mr. Saint-Germain, another of our colleagues, was going further far from him.

He pointed out that Mr. Pourquetry de Boisserin was not-no comparison like his, moreover, between the French Protestants and others:

What can be criticized about the former, he said, is that be far too lenient towards the methods dists, it's about trying to excuse them when they are not excusable.

We even saw, some time ago, this fact of a
English pastor supported by the presbytery committee against a French pastor.

However, this Englishman, after promising for six years to to become naturalized, returned to his country, not without having did all the harm he could.

Here is what Mr. de Mahy wrote in the Nouvelle Review:

Many people are familiar with this situation, that is to say
"these Protestant activities in France, favored by the Angle-land and by Germany, others have a premonition.
But it is ignored by the general public, because it is very small.
the number of those who dare to warn the country.

I was very disturbed when I started to see clearly.

in these underbelly of contemporary politics.

Certainly, if there are some old chauvinists among us Free thinkers, they may be saddened to see that the politics of our leaders is dominated by influences confessional, receiving the watchword of the bi-Societies. London churches that subsidize Bible Societies

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 67

French women, who, in turn, practice in France, They, disciplined minorities in the midst of our world of freethinkers, the indifferent, liberals, and Catholics in disarray, a predominant action, by their hand focusing on government personnel, high finance and the press.

Here is a man who knows the Chamber, the world government of which he was a part, and which comes to testify—to believe that the Republican party, despite the freethinkers and the patriots it can contain, is dominated by religious influences maintained and subsidized by English companies.

He thus provides proof that the Republican party is the Protestant party, and, being the Protestant party, it is the English and Germanic party in France.

On January 21, 1898, Mr. de Mahy was still saying to the House tribune:

In one form or another, in many en—
In France, you can see this interference with rights. clerical practices exercised against us, against our fellow citizens, against the poor man, against the country, against our alliances and even against our general policy by affiliates of companies politico-religious organizations having their parent company in England.

I have spoken to you previously about temples, in the department—the Puy-de-Dôme region, where pamphlets and other documents were being circulated. newspapers, which bore the temple stamp and where Von saw the alliance between France and Russia as qualified of prostitution and the Emperor of Russia insulted in the manner coarser.

I draw the Government's full attention to the existence—
tence, in many communities, of missionaries foreigners, who come to bring unrest and espionage.

I felt it important to voice this protest here; I believed that he it was necessary that, in this Chamber, where we are talking about the Roman clericalism, protests were also made against the clerica-

68 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

lism from across the Channel and across the Rhine (Applause on various benches).

Let's vary our tunes a little, although it's the same music.
sic.

In June 1895, a Protestant congress took place in Sedan;
Now, do we know how many foreign pastors were observed?
Gers? This is the Echo of the Synod of Sedan from Tuesday, June 2nd 1896, which tells us this. Here they are:

Pastor Andry, from Tournai (Belgium); Mr. Pas-
Mr. Dardier of Geneva (Switzerland), Pastor Dumont of Neuchâtel (Switzerland); Pastor Duncan-Campbell, of Edinburgh
burgh (Scotland).

Pastor Kennedy-Anet of Brussels (Belgium),
Reverend Mac-Kintosh, of London (England), Mr.
Pastor Meyhoffer, from Brussels (Belgium); Mr. Pastor Monvert, from Neuchâtel (Switzerland); Pastor Necker of Geneva; Pastor Pons, from Torre-Pellice (Italy); Mr.
Pastor Porret, from Geneva; Mr. Pastor Richard, from Amsterdam (Netherlands), Pastor Rivier, from Aigle (Switzerland); Pastor Rochedieu, from Brussels (Belgium); Mr. Pas-
Mr. Thélin, from Lausanne (Switzerland).

Imagine a meeting of bishops taking place in France and to which foreign bishops would be present.
What music, from our good radicals; and besides,
Among moderates, the range would be the same. All these These people are all the same, and if they can't agree about the butter dish, like dogs fighting around the feeding frenzy, however, they get along as thieves at the fair, to persecute Catholics (1).

(4) By a coincidence that is at least bizarre, at the same time as The 8th Protestant congress was convening, and gentle Méline was giving himself over to it with gusto against the congregations. Read these excerpts instead.

newspapers reporting on these unspeakable acts of plunder!

The Congregation of the Sisters of Saint Charles, which had in 1891,

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 69

Let us continue to show the foreign Protestants travelling in concert with the French Protestants to assure to ensure their dominance in our country.

Let us open the Protestant Diary for the year 1897 and We will read, on page 339, that there is, in Neuchâtel (Switzerland) a Protestant society for evangelization in France; Yes, you read that right: for evangelization in France. This society, founded in 1871 after the internment of the ar-Bourbaki's wife in Switzerland, established three stations in France evangelization activities: Gap (Hautes-Alpes), Montluçon-Commentry (Allier) and Le Puy (Haute-Loire). The president is Professor Godet in Neufchâtel and the secretary-Mr. Maurice de Pourtalès in Neufchâtel (Switzerland).

the first. Among all the congregations, the honor of having their furniture sold in the public square of Marboz, come to receive a tax enforcement order for payment of 247,000 francs. _ The nuns of Our Lady of Charity (Saint Michael's Refuge), received a fine of 14,000 francs, an increase of 1,261 francs last year. The nuns of the Good-Pasteur in Ecully also received a constraint for the payment of nearly 5,000 francs.

e

ee

Pursuant to a default judgment of the civil court of Montpellier condemning the Sisters of the Holy Family to pay 3,500 francs as an increase tax, the registration made seize the buildings that the Sisters own in Vagnat (Arbroke).

Ten municipal schools have just been secularized in the upper part of the city. Vivarais. Four of these schools in a canton where one would find barely twelve Protestant families were placed in the care of institutions Protestant tutors.

D

The two Sisters from Loges-Marchis (Manche) sent back from The local school, after 35 years of dedication, has just been each sentenced to a fine of 50 francs and to pay costs by the Mortain criminal court under the charge of "clandestine school uniform",

This did not prevent the right-wing MPs who say they Christians for having saved the life of the ministry at least twenty times Méline.

70 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

What good Protestants they are, all the same; are they devoted to France, they foreigners, who come |'ev-To freeze!

Let's continue our review of our indiscretions: we find- Let's turn to page 374 of the same diary as Mr. Gustave Monod, 98 rue de Clichy, in Paris, is the general agent of the British and foreign Bible society, of which the The headquarters are in London, 146 EC Queen Victoria Street.

On page 390, we note that an ins-Protestant truclion exists in Paris under the presidency of MF de Schickler, Place Vendôme, and that the communi- Questions should be addressed to Professor Bernus, Boston campaign, in Lausanne (Switzerland (1)).

(1) Among the notables who organised and directed the congress from Nantes, written in L'Univers on June 7, 1898, Mr. Eugène Ta-Vernier, we have continually seen Baron Fernand appear of Schickler, whose nationality is not defined for the public. Or rather, this baron really looks like a Prussian.

Although he presides over a multitude of projects, and has penetrated into associations that include men of all religions that he may be generous, that he may own a beautiful castle in the Eure, Mr. Baron Fernand de Schickler is- Is he French? If he claims he is, we'll wait for him to say so. proves it. And if he were to prove it, by chance we would ask how- How can this Frenchman be the partner of his Prussian brother? established in Berlin: Schickler brothers, bankers, Gertraudten-Strasse, 16, say the Berlin directories.

We even come across a collection of addresses that we show in Germany the Schickler house, Arthur and Fernand, barons (freiherrn). However, according to the Protestant Agenda, Mr. Fernand Schickler is simply here with us: chairman of the board central of the Reformed Church of France; president of the delegation-liberal gation of the Reformed Church of France; president of the Protestant Bible Society of Paris; President of the Society of the history of French Protestantism; president of the committee of Protestant France; president of the Society for the Encouragement of primary education program for Protestants in France.

Isn't he more or less related to Mr. Delbruck, administrator? mine owner in Germany, himself the nephew of the Prussian minister Delbruck's wife?

These family relationships must be somewhat embarrassing for a man who presides over so many "French" Protestant organizations.

If his French coreligionists do not feel embarrassed by this,

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 71

P

Paa

Foreign Protestants do not only act in France, you find them everywhere.

Note, in passing, their infiltration into Algeria. It's always their precious Diary, a rare book, which informs us-trout.

He tells us that in our most beautiful colony there exists, among other organizations, a Protestant orphanage, that of Dély-Ibrahim. The board of directors includes Mr. Goguel, President; Mr. Heintz, Vice-President; Mr. Mende, Secretary-creditor; Obrecht, treasurer; Voreaux, pastor, chaplain; Monod, Pasteur, and Decaillet.

The maternal committee consists of Ms. Monod, pre-President; Merz, Vice-President; Hoerni, Secretary. The orphan= The Dely-Ibrahim district plays an important role in Algeria. from the point of view of the preservation of Protestantism in the colony, says the Huguenot Agenda naively. It does not limit itself not to take in destitute orphans; he also plays the role of catechumenate.

Here is a confession stripped of artifice: these good protests Anglican families are working against France in Algeria.

e

© @

We were curious to find out how many

French Protestants had newspapers for the debate defense of their worship and their interests. We have counted 146.

Well! Out of those 146 newspapers, 55, that is to say almost half of them arrive directly from abroad to our country Huguenot triotes of France.

Perhaps it's because their patriotism doesn't shy away from any kind of... binaïson. There is a very curious state of mind there; and the protests—
Those who wish to maintain a proud and loyal conscience must
It is considered natural that they should be asked for some explanations.

72 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Let's list them:

The girl's friend, founded in 1883.

Subscriptions: M''* Borel, collegiate church, Neuchâtel (Switzerland).

Editor: Ms. Knupfer-Jacot, Colombier, Neufchatel
(Switzerland). |

L'ami de la maison, founded in 1874.

Editor: Mr. Saillens; Subscriptions: Mr. Mignot, editor-
teur, 17, rue du Marché, Lausanne (Switzerland).

Friend of Israel, Editor MW Pétavel, Pastor. Bureau at G. Bridel et Cie in Lausanne (Switzerland).

The appeal, Editor Périllard, pastor; administration
9, rue Grand Saint-Jean, Lausanne (Switzerland).

Dawn, Editor E. Calvin Amarou, at the street corner
Craig and Saint-Pierre, Montreal (Canada).

To the Mothers (Switzerland).

L'Avenir, founded in 1880; editor C. Miel, in Philadelphia.

The good news, editor Ladrière, Geneva.

The good news is, contact Mr. Jcheber, 28, rue du Market, Geneva.

Continental Bulletin, founded in 1875. Office and Secretariat
General 6, rue Saint-Léger, Geneva.

Bulletin of the Evangelical Society of Geneva, founded in 1895.
Contact: 7, rue Tabazan, Geneva.

Sunday bulletin, founded in 1878. Contact Mr. Deluz, 49, rue de Candolle, Geneva.

Missionary Bulletin of the Free Churches of French-speaking Switzerland
French. Mr. Bridel and Co.*, in Lausanne.

The Belgian Christian, editor Kennedy, Anet, 36, rue Tas-son-Snel, in Brussels.

The Evangelical Christian, founded in 1858, editor Vau-tier; administrator Bridel, in Lausanne.

The French-American citizen, Editor Michaud, in Spring-Fied Mon. United States.

The Fireside, Editor-Administrator Mignot, 17, pre of the Market, Lausanne.

The Echo of the Young Men's Christian Unions, Editor
E. Suetens, rue de Parme, Brussels.

We ask for your patience, because the enu-
The meditation is still quite long, but how many ins-destructive!

—

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 73

Let's continue, if you don't mind:

Sunday School, Belgium.

Christian education. Contact: 34, Place Saint-Laurent in Lausanne.

The National Church, Editor Ch. Leidecker & Bevax (Swiss).

Hope, Editor, Administrator G. Regamey, 3, rue Central & Lausanne.

The family, founded in 1860. Editorial and administration
G. Bridel, 9, place de la Louve, Lausanne.

The religious newsletter of the canton of Vaud, founded in 1826.

Written by Ch. Guenod, in Lausanne.

The temperance certificate. Viret Administration in Lausanne.

The monthly newsletter. Administration: Sack in Fontaines.
Neufchatel.

The domestic hearth, founded in 4888. Writing and administration Administration: Mr. Minfer, & Neufchatel.

For La Glaneuse, contact MTM* Marshall, 152 Clay Street, San Francisco.

Youth; The day; (Caribbean and United States).

Journal des Dames, Mignot in Lausanne.

Journal for our boys, address to Mr. des Gouttes, 18, Senebier street, Geneva.

Journal des Unions, contact Mr. Mignot in Lausanne.

Journal of (Unity of the Brothers, Editor, Senft, in Peseux) near Neufchâtel.

Religious journal of the independent churches of Switzerland Romande in Neufchâtel.

For reading materials, please contact Mr. Maurice Reymond and Co., 8, rue Saint-Jean, Geneva.

Illustrated readings, 24, place Saint-Laurent, Lausanne.

The liberator, Editor Morel, in Neuveville (Switzerland).

The Link, Editor Rittmeyer in Montet-Cudrefrin (Switzerland)

Praise and prayer, 17, Pré du Marché, Lausanne.

The Methodist shop, in Guernsey.

The messenger of the Sunday schools, in Lausanne.

The evangelical messenger, in Geneva.

The Messenger at Saint-Chrichona, near Basel.

The messenger of the pagan world, at Piton's, in Neuf: hatel.

The Missionary, 22, rue Floressant, Geneva.

The Monitor, 147 Laurel Street, Manchester, USA

~

74 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

For our small leaflet, please contact Ed. Sack, in Neufchatel.

News from our missionaries, ibid. |

Peace and Freedom, 129, Chaussée d'Ixelles, Brussels.

Sunshine, Mr. Mignot, in Lausanne.

The Relief, 1110 Powell Street, San Francisco
(UNITED STATES).

Le Réveil, 147 Laurel Street, Manchester (United States).

Le Réveil, Neufchatel.

Phew!

Please note that these foreign newspapers are written in French language, therefore made for France and to spread the good word there...

It is indeed true to say and repeat that if the protests
So many French people are perfect heretics when it comes to In matters of religion and patriotism, they are at least doubtful.

Yet another document that has just fallen into our laps.
eyes. It always relates to anti-French propaganda.
Anglican Protestants in France, propaganda that is taking place,
Let us not forget, by virtue of the treaty revealed by Bismarck.

We read in the Truth of June 9, 1898:

A bearded pastor was reported on the day of the Grand Prix.
white, who distributed illustrated gospels to the amatoo enamored of the charms of the tari.

Propaganda is not only rampant in Paris
Protestant.

In Grasse, people are outraged by the scandalous proselytism, by the trafficking worthy of the correctional police in which they engage The Protestants. They use any means necessary to seduce our compatriots. British agents recognize—feels the hospitality that we offer them freely and with Such candor in literally buying abjurations.

The sums disbursed for to increase attendance at Protestant sermons and schools aunts. The Anglicans ostentatiously distribute se-luxurious courses for the poor and the needy, as a bonus

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 71

encouraging apostasy. They attract Catholic children ics to their schools through distributions of hams and virtuality. Gluttony is, in their hands, the instrument-the process of sanctification.

– Reports reaching us from Corsica indicate the
The same propaganda was carried out using the same methods.
The English thought is political even more so than religious.
gious. If we consider this truth of experience that the criminal negligence or complicity of Lebon and others Colonial administrators seemed to ignore, if one were recalls that the two most effective assimilation agents
The religion and language of the conquered peoples are key elements.
we will understand the danger that our islands and our Mediterranean coastlines.

In the event of war, the English pride themselves on making a efficient descent in Corsica and the Alps region-Maritimes, which they have already invaded and half-colonized through their winter migration. If they find one day among the natives many coreligionists, they' y will also find political sympathy.

It is no longer in Egypt and elsewhere that we will have to fight against British influence, it is from within,
on our own soil, threatened with dismemberment.

*
e è

Before concluding this brief presentation of facts, we will serve another document, provided by Mr. de Mahy, on March 11 4897, at the podium of the Chamber.

This was during the Protestant congress held in Lyon.

in November 1896, by 104 pastors,

The Government, which had shown itself to be so fiercely opposed to with regard to the Archbishop of Reims, he had been very careful to address the slightest remonstrance to the Protestants, Za Libre Parole rightly points out. Our friend Hugues asked the Government why this difference in treatment, and why he practiced it thus this system of double weights and double measures.

76 PROPAGANDA: PROTESTANT

The Government did not reply, but Mr. de Witt came to answer in his place.

In the name of Protestantism, Mr. de Witt came to read a long document, in which he asserted that all Protestants were little saints. The aggressive tone adopted by Mr. de Witt, his insistence on returning to the patriotic question, forced Mr. de Mahy to intervene and proclaim that "Biblical vengeance" was more dangerous for the pa-sorting that the alleged clerical interference.

This is how Mr. de Mahy expressed himself. We note—
We have this passage in the Official Journal of March 12, 1897 |

The country has had enough of these Anglo-Biblical interferences in our business.

The Protestants are masters of France; they are a nuisance all public functions; they oppress our Church Protestant and national, and that's not enough for them.

We will resume this debate. Today, gentlemen, let—Allow me to say one last word that I believe is useful in this moment.

We take many precautions against interference. of the Pope in our politics. I understand this suspicion-bility. Foreign intervention, even well-intentioned, may excite our sensitivity (very good! very good!), but I fear that the overly exclusive focus on this a danger which, in my opinion, is not very great, does not constitute a a diversion to cover up the machinations of another form of clericalism, infinitely more formidable.

If it could once be said with some justification that the so—the society of Jesus was a sword whose hilt was in the Vatican can and the point everywhere, it is more accurate to say – and this not-only in a figurative sense, but in a literal and real sense, – he is absolutely true to say of the biblical organization, of which the head is in England, that it is a double sword of which The handles are in London and Berlin, and WHOSE POINTS

: PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 17

` CONVERGENT ON THE HEART OF FRANCE (Applause on Various benches. The fence!

e
\ | ee

One last document to show once again the extent to which Protestant influence has spread in our country clay.

In April 1897, a newspaper whose title escapes us, which is of little importance, published only on the coast
Breton reigned and governed a succession of preachers English, whose treasurer, Mr. Ch. A. Sisborne, resides at London, 35, New—Oxford-Street.

Is it true that already the faithful of two or three com-municipalities on the coast are almost completely Anglicized by this group that comes from the famous establishments of Mid-May, 114, Newington, green road and 119, Cadogan-Terrace, in London, where secret agents of the English proselytizing?

In Paris alone, the work of the Scotsman Mac-All, whose
The treasurer bears the very French name of "William Soltan".
and whose director is Pastor CE Greig (yet another one (a very French name), the Mac-All work maintains twenty-a meeting place, one of which is for the exclusive use of our soldiers. The English Methodist Church, led by MW Cornforth, owns properties in Paris and the suburbs.
13 chapels or meeting rooms; the Baptist Church-

'tist, eight; total, forty-two chapels or places of meetings hosted by England, totaling forty-two dens of English proselytism. Can you imagine?
Perhaps all these chapels are being watched by the government? Come now, neither Mr. Brisson nor Mr. Dumay, will never dare to take offense at this learned organization. These English chapels, the governor-Lord Salisbury does not allow it.

Not a trait. The French Dominicans, the French Jesuits,
The French Capuchins, these are the enemies against whom

78 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Our modern Republic is going to war. Who knows?
Perhaps discouraged Catholics will go and knock on a
the door of these countless chapels, Methodists,

Baptists, etc., which the English have multiplied since.

fifteen years on the surface of our territory.

It must not be forgotten, in fact, that this is the
But of the Protestants, we mean of Protestantism:
its preponderance throughout the world and especially in France, Spain, and Portugal. As we do not Let's focus on France for the moment, we'll show active Protestantism in France, under the watchful eye of watching over our Anglophile government presided over by Mr. Félix Faure. And since we don't want that Elranger is Protestantizing us, we denounce his meborn treacherously and continuously.

It is not we who attack the Protestants; we
we are simply defending ourselves against their attacks; that is to say, against the attacks of Protestantism, against its invasion. We certainly have the right to repel-to resist his aggression and to preserve our faith.

So don't call me an overzealous cleric, Mr. Ré-

Veillaud du Signal, you know very well that I'm not exaggerating

Not in the slightest.

But, since you are a hateful sectarian and by con-

If you follow a man of bad faith, you won't want to to recognize this truth. I'm going to make you feel it.
finger.

Let us open together the reissued work of Lutheven Marnix de Sainte-Aldegonde, with a preface by Quinet.

It is a book of Protestant propaganda of the highest order.
ordered. In the preface I read:

It is not only a matter of refuting papacy, but of to extirpate it; not only to extirpate it, but to deshoto dishonor him; not only to dishonor him, but... to smother him.
IRON IN THE MUD.

Page 31:

THE PROTESTANT FROPAGANDE 79

Anyone who undertakes to uproot a superstition will...
dual and malevolent like Catholicism, if it possesses
The authorities must, above all, remove this superstition from the eyes of the people and to make its exercise absolutely and na-normally impossible, while at the same time removing all es-hope to see it reborn.

Page 37:

Catholic despotism cannot be eradicated without One steps outside the bounds of legality... blindly and calls down upon oneself the blind force.

Page 42:

No, there can be no truce with injustice.

Page 57 and following:

The principle that all religions are equal is the contrary to all philosophy, all science, all history... There is a religion that prides itself on being incompatible with modern freedoms; if the French Revolution-Caise had clearly seen this difference; she could have... concentrating his forces, his enmities, his decisions, to eliminate this cult that excludes modern civilization. But... she has lacked boldness... and the Catholic worship she had established
The desire to bring down came from his hands more intense, more intense.
Tamed more than ever. Let's not make the same mistake again.

It's speaking without disguise, and at least we knowvons what we should expect regarding the conduct that would towards the Catholic Church, triumphant Protestantism. Moreover, this should not come as a great surprise. incredible provocation to persecution and annihilation—the Church's destruction by fire and sword, he said on this subject Bishop de Ségur.

Mr. Quinet is merely repeating, with an emphasis weakened the bloodthirsty declarations of the founders of Protestantism, and what he says today, Luther and Calvinemakers said and wrote it 300 years ago.

8) PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

It has never been uttered in any language, he said. Mr. Auguste Nicolas, in his fine book on the Protestantism, nothing that even approaches bloody violence Luther's writings. His book entitled: The Papacy of Rome, established by the Devil, is a stain that will defile eternally the annals of humankind:

The Pope is the devil, if I could read the devil, to— What wouldn't I do, at the risk of my life? The Pope is a rabid wolf against which everyone must arm themselves without to even await the order of the magistrates; in this matter he There can be no cause for repentance, except for having been unable to plunge the sword into his chest. It would be necessary for everyone The world is running up against the Pope and everyone else, along with all those who are with him: emperors, kings, princes and lords, without With consideration for them. Yes, we should come across them with all sorts of weapons and we wash our hands in their blood.

What shall I say of Calvin, who had at every moment with the tip of the pen the epithets of scoundrels, drunkards, madmen furious, rabid, beasts, bulls, pigs, donkeys, dogs, by Calvin, who drew these lines:

“As for the Jesuits, who are especially opposed to us, he They must be killed, or if that cannot be conveniently done, the to drive them out, or at least crush them under lies and slander. » “Jesuila vero, qui se matime nobis opponunt, aut necandi, aut, si hocconvene fieri non potest, ejiciendi, aut certe mendaciis el calumniis oppresse sunt. »

As we can see, this is what Mr. Quinet advises through these steps. roles, almost identical, that we have just mentioned:

"I must eradicate papacy, dishonor it, and stifle it-
"Getting down in the mud."

And one understands, after these appalling pronouncements of Luther and Calvin, the sympathies of the republicans and revolutionaries of our time for the Protestantism, to whose followers they reserve all the fa-

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 81

government officials and the highest positions of the State.

We're not there yet, the good optimists will say; That's true, and the Protestants are content for the moment- how to act quietly, without making a sound, to seek everything gently trying to make us apostatize. Without fanfare they seem- - parent of all high social positions, thanks to the protection of our Jacobin masters, their friends; but the day when even the least discerning will realize the truth that we point out to them, they will revolt, they will defend themselves: will fight against their invaders.

Then there will be a struggle, and we will see the Huguenots who will not want to lose the benefit of their current situation quise, to put into practice these acts of violence, these incitements to hatred and the destruction of the Catholic religion for to ensure the predominance of Protestantism, not perhaps as a religion, but as a party political, Protestantism having always been, moreover, less a religion than a political party.

Given these considerations, who would dare to find it wrong that we Catholics, we-Let us go to defend our faith, our rights, and our lives?

We want to remain Catholic, we want the France remains a Catholic nation and not that it become Anglican. Especially since the pro-Testamentism or Anglicanism with its odious free The exam is a solvent par excellence, the cause of all ailments, which gradually reduce and will eventually reduce completely rotten the nations that have taken and are taking- will make contact with him, as gangrene rots, the One after another, the members of the same body.

Please, let me finish my demonstration.
before crying "exaggeration."

England, a Protestant nation, is corrupted by excess.

This is where shameful, vile, and depraved debauchery takes place. displays itself in all its hideousness, without prejudice to the vice in white tie.

5*

82 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

In Philadelphia (1) there are no fewer than 1000 pu- houses "briques," wrote Reverend Frank Goodchild in the issue from the Arena of March 1896, page 576, that is 100 times more than at Paris. Now, Paris has 2,500,000 inhabitants, while in In Philadelphia there are barely 500,000.

These figures, the Reverend continued, do not include the multitude of poor creatures who become victims lecherous characters constantly on the lookout for virgins and who know all too well how to get their proposals accepted tions. Some neighborhoods are teeming with these houses. Cer- Some are described as "furnished rooms", others, fashion houses. In some of them, you will find satisfaction for 50 cents. In others, you won't find young people girls, guaranteed virgins, for $50 or more, at unless you are a customer.

These establishments belong to the ladies.

From time to time, one finds clergyman's daughters there and two cases came to my attention in which the lady She herself was the daughter of a clergyman.

Reverend Frank continues:

Sometimes we notice the most peculiar anomalies. The lady of one of these establishments ran a "school" of Sunday, while going about his sad business.

The ladies are often remarkably pious. pious meme. In one of the best houses in the city, There is a piano, a harmonium, and also an organ. Barbarism in the living room. He only plays hymns: "Alas! the blood of my Savior..." «Rock of Ages...» «Jesus, lover of my soul", "The Coronation", "Ring, bells of Heaven... », etc. | |

If you ask for information, you are told that
This barrel organ only plays on Sunday evenings.
In another house, the lady puts out religious books on the di-sleeve on the living room table, because, she said, she-tends that his daughters have edifying readings on the Sabbath day bat. We wouldn't understand that if we didn't see in our temples so many people who make their religion a a matter of faith rather than deeds, a matter of feeling words, rather than actions. These lost women, that The world disapproves, they apologize – ladies and girls – in

(1) America, a Protestant country,

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 83

saying they are no worse than better people reputation, that some very devout characters (members) of churches), who visit them and whose cars attend at the door.

Are you trying to tell us again that we're exaggerating?

Wait, before answering, until we have laid out other facts. You only have to bend down to pick them up on this Protestant religion that they would like to impose on us-to settle in France, a religion that made England a immense brothel and which redirects thoughts towards illness syphilis, from which Calvin died.

Rev. William Bayard Hale, writing in The Forum from December 1896, on religious entertainment in honor to the United States, another Protestant nation, for attracting customers to churches:

In Woodside (Long Island) a young girl with an administration
With remarkable agility, he regularly touched a tambourine with his foot.
that was held above one's head. As a bit of fun sacred, that's hardly canonical.

Let's continue reading:

The Church of Saint John, Toledo, offered a performance in which the Peak sisters, "very popular in the religious circles in America," they "said" this touching ballad, "Do you know the mouth of man?" in which the art of kissing is discussed 90 times. The church Presbyterian, in order not to be overtaken, made it evolve young girls, their hair covering their faces and wearing so many masks on the back of the head.

Elsewhere, the pastor amused his flock with tricks of prestidigitation. Imagine the gentleman reverend, continuing-Naked Mr. Hale, standing in the sacred pulpit, the passion of the divine enthusiasm in his eyes, making an omelet in a silk hat or bringing rabbits out of ears of his flock.

Here, it is absolutely necessary to translate:

"In the Trilby Social, the young girls belonging to these rites show their... backs, let's use that euphemism...

84 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

placed behind a curtain which is raised to the height of the consi- described as "tantalizing". Men stand de- forward, looking at what each "female" is showing, one one after the other, and then outbid each other to have the privilege of take him out to dinner... The Boston Sunday Journal and the The New York Herald provides illustrations of this.

These small exhibitions take place under the direction of the Protestant clergy.

It is only fair to add that the clergymen of both na- tions are in no way inferior to their flock, one can even to say that they are setting an example by giving themselves up also, and publicly, at the least cano- niques.

From the Pall Mall Gazette (London), April 30, 1896:

Henri T..., miller in U... Devonshire, requests a divorce because of the bad conduct of his wife, Ms. Rosa Agnès T... with the parish vicar, Rev. V... The Witnesses saw them kissing each other, they saw the Reverend unlacing M[™] T's boots...; they sat on They remained in the same chair, entwined in each other's arms. on the other hand. Mr. T's father, returning from his duties- tions in the evening, would go look out the window, saw the cler-Gyman kissed his daughter, then remained to contemplate the scene very gravely, then he left with a very English gravity.

"Why didn't you intervene?" he asked.
the judge.

– Oh! I went to talk to my wife about it, who told me promised that this would not continue.

All this is very English (4). Here is a clergyman who chose as the setting for his erotic escapades, not a chamber–
The first floor is a bit cramped, but the ground floor is bright.
as are English apartments, with gas re– hung in abundance. He doesn't care in the least about world of knowing if its interior blinds close properly.
Everyone follows the smallest details of his developments.
_ chements. One could almost say that he indulged in his

(4) Mr. Marthin Chagny: Semitic Albion,

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 83

~

frolicking in the street, like dogs, like the An– Glas, in Hyde Park,

The young woman's father is among the assistants. He follows all operations gravely, with that mediocre air– tatif and vaguely preoccupied that sometimes take on the animals, when they observe the evolution of their companions. Then he left without saying anything, having nevertheless– looking as if he thought something was going on there rather abnormal. If he had intervened, his daughter, furious and indignant at such an intrusion, with this proud
"The indiscipline that characterizes English women," he reportedly said to her:
"You are my father. So, how can that possibly help?"
Does that concern you? If you were my husband, there would be, thanks to legal action, a successful case at to mount, the English courts being broad in these business.

"But you're not my husband, what are you doing here?"
"Why don't you come and do it here?"

As for the mother, she seems to have made no effort–
very heroic or having hastened only very slowly–

ly. What would that have achieved, anyway, the authority
"Kindergarten is being replaced by 'self-government.'"

This is what is happening in the United States and England.
Protestant countries. That's neat; but it's logical.

This should come as no surprise, given that the Protestant religion, based on lust, it bears all its fruit there.

One would search in vain for facts of this nature in France, Spain, Portugal, Poland, in Austria, Catholic nations, and even in Russia, nation schismatic.

Our Catholic clergy is, in its vast majority-worthy, of impeccable morals, deserving of all respect, brought to all noble devotions, accessible to the senses
High and generous values.

The Protestant clergy and the people of that religion wallow in the most chronic and most inveterate.

Once again, they hunt by breed, or, if you prefer-

86 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

Ferez, the Lutheran or Calvinist cask always smells of Protestant bareng.

Let us not forget, in fact, that Luther, an apostate monk,
lived in concubinage with a defrocked nun.

And what judgments have the Protestants not made?
on him as well as on themselves, for that matter.

Luther's life after his apostasy was nothing less than that of a libertine entirely preoccupied with the pleasures of the table and brutal pleasures, so much so that he had gone into proverb, when one wanted to indulge in some debauchery, to say: "Today we will live like Luther,"
as reported by the Protestant writer Benedict Mor-Genstern, in his treatise on the Church, page 21: If when volunt undulgere genio, non vereantur inter se dicere:
Hodie lutheranice vivemus.

Listen to Calvin speaking about Luther:

"Truly, Luther is very vicious, would to God he would have taken more care to suppress his incontinence!

Would to God he had thought more about recognizing his "Vices!"

"When I read a book by Luther," said Zwingli, "it..." seems to see a filthy pig grunting as it sniffs around here
Over there, the flowers of a beautiful garden.

It is with the same impurity, the same ignorance of the theology, the same impropriety, that Luther speaks of God and holy things.

To which Luther replied in the same tone:

"Zwingli imagined himself to be a sun illuminating the world," but it does not give off any more light than... stercus in lucerna. »

Let's see how Calvin was judged by his brothers in retraining, by those who were to have the greatest interest to overcome its shortcomings:

"Calvin," said Volmar, his first teacher, "Calvin is Violent and perverse; so much the better, that's the kind of man we need.
"It's necessary to move our business forward."

Bucer, an apostate monk and married priest, adds:

"Calvin is a real rabid dog; that man is evil-
"Go... Beware, Christian reader, of Calvin's books."

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 8?

And Theodore Beza, Calvin's beloved disciple, you might ask-
Do you know how he treats his master?

"Calvin was never able to educate himself in temperance, nor in honest habits, nor truthfulness; he remained in-"Deep in the mud."

Zwingli, according to his disciple Bullinger, was driven from his parish because of his debauchery; priest and curate, he She married publicly, limiting Luther's actions.

"If you are told," he wrote in one of his letters, "that I am sinning through pride, through gluttony, and through impurity, believe it or not
"It is painful; for I am prone to these vices and many others."

Luther said of him that he was satanized, un- satanized, super-demonized and that one should absolutely despair of salvation his soul.

And this pious character whom we so often find the praise in Protestant publications, the great Theodore Beza, how the most fervent friends of the reform Did they like it?

"Who will not be astonished," said the Protestant Heshussius, "by Fin- The incredible impudence of this monster, whose life was filthy and in- fame is known throughout France for its epigrams More than cynical? And yet, listening to him, you would say that he is some holy man, another Job, or a new anchorite of the desert, even greater than Saint John and Saint Paul, who everywhere trumpets his exile and his labors, her purity and the admirable holiness of her life.

"This man," said another writer from the same sect, Schlussember, this obscene man, like a demon in- Carnivore, entirely made of artifice and impurity, only knows how to vomit. satirical blasphemies.

Moments before suffering a stroke, Luther as if he had summarized these testimonies, he wrote

"- In truth, we are beggars."

And it is this religion that you would like to endow the France? Never!

And, in truth, after the unsuccessful attempt by the The Reformation in the 16th century saw Protestants unwelcome in wanting to reimpose their domination, less re- logical, perhaps political and social, but unjust and equally intolerable.

88 PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA

There are still bloodstains on your hands.
hanged afloat because of yours.

Don't become, like them, so cumbersome and so intolerant people that a new civil and religious war The consequence is that you would be the first victims.

And now, let us be permitted to dedicate a chapter on the actions of the Protestants in the affair Dreyfus, and thus to corroborate, not for us—The same, which could be disputed, but by the facts. and the gestures of the Huguenots, their anti-nationalist character, anti-French Protestantism marching hand in the hand, again and again, against France, with its worst enemies of foreigners.

And here, we feel no embarrassment in confessing that by going to war against the Protestants we do not Let's not lump them all together in the same condemnation.

No! We are not putting them all in the same pillory. The wicked would be delighted, the good slandered. The indifferent would read us without interest, and we

'we would shake the convictions of no one by committing—:

such an exaggeration.

Moreover, in everything we put forward, we we are rather below the truth.

We therefore admit that, among Protestants, there is some finds those who suffer in their convictions and in their patriotism in the face of the attitude of their coreligionnaires.

We are grateful to them.

They are separated brothers who practice with virtue and faith the precepts of the gospel, so that without their knowledge they are also good Christians, not because they are Protestants, but whatever they may be, they are Protestants.

But this state of mind of the good reformers who are our brothers could not put any restraint on the encroachments

PROTESTANT PROPAGANDA 89

Protestantism, which is becoming more and more prevalent every day. more powerful in the state.

And even if the Protestants whom we do not register—Minions wouldn't cry all the tears in their eyes. This would not change the course of events in any way.

We would prefer to see them break with their co-religious zealots and to side with the true French France; that would be better. We don't hear them even protest, or only very weakly.

And the danger appears every day, not only on the horizon, but also in all social manifestations, like an increasingly menacing specter.

Likewise, while acknowledging that it would be unfair to gather all Protestants around the same bench let us continue the duty we have undertaken. traced.

CHAPTER V

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The Dreyfus Affair. – The union. – Patriotism again. Protestantism. – Scheurer-Kestner. – Gabriel Monod. – Billot. – Zola. – Trarieux. – Thévenet. – Clemenceau. – Cavaignac. – Brisson, etc.

This is still the anti-French character of the Protestantism that will emerge from this chapter.

Three centuries apart, from the origin of the Reformation to this day, we will see the same aspirations, the same trends, then the same ancestral influences and the same atavistic tendencies manifest themselves: the Huguenots of 1562 walking hand in hand with the traitors to the homeland and foreigners, enemies of France, as their corcligionnaires of 1894.

At the beginning of the heresy, the leaders of the traitors were called Coligny, de Bèze, des Adrets: nowadays, they are they name Scheurer-Kestner, Monod, Ranc, de Presensibile.

In October 1894, La Libre Parole, L'Eclair and the Patrie published that a man named Alfred Dreyfus, captain-artillery officer, attached to the general staff at the Ministry of War had betrayed France to the benefit of foreign powers. by delivering, among other documents, various plans of mobilisation.

That was true (1).

At this news, a shudder of indignation swept through the France entiere.

In her misfortune, however, she was happy to app-to assume that the traitor was not one of his own children, but a more or less naturalized Jew.

General Mercier was then Minister of War.
He had Dreyfus brought before a court-martial (2).

(1) Dreyfus was an artillery lieutenant in Bourges and there, already,
His manner was suspicious. They seemed much more so to officers who knew him, the day it was learned that he had betrayed and certain facts that seemed strange to them about Dreyfus explain it better now.

This is how Dreyfus was convicted by the cashier from the military circle, the kinds of canvas pouches that were applied to his dolman. He told her it was to have the a more rounded chest.

Why are these pockets capable of holding papers, and not strips of stiff canvas that always lie flat in
The officers' dclams, made by the regiment's tailor?
But this is nothing compared to the following: One day the captain-Dreyfus's mother notices that military papers concerning
A new hide has disappeared. The next day, without anything
In other words, Dreyfus brings them back and tries to slip them into other documents.
papers without his captain noticing; but the captain
He saw everything. He then made a scene with Lieutenant Dreyfus, telling him-approaching, in very vivid terms, the idea of having taken secret documents.

And Dreyfus replied:
` - Captain, it was to study them at my home.

However, these documents must never leave the offices of the regi-ly...

This fact, unknown to the public, struck us as quite curious, quite suggestive enough to find a place in this volume.

(2) Here is the list of judges supplemented by notes which establish the origin of each officer and the length of their service:
Mr. Maurel, colonel of the 129th Infantry Regiment, graduated from St
Cyr in 1855.

Mr. Echemann, lieutenant-colonel of the 1548th Infantry Regiment terie; graduated from St Cyr in 1862.

Mr. Florentin, battalion commander in the 443rd Infantry Regiment entered service in 1861 as a volunteer, appointed Second lieutenant on August 25, 1870.

Mr. Patron, known as Maillard, battalion commander in the 15th regiment

92 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Although defended by Mr. Demange, the accused, recognized guilty, he was unanimously sentenced to deportation to perpetuity.

A few days later, the traitor embarked for Devil's Island. It was on that day that he told several People: In three years I will be avenged.

We never knew exactly what this meant.

infantryman, who entered service in 1864 as a volunteer, appointed second lieutenant on October 10, 1870.

Mr. Gallet, squadron leader in the 4th Chasseurs à Cheval Regiment –
Val, graduated from St Cyr in 1577.

Mr. Roche, captain in the 39th Infantry Regiment, graduated from St-
Cyr in 1876.

Mr. Freystatter, captain in the 3rd Infantry Regiment of Marine, who entered the service in 1877 as a volunteer and appointed second lieutenant in 1883.

From the judges, let's move on to the prosecution's military witnesses.

Here is the list:

Mr. General Gonse, Deputy Chief of the General Staff.

Colonel Fabre, outside the regular structure, head of the 4th bureau: (stages, railways, troop transport).

Colonel d'Abovine, outside the regular structure, attached to the 4th bureau.

Commander of Paty de Clam, outside the regular framework, attached to the 3rd Bureau (military operations and general army instructions.

Archivist Gribelin, Principal Archivist, 2nd Class, attached to the 2nd office (organization and tactics of foreign armies).

Police Commissioner Cochefert, head of security, who has pro-yielded to the arrest of Dreyfus.

Commander Henry, battalion commander in the 158th Infantry Regiment fanterie, attached to the 2^d office.

Commander Bertin Mourot, outside the regular framework, attached to the 4th bureau.

Captain Bretaud, engineering captain, outside the regular service, attached to 4th office.

Captain Besse, artillery captain, detached, attached to 4th office.

Commander Mercier-Milon, battalion commander of infantry, outside the regular framework, attached to the 3rd office.

Captain Boullenger, artillery captain outside the regular corps, attached to the 4th office.

Lieutenant-Colonel Colard, of the private staff of the... tillerie, attached to the 2nd office.

Captain Brault, of the 48th Infantry, attached to the leadership Infantry 2nd Bureau (Organization and Training of the Infantry) terie).

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 93

threat. Some claim that Dreyfus knew that In three years Germany would declare war on us and would invade us again, which, in the eyes of the traitor, would constitute his revenge; others, that Dreyfus would rehabilitated after three years of detention, thanks to influence of his friends.

What is certain is that in the first quin- Week of October 1897, a campaign in favor of the traitor Dreyfus, whom they tried to portray as a victim of a miscarriage of justice, was undertaken by a group of - Jews, at the head of whom was the Protestant Scheu- ner-Kestner, Vice President of the Senate.

Le Figaro published a long diatribe throwing the soup- con on a large number of army officers; finally, Mr. Mathicu Dreyfus, brother of the condemned man, in a letter to the Minister of War, denounced, by naming him, a an officer who was no longer part of the army, such as being the author of the treason (1), and of the memorandum on the Captain Sibille of the 27th Infantry Regiment (same service) than the previous one).

Commander Gendron.

Captain Maistre, infantry captain, detached, attached to the 2nd bureau of the general staff.

Captain Tocanne, of the 95th Infantry Regiment, trainee at the general staff.

Captain Dervieu, infantry captain, detached, attached to the general staff (2nd office).

Captain Roy, of the 78th Infantry (same service as the pre-previous).

Captain Cuny, attached to the general staff.

Captain Chuton, attached to the Ministry of War.

The four experts: Messrs. Gobert, Pelletier, Teyssonnières and Charavay.

Finally, Mr. Bertillon, head of forensic identification.

(1) The original of this letter was, in fact, received by Mr. General Billot, Minister of War: -

"The sole basis for the accusation leveled against me in 1894 unfortunate brother, is a missive letter, unsigned, undated, establishing that confidential military documents have been handed over to an agent of a foreign power.

I have the honor to inform you that the author of this production of which - Dreyfus would have been condemned by the Court-martial.

94 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

At the request of this officer, Mr. Esterhazy, and after an interpellation by Mr. de Mun in the Chamber, the general-General Billot announced that an investigation had been opened.

Then, to defend Dreyfus, the following entered the fray: fine flower of the Protestant party: Scheurer-Kestner, Monod (4), de Rougemont, Trarieux, Leblois, Ranc, Crépious Jasmine, etc., etc.

The piece is by Count Walsin-Esterhazy, infantry commander-terrie, placed on inactive status due to temporary infirmities, in the spring last time.

Commander Walsin-Esterhazy's handwriting is identical to that of this room. It will be very easy for you, sir.
ministre, to obtain from you some of this officer's writing.

I am, moreover, ready to tell you where you could to find letters from him, of indisputable authenticity and from a date prior to my brother's arrest.

I cannot doubt, Mr. Minister, that, knowing the perpetrator of the treason for which my brother was condemned,
"If you do not do swift justice,"

Please accept, Mr. Minister, the expression of my deepest respect.
respect.

Maruwu Deryrus.

(4. The Authority of November 27, 1897 published the letter of Mr. Gabriel Monod, member of the Institute, professor at the School normal and at the school of advanced studies, addressed to Le Temps, letter in which he affirms his conviction that Dreyfus would not be covered up pable.

Here is the essential passage:

"But all these circumstances only created a presumption, not a certainty. One can admit to bouts of madness.
criminal. The now-famous article, published in 1896, by Le Morning, which clearly emanated from a character mixed with very ready for the trial and which gave the text for the first time and the facsimile of the document attributed to Dreyfus prompted me to to continue my investigation by reinforcing my doubts. It resulted from this article, this slip, where two out of five experts had refusing to acknowledge Dreyfus's hand, had been the only evidence on which the conviction was based, because one could not legally take into account a communicative document screwed after the fact by the judges, without the knowledge of the accused and the defender's sister, of whom we know neither the guarantees of authenticity nor the date.

And the Masonic Review of December 2, 1897, wrote, page 346:

French Protestants may think that after the Jews, their turn would come, and it would be wise not to let the first designated victims be crushed for preparation—then their elimination.

nor its origin, and which, it is said, contained only an initial open to all interpretations.

Without getting in touch with the captain's family, because I was keen to avoid personal influences, I obtained through a third of the facsimiles of the memorandum and several letters from Dreyfus from various dates and I carefully compared the handwriting; I also had them examined by a very skilled graphologist. My friends who reached the same conclusion as me.

I believe I can state that the slip cannot be of the Dreyfus's hand. In the eyes of an inexperienced observer or warned, the two writings may have a certain resemblance—white, but, if we analyze them, we realize that all the de-Tails and the character of the calligraphy differ. If Dreyfus had He wrote this slip, distorting his handwriting. He would have adopted a type much more different from his own hand, and on the other hand he would have betrayed his graphic habits with isolated strokes.

I believed I could conclude from this dual investigation into the border-dereau and on the person of Dreyfus that everything conspired to me to convince him that he was the victim of a deplorable error. I am having arrived at this conviction alone, without having been influenced by anyone—none of those who dealt with this matter. It was claimed that I had positioned myself as Dreyfus's defender. I didn't believe it, and I explained above why I was destined to play this role. It's a personal need for conscience, a pure scruple of righteousness. This situation forced me to shed light on this painful matter. I could be wrong, I would even say: I would like to be told—showed that I am mistaken, for I would thus escape this torture. It's wrong to think that my country condemned an innocent person to a Such a punishment for such a crime. But I don't think I'm mistaken: I don't believe I gave in, convincing myself of his innocence. Dreyfus, to a chimerical Don Quixote, nor to have been a confession—I, a descendant of the persecuted, have been driven by the Vengeance that I have tested by seeing hatreds of religion and race intertwined with a purely matter of justice and patriotism, and driven by the desire to defending a Jew, at a time when Jews are the object of prejudice deemed cruel and petty persecutions. I do not suspect, moreover, their good faith and impartiality in no way reflect the honorable officers who made up the war council. I am convinced

This

96 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

-The Dreyfus affair, thus considered, takes on a character more general and deeper; it is a social question which struggles about this accident.

e

Further on, page 547:

To awaken the cruel medieval hatred against the Jews, this undermines respect for freedom of conscience, teaching brought about by the Revolution.

After the Jews, who were easier to attack than anyone else, will come the Protestants, then the Freemasons, then the simple free thinkers.

Dreyfus sold out France; he was rightly condemned. As a traitor, this is called stirring up hatred by means of... geuse.

The good French, finally moved, become angry at the Jews, and the pack of Jews, Huguenots, and brothers three points to shout that these good Frenchmen are clericscaux.

As soon as you mess with those idiots, they'll...

treat them as clerical.

that they condemned Dreyfus with sorrow, to obey their conscience. But anyone who has studied judicial history knows that every court is fallible, and it suffices to remember in under what conditions did the Drey- trial occur and develop? was to understand and excuse the mistake made then by the judges, if they have committed one. As for those who claim that Revising the trial would be an insult to the army, I don't know what that they mean. No shame should be attached to a mistake conscientiously committed and conscientiously corrected ready. Wouldn't the whole army, on the contrary, rejoice in to see the impeccable bodies of our artillery officers washed of the stain that Captain Dreyfus's alleged treason has made to rebound on him?

Please accept. GaBrtez Monon.

On January 10, 1898, the newspapers published a new letter

. by Gabriel Monod defending Dreyfus.

The same Gabriel Monod also published letters in which he praised the patriotism (?) of Mathieu Dreyfus, brother of traitor and other members of his family. We will see later:

, ee what is Mathieu Dreyfus.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 97

Doctors, as a remedy for the common cold, have made an even greater intellectual effort by calling it coronary.

For twenty-five years, the Jewish, Freemason, pro- trio testing, found nothing other than the epithet clerical.

®

| L +s

This entry of Protestantism onto the scene in favor of Dreyfus was, if we are to believe Mr. Charles Roger, the result of an international conspiracy.

'The Dreyfus affair,' he wrote in L'Intransigeant du January 40, 1898, is a matter of race (1).

(1) This opinion, which is ours, is also that of Mr. Georges Thiébaud, who wrote in L'Eclair on January 11, 1893:

"When the Dreyfus affair, in which the Jews, very imprudently, made a Jewish affair, began to appear, the protesters many resolved to give the Jews their full support, in the public authorities they lead, in the newspapers they own and in the foreign press with which they correspond.

Both sides have made a review of the trial Dreyfus, the common platform for resistance to anti-Semitism progressing ism, and the restoration of their shaken influence and wavering in its influence over the government and public opinion. It is this pact that we owe to the promotion of Mr. Scheurer-Kestner, Protestant, flanked by Mr. Gabriel Monod, Protestant; and Mr. Tra-Rieux, a Protestant; and Mr. Leblois, a Protestant, to name but a few those who held public demonstrations.

We could add Mr. Hyacinthe Loyson to their team today, who, after leaving Catholicism only to fail in his avatar of rue d'Assas, finally threw himself into her arms, Moreover, the Protestants were not very open-minded, and this has already been done to the intention of the conferences at the Oratory.

The intervention of Protestants in the Dreyfus affair is so evident that in the Senate, where Protestants are in the proportion With a vote of eighteen percent, the government encountered many challenges. This presents more difficulties than in the Chamber, where the proportion is not than eleven percent. The review of the Dreyfus trial embraces All this, for the high reason that, in the battle which is taking place In this book, what is really at stake is not the traitor's freedom, but the autonomy of a government, the independence of a people.

6

98 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The Jews mock the traitor of Devil's Island as of Adam's sin. What is needed is to cleanse Israel of the a stain that threatens to weigh eternally on the flock and to hinder its progress, its evolution through the world, by marking it forever with its suspicion of infamy the cloak with which the Russians and the The Germans, who are wiser than we are, forbid the Jews' access to ranks in the army.

It was therefore urgent, after the condemnation of the Jew Dreyto react, to stop the movement of repulsion provoked such profound repulsion was felt by all the Jewish officers. it was bearable that many of them had to surrender their stripes. 2

The Zionist Congress of Basel.

It was for this purpose that a meeting was held in Basel in January of last year, the Zionist congress where they met all the general staffs of cosmopolitan Jewry, reinforced delegates from the various Protestant sects who seized the opportunity to play a role and to go against the current of indifference against which Lutherans and Calvinists struggle—then for many years.

The alliance between Protestantism and Judaism was a strength.

And each one, on their own, fully intended to use this strength to his personal profit, even if, once the result is achieved, he were to draw his reverence on the day of settling accounts.

Pastor Gunther.

Each country was represented at the Basel congress. Germany had delegated Pastor Gunther, who plays at court from Berlin the role of Grand Almoner and Privy Councillor of William II, both religious and political: a father The chair, with a small foot.

During the very lively debates that took place on the foundations of the organization, the various committees and subcommittees international agents tasked with propaganda in favor of a During Dreyfus's rehabilitation, Pastor Gunther often took the lead.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 99

he spoke and insisted on this point: that what mattered most was The ultimate goal was less the traitor's freedom than the profound doubt cast among the people, doubt that was necessary to be firmly ingrained in people's minds at all costs.

The Jews, on the contrary, leaned towards revising the trial.

These discussions of principle did not, moreover, divide the

At no point did the congress participants.

We agreed, and this was the essential point, on the ability to create and maintain in France, Belgium, Switzerland, in Germany, regarding the Dreyfus case.

And Pastor Gunther resumed his journey to Berlin, with this assurance that his lord and master had been warned was understood and would be obeyed.

Resources,

As for the resources intended to form the fund of the international pact and, one might say, the real conspiracy international agreement thus concluded, it was the Alliance Israélite Universelle—saddle who took it upon himself to gather and centralize them.

The initial funds were provided by a voluntary donation. of each of the members of the Alliance.

Then it was agreed that subscription lists would be addressed to all rabbis in France and abroad.

Every Israelite family was asked to contribute. It is not no small provincial merchant who did not contribute his louis. There is not a miserable German Jew who has not shed | his mark or his thaler,

It was a Parisian banker—turned—broker who took charge of the Treasury department.

On October 1st, he had four million in the bank.

On the 45th, a wealthy Protestant banker from Paris, in charge of the detailing the payments, he withdrew three million at once. had payments made into his account at the Bank of France.

Two He

Two secret agents from the Ministry of Religious Affairs sent to The Basel congresses each produced a detailed report sessions they attended and deliberations which were voted on there.

400 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

These reports were forwarded to the Ministry of Justice.
and filed away in the archives without further examination.

By acting in time, we could have intervened and broken through the egg, the effort of cosmopolitan Judaism and Protestantism reunited.

Diplomatic complications were feared. The government-
He remained indifferent.

Meanwhile, the conspirators were carrying out their work.

A new congress had convened in Basel to decide on the date of the curtain's rise. The Dreyfus Syndicate was being formed in Paris. The competitions were largely paid with the Prussian. The movement was becoming worrying, powerful, and It would undoubtedly have been irresistible if the independent press, she whom all the gold in the world could not buy, had not bravely placed across.

That's clear and puts us in a good position.
to support our thesis.

I confess quite frankly, I would never have... taken a work capable of unleashing the most impla-Angry cables, if I hadn't been armed with documents multiple, establishing the truth in the most pe-counter. I wish they didn't exist because my country's self-esteem and prestige are struggling in the throes of anarchy.
I would like the wretches who conspire against His honor and his very existence would never have seen:
the day; but I can do nothing about it.

They are there, vultures or reptiles, ready to devour or to poison his heart.

We can't see them. I'm showing them so that, knowing Once recognized, shame forces them to disappear into the shadows.
to make oneself forgotten, if not to be forgiven.

Here, it's Scheurer-Kestner, the republican vice-president Senate minister; there, that's Leblois, the lawyer, former magistrate trat, son of a pastor and widespread throughout the Protestant world so much, then Colonel Picquart.

We are not entirely sure about the latter's religion;
We have good reason to believe he is of Israelite origin.
lite.

But based on his shady dealings, it seems that he to have to the highest degree the cult of servility, of de-tion, espionage, cowardice, and lies. At Moreover, the spelling of his name is not that of a name of French origin.

He played a despicable role in the Dreyfus affair.

In the company of the Huguenot Leblois he burglarized the secret files from the Ministry of War which were entrusted to his honor. He has, moreover, without official mandateheavens, he had Esterhazy's house burgled.

thus managed, with the help of Leblois, to create a case against Esterhazy, a case which he submitted to the Senate Scheurer-Kestner.

Ah! The affair was well orchestrated; they had by Scheurer-Kestner has a foothold, not only in parliament, but within the government's own councils because 'Scheurer-Kestner was a friend of Billot, the minister of the war, married to a Protestant.

The Vice President of the Senate therefore declared on October 28 1897 to an editor of Le Matin, that he was convinced of Dreyfus's innocence and that he was determined to prosecute its rehabilitation.

Then a poignant anxiety gripped the honest people.

"If it were true, though!" we told ourselves.

Dreyfus innocent! How awful.

— Speak, people were saying from all sides to Scheurer-Kestner.

"I will use my file when the time comes," he replied.
imperturbably.

On October 30, 1897, Mr. Scheurer-Kestner had an en-meeting with Mr. Billot, with the aim of bringing him the proof of Dreyfus's innocence.

And a few days later, Mathieu Dreyfus, brother of
He denounced Esterhazy as the culprit, calling him a traitor.

402 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

claimed that he was the author of the slip (1). Esterhazy asked the Minister of War for an inquiry into the accusation brought against him.

This investigation was ordered. General Saussier, then The governor of Paris appointed General de Pellieux as investigating judge.

Esterhazy will be brought before a court-martial.

Indeed, it was done on January 10, 1898.

\

While these events were taking place, the Huguenot Scheurer-Kestner published, on the 19th of November 1897, by Le Figaro, which played a very sad role in this whole affair, the genesis of his case.

The following week, Mr. Emile Zola, also, in Le Figaro declared itself convinced of the innocence of Dreyfus and bestowed, among other praises, upon Mr. Scheurer-Kestner called him "a man with a crystal life."

Let us see, then, how far the purity of this "life" extended of crystal.

In a letter addressed to one of his colleagues, letter dated November 14, 1897, and which was published by all In the newspapers, we read:

As early as October 30th, in an interview with the Minister of the war, I have demonstrated, with evidence in hand, that the memorandum The attribution to Dreyfus is not his, but someone else's; I have asked to investigate the real culprit.

(1) It is possible that Esterhazy was a spy or a counter-espawn of our general staff and that, by virtue of this quality, he would have been surprised and denounced Dreyfus's betrayal. He might have core that he was the author of the memorandum; but that cannot, in 'In no way, exonerate Dreyfus. The trial may have been poorly conducted-hired by General Mercier, then Minister of War (1894) and which is considered to be very messy, but Dreyfus's guilt was no less certain, by the admission of all those who have examined the dossier: Mercier, Billot, Cavaignac, Zurlinden, Chanoine, etc. That's the whole question.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 103

The minister, without even asking me to leave him
These documents, promised me this investigation which was only supposed to cover based on events that occurred after the judgment.

However, in the Senate, during the session of December 7, 1897,
Mr. Scheurer-Kestner said:

The Minister of War stated that "he had not received the file and that he was not qualified to receive it."

I cannot suspect, and I do not suspect, the president.
of the council, nor the Minister of War, for having wanted to alter the truth. But, presented in this form, these assertions
The terms, by their brevity, lend themselves to ambiguity, and it is a a matter where there can be no ambiguity.

While it is very true that I did not submit a file to the president—neither the council's tooth, nor the Minister of War, he is not less true than I submitted to them documents on which I relied on it to demonstrate that the slip, which gave the place for the accusation or conviction of Dreyfus, is not by the hand of the latter and must be attributed to another.

Let us compare these statements of the man to the crystal life to those he made, on the same point, at court-martial judging Esterhazy in response to Questions from Mr. Tézenas:

Mr. Tezéas. — What was the initial point of your re-
Are you looking for it?

R. — I believe I was quite clear. I said that my doubts had been awakened in Alsace.

Mr. Tezéas. — And your file? Do you have a file?
What's wrong with him?

R. — I have the notes I took. But some pieces, a
No, not a file.

Mr. Tezéas. – It was reported in the press that you had a case ?

R. – Many false things have been said. People have said I was A Prussian!

Mr. Tezéas. – Does Mr. Leblois have a file?

R. – You will hear it.

Thus, at the beginning of the case, Mr. Scheurer-Kestner

404 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

He spoke, and everyone was talking about his file, which contained he said, the most serious, the most decisive things, the very proofs of Dreyfus's innocence. Not only— He didn't have any proof, but he still had Nothing, not even serious presumptions.

That's not all. On December 18, 1897, Mr. de Rodays admitted in Le Figaro that he had made a mistake in pre—"having Dreyfus's defense in hand.

He wrote:

"No one in our family," said Mr. de Rodays, "thought of this." The Dreyfus affair, so frequently raised in the press and from which I had carefully kept Le Figaro away. One day, It is announced that Mr. Scheurer-Kestner, vice-president of the The Senate takes up the case of the condemned man and prepares him a file to request a review of the trial. All the The press is abuzz and wonders what this could contain. case.

There, we were on the ground of information that a The journal should never be lost sight of. I managed to get that Mr. Scheurer-Kestner "opened up" his file to us, following an expression that has often been used in the press at that time. The revelation that another officer The possibility that the document had been written deeply moved the public. A newspaper makes the mistake of giving a foreign name to the case.

Immediately, the condemned man's brother publicly pointed out the one he believes to be guilty. Because it must be noted, Mr. Mathieu Dreyfus's denunciation is due to Mr. Mathieu

Dreyfus alone. All the newspapers, including Le Figaro, have published this denunciation, the same day, according to the community nization of the National Agency, and today, at the time when I am writing these lines, I know neither Mr. Mathieu Dreyfus, nor his family, and I have never seen either of them.

What emerges from Mr. de Rodays' statements, made So, Mr. Albert Monniot, note that Scheurer-Kestner hadn't just lied in interviews and in his letters, he had lied to the French tribune— He had lied to the country.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 105

It was Scheurer who convinced Le Figaro. He was the one who provoked her campaign by opening his Mr. de Rodays said the file, and Mr. de Rodays is telling the truth. because the articles published by Le Figaro were an ana-complete analysis of this case.

However, at the meeting of December 7, 1897, the following was...
firma le vieux Scheurer.

Mr. Méline, President of the Council, Minister of Agriculture.
— It was a few days later, gentlemen, and following the indiscretions that were being committed and which were becoming more and more and more frequently...

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner. — And to which I was a stranger

Mr. Méline. — I am convinced of it...

The floor having been given to Mr. Le Provost de Laupay, the latter declares:

Mr. Le Prévost de Launay. — The next day in a newspaper who, since that day, has received confidences day after day by Mr. Scheurer-Kestner...

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner. — That's a mistake.

Mr. Le Prévost de Launay. — An article appears entitled: Mr. Scheurer-Kestner's case file.

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner. — I had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Le Préost de Launay. — So, the file in question

Wasn't it yours?

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner. — I made no communication to no newspaper (Noise).

Mr. Le Préost de Launay. — Following the articles that I no longer quote you, since Mr. Scheurer-Kestner declines to do so. responsibility...

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner. — Yes.

Can one falsify the truth with more impudence?

He is clean, the man with the crystal life of Zola!

"Today many veils are torn," he wrote. also, Mr. de Rodays.

Yes, indeed, many veils were torn, many masks torn off, and the man with the crystal life, the—last deputy of Alsace (4) as he referred to himself—even with tremulous voices, he no longer appeared that like a sectarian Protestant putting his hatreds religious, his Germanophile sympathies in the service of the most abominable campaign that had ever stirred public opinion and exasperated the French conscience.

406 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

(1) Scheurer-Kestner belongs to that Alsatian party which considers denounces the defeat of 1870 as definitive and wants a rapprochement with Germany. The standard-bearer of this party is this ex-Alsatian deputy, alleged protester named Lalance, read—in an interview with Mr. Servan, published by La Libre Parole of November 24, 1897.

This Lalance, a Huguenot, always, is one of those who led, to Paris, the campaign in favor of Dreyfus.

He does not simply advocate, in conversations the alliance between France and Germany. He published in 1888 a brochure on this subject; it reads:

Page 2. — It must be shown that Alsace-Lorraine has the firm desire to play the role to which his past and geographical position physics predestined her and that of conciliator between two great nations momentarily divided by a deplorable misunderstanding.

Page 3. – The population of Alsace-Lorraine is essential-Peaceful... Never in eighteen years has the slightest thought conspiracy and revolt did not enter the heart of per-rings.

Page 7. – Ask the voters, the workers who do not sound-people who only want to see their wages increase, to the peasants who do not think that to sell their wheat or livestock well, ask-their opinion if they are in favor of revenge.

Page 18. – We will readily admit that in the com-Initially, the advantages of this alliance will be primarily, for Germany, but in time the balance will be restored and the Joint efforts will benefit everyone.

Page 28. – In short, all that is needed is a little goodwill to discover the basics of an agreement between two states that divide-It is based on prejudice, not interests.

At the time of the Tonkin War, there were a dozen years, if Jules Ferry sent several dispatches to Berlin for To demand the support and assistance of Germany was because he had was heavily reprimanded by Scheurer-Kestner, his uncle, at with whom he dined every week. The emotion was considerable. in the House when these dispatches became known, he spoke to Floquet who replied: "What do you want, Jules only listens to Scheurer.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 407

Because he was the one who instigated all this ma-Chinese influence, with the Dreyfus family, that this joker pretended not to know; it was he who covered with his apparent respectability, from its prestige as third a figure of the Republic, the shames, which, by shock In return, those who unleashed them were harmed.

This senator, without having anything else in his servitude than documents that have been altered, tampered with, by com-pares and unrelated to the Dreyfus affair, dared to affirm the innocence of the wretched resident of the island. of the Devil, to call into question the judgment of the officers who had conducted the investigation, of those who had been part courts-martial and review, sowing discord In the public eye, suspicion of the army's leaders, com-put, in a word, the crime of injury to the Fatherland.

He had long pondered his evil deed; ten-Eight months already, his son-in-law (1), consul in Geneva, has been in contact with was acting in Dreyfus's favor, at the very moment when a
The deserter obtained a registration certificate from him!

Do you think the Scheurer is complete? No! He
We still need to show it to you in a different light.

It seems that to be Protestant and austere, one doesn't... is no less a man than Father Scheurer, despite her white hair, still feel it vibrating in her heart impulses all the more burning because they manifest themselves on the way back.

And perhaps if nature had created him less playful, our senator has apparently not decided to enter the Dreyfusard conspiracy.

Look for the woman at every major event.

(4) Mr. Marcelin Pelet, French consul in Geneva and son-in-law de Scheurer was one of the most active agents of the Syndicate of Treason her.

As early as June of last year, 1897, this representative of France abroad wrote a letter of protest to Mr. Mirande, who had just published a book that was rather unkind to the traitor.
and submitted to him some of the alleged documents, which had to so pitifully exhibit her stepfather.

AWAY WITH THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

That one wasn't called Eve, but the "beautiful cu-bathe".

For many long months we saw her, oh! how troubled-bright, in the gloomy corridors of the Luxembourg Palace town, a huge blood-red rose stuck in her hair crow's wing. And when he left the room, again
He, the old man, was completely asleep from the length of the session.
senator, found himself under the burning gaze of his beloved renewed vigor. Almost alert, he hurried towards she and it was in the small corners of long ca-
"Settes," the good Raphael tells us, not without humor.
Viau.

- Don't you only think about me? My che-Won't white people frighten you one day? Oh! you lose !

What became of her?

Someone, one day, dared to ask, upon seeing the gloomy old man, his eyes veiled, wandered from corridor to corridor-dormice, like a poor lost dog.

– She's travelling, sir.

And the pitiful figure of the little senatorial rag-Riale continued on his way with, in his livid eyelids, large tears ready to burst forth.

The despair of the elderly is always more heartbreaking than anything else.

We made inquiries and learned that the dis-The woman who appeared at the Bloody Rose is the wife of a banker. Jewish, consul of a distant republic, brother of another banker.

`And it would be – it is also claimed – from within this fa-a thousand Hebrews, very well protected by a head of state, that would have emerged – the campaign in favor of the traitor Al-Fred Dreyfus.

Scheurer is not just a lecherous old man
Like the Calvin he adores, he is also an honest man.

The transgressive newspaper of November 19, 1897, informs us of this.
by Mr. Rochefort:

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 109

Nothing is easier than tearing from the Scheurer-Kestner the mask of probity that hides his true face. Because the the manipulation of fraudulent documents, which make up the file the rehabilitation of Dreyfus, is not the first achievement by Scheurer-Kestner. In 1893, an ex-dept. named Go-bron (1), Kestner's own son-in-law, sat down as concus-Zionist, alongside several others on the bench of infamy. He was acquitted along with his co-defendants, not because they were innocent. hundred, but because the jurors dared not take it upon themselves to decide that a member of parliament was a public official. Baihaut was condemned by virtue of his title as former mid-minister, which left no doubt as to his function.

Although the duty of the virtuous Scheurer-Kestner made of to choose one's son-in-law from outside the Panamanian camp All of this is nothing yet. Which gives you an idea of the extent of

The senator's morality and loyalty are demonstrated by the following:
which I take the liberty of submitting to the nation's assessment
French:

In 1889, at the time of the High Court trial, Quesnay de Beaurepaire and Joseph Reinach inserted themselves into the act of accusation that they had written together several letters where the discussion centered on the sums given to G. And the two
The cronies pretended to believe that G stood for "General".

This was inept, given that the discussion would then have concerned the sums paid to G... and not to G... But with Tolain, With Demole and Trarieux, there was no need to hold back.

However, this was later learned and printed; G... meant Go-
bron. |

At a pinch, a few of the senatorial jugs-riales could have made a mistake with the initial.

D guy A

(4) Before the Assize Court, Gobron had to admit that he had received a small check for 20,000 francs.

But, as he was only a minor player in this affair, he was acquitted, however, on this reason, which was as curious as it was improbable.
blable:

Considering, lg

As for Gobron, it has not been established that he had knowledge that the funds originated from Panama, that the cre-said that Reinach enjoyed at that time could inspire him complete confidence, etc., etc. (Judgment of the Seine Assize Court) of March 22, 1893).

7

440 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

But their colleague Kestner, the character's stepfather-signed, naturally, aware of the meaning of this mysterious G.

Well! He, the senator, was tasked with lending his voice to the decision.
who was going to condemn Boulanger, he pretended to believe that

G... was reporting to the general. And, instead of getting up to to exclaim:

Mr. Quesnay de Beaurepaire was mistaken: G... is the pre-
The first letter in the name of Gobron, my son-in-law! He concealed to the very end and did not hesitate to vote for the deportation of Bouto be held responsible for the misdeeds committed by M'eKestner's husband.

I can hardly see anyone other than Vacher capable of letting it continue Thus, people for the assassinations perpetrated by him: and, at least he wasn't asking to be involved with the jury which they were supposed to be judged.

To put an end to the conscript father, we are going to
to show a patriotic Scheurer-Kestner.

Because he has all the qualities: he is not lecherous; ik is not a liar; he is not dishonest and he is patriot This is what made people say, in a transport to the cer-calf, to the leaf of renegade shepherds and all the Cosmopolitan and anti-French Huguenot influence, the Signal, since we must call him by his name:

What does it matter to us that Scheurer-Kestner was deceived?
Deceived by appearances, duped by the skilled trustees? What an im-
It is finally possible that he was mistaken, since he was mistaken in honest man; what do I care if he's a dupe, since,
At the same time, he will have been a hero (Signal of the 15th no-November 1897).

He is a hero, certainly; also, like all heroes, he has admirers.

And according to La Fronde, a feminist Dreyfusard newspaper,
The Riforme Club of London had offered Mr. Scheurer-Kestner to make ten thousand pounds available to him ling to support his campaign in favor of the traitor.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS FAIRY 4141

The Reform Club wasn't the only one that offered funds to Scheurer.

A large union had formed in France and abroad to do, in all the filthy press, a cam-Dreyfusard pagne and raise capital for the costs of this relentless campaign that alarmed public opinion

public and exasperated him to such an extent that demonstrations repeated demonstrations took place throughout France, and that he had It only took a spark to ignite the revolution against the cosmopolitans.

The union banker was the Jew Blocq, if we we believe the Paris newspaper of December 10, 1897.

The Rothschilds also contributed their share to the harmful work.

La Cloche recounted this curious anecdote:

Friday evening, in one of the lounges of the street club Scribe where Messrs. Alphonse and Edmond de Rothschild find themselves were, the Prince of Hénin, Count of Alsace, indulged himself in the pleasure of a violent philippic against the Jews in general and the Trade union in particular.

"I am a former officer," he said. "And I am outraged to see..." my former comrades dragged through the mud at the instigation of those people and at their expense. And the honorable member of Vosges, in front of his somewhat surprised colleagues, developed a plan of reprisal, which Mr. de Ponibriand himself found—would see excessive.

Deeply moved, the Rothschilds filed a complaint with a Commissioner of the circle. Mr. O'Connor was there. He was asked to go and find Mr. d'Hénin of Alsace and bring him to a more conciliatory attitude.

But the prince refused to listen.

"It was on purpose," he replied, "that I spoke that way." in front of Messrs. de Rothschild. I have known perfectly well since that that morning they gave funds to the Union.

This response was reported to those concerned:

And Mr. Edmond de Rothschild protested:

— It's so unfair! We've always refused!
It was Henri who let himself be swindled out of 250,000 francs.

112 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Let us add that Baron Henri de Rothschild married Mr. Weisweiller, of German nationality.

In the presence of this Judeo-Masonic conspiracy-Protestant against France, do you believe that the government-Did the law act as it was its right and duty?

That would be naive. Even if he had wanted to, he couldn't have. The Republicans wasted so much at leur profite les fonds de l'État qui ils indébât la France in fantastic proportions (1).

And to mask part of the deficit, some ministres would have issued without the authorization of the chambers of Treasury bonds for a sum of 500 million, apparently-he, paid at the Rothschilds (2).

You can clearly see that the government is tied hand and foot.

(1) In 1789, Necker's budget was presented to the Estates General was 531,540,000 francs, the current budget of France amounts to through a debt of 36 billion.

Do we want to know how much the hour of the chariot cost? The State, according to the various regimes that France has gone through. Then 100 years? It's a republican newspaper, L'Événement, which will We can tell you: Under the First Empire, the hour cost 415,009. The Restoration raised it to 119,000. The July government to 150,000. The Second Republic to 173,000. Under the second In the Empire, the price reached 250,000. It was suddenly raised by the Third Republic to 405,000, until 1882, where, by a With another jump, it reached 463,000. Currently, it stands at to 485,000.

(2 Since we are talking about the Rothschilds, it is not without in-the interest of offering the following lines for the reader's meditations excerpts from the book by Lieutenant A. Froment, Espionage military:

Bismarck derived great benefit in various circumstances from the indications provided by major Israeli financiers and in particular-Rothschild's lie.

I presented Mr. de Rothschild with his decoration for non-Christians. he wrote to Manteuffel in 1853: she is in very good taste, and he shows gratitude, although he would obviously have preferred to be of the number of cross bearers.

He has no recent news from the East, except that he is It was exact that the Russians were already in Jassy, as announced the telegraphic dispatch that arrived in Vienna yesterday, fists and that he can only bow before those who Vobligent.

But France? France is the gravy train.

I
I look forward to showing Scheurer's patriotism-Kestner.

And since I don't state a fact without establishing the value by a document, I will quote this extract from the Journal

November 5, 1897:

This is not, we believe, among Israelites concerned with to cleanse one of their own of the infamy with which he has sullied himself Mr. Scheurer-Kestner drew the conviction he says he animated. But, for those who know his German connections, he
It becomes clear that he must have been deceived, tricked, led astray to play a role destined to bring him bitter disappointments.

It is indeed a German campaign of which we we are saddened witnesses to a campaign aimed at casting the discrediting our army, taking advantage of the confusion brought in public opinion has been swayed by recent miscarriages of justice, and the continuation of The first skill was to choose, to be its leader, a
A man surrounded by public esteem, an Alsatian-Lorrainer having reached one of our highest political positions.

Mr. Scheurer-Kestner obviously has no idea that he the plaything of hatched machinations is appearing at this moment across the Rhine. A quick glance at Danish friendships-the relationships he forged in his country of origin will suffice.
we believe, to open the eyes of the less clear-sighted.

We obtained the following information from the most authoritative sources, from people who, by their situation, the jobs they have held, are the same to know the underlying reasons for many things.

It is from them that we learned the very suggestive relationships gestures in this circumstance, by Mr. Scheurer-Kestner with a certain Mr. Bodenheimer, whose edifying story is as follows:

In 1873, Mr. Bodenheimer was a State Councillor and director. from within the canton of Bern, in short, a person-official swimming. It was in this capacity that, at the time of the affairs of the Kultirkampf, he came to Paris to defend the famous the three-section theory, dear to Mr. de Bismarck, and for the success of which he sought & to recruit everywhere par-herbal teas.

444 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

In Switzerland, he was aided in this unpatriotic task. by two loyal followers of the Chancellor of the German Empire: MM. Auguste Keller, from Aarau, and Gavart, from Geneva.

Following events that were never fully clarified, Mr. Bodenheimer was suddenly deprived of his position and He was expelled from his canton. He took refuge in Strasbourg, where, thanks under the protection of Mr. de Bismarck, he received the best reception of the Prince of Hohenlohe, and was appointed director po-the Strasburger Post controversy, a newspaper whose sympathies They were never very kind to us.

Ferry and Floquet died, Mr. Scheurer-Kestner did not remained no less attached to his Alsatian friends. Often; He is going to that country, where important interests call him. And He is always seen surrounded by people, even relatives, including Sympathies for Germany are well known.

Among the latter, we can cite Mr. Lauth-Kestner, a former student of the Polytechnic School, an engineer of bridges and roads, which opted for Germany, currently mayor of Thann, and whose daughter is the goddaughter of Mr. Barabant, director of the Eastern Railways.

And, on that subject, we read in a morning newspaper cele nole, which seems to us to sufficiently clarify the question:

It was in Thann that Mr. Scheurer-Kestner continued his investigation, with the help of his son-in-law, Mr. Marellin Pellef, French consul in Geneva, and, no doubt, we might add, under the inspiration of Mr. Lauth-Kestner, his brother-in-law.

Scheurer industrial cst in Thann.

It is claimed that Mr. Scheurer-Kestner after 1871 had significantly raises the price of its items, under pre-the text stated that the war had ruined him and that his factories had were closed for several months.

On the other hand, it is claimed that hard work was done there. swearing throughout the period of hostilities, under the high protection of the German soldiers that, at the request of Mr. Scheurer-Kestner, the Prussian government had units at his disposal to ensure the safety of his factories, and force its workers to work if necessary.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 115

At the head of his vast establishments in Thann, this Dreyfus's defender placed one of his nephews whom he had forced to opt for Germany and who, moreover, made proof of so much civic-mindedness on the other side of the Rhine that Emperor William appointed him burgomaster of Thann.

This is the man who agreed to put himself first forward on behalf of the Dreyfusard committee.

The accomplices are no better, as we know. will see soon. It's not even the Minister of War At that time, Billot, Duke of Frigolet, who played in this the affair played a rather strange role; the unfortunate man did not They were able to find, at the beginning, a word to put the army to Above all attacks, he was unable to draw on his a soldier's heart one of those lofty thoughts that recognize-strong and reassuring, like those inspired by great ones and solemn circumstances.

Was he complicit with the union?

What is certain is that he is a Freemason and married to a Protestant. That explains a lot. weaknesses. Billot is, moreover, a close friend of Scheurer, A life senator like him, and he is, it is said, his obliged.

And VIntransigent wrote:

The Minister of War is truly showing leniency. quite extraordinary with regard to this factory owner, whose nephew, a former student of the École Polytechnique, became a naturalized citizen German.

Someone, whom we have every reason to assume admirably informed, wrote Mr. Drumont yesterday, we claimed that the castle of Chastegnol that General Billot owned in the canton of Corrèze (Corrèze), was encumbered mortgages for five times their value. Business General Billot's financial dealings do not appear to be of a prosperity to dazzle Rothschild. S

I want to believe that these financial considerations © were not taken into account in the ladle

m

116 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Billot's attitude. He demonstrated this in the Dreyfus affair. as he acted everywhere: as an equivocal and deceitful man.

Billot only arrived at the Ministry of War by his political opinions. He did not mention his career advancement. Pide, because he had broken his word in 1870. Also did he receive harsh lessons against which he never protested. General de Laveaucoupet, in particular, truly type of the honorable soldier, whose aide he had been camp, inflicted a vigorous snub on him in front of a A large crowd gathered. General Billot met him one A day in Versailles, brilliantly surrounded. A short time. after the Commune, and while everyone in politics and military personnel flocked there. He hadn't seen him since the The capitulation of Metz.

Gaillard and smiling like a man fulfilled by With the favors of fortune, Billot thus approaches his former chief.

"Who are you? I don't know you," he replied. he said.

— What! You don't recognize me, I am your former aide-de-camp.

— I don't know, I tell you.

The unfortunate man, bewildered, tries again to stammer a few words.

General de Laveaucoupet walked away, making another energetic "Don't know", and leaving his the interlocutor, as disturbed as the numerous witnesses They were impressed by this scene.

This moral blow that a soldier and a gentleman gave to General Billot, a violator of his sworn oath, the Time hasn't erased it. He'll always be crazy about it.

Who would have thought it then? A day came when morals Politicians have sunk so low that the government—the supreme command of the army was entrusted to a giant ral, who owed his entire advancement to the violation of the given word, that is to say, a breach of honor neuro, the first quality of the soldier and of which our army has always been the faithful guardian.

L

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 117

If we are to believe Henri Rochefort, who, in the matter Dreyfus has redeemed himself in the eyes of many good French people. In France, Mr. Billot allegedly negotiated with Mathieu Dreyfus. On this subject, the famous polemicist wrote:

I have in my hands two letters from the ambassador which the General Billot had been tasked with negotiating with Mathieu Dreyfus (1), brother of the condemned man and author of the denunciation—

(1) On December 7, 1897, Mr. Albert Monniot published the letter The following statement came from a French officer:

If I weren't so busy with work, I would have already written to you. Regarding the Dreyfus castle, to tell you what I know.

The sketch you published is almost accurate, except that the square turret is placed as I indicate on the croquis que je envoie vous.

The property wall borders the parallel military land. lying 45 or 50 meters from the perimeter wall which, at this point, closes the Bellevue fort to the gorge.

From the castle, we are therefore 60 meters from the inside of the fort, and We can see very clearly what's happening there.

The castle was built on a vacant lot that had been paid for from 6 to 40,000 francs.

The price and choice of location do not meet the idea of a castle like the one that was built there; the terrain was filled with stones and without a single tree. There was

One beautiful thing about this place is the view. The cistern
It does exist, and so does the pipe you're talking about, but binc that can be placed under the military ground located between the wall and the
It stops at the wall, but that doesn't prevent it from happening in a few hours.
we could clone it to blow up the strong.

But what is most serious and at the same time most dangerous, it is the true observatory that is the man- room Sardinian crowns the turret.

This room has four openings of 35 to 40 centimeters.
meters wide and 50 to 60 high, they are sensitive-turned towards the four cardinal points. The one that makes Facing West, one sees Belfort, the castle, the forts of the lowlands and the Haulcs Perches, the fort of La Juslice and that of La Mivlle and the Fort des Barres, the one facing south, overlooks the valley of the Delicious

The one facing west sees the entire Baltu terrain through the
The fort extends up to 7 or 8 kilometers and includes the fort of Mont Vaudois.

Finally, the one fleeing northward sees the Salberg fort and

2°

118 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

slanderous statement filed against Commander Esterhazy.
Yes, General Billot was asking the horrible Mathieu to secretly send him documents that could to bring about the annulment of his brother's trial. And of these two frantic, pleading letters that the general sent me, who served as an intermediary; one of them contains these significant words:

"Mathieu Dreyfus promised me secrecy. He betrayed me."
"Just as his brother betrayed France."

However, let us give Billot his due that on February 12th
In February 1898, responding to Mr. Ernest Roche, he finally made, from
From the top of the podium, this statement:

I repeat that in my soul and conscience as a soldier and leader of the army, Dreyfus is a traitor, Dreyfus is guilty (ap-(applause in the center).

And I would add that if ever, in the heat of passion,

Forgetting their sacred duties to their country, they were talking about the re-
Regarding the trial, you might want to look for another minister.
of the war, General Billot would not remain twenty-four hours at the ministry (Loud applause from the center).

It was too late; the blow had been struck, the scandal irre-measurable. And this energetic protest from Mr. Billot does not
He would have noticed it in our eyes. He could have prevented the
He did it badly, and he let it happen.

History will pass a judgment on his memory.

vere.

*
x @

x
This concludes the first part of the resumption of the case.
Dreyfus.

can easily communicate with the height of the Barenkopf 1020 meters, a point located on the border and 17 kilometers away, 200 meters exactly from the observatory, a very reasonable distance-suitable for optical communication, even with an app-small reel.

That's where the danger lies, and what we generally don't know (I cannot cite my author), it is that at the academy of Berlin war, a brutal attack was advocated and promoted.
Belfort quayside, near the Bellevue fort and the Valdoie.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 119

Before addressing the second point, let's say that Esterhazy was acquitted by the court-martial, before which he com-appeared on the accusation of Mathieu Dreyfus.

The hearing was full of revelations. It was established that The Huguenot Leblois had tampered with the Dreyfus case.
in the company of Picquart, to provide extracts to That old scoundrel Scheurer-Kestner.

Mr. Gribelin, archivist at the Ministry of War, dehe stated, under oath, that he had found Mr. Le-

Blois, in the lieutenant-colonel's office, in private with him. There were two files on the table, one related to carrier pigeons, the other relating to the Dreyfus affair, contained in an open envelope.

Lawyer Leblois, having already denied it in advance, and to repeatedly, this fact, the seriousness of which he understood overwhelming, did not hesitate to deny it again, when The president reminded him of this in court.

Mr. Gribelin, for his part, has energetically maintained his deposition.

"Before God, I swear it," he declared.

So one of those two witnesses was lying,
one of these two witnesses who committed perjury-gnage. Which of the two? (1)

(1) The following extract from the report of Commander Ravary, report based on witness statements and which was read:
During the Estherazy trial, he answered this question: "At August 1896, taking advantage of the lieutenant-colonel's absence Henry, M. Picquart had the officer's cupboard opened and... para of a file containing secret documents. For two He kept it for a month, although it was the custom to postpone Every evening, the important documents were put back in their place. One evening that Lieutenant Colonel Henry, upon returning to Paris, had entered abruptly at Lieutenant-Colonel Picquart's house, he caught sight of Mr. Le-Blois, a lawyer, from whom the colonel received frequent and long visits, sitting by the desk and poring over the back with him-secret sister. A photograph bearing these words: this scoundrel "D...'s file had been taken out and spread out on the desk."

Picquart is arrested for forgery, communication of plans and documents. secret information concerning the defense of the territory, external security from the State, to a private individual.

120 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The case of Chief Rabbi Zadoc-Kahn is no less characteristic. He was called as a witness, and that's not This was the most skillful move the union made. It was observed, Indeed, the close union that bound Jewry to the world protesting amidst these depravities.

The retired Jewish colonel, Weill, had been a friend of Es-Esterhazy, his confidant. Esterhazy had had to fight in duel for Ini.

Weill, who was rich, had lent him his signature.

Esterhazy had often written letters to Weill despair.

And the Jew Weill passed them on to the union, which then copied them.
to use it as a formidable argument against their victim, Esterhazy.

Here is the transcript of Weill's deposition:

D. – Were you the one who delivered Esterhazy's letter?

R. – No.

D. – So it was stolen from you?

R. – I don't think so.

Mr. Herrieu. – It was Mr. Dreyfus who submitted this letter.

Mr. Mathieu Dreyfus. – I got it from Mr. Zadoc-Kahn.

Mr. Weili. – It is possible that I did indeed hand it in.

The Bar Council, meeting on March 16, 1897, has Leblois, already suspended for 6 months, has been also dismissed from his position as deputy mayor of the 7th arrondissement roundabout.

Finally, a few months before the Schenrer- firecracker exploded Dreyfus. Mr. Leblois spent his holidays alone, in a secluded spot.
from the Grand Duchy of Baden, where he has no relatives, no friends, no interests nets of any kind

These vacant spaces in this location have been used for work mysterious

Mr. Leblois's holiday home was located, as if by chance, not far from the city of Basel where, at the time, Mr. Mar-Celin Pellet, consul general of France, father of Mr. Scheu-rer-Ke-tner and Fun were among the first organizers of the campaign in favor of Dreyfus. The same Mr. Leblois was then deputy to the Huguenot mayor of the 7th arrondissement, Mr. Rissler, who is PM's parent. Scheurer-Kestner |

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 121

to Mr. Zadoc Kahn to facilitate the success of the applications

Mr. Esterhazy's money.

Weill, Zadoc-Kahn, Dreyfus! The Jewish conspiracy is revealed brilliantly. We can guess all the hidden agendas of the-terrifying scheme.

Ah! If only it had been a bishop making himself guilty of the same kind as Chief Rabbi Zadoc-Kahn, all the MPs from the group of non-values, who make the Those who were anticlerical in their profession would have rushed to the podium to denounce interference, the clerical threat. It seems that this interference, this danger no longer exists when it This refers to a rabbi or a Protestant pastor.

We are entering the second phase of the Drey- affair fus. The first, ending with the acquittal of Es- Terhazy, was not exactly what the union wanted. of treason.

A major blow was needed. The Salvation Army, through its official organ, the War Cry, had indeed entered on stage for the traitor, thus adding a new special-cemen to the already very varied collection of Protestants Dreyfus supporters, but this reinforcement was insufficient.

It was then that Zola offered himself to avenge innocence.

And on January 14th he wrote to the President of the Republic-clergy an open letter, published by L'Aurore and in which he accused the General Staff of treachery.

For this feat, Zola was prosecuted before the Court d'Assises de la Seine in February 1897 (1).

Until that time, he had been famous for his ro-

(4) The jury tasked with judging Zola was composed as follows:

Mr. Antoine Jourde (replacing Mr. Leblond), merchant, 85, Vitruve Street. Mr. Pierre Emery, merchant, 159, Saint Antoine Street. Mr. Victor Bernier, copper fitter, 15, Passage Saint-Sébastien. Mr. Edouard Gressin, employee, 18 Boulevard Pasteur. Mr. Emile Nigon, Mégissicr, 9, rue do Valence. Mr. Charles Fouquet, seed-

122 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

pornographic men, exuding fetid odors of filth, rot, excrement, and gangrene.

He would become so through his Dreyfusism.

His novels were nothing but demoralizing paintings—First and foremost, attacks against religion, the society; incitements to hatred among citizens against others'; works of social disorganization finally, in a form that was the last word of the most base abjection.

The campaign he was about to undertake in support of the traitor against the army, was the fitting crowning of his vile works. He thus struck at their very heart, one of the noblest social institutions than its ignoble literature had not managed to make a start.

He provided no evidence of Dreyfus's innocence. none, and he possessed none since he did not provide, did not follow, which was however the first thing to do in such a case.

He accused, he insulted, he defamed.

Finding no flavor except in the filth that had always instinctively attracted, he stirred as if pleasure in the mud, the Dreyfusard dung, feeling himself there, in this environment, perfectly at ease, expanding and vibrating, as the microbe expands, wriggles, and lives amidst abscesses and infectious chancres (1).

tier, 90, rue de Javel. Mr. Jean Bouvier, retired, 47, rue du Pont, in Joinville le-Pont. Mr. Charles Huet, market gardener, 37, rue Saint-Denis, in Bobigny. Mr. Désiré Bruno, novelty merchant, 59, rue Carnot, in Stains. Mr. Auguste Dutrieux, merchant, 94, rue de la Chapel. Mr. Joseph Moureire, wire drawing worker, 12, rue Popincourt. Mr. Albert Chevannier, wine merchant, 3, rue Monge.

Additional juror: Mr. Alfred Baucieux, butcher, 4, rue de Bezans in Courbevoie. The trial occupied five hearings thanks to the defense efforts to provoke scandals and also to the culpable weakness, due to the president's absolute lack of authority Delegorgue.

(4) We read in the Fatherland:

An old friend of Laurier told us how

~

Moreover, by attacking the army, he was avenging a personal matter, his father having had, as lieutenant-nant, the misfortune of misappropriating his regiment's money with his own.

(See Petit Journal of March 23 and July 18, 1898)

With Emile Zola, the campaign against the army began—it was; it was the only one, the real one, the one towards which all the efforts of the international union were being made. The independent press has repeated a hundred times that the union—The authorities had no doubt about Dreyfus's guilt. That's absolutely certain, because ultimately they didn't never been able to publicly produce proof of his innocence cence.

That wasn't their goal; what they wanted was to attack to call upon the nation's vital forces, to disintegrate them little by little little until the country fell into their power.

Zola had been appointed sub-prefect of Castelsarrazin in 1871:

— I have never seen anyone more cowardly than Emile Zola, Laurier told me one day. He came to see me at the beginning—the year 1871, when the Ministry of Defence was using every available means, a soldier of every able-bodied man, to ask me for a place any — “any one,” he said, “as long as I don’t “Don't take the rifle island.”

I couldn't refuse him anything because of the recommendation. of Gambetta. I therefore offered Zola a position near Aurillac. |

He replied to me with terror:

— It's very close to the border!

"What do you want?" I replied, "I can't tell you—" See beyond the Pyrenees!

It was then, after reflection and on new occasions, that novelist, whom we found in Castelsarrazin.

Mr. Ranc knows this story well. He has refrained from... narrate at the Cassette court, where he testified in favor of Zola the free-spinner. i |

They knew that France no longer trusted anyone but his army. This trust had to be destroyed, this trust had to be thrown away doubt, terrible doubt about her, about her staff. One declaration of war and that would have been the end of France. Who would benefit from this disaster? Germany and England? Protestant lands; Italy, which marches with its hand in the hand with the Protestant states.

The headquarters of the plot was in Geneva, the Protestant Rome-Auntie, that's what you mustn't lose sight of.

Also, all the Huguenot press, foreign and French-caise, was she clearly a Dreyfusard (1).

Such as L'Indépendance Belge, and the Journal de Genève, who, in all international matters, takes always gone to England, to Germany and for Italy, against France.

The newspapers of Protestant England led also, in favor of Dreyfus, a fierce campaign.

The Daily News published an account of an interview by Commander Esterhazy, by Mr. David Christie Murray, the famous English novelist who made, in London, a conference on Dreyfus's innocence, and who went then in Paris.

The Times was drooling from the pen of the vile reptile known as Blowitz.

We read in the Daily News (from our correspondent) daily dance):
Paris, Monday evening.

Mr. Zola asks me to express his most sincere thanks. dials to his friends, known and unknown, in England who are entered into communication with him in response to the request that he had done through the Daily News with the aim of to obtain addresses of experts in English writing.

oo

(i) Among the foreign papers that distinguished themselves by the vio-intensity in their attacks against the council of war which has con-Damned Dreyfus, it is appropriate to mention: The Belgian Star, and India-penance of which Mr. Bérardi is the owner,

However, this same Bérardi is an officer of the Legion of Honour _ like Oppert de Blowitz.

_ THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 125

La Tribuna, an Italian newspaper, one of those papers that Mr. Crispi once had in his service and who reek of hatred of France, pronounced his sentence:

"Zola," published the Italian newspaper, "was until yesterday a novelist, polemicist, naturalist, researcher of human documents...Today, Emile Zola is a great human consciousness.

The Rome press association assured Zola of his sympathy; the lawyers of Naples did the same!

On the other side of the ocean, another Jew, Mr. Pulitzer, editor of the New York-World, had his day-nal: |

"It would be more pleasant for Israel to prove the innocence-"
"The traitor's custody, even if it means freeing him later."

So who was this Pulitzer?

A Hungarian Jew, who came to America, was there is rich, and there he bought the World, in which he su-Dreyfus was tinned.

A few years ago, an American actress arrived in Paris. The World correspondent received a letter thus conceived:

"M™ YZ is coming to Paris to give birth clandestinely-
"Please send us two columns by Sunday."

This is the man, a worthy champion of the cause of

_ Dreyfus... |

The Germans, no less Protestant, were entering scene. to

Mr. von Bulow declared, from the Reichstag rostrum, that Dreyfus had not betrayed his country in favor of Germany.

And L'Indépendance belge wrote:

We can see all the damage that an imprudent controversy could cause.
to address this contradiction between the official organs of the government
German government and French government.

No doubt, that's where the possibility of a a diplomatic incident in which all those who

126 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

rightly or wrongly believe in Dreyfus's innocence and who They are demanding a review of his trial. That's where it is.
the potential source of an international difficulty.

We will go to war if necessary to save Drey-fuse.

Le Petit Journal reports on the government's attitude from Berlin:

"It was the unknown factor in the Zola trial that determined lini-insolent initiative of Mr. de Bulow.

"There is competition on the other side of our borders."
in hostility, as if the approach of serious events-ments of general complications grouped all these animosities in the tension of the common effort.

"That is why the champion of this entire army of in-Zola, the paragon of this conspiracy, receives ~ hundreds of daily messages of congratulations foreigners.

In turn, the Dutch Protestants began to Ja part :

At the Amsterdam theatre, a play was performed in which,
under the pretext of defending Dreyfus, they were dragging their feet in the mud of the French generals.

It was titled: Dreyfus, the martyr of Devil's Island.

But the day of Zola's judgment was approaching, and the German threats intensified, because once again
The Dreyfus affair was a setup by the Israeli-Palestinian alliance.
Lite, Freemason and Protestant from all over Europe.

We read in L'Éclair of January 28, 1898:

Our conviction that the first court-martial did indeed
Those who say otherwise judged Dreyfus guilty.
Having been unable to shake this conviction, – we are entitled to the honor-writer of letters from Germany, and immigrants in Alsace in which we are insulted.

These letters promise us an imminent invasion of armies of William II triumphant.

Defending French officers against Dreyfus and his friends,

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 127

It means exposing oneself to the hatred and insults of the Germans.
These facts speak for themselves.

Zola was sentenced to one year in prison, to the great German fury.

The National Zeitung described the verdict as a "victory"
of fear"; Voss's Gazette wrote that with the help
The jurors had strangled justice, thanks to a cynical judge.
before the idol of a patriotism of dubious quality.

The Berliner Tageblatt, whose Paris correspondent
he called the French officers corrupt praetorians, dared to say:

"We have buried our last hope-
"I'm tired of living with the French on a peaceful footing."

The Post Office printed that Zola's condemnation was the victory of chauvinism. She added: Germany has the duty to remain vigilant, because France will perhaps led down new paths.

Our good friends the Italians came back to the rescue.
We will judge for ourselves by the following quotes from the Tribuna.
The article was titled: "Long live Zola!"

"Long live Zola!" That was the cry that spontaneously came out of my mouth.
heart upon learning of the audaciously titanic attempt by the great novelist.

Long live Zola! And if French youth, to whom he dedicated himself so nobly addressed, did not answer him or answered him poorly, of the The Italian youth responded to him, and responded well. She told him, this young woman, that she too admired his courageous dedication to a cause abandoned by almost all.

But Zola, being French, either didn't know how or didn't want to

to say everything that we, who are not French, can say.

He accused the guilty parties, he accused the colonels, the generals

Generals, even the court-martial: he did not accuse the real one, the only one, the main culprit of judicial Vinfamy who was committed: French militarism!

To this idol, the government, the people, and parliament have willingly sacrificed a victim, in their barbaric atavism!

—

ned

428 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Look at the intellectual decadence we've fallen into! Paris.

Finally, in conclusion:

You're scared, that's all! You're scared, what a world! know that, not just one, but many, but beautiful— Your officers have betrayed you; — you fear that The full extent of the cancer of your militarism is not revealed to astonished eyes of Europe; — you are afraid of losing this preslige that, with the help of the lies of the chauvimeme; you You are a sure thing...

Le Soir very rightly added:

"Ah! Yes, Mr. Zola can be proud of his work. Here's some of it."
the first and most certain results: our army li-'open to insults, to slander from foreign reptiles. The France's worst enemies applauding with both hands and gathering the mud that fell from the pen of the one who writes-
"He saw the Debacle, only to throw it in our faces."

Meanwhile, Mr. de Mahy was shouting from the tribune of the Bedroom :

I am anti-clerical, an enemy of all forms of clericalism.
but the intrusion into our affairs of a cosmopolitan union, confessional and financial, half Jewish and half Methodist party, ap-plea from all the reptilian press across the Channel and from across the Rhine which is violating France, which is weighing on the government nément, which wants to force us to achieve its ends, who signaled to us his intention to lead us to the revision of the trial and which tells us that if we do not capitulate he will continue the abominable unrest he has sown in the country, That's the danger! That's what must not be tolerated!

On January 16, 1898, he wrote in L'Événement about
The Dreyfus affair and the Judeo-Protestant question:

It is high time we had a law against espionage and it
It is more urgent than ever to break the pattern that has been laid on France this pile of Anglo- politico-religious societies

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 129

Germanic, vassals of Berlin and London, subsidized~ born of English silver, which, under the pretext of the Bible and the Gospels-Gile and freedom of conscience abound in our midst, oppress our national Protestant Church and provide Cosmopolitan Voligarchie, its main instrument for equality to distort public opinion, to corrupt public sentiment, to dissolve us and us to leave at the mercy of the enemy.

A war is coming, it will be beautiful with these unions.
our leaders and their infiltrated agents of all kinds parts in the middle of us.

It is not without interest to investigate the role of the Freemasonry in the Zola-Dreyfus affair.

After the lodges of Le Puy and Clermont, here is the text of the homage which, in the form of a solemn mandate, the "Social Justice" Lodge in Paris had sent to Mr. Emile Zola (1):

The Social Justice Lodge (0... of Paris) addresses the general public writer Emile Zola, the expression of his sincere admiration for the courageous act that led to his condemnation by the little ones trembling bourgeois of the Seine jury;

He also conveyed his deepest sympathy.

(1) The lodge "La Tolérance", in Paris, to the Freemasons and To free thinkers:

Freemasonry's motto is: Liberty, Equality, Fraternity
nity

Freemasonry is based on human solidarity.

Freemasonry must always remember that every man,
Even if not a Freemason, he is his brother.

Freemasonry imposes no limits on the search for the truth.

The Declaration of Human Rights states:

"There is oppression against the social body when a single one of its members..."
members are oppressed.

"There is oppression against each member when the body
"Society is oppressed."

In accordance with these principles, the "Tolerance" lodge raises the cry alarm bells are ringing: an innocent man condemned for the crime of another is to Messrs. Picquart and Grimaux, as well as to all those who are or will be struck down because they seek the truth and re-

430 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

they demand justice;

Declares as traitors to humanity those deputies and senators who Through their votes, they perpetuate injustice and inequity.

to cover, nevertheless, a government in dire straits and a general staff guilty of this monstrosity;

Affirms with universal Freemasonry that all the Humans are equal without distinction of nationality, of races and beliefs (1).

By order of the L...

The secretary: A. Moreau.

to the penal colony; he is kept there because the Jesuit party demands it.

Jesuism allied with militarism, and thanks to the cowardice of rulers, will he be triumphant?

No! If free men unite and lead vigorously- the fight for Truth and Justice.

For the Tolerance lodge:
The Venerable E. Nurser...
25, rue de Ja Chaise.

Thus, as we can see, from an exclusively legal matter, the Socialists and Freemasons managed to escape a scandal purely political.

The question today is no longer whether Dreyfus was correct. Having been judged and convicted, the next step is to encounter the army. to denigrate the general staff and to criticize the moderate parties, opportunists or conservatives, who defend military institutions silence Catholic beliefs.

Dreyfus, the Authority says, is now nothing more than a pretext.

(14) Le Nouvelliste de Lyon posed the following questions which are quite a revelation:

Is it true that former Captain Dreyfus was a Freemason and a high-ranking member of the F Radé?

Is it true that two months before Dreyfus's conviction, The Grand Orient office, convinced of the traitor's guilt, sent a confidential circular to all Lodges of France, announcing that Dreyfus was removed from the rolls of the Freemasonry?

Is it true that at the time of his degradation, Dreyfus did to the officers and soldiers present the "distress signal"

Masonic. The same as Mr. Brisson did to his colleagues in the famous session of the Chamber on July 1st where he almost was upside down? | |

Is it true that despite his removal from the ranks of the Franc-

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 431!

As for Emile Zola, he reportedly told an editor that the Review of Reviewers:

I had an interest in maintaining the unrest because nobody having a sense of justice and humanity cannot rest until this dreadful error has been rectified.

As for the consequences, for me first and foremost, I'm worried about them. mocking, and secondly, they cannot be very serious. Regarding the prosecution in the Assize Court, the serious- The limitations imposed by law are not very burdensome, and at Regarding the other lawsuits brought against me, I know that It is not the government's desire to push me into extremities.

If these statements are accurate, it follows that everything simply that the government was complicit in lin- famous Zola. This is not surprising: the Freemason- Once nerie had spoken, our masters had no choice but to bow down.

Had the government resolutely wanted to prevent this appalling scandal, which he had every means at his disposal.

Politics is not a matter of sainthood and our rulers, less than all others, are not worthy to be caonized.

It was quite simple for them, upon leaving one of these at- hearings in the Assize Court where the exasperated crowd wanted lynching Zola, letting the police only arrive when The pornographer was thrown into the Seine.

Moreover, he was safeguarding the very existence of the nation, He conspired openly, he practiced anti- French: one could invoke political reason, the

Your

Freemasonry, the Grand Orient committee, at the urging of Mr. Brisson, last April, gave the Lodges pro-Vince, the order to march in support of Dreyfus?

Here we take the interrogative form as a simple literary figure, because we can affirm that all these facts are accurate and that it is not only at the Ministry of War that one holds a duplicate copy of the Masonic circular of 1324, which struck Dreyfus as guilty, and that of 1893 which invites the FF... to "work" on the review of the trial.

432 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

reasons of state to get rid of them. In certain circum- political constants, there are no crimes, there is only obstacles.

And once again, the government could wash its hands of the matter. the hands of misfortune that would have befallen Zola if the crowd would have thrown it into the Seine.

As for Dreyfus, nothing was simpler than to get rid of him. to deliver, even and especially to Devil's Island...

But the Freemasons in power, since Méline just- that at Billot they let it happen.

They were attacking the established legal order, the judiciary, the army, The foundations of social order were destroyed, and anarchy was created: that is the Masonic program. The attitude of our leaders Freemasons was therefore perfectly logical.

However, the government had decided, somewhat time before, to publish this note at the end of a Council of Ministers meeting:

The president of the council and the minister of war have in- formed the council based on the intentions that Lcur expressed Messrs. Castelin and Mirman, deputies, to ask them a question- tion relating to the press controversies initiated on the occasion of the Dreyfus affair. Mr. Méline and General Billot indicated- what was the response they gave to the council?

Captain Dreyfus was regularly and rightly condemned by the court-martial. The sub- condemnation sists with its full effects.

It could only be overturned by a review ruling. rendered in accordance with the provisions of Article 443 of the Code criminal procedure as amended by the law of June 8, 1895.

Under this law, the right to request a review belongs to the Minister of Justice when, after a condemnation, a new event will occur or will happen reveal or when unknown pieces of evidence emerge during the debates will be represented in a manner that establishes the innocence of the condemned.

The Minister of Justice having been informed of neither a new fact, nor of an unknown piece, it is only up to ensure the execution of the condemnation.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 133

This was far from sufficient, because of the Dreyfusard agitation She continued, insane and dizzy, despite the depositions. sensational statements by the generals in the Zola trial.

General Mercier exclaimed, replying to Labori who he said:

– Say a word. And I will bow to your word. before your honor as a soldier.

The general. – Since I am being asked for my word of all that time, I will give it to say that Dreyfus was a traitor, and that he was justly and legally convicted. (Long appeals).

General de Boisdeffre, Chief of the General Staff
ral:

– The guilt of former Captain Dreyfus is for me absolutely certain, and it always has been.

Colonel Pauffin de Saint-Morel

– I affirmed the conviction of the entire general staff, based on the facts were more than conclusive, proving that Dreyfus was guilty and had been rightly condemned.

At the hearing of February 46, 1898, General de Pellieux throws out this overwhelming statement:

– I saw the actual receipt, and that's why I I stand by what I said earlier about the differences that exist between the original and the facsimiles.

I acknowledge, however, that the facsimile published in the Morning is the most similar.

However, there is one essential difference.

The slip and the facsimiles

The slip is on onion skin paper: there is a front and a verso. So, when taking a photograph, it is impossible–

8

134 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

It is possible that the reverse side will not appear. To prevent the reverse side from appearing
It doesn't seem like it, but the ordeal had to make them work.

On the other hand, the writing, which was very pale, had to be...
may have been reinforced by some means.

So far you have heard a lot about writing of the slip. The fact that emerges from the debates is that the
The defense rejects the expert opinions of the sworn experts who operated on the original. She ridiculed them.

But, for her part, she brought amateurs here, among including a dentist, and even a foreign lawyer, Mr. Franck.

Mr. Labori. – I ask...

General de Pellieux, very curtly:

I request not to be interrupted! (Thunder of applause):

The Union's maneuvers.

This tactic, the general continued, was indicated to me by Mr. Mathieu Dreyfus, who proved to be a pioneer of Mr. Zola. In his letter to the minister, he said:

"I accuse Commander Esterhazy of being the author of the "Receipt." He disputed the expertise of the 1894 experts. I asked him if he would accept the one from 1898. He replied that if their conclusions were not favorable, he would de-would order others. That's the tactic.

It was also thought that the slip was insufficient, because we kept the little blue one in reserve. You know what it was the lack of authenticity of this piece. It would have been impossible to government to pursue on such a document an offi-
steel |

As for me, I think we've been too lenient towards Colonel Picquart, who was simply removed from Paris for having wanted to stop the command on this piece dant Esterhazy.

The contents of the slip

We haven't yet discussed the contents of the slip; well,
I'll tell you what was inside.
I am convinced that I can prove to you, gentlemen of the jury,

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 135

that the memorandum is in the handwriting of a staff officer belonging to the artillery, and moreover, a trainee.

The first of the items whose shipment is announced by the slip is a note on the hydraulic brake of the 120 and the way this play is conducted.

4° The hydraulic brake of the 120.

Only an artillery officer could use this expression.
Zion.

An infantry officer reportedly said: From the 120mm gun.

I would add that the artillery is very protective of its secrets, and I, a general, don't even know the function-the release of this brake. It has been said that Esterhazy may have known about it.
to the maneuvers.

Well, no! And I'll add: An officer from the Ministry of...
War alone could provide information about this brake.

Never, moreover, has an infantry officer ever fired the piece of 120.

2° The covering troops.

The second piece whose dispatch is announced by the border-Reau is a note on covering troops (a few modifications will be made by the new plan).

How could an officer stationed in Rouen have To be informed regarding the covering troops?

He had his regiment's mobilization journal, yes.
but this is only about mobilization, not about concentration.

These are only the embarkations, and the slips do not give~ indication of the starting point and an arrival point unimportant rivet, where the final instructions must-wind to be given to the troops.

Some changes will be made by the new plan, the note said.

How would Esterhazy have known that a new plan was In preparation? So he would have needed an accomplice.
at the Ministry of War?

3° Artillery formations.

The third item listed on the slip is a note on a modification to artillery formations.

Regarding the new artillery formations, how does Es-Has Terhazy been secured? There isn't even any artillery at Rouen.

4° The note relating to Madagascar.

1436 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The fourth piece is a note relating to Madagascar.

The receipt refers to this item.

However, it predates September 4, 1894, the day of the sa-sie.

At that time, only the ministry knew about the army land would participate in the expedition. The preparatory work was drafted on August 16th or 17th.

I finally come to the most serious question.

S° Draft manual for field artillery firing.

This shooting manual, it has not been in the hands of any officer-infantry company. It was only sent to the artillery; there is no even that very few officers of the Ministry of War who They had it at the 3rd bureau. General Saussier had it and Voffi-The convicted man was able to consult it.

It has since been demonstrated that the communicative shooting manual-referred to Mr. Esterhazy, by Lieutenant Bernheim who to happen to be an Israelite, had no value. He was in business, and he served under Commander Esterhazy to give a lecture to his regiment.

Colonel Picquart's intervention.

In this regard, gentlemen of the jury, allow me to... reveal an incident.

Reservist Hulot, secretary to Commander Esterhazy, stated in the investigation that Colonel Picquart had done it "Come," he had said, showing him the manual: "That's good." You made a copy of this document.

"Not at all," replied Hulot. "It's on the coins of seat.

— Well, go home, think about it, and you

You will write to us. Besides, you are a reservist, and if you have

If you need a reprieve or exemption, I will get one for you. (Prolonged sensation).

What remains of the defensive scaffolding? Not much. thing, in my opinion. Yet that is precisely what the ac-infamous cussation against a council of war for having

A guilty man was acquitted by order. The issue is more complex! It's war on the army that as declared, it was Mr. Demange who said so in his deposition

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 137

tion. Mr. Jaurès said in his admirable speech that the state-Major was preparing our future defeats.

I don't have a crystal soul, but a soldier's soul.
She rebels in the end, and I'm fed up with all these floods of mud with which they try to splash people who only have their sense of duty.

I say that we are guilty, that we are criminals for seeking to rob the army of its confidence in its leaders. On the day of danger, closer than you think, gentlemen of the Ju-
If your sons are led by disreputable leaders, then... will lead them to the slaughterhouse.

Mr. Zola will have won another battle. He will write a new debacle and will carry French literature into a Europe, where France will be erased. There has been much talk of revision.

She is indifferent to us, absolutely indifferent. We we would have been happy if the court-martial of 1894 had A French officer was acquitted: what the Court Martial of 1898 did not want, it was that an innocent man was put in the in the place of a traitor, that is to say, the former Captain Dreyfus.

The Protestant Judeo-Masonic union did not hold
Not for the beaten. The intellectuals entered the scene.
affirming Dreyfus's innocence. They signed in this purpose of the petitions.

So who were these virtuous signatories?

Mostly Protestants.

These lists are only for them!

Those very same ones that are found there and that are not Protestants, have a Protestant behind them.

Such was Duclaux, who was in charge of all the laboratories of – the Agronomic Institute, is thus located under the domination of the Protestant Rissler, mayor of the eighth district and brother-in-law of Scheurer-Kestner!

But the advantage of these lists in favor of a traitor will have

It was also about unmasking the school's current teachers charters.

We now know whose hands are inevitably hostile to the old anti-Protestant France was entrusted the National archives depository. We saw, on these lists,

8°

438 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Mr. Paul Meyer, Director of the School, Mr. Molinier
Mr. Giry, Mr. Bournon.

What is Paul Meyer?

A Jew, despite his conversion to Protestantism.

What is MM. Molinier?

Two Protestant friends of the Dreyfusard Monod.

What is Mr. Giry?

Nothing but the successive husband of two Protestant women, all like Ribot and Trarieux.

What is Mr. Bournon?

The Molinier family's close friend.

The École des Chartes, too, has fallen prey from a Protestant trade union!

And the only thing missing from the Dreyfusard lists is one the last Protestant, Mr. Berger, successor to the Catholic-Léon Gautier's appointment to the chair of paleography The school.

Let us add that Mr. Rigaud, archivist-paleographer at The Ministry of Foreign Affairs is Protestant.

Ranc and Joseph Reinach (4) were conducting a campaign

(4) Joseph-Isaac-Reinach, grandfather of Joseph Reinach came In 1810, he moved from Mainz, his birthplace, to Frankfurt. He married a Miss May. And from this union were born four children :

4. Adolphe, who died in 1879. He was a banker in Frankfurt and was created a baron by an Italian decree of April 29, 1866, confirmed by a Prussian decree of August 12, 1867. He was married to a Oppeinheim.

2. Hermann. He came to Paris and obtained his naturalization. June 26, 1874. He was then fifty-seven years old (Bulletin des must, 2nd half of 1871).

3. Arnold. This Arnold lived in Frankfurt. He is dead.

4. Thérèse. Thérèse married Doctor Schwartschold. She She is a widow. Of her four children, only two have established families.

4° Adolphe had 3 sons: Jacques, Albert and Oscar.

Jacques, born in Frankfurt on April 17, 1840, was naturalized French

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 159

relentlessly in favor of the traitor while Zola appealed to the Court of Cassation.

The Supreme Court decided, in accordance with the conjuncts—the reports of the rapporteur Chambaraud and the public prosecutor General Manau, that the ruling of the The Seine Assize Court, the Minister of War not having not qualified to file a complaint on behalf of a consill of war.

It was this Manau who defended Zola and who he begged for mercy for France.

Manau's scandalous behavior provoked in the country, a legitimate indignation. In the Chamber, Mr. Marcel Habert called out:

The one who needs France's pity is the high-ranking official. magistrate forgetful of his duties to the point of lowering his dignity The magistrate, who was confronted by those insulting the army, is the magistrate. who did not hesitate to beg the disgraced, wicked French by the jury of the Seine, to have pity on this French homeland that they had vainly tried to tarnish with their outrages | (Applause),

Manau is a type of magistrate of the new layers raised by Gambetta. On September 4th, he appointed himself himself a substitute in a city in the South (4).

Thanks to the support of the lodges, he now sits on the Supreme Court.

When you think into whose hands justice has fallen—
The country's fate, one truly shudders.

Apart from certain honorable exceptions, the magistrature is made up of people in whom the feeling of Justice does not exist.

He was born in 1871. He is the famous Panamanian. He had two children: a boy and a girl. Juliette, who married Mr. Joseph Reinach.

Albert succeeded his father as a banker in Frankfurt.

2° Hermann had only one son, and that son is Mr. Joseph Reinach. g

(1) See Libre Parole of October 23, 1898.

440 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

These are the compliant creatures of this or that de-Freemason prostitute or senator.

Most are untalented lawyers or officers ministerial officials who, having no clientele, have done radical politics or intrigued to enter the magistracy. Once in the dock, they had their backs to them. so flexible that they made their way.

Fantastic stories are told about them.

Being a magistrate is so frowned upon today that a

A man from a good family hesitates to choose. This car-behind.

When you arrive in a city, if you see, walking the streets, individuals who have a disheveled appearance, hat perched on one ear, lacking holding it up, you wonder what these rats are Sunday-dressed cellars; if you're a little observant, you will soon notice that some of them
They have the faces of false witnesses; you can conclude then without hesitation that these are magistrates.

Everyone still remembers this scene which took place in the Palace of Justice of a city of near Paris, between an accused woman and the judge, in a morals case.

"Where was the bed?" the magistrate?

"Come now, Georges," replied the unfortunate woman, "you know
although it is on the left...

Too often, we encounter vigilantes of this essence.

Here, it was an advisor who argued for separation against his wife, or rather it was his wife who pleaded in separation-
The opposition was against him, and the courts ruled in his favor.
cause.

Do you hear him reproach an accused person for living in bad relationship with his wife?

Here, it's another one whose tenderness for his com-
Pague was such that one day, as she was seriously

YOU

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 1444

When she was ill, he sang her the De profundis, under the pretext of to cure her.

Certainly, this magistrate is a type, but there are so many like him.

The Poitevin, for example. In charge of the Pa- affair
Nama, he lives in close proximity to Arton the Jewish swindler,
He was convicted many times. On March 28, 1897, he was heard at the Palais Bourbon by the commission of inquiry of the Pa-Nama and the Official Journal publishes her deposition:

Generally speaking, I have, as far as I'm concerned, THE MOST GREAT CONFIDENCE IN ARTON'S STATEMENT. For three
For months, I have been living with him in complete privacy. We arrived-go to be able to JUDGE EACH OTHER. HE HAS TRUST IN ME, AND I TRUST HIM. My trust is based on this fact that I was able to verify a large number of points that one might call insignificant, if something That was insignificant in a procedure of this kind. I I found them to be scrupulously consistent with the statements d'Arton. He gave me his word of honor to say only the Truth; I believe he will keep his promise. HE IS A DECEITOR.

WHO HAS A SPECIAL CONCEPTION OF THINGS, But who, DEEP DOWN, HAS A RELATIVE HONESTY.

Meanwhile, investigating judges Richard and Rem-
People commit suicide to set an example of morality secular and independent. On January 19, 1898, the magistrate-ture is having a bad time in the House.

A Republican deputy, Mr. Gabriel Baron, told him his
This was done to the great scandal of the Minister of Justice.
Billion.

Let's record some passages from the indictment:

Quesnay de Beaurepaire.

You obtained [the results] in these two cases (those of Panama).
and Southern Railways) this wonderful result that, without giving satisfaction to the public conscience, you have left the judiciary to the mercy of politics.

142 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

And the crowning achievement of your work was seeing a Attorney General, who, in order to bring the major culprits to justice Vabri, free from any repression, allowed the statute of limitations to expire.
without setting public action in motion; it was a matter of seeing this Attorney General summoned to the Court of Cassation, then that he should be beaten and driven out of the courtroom.

Magistrates as agents.

Today, favoritism reigns supreme in the ministry of justice. The mugistrats—I repeat—are the agents of po-Government disputes, and – let's also acknowledge – the MP's electoral agents.

Then and now.

We won't see magistrates today.
proudly submit their resignations rather than abdicate
a portion of their opinions...

Count de Tréveneuc. – Those were ours!

Mr. Gabriel Baron. –... and to sacrifice their conscience.
We will never see those magistrates again.

Mr. Darlan's appointments.

I believe we can state, without fear of being wrong, that half of the appointments made by the Honourable Mr. Dar-During his time at the ministry, orders were placed solely for electoral gain.

Tell me why, in some courts, judges unpaid substitutes, those performing the service of the audience for four or five years, have been sacrificed to magistrates appointed immediately as substitutes or judges, because they were simply the sons, nephews, cousins or the friends of an influential politician.

Some progress.

Don't we all have in mind the example of this magistrate, whose name I will refrain from mentioning, because

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 143

He is on everyone's lips and who, from a simple general advisor-Ral, appointed Attorney General in two days, arrived a few months later, to be appointed advisor to the Court of Lyon? Chosen by a Keeper of the Seals as head of personnel, at the mo-where the Keeper of the Seals left power, this magistrate was immediately appointed advisor to the Court of Paris.

Some time later, the same Keeper of the Seals, by a political comeback, returns to power; he re-takes the same head of personnel. Oh! that this head of personnel-Sonnell must want to see him fall even faster! What-
A few months later, this same head of personnel, from a simple Counselor to the Court, is appointed President of the Chamber.

Yesterday, it was another magistrate who, a simple prosecutor of the Republic in the provinces, is appointed, a few months later Later, he became a substitute in Paris. There he was, appointed head of the personnel depa
When the minister succumbs, he is sent to the prosecutor's office.
general in a jurisdiction relatively close to Paris.

And the career magistrates, Mr. Minister of Justice seals, please, who don't know how to bend the knee and rely on advancement based on merit and not on family-Veur, what do you do with it?

... A justice of the peace, in five years, has successively become judge in court, vice-president of the court, president of the court, advisor to the Court, president of the Chamber at the Court and, I repeat, gentlemen, in five years |

The Court of Cassation.

The main functions of an advisor to the Court of Cassation have been the almost exclusive privilege for some years now magistrates leaving the offices of the Ministry of justice, gravitate in the orbit of power, and most often, instead of titles and legal services, cannot be re- to claim that political services.

The correctional chambers.

You are well aware, Mr. Keeper of the Seals, that he Each year there is an established rotation among the magistrates. of all the rooms. Would you like to tell me why the

{44 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Does the correctional chamber remain almost always unchanged?

I know, and almost everyone knows, that the magistrates which make up the correctional chambers are the created specific practices of the Attorney General.

Almost all correctional chambers remain immutable, except for the addition of one or two advisors who They come every year to modify them.

We take great care to leave the majority in the hands of the Attorney General, and I'll tell you why. Before these Press trials take place in correctional courts and political trials, and there must be magistrates there. all matters are entirely in the hands of the Attorney General. ready to serve his designs, ready above all to render the services vices that he will demand of them. That is the truth.

The Dispossession of the Jury.

On this point, gentlemen, I need only read you a passage very short and very characteristic of a work by Mr. Jean Cruppi, advisor to the Court of Cassation:

"How is it that our assize courts have so little business?"
What to do? The reason is known: it's that a large part. acts classified as crimes under the Code are shielded from the jury and referred to the correctional police courts; and
This was achieved through an extra-legal, but tolerated and even encouraged by ministerial circulars.

"A few figures will establish the fact and its consequences."
From 1826 to 1850, the number of cases referred to the jury was from 5,000; in 1860, this figure fell to 4,000; from 1860 to 1880, it fell to 5,000; and finally, in 1894, the prices of as-courts in France judge 2,932 cases, whereas this year In fact, the criminal courts hand down nearly 200,000 sentences. And, while the number of reserved cases the jury follows this decreasing progression, the total of The number of complaints received by the prosecutor's office is reaching such proportions that it reached the figure of 500,000 in 1891, whereas in 1826 It was approximately 225,000!

"These figures speak for themselves. They demonstrate that,"
While the jury is being discussed loudly, this one, by a continuous and rapid movement, disappearing day by day from the circle of our institutions.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 145

So, because you wanted it, because you
If you have violated the law, the Assize Court is no longer seized of all matters. the failures classified as crimes, but only those that we is very willing to generously give it up to him. In reality, at this
At this time, it is the criminal court that is in the process of to become the universal jurisdiction in this country. That's the Brutal truth!

Abandon these disgraceful expedients of your magistrates and come before the Chamber clearly and loyally to him Demand the abolition of the Jury!

A caricature of justice.

Whether we like it or not, justice does not appear at this time.
more to the exasperated public opinion than as a caricature of justice.

It is certain that at this time we have in France the Magistrate: We don't have a judge.

And that's why, in France, people no longer believe in Justice.
tice.

You'll recognize it: I'm not making anything up, I'm not exaggerating.
no; it's at the O/ficiel.

But I can't wait to be done with the magistrates. Everything-
I cannot pass over in silence the most abracadabrani
Among them, a true-blue Huguenot, well-off in a city center.

I don't want to follow him in all his demonstrations
As a magistrate, that would take too long.

Let's take the prosecutor first, draped in his aus-Huguenot truth.

As a prosecutor, he was the hero of social gatherings.
new layers of civil servants.

On one of these evenings, towards the end of the ball, we saw... grave magistrate dancing the jig and causing a ruckus to make Guulue pale.

Either to give herself the airs of a nanny, or to 9

446 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

For any other reason, he had applied a a pair of these appendages that some thin women they consider indispensable to add to their charms.

Thus attired, he achieved the greatest success; one would have
I paid two cents to see it.

The curious only spent one.

The local newspaper photographed our man, and everyone

I could afford it and even frame it.

In another instance, the cheerful Prosecutor changed her red robe and her ermine fur, not : for a rabbit skin, but for a bear skin.

It was in this ultra-magnificent outfit that he danced the belly dancing.

All these facts were common knowledge in the city where this magistrate lived; he was legendary there; Better yet, proverbial.

Under the cover of this prestigious aura, this The prosecutor was appointed, with promotion, to another city center.

We still tell each other stories during the long evenings. winter, some juicy details about the parties held at him.

They lasted 15 or 20 hours; the women were carried In triumph, they popped the champagne with energy repeated. The crowd was large, it is said, if not numerous- It was a shame that his private office was sometimes located invaded.

One evening, tired of walking in the salons, our man retires quietly to this cabin-net. |

The light was off.

He calls a servant.

- Who turned off the gas, which was lit 2 hours ago?

- I don't know.

The servant turns the gas back on.

Half an hour later, this good magistrate, rested, will meet the dancers in the living room.

He needs it again at his office.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 147

The light was still off, yet he had left the gas was lit when leaving.

He calls a servant.

– Who then turns off the gas?

– I don't know.

– It doesn't turn off by itself.

– If it were an oil lamp, perhaps, but the gas. Someone probably needed the light. was extinguished.

– If I knew that things like this were happening

What were these things? We don't know.

Had they been bowing and scraping in that office? ultra peculiar? Had they engaged in the most extreme exercises there? Varied? The liquid flowed freely at those parties. Perhaps Had they all drunk from the same cup, the best of wines...

Again, we don't know.

What we do know is that the evenings of this par-Paillot made history.

This Huguenot is not ordinary, as you can see; He certainly deserved a few pages. He deserves even more. others.

The Protestant Peril is not a sack...

Some may think I'm wrong to put thus exposing these purulent wounds that cling to the flanks of current society, but they will say to themselves:

– After all, it's the truth.

Anarchists are spoken of with horror; but what respect, do you want us to have for: magistrates of this species?

The magistracy, which should be a sacred calling, is in some regions, a lair where Ali Baba wouldn't dare not to venture out.

Vaillant and his wretched accomplices are nothing but the products, the results of our anarchic society.

With such social factors, the bombs had to

to leave all alone.

Writing is not insulting, it is not defamatory

448 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

To speak these truths is to do one's duty, with a heavy heart.
of a writer, a thinker, a sociologist and a good Frenchman.

Is it my fault that the scandals are so huge?

If I criticize many magistrates, it is less for the
The pleasure of condemning them is only to remind them of their duties.
that they have forgotten, – just as I write the Peril Protesting, less to attack a religion and principles policies that only defend what I love about lenvarise of Protestantism.

We are now far removed from the Dreyfus-Zola affair in which Attorney-General Van Cassel played a rather unbrilliant role.

This Van Cassel is still a classic magistrate among the purified ones.

One day, a madman escapes from the asylum where he was confined.
He takes refuge on a roof and stubbornly refuses to want to come down.

What does Van Cassel do? He arms himself with a revolver, aims, and fires.
the unfortunate man and struck him in the leg. (L'Intransigeant.)

In the Zola trial where he prosecuted against the famous por-
In the anograph, we saw and heard nothing but foreigners.

The courthouse was a modern-day Tower of Babel
where the confusion of all languages mingled.

Even the Attorney General, Van Cassel, himself, representing Society, outraged France,
whose name was of foreign origin!

We couldn't find Durand, Dubois, or Leblanc.
of Renaud in this affair, but of Zola, of Reinach, des Crepieux Jasmin, married to a Protestant, des Scheurer-Kestner, Monod, Labori, Psichari, Créinicux, Weiss, Bloch, Weill,
Franck, etc., etc.

I'm asking you why these people are so concerned...
pay for our business.

Zola is sent back to the Assize Court.
of Versailles. He failed to appear and was sentenced to one year of

ee

—

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 449

prison and a fine of 4,300 francs. Zola fled to avoid not to do his prison sentence.

But the unrest continued, fueled by the union.
The Méline ministry had been replaced by the Brisson ministry.
the general elections of May 8 and 22 not having were favorable.

The Protestant Cavaignac (1), Minister of War, cried out very high up in the House rostrum, the guilt of Dreyfus.

It was good; but he only repeated, at the opportune moment portun and with more energy, what Billot had said, his predecessor.

He did not produce Captain Lebrun's statement
Renaud, containing Dreyfus's confession, was wise.

But, on January 14, 1898, in response to Mr. Jaurès,
Mr. Cavaignac exclaimed from the rostrum of the Chamber:

"During Alfred Dreyfus's degradation, the officer who was in charge of attending the parade collected from him

these words:

"If I have delivered documents to a foreign power—
"I managed it, hoping to get more of them."

This officer was so struck by this confession that he was the subject of a report to the Minister of War and he
The remainder of these decisive words is a contemporary testimony.

rain.

"I ask the Minister of War why,
From the very first hour, he did not make this confession and this Testimony? (Very good! Very good! To the left.)

For my own personal account, I only have one confidence relative to Cavaignac. If this man had been sincere, the the first thing he would have done upon arriving at the ministry,
It would have been to close the Dreyfus affair by putting all the
The union leaders are unable to do any harm. That's

(1) Cavaignac's mother was also Protestant; his father @ married the daughter of a prominent Genevan banker named Odier, said L'Aurore. They are a Huguenot family.

150 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

because of the slip and the closed-door meeting they had created a criminal disturbance. They should have been stopped.
and to judge them, also behind closed doors, the Rancs, Zadoc Kans, Reinach, Clemenceau, Traricux, Yves Guyot, Monod
Mathieu Dreyfus, etc., as conspirators against the sũ-state security.

Because the conspiracy exists, that's undeniable. We find them
The proof is everywhere.

I only want to take it from this extract of the considens of the judgment, rendered against Rochefort, following of the trial brought against him by the despicable Reinach, who was treated very badly
by the famous polemicist:

"Whereas at the time the articles in question were published, spirits were greatly aroused by the enterprises directed against the authority of res judicata and the procedures oblique and irregular lines used to breach it;

Given that at that time it was only a matter of denunciations, of document subtractions; that he was breathing like a

a wave of falsifications, manipulations, and cover-ups pieces; let us then explain in what state of mind the communication from the so-called Picard must have found Rochefort:

and the welcome he gave him;

Rochefort, who knew that Reinach was your agent active and fully dedicated to the campaign led in favor of Dreyfus, and who was unaware of the conduct of the plaintiff when Otto's letter was brought to him, he was able to find on-taking and suspect that Reinach wants to keep instead of the to hand over to the judicial authorities, and to understand that it was being held in reserve for later production.

Furthermore, on January 14th, in the House, the various oratcurs had accused the syndicate of treason entire.

Accusation of Mr. de Mun.

The House needs to know that these are very serious accusations. that we denounce to the President of the Republic and him saying that this affair will be a stain on his judiciary,

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 154

This is the start of a campaign. We're saying it very loudly and very clearly. Thus, we are going to witness a resurgence of these unprecedented attacks in which we are dragging ourselves for four months, and this from the very day after the day when The entire campaign that had been announced so soon collapsed. loud noise.

We had told each other we were certain of the condemned man's innocence, and, with this statement which presumably assumed that one had one Proof of this is that the country has been stirred up and deeply troubled, the Doubt and suspicion about the officers' honor shook the nation's confidence in the management of our affairs mid-litters.

Well, I say that faced with this situation, it is impos- It is possible to admit that a campaign is starting again as we we can witness this W'atlaques overflow again and accusations. This has to end.

Accusation of General Billot.

Following each arrest, insults and... tragedies seem to be reborn more ardent, more hostile, chera song to blend sacred things, the army, the fatherland, Ja justice, to miserable political competitions.

It is nonetheless painful, in the presence of the Europe that looks at us, to see the blemishes, shame, the defamation, the perfidious insinuations thrown about the leaders who, in the face of danger, would be called upon to lead her to the enemy to defend national honor...

Mr. Cunco d'Ornano. – That's the plot.

Mr. Minister of War... on the leaders of which we have-would thus, with a light heart, weaken the prestige and authority necessary for victory.

This is an anti-patriotic campaign that must be condemned before all

Accusation of Mr. Cavaignac.

Mr. Jaurès, did you consider, when you came bringing these attacks to the podium, only in troubled times and decisive ones that may lie before us, the salvation of the

452 THE PROTESTANTS RT THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The homeland will depend on the respect shown by millions of pro-military soldiers.
Will they do the spanking for the men who will lead them?

Thus, it was recognized, proclaimed that we found ourselves
we were faced with a vast conspiracy against security from France.

Mr. Cavaignac himself attested to this, and, once he became a minister,
Although he could have done anything, he did nothing.

And the union redoubled its boldness; it challenged
the general staff, and Colonel du Paty de Clam was insulted, vilified, slandered. A magistrate was found to execute-Cut the works of traitors to the fatherland, Bertulus.

And this Bertulus came into conflict with the hostile prosecutor's office to the legal proceedings against Mr. du Paty de Clam.

Thus, disorder, chaos, and anarchy were, and still are... unfortunately, it's everywhere, in all our social institutions.

The clergy has little influence, the magistracy is de-Considered, the flag, the Fatherland covered in mud. Com-
How can you expect a country to resist such attacks?

The anarchists had never dared such things, he said.
Just observe Drumont. If Reinach and his troupe had decided to go and fight in Germany, against the army German. A thousandth part of what they did impu-and are still doing so in our country against the French army, they would know the regime of these Prussian prisons or The naval officers that Dreyfus and his accomplices had denounced them in time for them to be...
arrêtât before even disembarking.

When General Boulanger appeared to threaten, not even the Republic, but simply the holders of power, they did not hesitate to bring him before a High Court of Justice. To carry out this dirty work, Trarieux introduced himself. Now, the same Trarieux does part of Dreyfus's defenders.

Let us not be too surprised: Trarieux is ma-laughed with a Protestant woman.

Today, it's the French army, it's security.
perhaps even the very existence of the Fatherland is at stake.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 1453

to the odious and criminal attacks of the Jewish-Protestant.

There is a conspiracy against France; there is a crime of high-treason.

The ministers F,*, remain silent; between brothers one does not speak don't eat (1).

What do you want the Freemasons to do in power?
do to Trarieux, for example, who saved the Republic-than in 1889?

These were people who were about to be chased away.
by the country, like faithless lackeys.

They would no longer have the spoils; the power and its fruits-
Killer profits, a painful dream. No more tinkering.

No more checks.

Trarieux gives them all of that; he is a fetish, a god;
It is sacred.

He can also request a review of the Dreyfus trial.
He can conspire against France as much as he wants. All that His political friends are asking him not to cons-
They would squirm against their buttered plate. And Trarieux didn't

It doesn't bother you.

(1) Under this heading: the current ministry and the agenda of Mun, here is what Le Siècle, organ of the Dreyfusards.

At the meeting of January 13th last (1892), the agenda of confidence which ended the penetration of Count Albert de Mun consisted of 2 parts.

The first part aimed at building trust in the statements of the government.

The second part of this agenda, tabled by Mr. de Mun,
was designed as follows:

"And we are confident that the government will know how to take the necessary measures." necessary to put an end to the campaign against the honor of "The army, now on the agenda."

The following abstained: Messrs. Henri Brisson, Léon Bourgeois, Godefroy Cavaignac, Delcassé, Edouard Lockroy, Maruéjoul, s, Mougeot, Sarrien. Trouillot, Viger.

Did not participate in the vote as having been retained & the com-
Fact-finding mission on Panama: Mr. Vallé. |

The fact is that these abstentions are quite significant.

Q°

2nd to

454 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

On January 6th, according to the Gazette de France, Mr. Sé-

Nateur Trarieux, former Minister of Justice, addressed to Minister of War, a long letter, in which, please In the Dreyfus case, he complained that there had been no given to the defense of the traitor all legal guarantees desirable, and demanded for the debates of the recent council of war, "publicity as wide as possible," as the the only way to give the ruling full authority.

However, this same Trarieux argued, in his capacity as rapporteur, before the Senate, this monstrous law which, under the pretext of Repressing anarchist activities violates all guarantees. for the safety of citizens, substitutes judges for the jury the state's balance, authorizes the courts to prohibit the publication the debates and allows for condemnation to relegation perpetual any Frenchman whom the government sees fit get rid of it.

Regarding relegation, he said in his rapport, we could not not be concerned about the derogation from the general rules of the law of May 27, 1885 on repeat offenders.

It is certain that the specific nature of the acts to be repressed justifies fully embraces the idea of an exception to these rules...

We will only say one word, he adds, about the prison-cellular ment and the ability to prohibit the report debates. These are also exceptional precautions.
stories that respond to a very specific situation.

And he concluded with a simple vote for the previous law-adopted by the Chamber of Deputies.

Thus, these legal guarantees that Trarieux so vehemently refused-agreement, in 1894, to the honor and freedom of citizens French, he now claims them in favor of a Jew Traitor to France!

Everyone knows, at present, what is
Mr. Trarieux.

If, however, some were unaware, Mr. de Boisandré is worth teach them.

Trarieux was once a lawyer who, having become a political figure...
litigant and senator, sc created future titles to protest against the irregularities of the Dreyfus trial, in condemning-

General Boulanger and Henri Rochefort on the depositions of the repeat offender Buret and the snitchthan Alibert.

He went even a little further, Mr. Trarieux, than the most part of the High Court's justices.

The son of one of his Senate colleagues having committed,
In the naivety of his youth, the fatal imprudence
to send General Boulanger a card of congratulations, Trarieux did not hesitate for a minute: he sacrificed on the altar friendship, his passion for justice, and turned away from files the compromising document.

This feat designated him for the highest office.
He became Keeper of the Seals a few years later. It is thought that...
Justice was well preserved under his rule.

Once he returned the wallet, he consoled himself by no longer to be part of the French government by becoming, or rather by continuing to be the firmest agent of the English policy in France.

Mr. Trarieux is one of the founders of the famous group of the Entente Cordiale, this garden of acclimation of the British gue.

So that nothing would hinder him in the exercise of his duties
Mr. Trarieux no longer wanted to be anything.

He threw away his lawyer's robe and became the simple salaried agent of an Anglo-American insurance company American.

However, he remained a senator.

Mr. Trarieux, in fact, still had a task to complete.
to fulfill his role as a politician. He still had, for to demonstrate his patriotism, to deliver the market French to the backroom operators, that is to say to the cosmo- swindlers polite greetings to the Two Worlds scavengers who have slaughtered in our country to drain the few escaping coins pes to the great roundups of the Panamas and the Chemins de Southern iron.

Mr. Trarieux is leading this generous undertaking in company of an old goitered man like himself, Senator Bou-diaper.

They call it emancipating the French market and they have already submitted a bill to this effect to the Senate.

156 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Article 4* of the decree of October 7, 1890 relating to stockbrokers thus settled the question of nationality: '

"No one may be a stockbroker; 4° If he is not French:"
2° If he is not at least twenty-five years old; 3° If he does not enjoy his civil and political rights and if he has not fulfilled his obligations of the law on recruitment.

This last condition, absolutely essential, disappears in the Trarieux-Boulanger project, article 2 of which, Section 2 is worded as follows:

"No one may be a stockbroker unless they are French,"
if he does not enjoy his civil and political rights, if he has been put bankrupt or in judicial liquidation, unless it has "Eié rehabilitated."

No more compulsory military service in France!

The German, Austrian or Italian slides, pro- .
raised, thanks to Trarieux, to the dignity of stockbrokers,
They will be able to drain our money as they please, but they will not have to pay the blood tax, like you and me.

Moreover, they will be able to leave the Landwehr and the Jandsturm, they will not be asked, to operate at the Paris Stock Exchange, rather than simply completing the formality of naturalization, that is to say, being in possession of a passport for a slightly longer period of time than is customary.

On the day they choose, the day of a declaration of war, for example, they will calmly go through the border and will return, some to Germany, some in Austria, who in Italy, live joyfully off our de-Apulia.

And so that our readers are more deeply Struck by the gravity of these observations, we believe having to borrow from the economic reform this suggestion table of the nationality of the backseats dear to Trarieax:

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 4137

The 92 Coulissee houses in listed values at the
The sheet includes 124 holders on which we rely:
53 foreigners or naturalized citizens;
66 French.

Total... 124

The 60 houses rebuilt or created since the law of im-pot on stock market operations of April 28, 1893 including-nent 86 starters on whom we rely:

38 foreigners or naturalized citizens:

__ 48 French.

Total... 86

Nationality of the sponsors.

Of the 383 sponsors of Coulissee houses in vatheir, statements on the company documents filed with the registry of Commercial court:

144 are foreigners or naturalized citizens;

_ 239 are French

Total... 383

Out of 361 clients of reconstructed or newly created houses since the Stock Exchange Transactions Tax Act of

April 28, 1893:

139 are foreigners or naturalized citizens

222 are French

Total... 361

Nora. From the point of view of the importance of so- capital
For ciaux, the proportions are as follows:

Houses with foreign owners: 30,350,000.

Houses with only French owners: 23,200,000.

As early as 1893, public opinion was stirred by the presence of this invasion of vultures and crows swooping down on we from beyond the borders. The Backstage had to drop some pledges: she formally promised that, before, to-no foreigner would be admitted as a member of the market free. ;

Here's how La Coullisse kept its promise: we didn't has included no fewer than 32 con- houses since 1893 smooth foreign ships, commissioned by 106 foreigners and 38

458 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

French, and representing a value of over 30 million lions.

It's clear that French savings are in good hands...

+
+

Another senator, Thévenet, also showed up Dreyfus's defender. We do not know if he is Protestant.
but we cannot resist the pleasure of washing his dirty laundry.

Because that whole world is filthy.

He lives only in the mud from which he comes, he is happy there and he does not finds flavor only in filth.

Let's see what Thévenet is.

In the first days of January 1888, Mr. Thévenet,
The deputy from the Rhône proposed to the Chamber that it decide that the assets of minors could no longer be placed in Bank of France securities.

What motive was Mr. Thévenet acting on?

Mr. Thévenet was simply Jacques's business partner Meyer, convicted of fraud and who had undertaken
a relentless campaign against the Bank of France.

Mr. Denécheau was, at that time, in charge of information-interventions at the newspaper Le Matin. He was asked to go and intervene Viewer Thévenet on the bill he had just to deposit.

Thévenet was in Lyon at the time; Mr. Denécheau did not return contrary to what Jacques Meyer told him:

"I will conduct the interview on behalf of Thévenet.
Rest assured he will not contradict me.

When I need Thévenet, I only have to whistle for him.
We're in cahoots.

Here, according to Mr. Lajeune Vilar, is the result of the campaign supported by a number of newspapers.

On January 15, 1888, the shares of the Bank of France were: listed on the Stock Exchange: 4,200 francs.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 139

On January 24, Mr. Thévenet submitted his proposal to the House office.

On January 28, the shares fell by 180 francs and closed—they were set at 4,020 francs.

On January 30th, they fell to 3,990 francs.

But since the decrease wasn't sufficient, what did Meyer do?

He will find the director of the information service of the Mr. Denécheau, from the newspaper Le Matin, brings him an article. all written, ready to be inserted, which article was neither more nothing less than an interview with Mr. Thévenet on the issue of the Bank of France.

Le Matin published the article in its January 30th edition. 1888. Another decline.

On February 4, the shares had plummeted to 3,700 francs. That was a drop of 500 francs in 10 days.

The deed was done!

Meyer took advantage of this with all his accomplices and auxiliaries.

This is the man who was the Keeper of the Seals of France and to which a brave man, Paul de Cassagnac, launched in the middle Chamber, in 1889, this virulent and courageous apostrophy:

"This Minister of Justice is a scoundrel who would be just as He belongs more in Poissy prison than on the bench.
ministers.

He was worthy of being Dreyfus's patron and of the little executioner.
the award we are bestowing upon him in recognition of his virtues.

Let's move on to another one. Let's talk about Clemenceau.

Clemenceau is one of the men of the Freemasonry.
the thing that has done the most harm to France.

As a Member of Parliament, he put himself at the service of England and the Triple Alliance, he fights the Franco-Russian alliance and favors-He is the one who wields all his influence over English interests. He is the devoted man of the swindlers Cornelius Herz and Von Reichenach, the suicide victim of Nervilliers and the mastermind behind the fi-

160 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

the most deranged cosmopolitan nancy; England learns policy to create ministerial instability within our country cause of dismay and waste.

Clemenceau carried out this task at the expense of the interests loans from his Protestant employers.

Today, we see him continuing his infamous method-third. He is at the head of the Dreyfusard journalists, undermining those of our social institutions that still remain of-
end.

After vilifying religion, this Freemason vilified-hates the army. He conspires not to aspire to power to see, which would be very natural, but to the benefit of the foreigner ger. He is the most abominably evil man that France has known, since, thanks to Bismarck, it is in the Republic (1).

(4) The truth has come out on this point today. The trial D'Arnim revealed it to us. D'Arnim wanted to facilitate the return of the French monarchy after the war of 1870; Bismarck would not milk that he favored the triumph of the republic. D'Arnim there refused; Bismarck broke it. On December 23, 1872, the Chancellor of France wrote to his ambassador:

"Your Excellency believes, and she has also expressed this vividly © voice, that the provisional continuation of the game of the insinuations Republicanism is dangerous for monarchical institutions.

from Germany.

France, under a constitutional monarchy, will be for us a
The danger is far greater than that of contact with institutions.
Republicans could bring about this.

We certainly do not have a duty to make the France became powerful by establishing a proper monarchy there.
France's enmity compels us to desire that she remain weak and we act in a very selfless way in no we opposing not resolutely and by force the establishment solid monarchical institutions as long as the trail of "Frankfurt will not have been fully executed."

Upon the death of Prince Bismarck, which occurred in the early In the days of August 1898, Crispien wrote in the Tribuna:

"The war of 1870 was instigated by France, which declared it the July 19, 18:00; happy because of the prudent preparation which It had been since 1575, Prussia triumphed, while no one s'y nlondait.

Ensuite, Bismarck's praece was always for peace, e!,

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 161

He is a traitor who deserves the most cruel torture.
that one could imagine. I repeat, I am not exaggerating.
not, that in all the facts I put forward I am averted—beneath the truth. If I were to confide in you everything I know To develop my thesis, you would say that I don't know what I'm saying.

—

Therefore, he was a supporter of the French Republic and opposed to it.
to the restoration of the monarchy."

We must not forget that Bismarck was notoriously French.
MACON AND HIGH DIGNITAIRB DB THE ORDER.

If we want to know now how the French express themselves
The most authorized Freemasons in our country, we only need to consult the Bulletin of the Grand Orient, June 1895, and we will read what he thinks Mr. Lucipia:

"At City Hall, we have many shortcomings, the Others speak of qualities; we at least have that one to be mostly Freemasons, that is to say, Republicans sincere, wanting the republic with all its consequences."

e
ee
We read in the chain of the Masonic Union of 1887,
page 330:
"The only form of government of which Freemasonry
"That it can accommodate, is the republican form."

e
` ee
Let us also quote the Bulletin du Grand-Orient, April 1895, page 36:
"It is indeed the Freemasons who discussed and prepared in all its temples, all the great democratic laws that the Parliament then adopted them, but only one has been achieved so far.
part of his plans. Legislative action has been far too slow. A large number of reforms would have been accomplished, if We had followed the Lodges' advice better. And the Republic will only be democratic and progressive if it is inspired without ceases Masonic doctrines and resolutely puts them into action ".
Finally, Brother Lucipia expressed himself thus on December 14, 1895, at the Head of the Parisian Lodge, the Fraternity of Peoples:
"Everywhere people are saying that we are not in a Republic, that
We are in Freemasonry: the word is from the bishop.

162 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

The public is such that it believes that writers exathey always manage, even though it's the scandals they publish things that go beyond all measure.

Thus, it seems incredible that Clemenceau would be sold to England. Well, listen to Mr. Ernest Judet in the Small newspaper entry of June 28, 1893:

"I have long been convinced of this point that it exists

a permanent English plot to monitor, direct if necessary, we will break off or at least weaken our policy The ties of the Franco-Russian alliance. Newspapers and politicians Those involved in the game are known: among them the sponsor of Cornelius Herz, Mr. Clemenceau seemed to us the most dangerous-"reux."

The clear proof that Clemenceau is the man of... England's dedication came to light in 1893. when he was a candidate for parliament in the Var.

He was fiercely opposed by the French newspapers, he was su-held by foreign newspapers, and Mr. Judet wrote:

"If the French newspapers that support the candidacy Mr. Clemenceau's are few in number, however the Italian, German and Austrian leaves, the leaves of the Triple Alliance, almost all make vows in favor of the success of the wicked man.

Gouthé-Soulard. Ah! that bishop would be right, so frank-Freemasonry and the republic were not exactly the same thing ".

The reader will draw their own conclusions from these significant facts.

As for us, let us remind Lucipia, who presents herself as an enemy of the Church, that he was raised free of charge by the priests, at the small Ancenis seminar (Loire-Inférieure).

Sentenced to death for his participation in the Commune, he had to His life was thanks to the prayers and entreaties of a priest, Father Joly, currently Father of the Immaculate Conception in Nantes, one of his former classmates, who made several trips to Paris and Versailles to rescue him from certain execution, and who only returned to his diocese after obtaining life saved him.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 163

The Justice system itself naively noted the fact or Cynically, however you like.

But the foreign newspapers that showed themselves to be the most The Times were ardent supporters of Cornelius Herz's friend; Standard ; the Daily Chronicle; the Daily News; the Pall Mall Gazette, in short, all the major newspapers of < London.

The English press, moreover, owed this support to him.
which serves the interests of politics so well in our country-
clay.

From Petit Journal, April 45, 1893:

= "Nothing is more instructive than reading the Times, the organ par excellence of the perpetual conspiracy hatched against our national interests.

Despite the insignificance of Mr. Clemenceau's current role, he strives to elevate it, to present it to Europe as Our only statesman! We must rehabilitate him completely.
price, to restore its prestige, its rank, its influence.

For the Times, the declamatory and ridiculous pro-announced in Salernes by the Director of Justice, it is 'event-a product of the time! He publishes it in full and comments on it.
with enthusiastic admiration. This is nothing yet; for to better explain to the English public the importance of Mr. Clemenceau's support and loyalty to the British cause
"Nique," Mr. de Blowitz adds:

Everyone knows that the real origin of the smear campaign-
Denies against Mr. Clemenceau is his hostility towards the agreement Franco-Russian; these are the promoters of an eventual alliance tential between the two countries which are the instigators of the tenenumerous plots directed against him.

Mr. Clemenceau is perfectly aware of the origin of these attacks.
questions, although his speech is silent on this point. Evidem-
This silence stems from the fact that he did not want to defend a a policy favorable to the Franco-Russian alliance, and which he dared not not to venture to preach the opposite policy.

It is impossible to put more emphasis on
the 7.

Mr. Clemenceau, whose confidant is Mr. de Blowitz,

164 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

instructed his interpreter to explain to the Times and the public English, that he remains very much a man of England, but that, despite his devotion, the day had not yet come to openly challenge Russia and deploy the Flag of Saint George at a French gathering.

But he implies that he intends to make to express his true feelings, and that, in order to fight with Caution, he does not work any less usefully for the because of Empress Victoria. He only asks for confidence and some respite.

And on August 28 of the same year, Mr. Judet added:

"The English newspapers continue their protesting against attacks under which succumb Mr. Clemenceau; they are particularly exasperated by this that their preferred candidate, their favorite statesman, to the custom of France, bears the burden of his devotion to England. This anger makes them lose all sense of proportion and all caution is advised.

The Times; the Standard; the Daily News; the Daily Chronicle, Others, equally considerable, hurl insults at each other. between our patriotism and the foresight of universal suffrage.

The Pall Mall Gazette reprints the Times's outraged articles against the enemies of Mr. Clemenceau who want to make service to the Russian ambassador.

It is impossible to admit better than in British thought that the fall of Mr. Clemenceau and the success of the alliance Franco-Russian relations are closely interdependent.

It is worth noting that the London press is picking up with his attacks against our are more disingenuous than ever politics in the Far East; furious at the triumph of Admiral Humann and the happy treaty imposed by Mr. Develle In Siam, she seeks to create new problems for us, more serious difficulties; she is mainly preparing an unjustifiable negotiations in the Malacca peninsula and at-beyond the borders of Burma. These conyuities would make compensation for Lord Rosebery's failures.

To succeed, they absolutely need an influential who fights in the Paris Chamber against the progress of our colonial influence and paralysis for the benefit of Foreign-ee

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 163

We recall that in his plea & the assize court

Mr. Clemenceau boasted of having prevented France from to look towards the Mekong; that's his best title of glory and its greatest usefulness in relation to the English: They know it and are grateful for it. What about extraordinary?

Their practical intelligence does not go astray in subardently hating that the deputy for Var is still Mr. Clémenceau. » |

But Mr. Clemenceau was defeated. No longer able to serve English interests and those of the Triple Alliance to the In his chamber, he serves them up in his ignoble newspaper, L'Aurore. official organ of the Dreyfusards.

Are the defenders of patriots still patriots? Dreyfus.

Examine them with a little care and you will notice—you will see that they all have Jewish foreign ties, frank-Masonic or Protestant.

Even Labori, Zola's lawyer, who mastered married a Miss Ockey, an English Protestant, after her divorce from Mr. de Pachmann, a German.

I repeat, this Dreyfus affair is inconceivable—viable. There are only foreigners there. She escapes The analysis. It is disturbing, threatening, frightening. It's a most tragic drama, the kind one could only dream of. Balzac; or rather, no, it is simple, clear, limpid like spring water; these are the ones who have an interest in distorting its character, which makes it complicated and difficult—gic.

An officer betrays France; he is condemned. A syndictatorship composed of all foreigners, all Jews, Protestants and Freemasons are supposedly founded for the to rehabilitate. He discovers that Dreyfus was condemned on the production of a secret piece that has not been submitted to the defender. Who committed this indiscretion, who li—Is this fact true to the union? And is this fact true?

I am tempted to believe it; but that has all the days in many trials; lawyers do not know

Not all the rooms, some remain secret, that only the public prosecutors or the prosecutors generals know.

Does it therefore follow that a revision of the trial where the accused was justly convicted?

How can even a procedural flaw have an impact? on the fact of the guilt of a convicted person?

Despite all possible procedural flaws, Dreyfus Nevertheless, he betrayed us. That's the crux of the matter.

And would we start the trial again? And would we bring him back? Dreyfus of the Devil's Vile for the revision, like Bris- His son would have wanted it!

It's impossible. It can't be done. A revolution This would follow. However, I have the feeling that France is betrayed by those who should defend and serve her, that the army will ultimately be a victim of all this scandal.

With our leaders, you have to expect anything.

Whether we like it or not, the Judeo-Masonic coalition-Protestantism is powerful. The number of Dreyfus- The fusards are growing every day. The university is Dreyfus-Sardinian, particularly Protestant academics.

The Bordeaux incident, where the Huguenot professor Stapfer manifested his Dreyfusard feelings on the The grave of Inspector Couat is further proof of this. The speech of the Huguenot Buisson, at the tomb of the Huguenot Pécaut, whom we will discuss later in the The chapter relating to the university is eloquent. more significant.

It's a very curious sight, this one of all these Huguenots struggling to save a Jew, on the cult-a competence of which they have no illusions whatsoever. We know-sit 14 on the matter, writes Drumont, who is also of our opinion on this point, the incomprehensible and mysterious pact-prieux which unites the Cow at Collas with the Golden Calf and which par-of fairly recent date.

Luther, in fact, did not hold the Jews in high regard. and this apostle of tolerance wrote about the Mau-

said pages which hardly suggested that Scheuer-Kestner and Monod would throw themselves into the fray to trying to extricate the most wretched of traitors, to at the expense of the honor of French officers who judged with with all the loyalty of their conscience.

"In ashes!" cried Luther, "in ashes the synagogues!" and the houses of the Jews, and these to be herded into The stables! How much of their possessions we can build a treasure for the upkeep of converts; that the Jewish men and women are robust They are forced into the hardest labors, let them take their prayer book, the Talmud, the Bible, and may it be
It was forbidden, under penalty of death, even to pronounce the name of God.

No weakness, no pity for the Jews! Let the Princes, without any legal process, drive them out! Let the pas-their fathers instill hatred of the Jew in their flock. I would have power over the Jews, whom I would gather the most educated and the best of them and threatened to cut them off sticking his tongue down his throat to prove to them that the doc-
The Christian triune teaches not just one God, but one God in three persons.

Can you hear from here the cries that the protesting, if Torquemada had explained it in this way his way of teaching theology and of making comto grasp the mystery of the Trinity.

These are the fanatical representatives of this a merciless religion that tramples on the rights of human thought!

e
ee

To fully understand the attitude of the United Protestants to the Freemasons and the Jews in the Dreyfus affair, he
A little reasoning is all it takes. When you reason, it
You always have to go back to the root causes.

What is Dreyfus? A Jew.

What is a Jew? The sworn enemy of Catholics-liques.

168 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

What is a Freemason? An enemy no less determined.

What are Protestants? Equal adversaries-resolute Catholics.

What do the enemies of Catholics want? To annihilate the their religion.

These three adversaries have a common enemy, what
What could be more natural than for them to unite against him?

The allies are following a parallel path with each other a different pennant; but together they wage war at the Church; they pursue the same goal: annihilation of Christianity.

And from this point of view, one can say that the Protestantism was the most powerful lever, the most terrible, made available to the enemies of the religion of
. son of God. He separated the Church into two irrereconcilable; and it is on this division, by which he lived, that Jews and Freemasons reign.

The main culprit, strictly speaking, is therefore the Protestantism.

As an advance soldier, he fired the first shot of the ca-No, not against the Church. Nothing explains it more clearly than that together we found these allies: Jews, Protestants, Freemasons in the Dreyfus affair (4) which of simple treason has become a matter of religion, that isto say of race.

It is in this circumstance that it is appropriate to do

(1) 1° Almost all the defense witnesses in the Zola trial
Dreyfus were F.: Let us mention Yves Guyot, Clémenceau, Trarieux, Thévenet.

2° The speaker of the Grand Orient of France, rapporteur of the last-
The former national convent, F.: Hubbard, a friend of Mr. Mougeot, came to testify in favor of Zola.

3. Le Radical, the unofficial organ of Freemasonry in France, La Lanterne, La Petite République and almost all the press Republican Masonic members marched with the union.

4° Zola's lawyer, Mr. Labori, belongs to the Lodge: The Free Inquiry.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 169

note that at the heart of all the questions we de-covers theology (1).

The Jews didn't want to, for Phonneur was already well tarnished by their race, that Dreyfus made a traitor and they created, throughout France and abroad, an agi-dangerous situation; the Protestants came to the aid of their allies. With them, they rebelled against the authority _ of res judicata, as Luther (and Calvin) rebelled against the authority of the Church.

Today's Protestants are rebels like the authors of the reform.

Protestantism is nothing other than a revolution continuous lution that will continue as long as there is a Protestant on earth. He is the true revolution.
the one who gave birth to all the others in all countries and more specifically France.

At the famous Willemsbad convent (in Hainaut) where
The revolution was decided upon, we find proletarians;
among the most ardent opponents of terror,
Let us repeat, we notice Protestants. The protesters-They always show up whenever there is a bad deed to be done, an arbitrary act to commit, a vengeance to exact.

And that's perfectly human, ultimately. Those are people.
whose ancestors were more or less victims of Repression deserved, yes, but repression nonetheless; they have burned, hanged, massacred.

They repaid it a hundredfold, but the hatred against the country
The belief that they were justly punished is deeply rooted in their hearts:

And every time they can Manilester it, it's cer-

(1) Mr. Léon Bourgeois did not express himself otherwise at the -tribune of the chamber, when, regarding the Catholic congress of Reims, he exclaimed on November 12, 1896:

"This discussion is a theoretical one, you might say, it is Theology is irrelevant to current politics. I say that this is the heart of politics and that the whole question is "There, today, in our country."

10

470 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

for them a source of cerebral enjoyment unspeakable wounds.

If we could achieve this, we would eventually discover, either they are not of French origin, or the ancestors of the main Protestant leaders of the camp.
supporters of Dreyfus emigrated abroad to following the revocation of the Edict of Nantes and that they are there remained until the revolution, at which time they
They returned to France, seeking revenge.

This emigration lasted 150 years; it represents more of six generations.

Well, I ask you, what could the attachment-of these Huguenots, who claim to have been martyred ridiculed in France and who abandoned it for nearly two centuries, for this country which, so clumsily, has opened its doors in 1789?

If you follow this reasoning, I believe you will not
Don't accuse him of lacking logic; but if, in support,
I will give you, for example, the genealogy of one of the hu-
the most ardent monkeys to defend the traitor of the island of Good heavens, you will probably consider that this document throws a very particular day on the attitude of the Protestants in the Dreyfus affair.

History is written with documents.
The thesis of this work is based on documents eta yec.

Thus, the genealogy has been established in a serious manner.
Monods:

The Monods are considered a French family ex-spurred by the revocation of the Edict of Nantes and which, at the Revo-

The solution, had only to come and reclaim its former rights, This is the legend they themselves like to spread. without lying too formally, but by way of a ter-Ambiguous minology. The origin of Mr. Gabriel's grandfather Monod's position is not yet clear; there is still hesitation between the Switzerland and Denmark.

Gabriel Monod, the one involved in the Dreyfus affair, claims that his grandfather, Jean Monod, did not have to become a naturalized citizen ser, when he returned from Copenhagen in 1808. He had than to have his status as a Frenchman recognized.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 174

In 1808, in fact, Jean Monod, a citizen of Geneva, was ipso facto a French citizen, since Geneva was part of France.

But his sons, through a subterfuge, passed for Da-nois (their mother's nationality), which exempted them from the service in the imperial army. It took them 10 years (at the end of the Empire, the end of the great wars) to discover that they had a drop of French blood; it took twenty-two years to have this claim recognized, a somewhat fanciful one. tic, by the public authorities, writes Mr. Charles Maurras in Gazette de France, November 15, 1897.

The Monods once lived in France, or rather the country from Gex; but that was in the 16th century, and they left it just at the time when this country became French, near One hundred years before the dragonnades of the Great King!

You will learn the true story, told and summarized. based on the testimonies of Doctor Gustave Monod, the Gabriel's own uncle, author of a voluminous monograph - Family script whose text was printed in 1890.

Jacques Monod, he said, "left the Pays de Gex to settle down" "blir in Switzerland." Why? The good doctor doesn't know. Exactly. But he infers it.

There is reason to believe that the Pays de Gex, which was part of of Switzerland, having been incorporated into France by Henry IV, Jacques preferred to reclaim his Swiss identity by coming to settle in this country. Thus, the first of the Monods, rather rather than becoming French, he emigrated to Switzerland in the canton of Vaud.

At least, there is reason to believe it; it is not us

Let's just say, but the great-grandson of this Monod.

Jacques Monod married a woman from Vaud, with whom he had André Monod, who fathered Abraham-Christin, who fathered David-Bernard.

This one settled in Geneva, first as a resident, then in 1703 as a burgher. His right of burghership... The unheroic sacrifice of 4,000 gold florins cost, plus Ten crowns for the council, ten crowns for the library, two rifles and two game bags for the arsenal.

Dr. Gustave Monod, author of the monograph, re-
A sign that David Bernard's business must have prospered.

172 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

I will in turn point out that David Bernard, contemporary of the revocation of the edict of Nantes, lived well in shelter from dragons and preachers.

He married, as his third wife, the daughter of a pastor of [unknown] origin Bremois Jeanne-Marie Korn who gave him Gaspard-Joël. Gaspard-Joël Monod led a wandering life in his capacity as Minister of the Holy Gospel.

When the English had taken Guadeloupe from us, it cumulated the place of chaplain to the governor and pastor of The French Reformed Church. But Pile has fallen back into power. The French had to return to the sea.

From a Miss Puerari, originally from Cremona and pro-
In his will, he had Jean Monod who was the father of the Twelve.

The father of the Twelve is thus called by his son Gustav. from the fact that thirteen children were born to him from the same bed: the thirteenth sparrow (this pun is not mine, but (of the doctor or his sister Adèle) does not enter into the line of account, for lack of having lived.

Jean Monod became a pastor because of his beautiful voice, and saw-
He was like his father; he lived in Saint Petersburg, Stockholm, Berlin, The Hague, London and even Paris, which he had opened green the revolution. Finally he married in Copenhagen where He first settled on Louise Philippine de Coninck, daughter, originally from Antwerp on his father's side, and older-Brussels.

In 1808, Jean Monod came to Paris with his [unclear] and his children. It is permissible to assume that he was not obeying the feelings-no nostalgia whatsoever. This trip was even for

M^m: Monod a true sacrifice that took him away from his family.
But it was about her husband's promotion, who had "Received vocation" from the Reformed Church of Paris, forthcoming to replace a deceased minister.

Jean Monod lived in Paris like a stranger. He didn't
It was never naturalized.

Of his fourth child, Edouard, born in Copenhagen in 1798, who also did not become naturalized, was born our friend Mr. Gabriel Monod, who similarly dis-no formalities were considered in this regard.

Our readers know, however, that he is an active member of the Academy of Moral Sciences, director of the journal historic, officer of the Legion of Honour and of the public education republic, lecturer at the Ecole normale supérieure,

e

THE POTESTESTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 173

president of the 4th section of the School of Advanced Studies and Member of the War Archives Commission.

Between that Monod and Jacques Monod who became Swiss
To avoid becoming the subject of Henry IV, we counted six Monods: none of the six were born in France nor did they have a father
French.

However, this Gabriel must be among us to remto fulfill some of his high-ranking functions. At least the one he exercises at the Ministry of War cannot be accessible to foreigners

Alas, forgive me: this Monod, like all the little-sons and grandnephews of Jean Monod and Louise Phi Lippine de Coninck, is recognized as French, with regard to nog just laws.

What am I saying! They were all French from the womb of their mother. They were in Copenhagen.

They would be, even if they were still fixed there today, by the virtue of the marriage of the aforementioned Jean Monod with the daughter of a Danish, originally from the Netherlands!

It is through Coninck that Monod is a French name! If Extravagant as it may be, here is the story: the stepmother of Jean Monod, mother of Louise-Philippine, was born Marie de Joncourt, and this one, born in The Hague in 1747, happened to be the descendant of a French Huguenot, Rachel d'Amberbos, who had emigrated during the reign of Louis XIV, Article 22 of the law of December 9-15, 1790 is, in fact! DESIGNED as follows:

"All persons who, born in a foreign country, descendant, to whatever degree, of a Frenchman or of a French woman who emigrated for religious reasons, are declared French citizens and will enjoy the associated rights to this quality if they return to France, establish their "They remain and take the civic oath."

This improbable text (1) long found the tribe Monod insensitive or indifferent.

(1) French negligence and complacency here border on Mutual alienation. Is it suspected that the law of December 1790, this law, passed in expiation of the crimes of Louis XIV, by the 10°

474 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

She was ignoring it, Dr. Gustave assures us. He adds that in At that time, at the Monod house, they were pleased not to be than hosts of France.

These were the difficult days of the First Empire. The quality The French language at that time was far from enviable. It led to the regiment. Moreover, since all of Europe was under arms, the Comfortable life consisted of not living in one's homeland, where one was also at risk of sometimes being led into the fire. Absent from Swiss and Danish, foreigners in Paris, the Monods were, serious fools of the Constituent Assembly, and of whom the Monods hold their title of French, has not yet exhausted all its consequences frequencies?

Dr. Gustave Monod, from whom I have gathered so much knowledge... several testimonies, written on page 61 of his history of La Faithousand Monads:

"This law remains in its essential form and, even more so-

Today, every descendant of the Joncourt and Coninck families residing abroad, one can be recognized as French.

The same would be true of a Monod, if one were born later. abroad. "

Mr. Gabriel Monod requested a review of the Dreyfus trial.

Here, in my opinion, is a more pressing revision: it is that of Article 22 of the law of 9-15 December 1790, to which Mr. Monod must be able to interfere in matters with such an arrogant air. of France

Perhaps it would be even more interesting to examine in under what conditions it was applied to the Monod family. We have given that the wise Restoration government which had accepted The benefit of this law was granted to Benjamin-Constant, but nevertheless... less to refuse it to the Tribe of Twelve [I] required imprudence and Louis-Philippe's laissez-faire attitude! But the July Liberals Did they know the entire Monod family genealogy? Were they told that, if Rachel d'Amberbos, mother of Marie de Joncourt, who put at world Louise-Philippine de Coninck, who married Jean Monod, the first of the Her name had fled her willingly eighty years earlier?

Was it not considered fair to decide that the forced exodus of the maternal lineage had been well compensated by the de-assurance of the paternal ancestor, and that the faults of Louis XIV in-towards one were in advance redeemed by the offense committed by the other towards Henry IV |

The Douce would have remained as they were before the Danes or the Swiss;

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 178

during the seven or eight hardest years of the century, Islands types of cogs in paste form.

This is what the excellent doctor, Gustave Monod, after having listed the other advantages of staying in Paris, explained in rather crude yet suave terms:

"Regardless of the advantages that dad's children have have withdrawn from their establishment in France and which emerged- Regarding the rest of the story, I feel I must point out from the outset- holding that which resulted for the eldest sons from the fact that, born abroad, to a Swiss father and a Danish mother, they. were considered Danish and therefore exempt or, having been naturalized, it is reasonable to believe that they had been trained in some modesty.

The damage is done. But we can at least prevent it from getting worse.
Day by day.

Was every descendant of the Joncourt and Coninck families allied to the Bismarck only needs to come and register on our electoral lists. rales; a law authorizes and invites him to do so.

The Dubois Reymond family of Berlin, the Duverdy family of Vernois, including One of them commanded a Prussian army in 1870, are dazxs the same conditions as the Conincks of Copenhagen; they can legally, and peacefully, invade us.

The Monod tribe, which allies itself with all Germanic races and Anglo-Saxons of the world also communicate this strange virtue. Whoever touches it is French and only has to make themselves known. to be such.

We are not abusing this right at the moment, for the good of reason--his that the times France is going through are difficult; but to the first glimmer of hope, all the von Glehns and all the Goods of The Universe will remember that they had a vague grandmother Monod-de-Coninck-de Joncourt who assures them among us the same rights as us.

And these rights, transformed in their hands into privileges, are... will be employed against us.

If the Monod case were isolated and particular, no one would would be worth the effort of insisting on it so persistently. But it is representative; it's our scourge in France.

More than the Jews perhaps, these cosmopolitan Huguenots tend to dominate, to disfigure the homeland.

Considering the seriousness of this scourge, I propose to all our con-independent and nationalist brothers to ask together, by all means, the immediate revision of the law of December 9-15 bre 1790,

176 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

of certain charges imposed on the French, in particular the conscription.

The advantage was invaluable to my older brothers; we were in the final years of the First Empire, a time when Napoleon

Leon was draining France of all its young people to make "Cannon fodder."

No Monod was turned into cannon fodder; all
They escaped drainage. Then came the Restoration.

The air became softer.

France, calmed and healed, grows richer year after year.
The Monod brothers were beginning to feel the strain on their left flank.
a few stirrings of French patriotism.

The eldest of the Twelve, Frédéric Monod, had a burst of inspiration: as one
He was no longer fighting in the war, he became a naturalized citizen.

Neither he nor anyone among his family suspected that he was French by birth; the poor ancestors of Joncourt were greatly neglected.

But, says Doctor Gustave, "when the Chamber dile
The untraceable attempted to overturn Benjamin's election Constant in the Chamber of Deputies, like Switzerland, and that he obtained his status as a descendant of refugees
"Attention was drawn to the revocation of the Edict of Nantes."
focused on the law of 1790.

The Monod sons, "who considered themselves Danish," wanted-
They were going to take advantage of it. They searched for their grandfather's papers.
Joncourt's mother, whom they were only able to reunite in 1825.
They still had to wait until 1830 to have the value accepted legal status of these documents.

At least, "thanks to these pieces," said the inef- with good humor.
fable doctor Gustave, "we were able to register |
On the electoral lists, I was able to be appointed professor Valdemar, a lecturer at the Faculty of Medicine in Paris, is a professor of medicine.
third of marine insurance, and others, pastors of the Church Reformed France.

The patriolism of the twelve was born, as we see, from a con-
The juncture of chance and interest. That's what the doctor is talking about.
Gustave loudly praised the Lord's goodness which extended on all the Monods. The Lord, who is his strength, suggests to him
He has no scruples and he has the address to solve it.

"It follows from these facts that, since 1850, we have enjoyed French rights, although we have not suffered any.
"All charges." To which the impassive monograph replies in two ways: 4° In a footnote, where he states that several of his brothers served in the National Guard, and that Val-Demar, in particular, had a comrade-in-arms killed at his sides in June 1948; 2° In the text, by these proud words: "Our ancestors have suffered enough from the crime committed by Louis XIV so that this belated and meager reparation would be due to their descendants.

Here is Jacques Monod, the emigrant from the Pays de Gex, well cheerfully forgotten |

Thus the Monod family lived for two whole centuries, in the vicinity of France, yet remarkably distant for her.

Jacques Monod fled his country when it became French. Gaspard-Joël arrives in Guadeloupe with the An-Glas and leaves with them. Finally, Jean, whom particular circumstances have made to settle in Paris, lives there absolutely like a foreigner.

However, even at that time in Europe, everything that was The French point of taste and desire was English or German. mand.

Jean Monod's cosmopolitan life had introduced him to this dual culture; his Huguenot heritage gave him more . this superstitious admiration of the Protestant nations opposed to the Latin races, which is common to most of his fellow believers. When one day in December 1808, the The Monod tribe landed at an old hotel on the street of Cléry, a thousand seeds hostile to the national spirit were sown there. with them.

And the ninety years of their stay in the middle of have multiplied the heads of their flock in truly magnificent portions; France, generous and carefree, awarded many of them the most serious public functions with the distinctions that it entails attached; but one cannot say, however, that the Monod have ever been on the verge of becoming French, nor even that they | They have now arrived there. They continue to do so. our state a kind of patriarchal republic, fortified by marriages contracted outside the home.

This regular influx of foreign blood preserves the tribe his personal character and, as they so aptly put it in the Ancient Greece, its air of barbarity among families French women: they want the cosmopolitan imprint that...

Mark could not leave their blood. In each generation, They are keen to refresh it. Frédéric Monod, eldest son of Jean and Gabriel's uncle, married his cousin Constance de Coninck, Danish; he remarried, this time to an Anglo-Saxon, Suzanne Smedley.

Of the children born from these two marriages, Louise married a certain... Pasteur Good; Gustave, general agent, for France, of British and foreign society, married Charlotte Brown: Theodore, to Emilie Lindlop.

Judge others by their elders. The alliances of his eleven brothers and sisters and his countless nephews and nieces are exactly the same model.

If Edouard Monod, the fourth of the twelve, marries an Alsatian, at least you can be sure that 'her daughter Fanny will marry a foreigner (it was Alexandre von Glehn, an English merchant of Russian origin) and that his son Gabriel, our Gabriel Monod, will not act very differently from his sister: the author of Portraits and Memories, married in 1873, Olga Hertzen.

Do you think this can be called a document?

And now you explain the anti- attitude 'French Huguenot Gabriel Monod in the affair Dreyfus?

That's not all. And I bet that, enticed by the pro- You wish to deduce from this highly suggestive genealogy. that I'm still talking to you about Tes Monod.

I deserve no credit for giving you this satisfaction; It's so easy.

There is simply an embarrassment of riches when it comes to documents. and their classification; but this work completed, we open the file of the character in the hot seat at where one finds the esteemed Gabriel Monod, making this pompous praise July 27, 1897 at the Alsatian school prize distribution cienne germanique:

Rieder, he said (Ricder founded the Alsatian school), wants that this province (Alsace), in order to better serve France, retains the use of the German language, which he calls a both his mother tongue, and, through the use of the German language made, the habit of certain philosophical conceptions,

born
The 2nd SL

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 4179

religious and moral, which find their expression in German—the most natural sion (4).

Also, this Monod took it upon himself to deliver the panegyric of the pro-Professor Rieder and he wants, with him, for Alsace to retain the use of the German language. He says it's for better serve France.

He loves Alsace like one loves a mother, only,
Oddly enough, he likes her speaking German.

"It's for the child," they sometimes say as an excuse.
Single mothers who are a little obsessed with their bodies.

Mr. Monod found a similar excuse for his forni-interactions with German ideas, observes Mr. Maur-ras; he swears it's for France;

When all French people think, dream, speak—
They will drink and sing in the German style, they will do the first of peoples.

In the meantime, this is the last one.

This is the essence of Mr. Gabriel Monod's thoughts.

(1) The Monods of France, numbering 250, are not all equally passionate admirers of Germany, said Mr. de Boissan-dri. There are those who prefer England. To each their own, isn't it?
Isn't that right?

I see, for example, in Madagascar and its inhabitants by Libree, translated from English by H. Monod, pastor and Henry Monod, lawyer, a preface by H. Monod in which it is said:

"If, leaving aside political quality, we place ourselves from the religious point of view, which is that of the author and the book, we are forced to recognize that he is happy for the
It is truly a good thing for Madagascar that English influence prevailed.

on this island, on that of France, and Christianity evangelized-
"like that of Rome."

Thus, while Mr. Monod (Gabriel) desires a Germanized Alsace Philosophically, Pastor Henry Monod rejoices to see Madagascar religiously Britishized. Apparently, that's what it's called Patriotism. We couldn't ask for anything better than to believe it.
but it is still a rather special kind of patriotism which Once again, we old-fashioned French don't understand-Let's not come here,

180 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

e
e +

If I weren't pressed for time and limited by the
In this already large volume, I would serve you the geneologism of the old Scheurer-Kestner.

You would read some very curious things there. Same mention for the genealogy of Leblois and other Protestants Dreyfusards.

That will be for the second volume, if the opportunity arises.

I felt like slipping these genealogies into a chapter.

*
++

Meanwhile, the Dreyfus supporters are loudly demanding change.
the review of the Dreyfus trial.

I wouldn't be surprised if they get it.

In the purged judiciary, the traitor's supporters are ready for any task. Look what happened for the Judet trial.

Our colleague was fined excessively sive for having told the truth about Zola's father. Detail Informative: the president of the court was, it is said, a human guenot, Mr. Puget.

Certainly, Mr. Judet unmasked Zola's father; he did use of violent, revolutionary means against a opponent; but do we forget that this opponent is a traitor to France, against whose security he conswoud swear off the foreigner!

And it was patriotism alone that guided Mr. Judet.

By standing up against Zola, it was to stop him in his march against the homeland that he threw in his path an ignominious memory of his father.

In any other circumstance, this would have been an infamy, even against a political opponent.

The faults are personal; but in this case, he
It was in the best interests of France.

Therefore, we would have understood the judges' condemnation

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 181

Mr. Judet received a very modest fine, since the law demanded a conviction; but a fine of 2000 francs, 5000 francs in damages and the judge's insertionsLie! That's just strange (4).

Especially since that wretched Zola was condemned and on the run, at the time the trial came to a close. tional.

And he was on the run to delay or avoid suffering the prison sentence of 4 years for which he had been sentenced serious insults to the army, the justice system and the country.

So that the one who defended the army, justice
And France, Mr. Judet, is the victim of the one who covers
These great and noble institutions, the foundations of all, are made of mud.
Company.

And these are the magistrates, defenders of social order.
who condemn the one who protects them based on the complaint of the nameless being who attacks them and covers them with monstrous dice!

Nothing is more anarchic, nothing shows better what
The degree of imbecility and decadence we have fallen to.

It's a mess, chaos, nothingness.

We're suffocating.

There's a smell of gunpowder in the air.

It will ignite from the spark that will be released from the pre-
My saber came.

We need victims!

We need blood to purify ourselves!

And the conspiracy still existed; its plots were tightening-would do more and more. Reinach was, if not the soul, of it.
less the heart, if indeed a vile and abject youtte
like him, have a heart.

(i) Zola, through the agent of Mr. Labori, having claimed that the letters published about his father, by Le Petit Journal on March 23 and 48 July 1898, were false, Mr. Judet took up the challenge.

The investigating judge ruled in his favor by rendering in favor of our valiant colleague who did such a beautiful and so patriotic campaign, a dismissal order.

The Combes letters are therefore indeed authentic.

11

482 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Meanwhile, he was translating for a newspaper.
Dreyfusard, an article from the National Review.
appalling against the French general staff, in which He highlighted everything that hatred of the English can to inspire slander, vulgarities, and outrages

In this article, the National Review asked what would happen the day the crowds, who have for the army a love as romantic as that of a
A woman for her lover would learn to be unable to
There is no longer any doubt, based on a statement coming from outside, that these leaders whom they had so wildly acclaimed at the trial Zola did not tell him the truth, that Dreyfus was a innocent victim

The National Review added:

"Emperor William, in fact, holds in his hands
a weapon with which, when he finds a favorable opportunitynable, he will be able to break the general staff and destroy, for a general-nation, the faith of the French people in the leaders of its army ".

And Mr. Joseph Reinach wrote:

Who wouldn't shudder with horror at the thought of a Sedan?
What is the morale like before the first shot is fired? This
The thought does come to mind, though. It has haunted mine ever since.
for many months. It's an idea, some will say, that must be dismissed.
that must not be expressed. I understand: that's politics.
of the ostrich that hides its head in the sand so as not to See the danger. The danger arrives anyway. Alsace-Lorraine is familiar with this policy: it's the policy of second Empire, which was angry about the warnings an-Stoffel's, Ducrot's, Trochu's, Thiers's.

Can we see the abyss and remain silent? We must not let our Life to the homeland: it's easy to give it to him. We owe him the
The truth, the whole truth. It's more difficult. But, come what may It costs, it must be said, especially when there is still time to to ward off danger, abominable humiliation.

Liberavi animam meam.

Thus spoke the vile Reinach, captain of ter-
It's monstrous. The Jew was still saying

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 183

in January 1898 in the corridors of the Chamber:
"We will not disarm: or we will obtain the review of the trial or we will turn everything upside down."
Is that clear? There it is again, the conspiracy. We want the revision. When Méline resigned, the Dreyfusard Ranc,
The union's top leader, he too, was saying in the corridors of power...
Senate dormice: |

"Whatever ministry comes into power, moderate or radical," radical-socialist, if it contains among its members Mr. Ca-Vaignac, we are here as a large group, determined to
"To wage war on this ministry with knives."

And indeed, the entire Judeo-Masonic press, protest-- aunt waged a fierce war against this Brisson ministry.

although the austere man was personally a Dreyfusard.

It was a game of deception played on the good public
All those wretches. They were accomplices. Those people, Once again, they have ties to the Jewish gang.
They are, moreover, Freemasons or Protestants. They dehanging from them and all from each other. Fighting each other,
That would be self-destructive.

And Dreyfus's supporters redoubled their audacity;
and the Clemenceaus (4), and his accomplices continued to devour France with gusto, with the help of all the Reinachs.

Reinach! What memories that cursed name evokes.
When we think about it, we get the feeling of a hellish tragedy that has
The universe as the stage, a whole motley crew of actors

(1) The famous patron of Cornelius Herz is not the only evidence of the long-standing relations between prominent international Jews and the Clemenceau family. One of the brothers of Mr. Georges Clemenceau, we do not know if it is lavocat, who so arrogantly insulted the French officers, married A few years ago, the daughter of Mr. Szeps, the Jewish owner of the New Freie Press of Vienna, one of the main organs of international Jewry.

This explains the launch of the Aurora and the role of the Clemenceau in the Zola affair.

\

184 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

cosmopolitans, scoundrels, high-class thieves and for vic-time France.

In the background, we see the Temple of the Nation where a Shadows lurk in the corners, watching for their prey, no not to assassinate him, which would still require a certain amount of...
It's courageous, but what's worse, it dishonors her.

The rapid change highlights a multitude of people gaunt, ragged, bowed down by the wear and tear of poverty, interrogating the liberating stove or revolver.

You are tormented by this awful nightmare, when A gunshot rings out, wakes you up and, stunned, you glimpse, here and there, the mush-like brains of the unfortunate desperate men who could not survive their ruin.

And suddenly, before your eyes, rises up, erected by misfortune, misery, despair, the worst catastrophes, the sumptuous hotels of Reinach and its correspondents Religious figures, penniless yesterday, millionaires today.

You want to flee this terrifying spectacle; but near Within these princely hotels lies a vast cemetery. You enter it.

Graves everywhere,

And you read:

Here lies Fortune.

Here lies honor.

And what about this pit they're digging here?

You approach, and the gravedigger shows you on the Funeral plaque:

Here lies France.

And a press was found to support the work of material and moral disorganization of these enemies the Fatherland!

This explains why some people have en-core against the Press in general, prejudices and distrust.

The press, which should be a social educator, the the supreme resource of the weak and oppressed, the defer-natural sister of all noble causes, becomes, among the hands of writers unworthy of this fine title, a vile

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 183

a tool that the first crooked financier can buy at weight of gold.

The press, which should be like a sacred calling, teaching embodying all virtues; a missionary in charge of souls, raising and directing Thought towards the Ideal, is a counter where one sells one's pen, one's talent, one's conscience and his faith.

Fortunately, this is not the case for everyone.
the journalists.

And the current regime has thrown into the opposition, notably—a crowd of brave and honest people, soldiers of Video, which makes a very good impression there.

These people understand the heavy and honorable duty which is their responsibility, and they spread Goodness and Truth around two as the divine Creator spreads, through the beautiful summer nights, its beneficial and invigorating dew on the earth and flowers withered by the burning heat Sunshine!

Most of them live comfortably, surrounded by friends.
sincere, having excellent connections, enjoying a influence of good quality, legitimate and deserved.

Honor to these, shame and anathema to those!

Shame on these bandits of the pen, thieves of truth and often from other people's purses — because most of these wretches, prostituting the freedom to write, live only blackmail!

The writer is generally a generous person and selfless, devoted to justice and ideals.

The ideal of these intellectual scoundrels is to touch
the large sum.

Since they began practicing this despicable profession, they have spent their time spent appealing to all the bad passions;
to the basest instincts; to hatred of citizens among themselves against others; they incited class struggle; per—— Secured, outlawed and proscribed a certain category of Frenchmen; unleashed religious war; cut off the countries divided into two enemy camps; all this in the name of three words: liberty, equality, fraternity,

486 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Today, they are tarnishing everything: the army and the homeland.
Listen to them, listen to these Jews, these Protestants and

—these Freemasons.

La Lanterne publishes an article by Rouanet, Member of Parliament which is titled: The Honor of the Army.

It reads: i

"As soon as a soldier becomes involved, directly or indirectly, to the tragedy that sharpens curiosity, a new factor intervenes, which makes everyone lose their minds and de-chain of all the nonsense and all the foolishness.

This factor is the army's "honor".

Let's leave aside the grand, meaningless words; the chief 'of the army is a civil servant like any other, responsible for to ensure, within the limits of its responsibilities, the application strict application of the law, to punish violations, not to

-COUVIIE »,

Open La Petite République now, and read these -Considerations penned by a former member of parliament, Gérault-

'Richard:

At the risk of being accused of an attack on our honor 'of the army, we protest, once again, against the sa-
The viciousness of the courts-martial. In just one day of
On Tuesday, two death sentences were handed down by
-These courts, which seem like branches of slaughterhouses.

The officers who accept this profession of executioner, do not certainly do not bring honor to the army, since this term is It's a current issue. It's cowardly to kill a defenseless being.
This cowardice becomes savagery when it is committed.
-intentionally.

La Lanterne is calling for Ms. Clémence Royer, from The Fronde, the abolition of military tribunals:

"What kind of judges are given to the accused soldier?"
-or accused? Officers, that is to say, professional military personnelsional, imbued with the prejudices of their class and caste, infatuated with the superiority of rank, devoid of all legal science, with little knowledge of life and driven by:
bloodthirsty ends of their profession, despising human life
-maine. v»

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR '187

In these lines appear the old republican hatred
Canadian against the army and the influence of the republican principle
The subordination of the military to civilians is observed.
see the Gazette de France. There is no more justice conscientious, more impartial, and also more lenient than military justice.

There is none that is less subject to influences policies and which offer as many guarantees to the accused and to the defendants.

No matter, we have to get rid of it, we have to that the army be placed under the common law regime, that the soldier disappears before the citizen, that the leaders of the army are no longer responsible for maintaining its discipline
Pliny, that the army ceases to be the army and becomes a National Guard.

This is what logic demands, we must acknowledge.
revolutionary principles. In the name of equality and of freedom, logical democracy never ceases to attack-to ensure everything necessary for the army's existence, to his personal safety, to his hierarchy, to his discipline.

In this way, she proclaims the profound incompatibility which exists between the constituent principles of any army genuine and democratic principles.

Excerpt from L'Aurore, December 10, 1897:

"I once told the true story of this old man
a delivery boy, unjustly suspected, threatened with re-See, and who, taking the plunge then, to save from misery his wife and children, were leaving, truly, with the last-new recipe. I think he did well, because an idea would have been unbearable above all: the one that a recipe boy,
He was attacked and died defending his satchel. There is no @heroism in that; there's only stupidity and falsehood point of honor. The delivery boy is, in this instance, as naive as the soldier who was killed to protect a
a social organization that oppresses him/her.

After that, we understand why Aurora took the defense of the traitor Dreyfus against this "silly" army
French.

188 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Dreyfus, for his part, did not want to be the victim of the "falsehood."
"A point of honor."

He wasn't "stupid" enough to refuse to fill out his
A satchel with money from abroad. Quick, let's get him rehabilitated!
this intellectual soldier.

The Radical of January 16, 1898:

"The Republicans eventually realized that the sword is too demanding and the honor of the army becomes unattainable
tible.

It's too much of an apotheosis, in the end, for an army that,
Indeed, we like to believe it, he would fight admirably good, but who, for twenty-seven years, has not had the opportunity to fight, because we do not want to be considered as battles, the victory at Fourmies, and skirmishes, less bloody, from Carmaux and elsewhere."

The same sentiment was expressed by the Republicans of the Little Fairy-public:

It is now becoming clear that, beneath the mask Hidden within antisemitism is the most shameless reaction, which would like to take advantage of a moment of popular enthusiasm to deliver our country to the domination of the sword.

Some overly skilled advisors are talking about electoral tactics and complacently insinuate that we risk defeat by not joining forces with the sword-wielding men and their accomplices.

Lies! Good citizens do not confuse the Fatherland.
with the disgraced officers, who, in turn, worked at to enslave and betray her. And if, by some impossible chance, we were to-were about to encounter the most deplorable blindness and remain victims of our convictions and our attachment to Republican and socialist traditions: so much the worse! Better to-
For us, it would mean staying in the streets with the real people.
the one that the decorated bandits know so well how to massacre, that to return to a debased Parliament where the words of justice and freedom would be stifled by the clamor of the ca-nails and unconscious people.

All this because the trial is not being reviewed Dreyfus.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 189

Human rights, founded expressly for rehabilitation... biliter le Traître published, on January 26, 1898, a article against the generals, of which it is useful to quote

a few excerpts:

In Tonkin, General Négrier, Herbinger, defeated, mis-Thankfully, we know under what extraordinary conditions!
We're not going to forget Lang-Son, perhaps.

And Madagascar, the charnel house of Madagascar, where... buried an entire generation of French youth, killed by our own General Staffs.

They are admirable, all these warriors of the Great Silent Service, that we see running to La Libre Parole and L'Intransigeant, in Spies of the most despicable kind! Yes, they are clean, our bureaucratic warriors, and their work is commendable!

How hard they are working to rebuild the nation!

Is it any wonder that they immediately suspected Dreyfus, who was doing his job, was interested in espionage.
to the things of his profession.

Our generals |

Whose back would we want to go? If we had to... beat tomorrow.

They know this well, and that's why they're afraid of war, in
Are they afraid? They only talk about the fear of war!

Is this for us? No, the mass murderers of peoples have not
No worries.

It is for them that they tremble.

Their dream is to tame their uniform!

The guillotine for the Generals.

Would you like more? Let's move on to the annual meetings.
timilitarians:
Here are some of the agenda items from these meetings:

Large public meeting with open debate.

Agenda: Sword and aspergillum.

Registered speakers: Sébastien Faure, Broussouloux, Dhorr, etc.

Then came Mr. Jaurès, the high priest of socialism, who, in the Lantern, makes an appeal to the soldiers.

41°

499 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Here, as a document, are some excerpts from his proclamation:

Should we remain silent when the advice of war shoots for nothing, for a gesture, for a parole of anger, the soldier that, often, rudeness or the
Was the brutality of his superiors exasperating?

Why, I ask you, does the officer who strikes the soldier not-
Is it only a light sentence, when the soldier who raises the Hand on a leader falls under the bullets?

What does this uneven and wild code mean, calculated, not for
to maintain order, but to organize chronic terror, to freeze the soldier's soul and marrow and to make him an automaton at the service of all political reactions and social issues? You also know very well, officers and soldiers, that, in the army of the republic, for twenty years, the republicans Catholics, democrats, the sons of the people are suspect.

Nobles and Jesuits recruit the high army, and no one rise if he gives his heart to the republic, to the people, to the future.

Soldiers, that would be to betray you, that would be to betray France and Armed for not defending yourself against the power terrible of these general staffs recruited through the favor of the reaction, that is to say doubly incapable.

By denouncing us as enemies of the army, the privileged are lying. They want to turn you against us and to isolate you from the people in order to use you, if necessary, against the people, in order to expand Fourmies if necessary and to turn your cannons and rifles against your brothers of proletariat finally marching, to conquer justice.

We will organize the responsibility of leaders so that Their mistakes will not go unpunished. We will soften the monstrous penalties for a wild code. We will make a more humane discipline, a less mind-numbing barracks and we will allow ourselves, under the flags of the republic-public, to think, to be men. You will participate yourselves, like the proud soldiers of vic- a century ago torments of the Revolution, at the choice of your leaders, and you will choose from the elite of the republican nation, among the sons of the people, the most educated and bravest, among proletarians like you, to whom the social republic will give higher knowledge.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 191

Remember that a people is lost if it clings to its head the generals of privilege, the generals of the class enemy. Remember that the soldiers of the Revolution, To march to victory, they had to reject the frameworks of the old regime and raise up leaders from their ranks who had the new thinking.

Here now is the Dawn which published this "Resolute- tion of the central revolutionary committee, » delivering the word of the company, kept secret until now:

Having above all else a horror of the military- rism;

Recognizing that today's military leaders "have of the same flour as those which, in 1870 and 1874, delivered the nation to the invasion and machine-gunned the Parisians; that they surrender- would, as then, at the first opportunity, the nation to the invasion and the people to the massacre;

Public outrage denounces the efforts by which The army and government leaders are trying to suppress the investigation into military scandals and betrayals;

Appeals to all good citizens to demand the light;

And since militarism, through its evils and its shames,
He put himself in the hot seat, he must remain there until that he be unmasked and definitively condemned.

Down with militarism and reaction!

Long live the Republic!

It is against the Army that the Union has taken a stand.
Rochefort himself stated it clearly in his journal
under this significant title: A band of anarchists (A).

(4) The true aim of the Judeo-Masonic Protestant Syndicate
The aim is to discredit the army by dishonoring the high command.
most of whose members are former students of the schools <ungreganists.

They want to portray them as wretches and fanatics ticks, in the hands of the Jesuits, who supposedly use them, against Jewish officers, Freemasons, Protestants and republicans cains.

Moreover, they want to be portrayed as the enemies of republican institutions, thus leading to the repeal of the Fallour law 14850: on instruction. and to oblige all those, military or civilian, who will aspire to a state-paid position, to do their studies

492 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

"I had little idea that I would grow old in my skin"
of a defender of law and order, the army, and justice
my country. But, word of honor! It's high time to come to the aid of this poor society, at this hour attacked with the utmost violence by the most dangerous-a reuse band of anarchists, who have ever, since Ra-Vachol and Emile Henry practiced propaganda by deed.

What! A council of war convened in Paris, on the orders of the government, condemns to deportation to a fortified enclosure, an officer convicted of high treason its, and this cessation, which has become definitive, of subversive beings publicly trample underfoot, without any further respect for
The matter has been decided!

And what elements make up this group?
risen up against the laws to which we all owe Obedience? From senators like Scheurer-Kestner, from opportunistic MPs like Yousouf Reinach and writers vainly decorated like Emile Zola.

Who on earth could have foreseen this sudden revolt of these bourgeois bourgeois, that the condemnations $é-sentences pronounced by the courts-martial of 1871 against unfortunate "thirty sous" had left so Calm down! I haven't read any protests anywhere from Mr. Scheurer, no more than Mr. Zola, against the executions the deportations of Satory and the transportation of so many fathers family in New Caledonia.

So, by what right do these pillars of the social structure...
do they preach submission to all military codes and civils, they who, not content with demanding with me-
They will give their infamous client the key to the fields, even going so far as to bribe sluts to extract money from them documents and letters likely to throw into households in the deepest turmoil?

So that these unwavering pillars of support for the family in university schools. With this masterstroke, it is hoped to ruin religious education.

The Dreyfus affair thus became a matter of national importance.
that is to say, religion.

L
THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 193

Dreyfus, the judiciary, and the army are striving to to destroy the army, the judiciary, and the family all at once.

Valiant, who threw a bomb into the hall of sessions of the Chamber of Deputies, did not make any da-vantage. It would even be easy to establish that he did so.
Much less.

*
$4

And Le Petit Journal, in its outcry of anger, pain and shame:

The sham work of justice with which we were deceived in es-trying to soften the hearts of the naive regarding Dreyfus's condemnation was merely the pretext for a plot against the tranquility of the country and state security, only concealed the organization of a double blow against the Ministry of Political Stability and the national defense army.

A double-edged tactic, with no other outcome than confusion and The danger is for everyone indiscriminately.

An inextricable crisis within, the disarray of our military force facing a joyful and ironic foreigner.

That is the hope. That is the goal.

And in all the officers' messes of the triple alliance, one happens with a hostile joy, we savor the daily slice-dienne d'infamie distilled by the distinguished artists of the dé-national consideration, and we rub our hands together to see the French people naive enough to allow the rehabilitation of traitors, to lend themselves to the base practices of their satellites, to diminish and annul the sentences of a council of war, taking away from soldiers their last religion: faith in the chiefs (1).

(4) In Parisian dance halls they were shouting "Vignoble chanson" of which we quote a verse:

If you want to be happy,
N... of d...

Don't be a soldier;

Cut the officers in half.
N... of d...

F... the barracks on the ground,
N... ded...

The flag in the M.se
N... of d...

194 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR |

Ah! It is in this milieu that Dreyfus finds countless Wise defenders! It is he whom the foreigners hear us swallow like a martyr and then resume like

An officer without blemish!

If there is a Minister of War and a government, he
it is necessary that this cosmopolitan audacity, whose inspiration-tion comes from the other side of the borders, ceases, that we do not Don't drag this out for another day in ridiculous patience!

Taking advantage of a weakness that encourages them, all the ban-
Those who speak with the pen practice their sinister craft.

The backers of Cornelius Herz, who appear to be in charge from afar to the unfolding of this clever scheme, returnnent to the charge.

The recalcitrant Panamanians; the extortionists of | the brand starts whistling, drooling, and spreading se-threats of demoralization and discord, to pave the way future invasions.

Finally, on January 28, 1898, amidst the full turmoil of Dreyfus-Sardinian MP, Socialist Mr. Toussaint, speaking about the the elimination of the 28 and 43-day periods, this declaration stated.
tion devoid of artifice:

Indeed, as I told you, I am in favor of the sup-pressure from standing armies, which are praetorian armies nothing made available to one class against another;
I support the general arming of the people, because These armies are not there to defend the interests of the workers.
vagrants, who are instruments in the hands of the capitalists who exploit them, since they are nothing but sims the instruments in the hands of the army leaders for to defend the interests of one class of citizens against another.

What Citizen Toussaint was asking for was to replace the army with an untrained national guard military action, put at the service of revolutionary demands revolutionaries.

This ideal has always been that of revolutionaries, of-then those of 1789 up to those of today.

And for them, the opportunity couldn't have been more favorable.
to attack the army. This Dreyfusard campaign

It was a dream. So, they followed in the footsteps of the Huguenots of those countries; for ultimately if the matter Dreyfus is of interest to Jews and the Jewish community, and if it has for great leaders, the Jew Reinach, and Rabbi Zadock Kan, It is undeniable that it is primarily the Protestants who acted openly without prejudice to the university Protestant, and more recently from the Dean of the Faculty Letters from Bordeaux, Stapfer (1).

May the Protestants get along wonderfully with the Socialists, nothing could be more natural. All those people, This is revolutionary.

"Without straying from the realm of facts," wrote Lorrain From July 45, 1898, one can see more and more distinctly—the very close link that unites Protestantism and the socialism, while socialism appears, with obviousness Equally, the intimate opposition existing between socialism and Catholicism.

(1) Mr. Stapfer was suspended from his duties for this reason. tions for 6 months.

He is a Huguenot of the most dangerous kind: he belongs to the teeming tribe of Monods.

Our esteemed colleague, Mr. Charles Maurras, established it in a article from the Gazette de France, of which we reproduce the fragment—next step:

His ancestor, PA Stapfer, ambassador of the Helvetic in Paris, had two sons, Albert and Vafné, who were recognized as her own. through certain literary works; he translated Goethe's Faust and the biography of his own father, written in German by Luginbuhl.

The other, Charles Stapfer, from whom Paul Stapfer was to be born, He became an engineer. He did better; he gained entry through marriage. in the Monod family. He married one of the twelve, Marie Monod, sister of Adolphe Monod, sister of Doctor Gustave Monod, the tribe's delightful historian, to whom we owe so much of useful information, and finally sister of Edouard Monod, the own father of Gabriel Monod.

Through the father of one, through the mother of the other, son and daughter of John Monod, the two staunch Dreyfusards Paul Stapfer and Gabriel Monod They are therefore first cousins.

This Dreyfus affair, where they want to show us a case of Abstract justice and general law, is a family matter.

The places of blood contain a very remarkable plaque.

196 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

L'Osservatore Romano, in a masterful article, a few months ago brought this situation to the forefront by drawing a parallel between the ultimate and manifest goal of the pro-Testimony, and that which socialism proposes.

The observations of our eminent Roman colleague touch on the very heart of the conflict in which the world is struggling modern.

Protestantism would like to dismantle the Church as it is God made it; socialism tends to undo society. as God himself constituted it. The first has for the objective of destroying religious society; the second of to dismantle civil society.

Both of them attack the divine constitution of both companies, by eliminating from the pre-firstly, religious authority, and secondly, authority civil.

Thus, just as Protestantism has said in The religious order: no more Pope! no more priesthood! Socialism says: no more bosses, no more government! Thus, God is also banished from Religion and from the Society; thus, by the fact of "one and the other, we would end up by logically and effectively having a religion without Dieu is also a society without God.

And that's not all. Protestantism abolished the in particular, a teacher in the religious sphere in abolishing without the ecclesiastical hierarchy; socialism tries to do the same in the social sphere by abolishing the private property, which is the foundation of the hierarchy civil.

Protestantism, through free and particular examination and Individual inspiration, all believers proclaimed equals in the presence of the heritage of faith. Socialism. in turn, came to declare with his collective doctrines-tivists, that all men are equal in the presence of the company assets.

In the first case, all men are priests;
In the second one, everyone is a homeowner.

That's how we finally arrived at this point, in Protestantism-

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR i197

ism, to the point of no longer having a priesthood, no more priests, – as with socialism we would end up no longer having of properties.

As the truths of the Faith float confusedly in air in the Protestant religious sphere, things of the land would be left in utter neglect if we lived in the socialist economic sphere.

In this way, as spirits die to truth, the bodies would die to life.

It is a fact: that current society, in the middle of so much science and so much wealth, is in danger "To die of hunger, both in mind and body."

f

One last document to conclude this long, but suggestive chapter, and to show, once again, as the revolutionaries march in agreement with the Protestants, Jews, and Freemasons, against our social institutions, against France.

It was Jaurès who wrote:

The Revolution.

Will the proletariat, will the socialist people attending, indifferent, uncertain or disorganized at the events What potentially decisive events are in the works?

Never was the opportunity more favorable and never the duty It was no longer urgent to group together, in a militant unit, de- Defensive and offensive, all the working-class, socialist forces and revolutionaries from Paris.

At this hour, by an admirable twist of fate, the bourgeoisie divided against itself, creates in a way elements revolutionary moments. These uncertain beginnings and discordant among the Revolution, only the socialist proletariat or- Organized, it can push them to their limits, clarify them, accomplish them.

It is up to you, workers, to you, socialists, to give to revolutionary beginnings of clerics panicked by the conclusions revolutionaries.

498 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

After noting the accusations made by the Jews, who claim that if the closed session was ordered, This is not to cover up alleged secrets of de-national defense, but to hide from France the in-miserable triges, the shames and crimes of the high Armed, Mr. Jaurès continued:

Well! To these men, too, we have, we social-lists, something to say. I don't include them, it's out of the question. must, in an ignominious accusation of corruption or treason.

If there are suspicious schemers among them, the number is great also of those who are above suspicion. In any case, as I always want to speak as a man libre, like no threat, no miserable insinuation, No amount of blackmail, whether overt or covert, will prevent me from to say and shout what I think: I admire the boldness of Zola.

He may be wrong about the substance of the matter. As long as the door The closure will remain in place; we will not know, we will not be able to- We won't know.

But in asserting his thought, he acted like a man; attacking the entire high army, the whole system great military leaders, with their cunning and power, of lies and oppression, he committed an act of revolution. only those who have the heart will not praise him shy.

In a singular twist, Zola, by shooting down a part of the oppressive forces, risks restoring a part forces of exploitation. Yes, if his revolutionary act remains isolated if it is not complemented by revolutionary action of the proletariat as a whole.

Let him, taking advantage of the upcoming revelations, walk So, fully against the reactionary, Jesuit, and high army suspicious.

"What is needed is for the proletariat to use and combine for a powerful revolution of justice all the elements

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 199

revolutionaries created and stirred up by the bourgeoisie elie-even.

Never was there a time at once more troubled and more feverish conde.

But the active force of the people must not be scattered.

That the various factions of the Socialist Party, that the Workers' organizations agree on a joint action mune. |

It is impossible for popular and socialist Paris to be Scattered and powerless.

There will undoubtedly be a campaign of meetings to organize to unite with together, to group all the men who protest against Capital, against the Church, against The High Army. There will perhaps be, under the influence of great events, defense measures or combined attacks ner.

At present, in the state of decomposition where the anar-The bourgeois dog reduces society and power, twenty thousand men driven by a common idea and capable of effort swift and concerted action might perhaps bring about the decisive day of the justice.

Let's get ready and organize for action.

Action! It is encouraged by our radical ministers. who seem to have taken it upon themselves to rehabilitate Dreyfus.

What to make of Cavaignac's dramatic turn of events?

It exceeded our expectations.

Colonel Henry was arrested for having committed a false and written, notably, in 1896, a letter in which Dreyfus was appointed.

However, Minister Cavaignac and the public had believed that This letter came from a foreign military attaché.

And upon taking possession of the Ministry of War, Cavaignac swore on this piece, now recognized as apocryph, that Dreyfus was guilty.

His speech was posted in all the towns of France.

Cavaignac had simply gotten a little carried away lightly; sensing that it would be ridiculous if he didn't strike

200 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS CASE

not a big deal, he ordered the colonel's arrest Henry; Brisson, moreover, demanded it.

That Colonel Henry was wrong to commit this forgery, That's debatable; but does it change the substance of the matter?

Is Dreyfus guilty, yes or no?

This letter, dated 1896, was not used as evidence in The charges against Dreyfus did not influence the judges. of the court-martial that condemned this Jew, the trial having taken place in 1894, that is to say two years prior before!

The truth is that Cavaignac got carried away with these documents and that Henry was a victim of it.

All the staff officers will go through it, you will You'll see. After Paty de Clam, it's Henry, then-core of the Paty de Clam, executed this time and put in dis-availability, then Boisdeffre resigning; the turn of Pellieux, Mercier, and those who have investigated against Dreyfus will come.

Mr. Henry's arrest was all the more regrettable-table that she complicated the question and threw into the country an untimely disruption.

That Colonel Henry committed a hundred forgeries, that Es-Therazy raped 1,000 young girls, Dreyfus was not less treacherous.

We know about the pieces, some more authentic than others. from absolutely authorized sources, are subsequent to trial of 1894.

THESE ARE THE PIECES ON WHICH SCHEURER-KESTNER

He leaned on it when he submitted them to General Billot. That is The plan is still based on these pieces today union members of treason.

Perhaps it is regrettable that they exist, but Dreyfus is no less guilty.

Cavaignac himself declared it even after the discovery
green of the fake.

Let's get this over with!

It is in the face of such a scandal that one ar-shore to regret the summary executions.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 201

In the past, had an individual committed a crime for-before throwing the country into disarray, they quickly rushed him in the deepest recesses of oblivion.

We would never have suffered such dangerous unrest.
use for the security of the State that this wretched Dreyfus affair.

It is unfortunate, in this respect, that the times are changed; Dreyfus would have been made to disappear as soon as he was caught red-handed, and nobody... would have known nothing. Clearly, the dungeons had...
Good.

Because the Dreyfus affair has started up again with renewed vigor, thanks to the
Mr. Cavaignac's only fault, whose fine patriotic zeal-
Tick, once again, tells us nothing of value.

Why, moreover, did he read the plays from the podium?
dating from two years after the trial?

These were pieces of evidence that, logically, he should have provided, since there are many of them, all each more damning than the last.

But in reality, he shouldn't have read a single one:
It was opening the doors to revision.

Mr. Cavaignac was aware of this, could not ignore it.

However, he reads plays, that is to say, he uses the means which should bring about the revision.

And he swears up and down that he is anti-revision-Nist!

And he resigns, to give his place to the general Zurlinden, under the pretext that the Brisson firm wants the revision !

Was Cavaignac sincere?

If he truly hadn't wanted the revision, he had only one side to take when Colonel Henry admitted his mistake: sending him to die in the colonies, without noise.

TL would have acted like a true statesman; but it seems that this quality cannot be improvised. The Minister of The war has proven it.

202 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Because ultimately, it's one of two things: either Cavaignac is defeated by Dreyfus's guilt, as he claims in all circumstances, where he believes in his innocence.

If he is convinced of his guilt, why arrest him? The Colonel's actions that led him to commit suicide? Mr. Cavai-Gac should have thought that he provided a formidable advantage. ble to the Dreyfusards. And it is not possible that he did not He did not consider the consequences of his attitude.

Yet he did not hesitate to present this challenge to the enemies of the Fatherland, to his fellow Freemasons and Huguenots.

If, on the contrary, Mr. Cavaignac believes in the innocence of Dreyfus, let him not come and assert his guilt-litigious, because once again, he acted as a supporter of the traitor, like the most determined of the Dreyfusards!

Everything about this case is strange.

Cavaignac reads aloud from the tribune the document relating to Dreyfus. recognized as false today, and Colonel Picquart writes The next day in the newspapers: this piece is fake.

Who had told him? It wasn't Henry, the author. fake.

So someone knew the truth about this document?

And what is this fake? It's a piece that we had believed it to have come from a foreign embassy and which designed Dreyfus as guilty.

Well, but it is certain that papers compromising for Dreyfus were burglarized by our agents in an embassy.

L'Intransigeant of December 43, 1897 published it and Despite official denials, there can be no doubt on this subject.

However, it seems that the parts were returned by our flat-footed government to the ambassador who threatened war if they were not returned to him not.

Could it be to replace these parts that Henry Would they have made them?

It would seem that Mr. Judet also shares this opinion. writing :

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 203

The explanation of the forgery committed by Colonel Henry who so grimly shatters an entire career of duty and courage, extricates oneself from an exaggerated sense of responsibility _ personal matters, faced with the threat of review. He knew that

The Dreyfus file contains documents capable, by their disclosure, could lead to international complications nationals and the war; that's why he wanted to put in circulation of parts that eliminate the need to use others, aax more serious, types of banknotes, whose value In his view, the fiduciary system rested on the existence of documents authentic, carefully kept in the shadows.

If that's the case, we'll probably discover others counterfeit coins; but again, they could not in no way invalidate the matter that has been decided.

You might object that if this version were true, the Colonel Henry would not have committed suicide, that he would have provided "This explanation.

The Colonel has lost his mind.

And when he heard the Minister of War tell himto ask if he was not the author of the forgery; when he believed understanding that his superiors would not cover for him, he concluded that he was lost.

Etil confessed; he sacrificed himself.

In prison, at Mont Valérien, he wondered if Cavaignac did not become a Dreyfusard.

His arrest, which he had just ordered, corroborated his suspicions.

And he believed there was nothing to be done, that the general staff was about to sink, that he didn't have the right to say everything, maybe...

And, a victim of blind discipline, he preferred to soften—Shooting: He committed suicide.

Ah! The Dreyfusards can sing of victory.
can say: the parts originating from abroad are false.

It's quite possible that they are, since the original,
The real ones were returned to the embassy, of which he was question; but if they were returned, it is because they existed. And their copy or photograph is the proof of Dreyfus's treason.

Î

204 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

Only the future will tell us what lies at the heart of it.
of all this and the means employed to obtain—
"To achieve certain results," Edouard Drumont said on this subject.
What is certain is that under the influence of the ge—
General Roget, who seemed to be his evil genius, Cavaignac had lost his former manly resolve.
It seems quite extraordinary, in any case, that a man who acted with such sudden severity against an old soldier had done nothing for so long to search—
Dear to the actual organizers of the Union, and to stop the bankers who were providing funds for this propagand of newspapers and brochures which counted enormous sums.

Yes, Cavaignac's role was strange. He was of a inconceivable lightness when reading the document from the podium recognized as false today.

And, strangely enough, Mr. Cavaignac declared urbi et orbi that he could have read many other plays, all of which attest— They were acknowledging Dreyfus's guilt.

However, he specifically chose the one that was false, one of these documents subsequent to the trial, including those from Scheurer-Kestner, He too, Billot, was in contact with him at the beginning of the affair, on October 3rd. October 1897! This rapprochement, a year apart, the attitude of these two men, Huguenots and sons of Huguenots guenots, found on pieces later than Isn't that judgment most peculiar?...

The conclusion is that there will be a review, I'm afraid, one day. or the other, alas; it may also be war, for the Jews and their allies, Freemasons and Protestants, will do it what to do if Dreyfus is convicted again.

Either Dreyfus's acquittal or war, that will be their ultimatum.

I hope, for the honor of the army, that the judges will not They will not be intimidated. They will do their duty, to the fullest extent. duty.

And if we have to have a war, well, we will have it.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 205

Enough impurities are corrupting France.

Only blood can cleanse her of so much defilement.

What a misfortune that the revolution gave to the Jews the quality of French citizens; otherwise, one would not have There was never a Dreyfus affair.

And even if he is innocent, which cannot be, this that which is not, that which will not be, until it has been If tried again and acquitted, the guilty party would never have stirred up so many passions, thrown into the world and no— especially in France such a terrible, such a manageable disturbance (4).

He would have been tried, condemned, and that would have been the end of it. With Dreyfus the case will never end except with the review of the trial, on the condition that Dreyfus is acquitted.

And the most odious Dreyfusism, the Dreyfusism of blackmailers of treason who say: either war or the revision, is in full swing.

France's enemies, both internal and external laughing, the pack of Huguenots and especially the Protestant de Pressensé of the Debates, openly collude, and more numerous than ever since Colonel Henry's suicide, with the worst anarchists: Sébastien Faure and Cyvoct;

(i) If Dreyfus were innocent, certainly, it would be horrible, but He is certainly guilty in the opinion of all the ministers of the war that examined the case.

And even if he were innocent, is that a reason to shake the foundations of the social order?

Write it down, if you wish, in the book of martyrs, but Do not threaten the security of a nation for one man; do not Don't risk the worst catastrophes.

The Dreyfus Affair, known as "The Will," was the cause of 15 divorces. 32 duels, 37 attacks, day or night, not counting the Days at the Palace of Justice, Versailles and Wagram, 12 cases of madness, including three followed by violent death, 7 suicides including those of Lemercier-Picard and Henry.

42

206 THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR

they are waging a terrible campaign against the army-loincloth!

These Huguenots undoubtedly have a sense of repro-stalls await them.

They also sought the support of the anarchists; they fear that after attacking the Jews, the French people-The Catholics attack their accomplices, the Protestants and the Freemasons.

Only the guilty are afraid.

Yes, the country has had enough. The cup of infamy is overflowing. Shame is overflowing.

And it is you who give yourselves up, who lose yourselves.

Do you want France to decline and wither away?

We want it to thrive and grow!

You want to bury it under the mud you stir up, that you accumulate, and Py lie down as in a tom-beautiful ?

We want to save her, we want to free her!

Do you want her to die?

We want her to live!

In vain will you make repeated efforts to arrive to your ends.

You can't stop a people in their desperate state:
Towards salvation!

However, under the weight of the ignominies to which you surrender guilty, Jews, Protestants, Freemasons, a trio of evil-said, to rehabilitate your Dreyfus, thrice a traitor to the France, the nation awoke trembling.

And the day will come, soon, hopefully, when the country.
who has already manifested her lassi- through serious symptoms study and its alarms, at the end of its patience, will break the yoke unbearable under which he buckles and will seek a just revenge, in a restorative future, the refuge and Greetings!

On that day, France will once again be in control of itself.
even.

THE PROTESTANTS AND THE DREYFUS AFFAIR 207

She will resume her former course in the world and glorious destinies, and she will sail in the front rank.
at the head of nations, with the powerful and sacred breath of the li-
. freedom, of the victory finally won over the cos- hordes
Muspolitans who had sworn his downfall.

~

CHAPTER VI

Protestants in Madagascar and Algeria

Our colonies. — Madagascar. — The Protestant missions.
aunts. — The Jesuits. — Mr. Laroche. — The general Gallieni. — The French Protestants are making a pact with the English Protestants. — Pastors Lauga, Kruger and Monod. — Wilson. — In Algeria. — The Interrogation Saint Germain. — Speech by Mr. de Mahy. — One national dauger.

It is not only with regard to France that the protests so many behave, from a patriotic point of view, as Prussians or Englishmen, that is to say, like They are Anglo-Saxons in reality, for this sole reason—their belonging to the reformed religion, in honor among the Anglo-Saxons, and that religions are races.

As far as our colonies are concerned, they act absolutely—they do the same and prioritize their sectarian interests and sectarians before those of the homeland.

The attitude of the Huguenots of France regarding the meborn Protestant in Madagascar, in particular, is one of the most characteristic.

When the French declared war on the Hova,
This was at the instigation of the Protestant missions who had excited Queen Ranavalona's subjects to commit abuses against our nationals in Madagascar

PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR AND ALGERIA 205

Influence in this colony was shared between the English Protestant missionaries and French Jesuits cash.

The first group wanted to prepare this large island for England, which was very natural; the second group of workers were valid for France, which was no less true.

English Protestant influence was much greater extended over the Malagasy people that the Catholic influence—French lique.

So, a campaign has been decided upon.

Here we give the floor to Mr. de Mahy:

The departure of our troops, he wrote, was greeted with enthusiasmsiasm.

The whole of France, it can be said, is crowding into their path.
wise.

A meme movement sweeps across all classes of society
A great hope illuminates hearts.

But what disappointments they're sparing us!

We begin by entrusting the transport of the most important part to carrying equipment to English ships, 'as for to immediately display incompetence in the eyes of the world and the enemy we are going to fight.

The acceptable, advantageous offers from our shipowners and the resources of our navy were not sufficient –
It was wrong. Five large state-owned buildings lay in the arsenal.
from Toulon and could be adapted at little cost, very quickly.

The fate of the campaign would have been very different!

We are drawing up a campaign plan whose essential feature is to use the course of a beautiful river in order to spare our troops marching through the marshes and lands hot from the most unhealthy region. The equipment, for This operation is doubly unusable: it is defective, it arrives too late.

He had plenty of time and money to do it.
Good and appropriately served on site. The rooms, without to count, had given all the requested credits.

Sound policy, the interest of France, respect for our traditions, our words, common sense tell us–

12°

210 PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

try not to sacrifice to their enemy and to ours tribes, our subjects.

They offered their help. They were rejected. They were deceived.

While a proclamation from General Metzinger... promises freedom, they learn that the commander-in-chief has, in his pocket, a treaty under which the war will to crown them with the subjection of Hova tyranny.

Porters were needed. We had plenty on hand very quickly. cheap, sturdy, fully acclimatized, including the recruit- The plan had been prepared by one of our most trusted agents. The most experienced ones. We don't accept them.

We're going to take, from the depths of Algeria, some unfortunate Kabyles doomed from the start to destruction by fatigue and the illness, and which cost an arm and a leg; five or six a thousand troops (experience has clearly shown this, and (one should have known this, at least), were quite sufficient. The half, at least, could have been advantageously recruited in the city of Réunion, if one had agreed to or- Organizing military service, a long-standing and highly valued goal, voted for six years by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate.

We're only accepting five hundred volunteers. We're accumulating nearly 25,000 men, mostly Europeans, in the worst unsanitary conditions (1).

(1) To whom do we owe, in large part, the disaster of Madagascar, the death of 9,000 to 10,000 men?

To our good friends, the English Protestant Missionaries, first of all, who made war inevitable by pushing the Hovas to the resistance; but also to the deplorable errors committed and accredited in the public by their good friends from France, the Protestant pietists, members of affiliated Bible societies to English companies.

If, instead of sending 4 or 5000 men, composed of troops Mostly black, we sent 16,000 of them there. where did 4/5 of them not fire a single shot?

False information given to the government and the public union in France, through the press and Protestant notables, echoes from the English Methodists.

Let's listen to Mr. de Mahy:

While over there the English pastors worked without recowardly in fortifying the Hovas, in Europe they created a legend at their profit.

By constantly repeating in their books, in their magazines, in

* AND IN ALGERIA SEE |

They are made to cross the marshes, with bags on their backs, under the fire of the sun, along this river that they would have, on well-equipped boats, climbed back up without fatigue, without loss of men and without wasting time. Then, they put them With pickaxes in hand to carve out a road, they are employed in spite of all hygiene and without necessity, to search, to re- to transform the earth, to completely saturate and pollute the air of telluric miasmas that are released from the ground.

Eight thousand sick people are crowding the makeshift hospitals. Ilen dies by the roadside, in ditches, in the bush. More than six thousand perish without having seen it. the enemy. Many could have been saved if we had wanted to pro- fitter of the neighborhood and climate of Reunion Island and of resources offered by the spontaneous initiative of the authority local health, the Union of French Women, of municipalities and even private individuals. But they cite of a monstrous tariff from the governor of the city of Réunion exaggerated serification, based on antediluvian calculations, eva- reading at 9.82 francs per day in hospital for a patient of the State, when the same tariff only demands 3.94 francs for a sick of commerce and could, moreover, be lowered to less than 2 francs.

This pretext of excessive spending secondarily reinforces the bias anticipated ill will. The sick are piled on top of ships are made to pass through the Sea during the season their newspapers, in their lectures, in their sermons that the Hovas are an exceptional people, a chosen people and that it must become a new Zion, a Protestant Paraguay, They eventually managed to persuade many people, even in France. and they succeeded in making the legend reign even in our middle- Ministry of Foreign Affairs, even within our own ministry of ` the navy and the colonies. In reality, it was just a tribe barbarian, exhausted and at the end of her strength, but supported here by influential sectarians.

And that's why we sent an entire army corps entire people die there from malarial fevers, while 2 regime- veteran soldiers, accompanied by a few battalions of Senegalese and Dahomeans, escorted by a reasonable convoy mules carrying Black porters reportedly arrived in Tananarive almost without a hitch – as happened for the little one column that ended the war.

Here's yet another service to add to the list of achievements of our good friends.

the English and fellow members and religious leaders of the French.

912 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

the deadliest. Their corpses litter this a long and mournful journey.

Despite everything, a heroic handful of brave souls manage to Tananarive. Ah! at least, their great effort and the terrors—their venerable sacrifices which shroud their triumph will not be in vain.

The painful memory will fade in the splendor of result.

This is the legacy of our predecessors, nobly collected by our third Republic: Madagascar, annexed to the cou-France under the old regime; Madagascar, decreed integral part of the French Empire by the Convention national and never relinquished since; our right preserved from
The statute of limitations, the legitimacy of our established possession!

After so many trials and tribulations and so many obstacles finally overcome—
Thus, the vision of our greatest statesmen has been realized.
Eastern France is alive, it shines in the eyes of | the whole world in the folds of the tricolor flag planted at Tananarive.

That was without taking into account the paperwork that had been preemptively submitted to commander-in-chief through diplomacy, servant of politics imperturbable, which excluded us from the Suez Canal (4), from

(1) One of the most noteworthy portraits at the last exhibition was that of Prince Auguste d'Arenberg, president of the board of directors Administration of the Isthmus of Suez.

"Under the full light falling almost directly on k Prince of Arenberg, all the features of his face appear in perfect equality; neither being sacrificed to the other, nothing not sharply defined, nothing entirely lacking, — as we see in certain privileged natures the traits of practical precision and artistic taste, wit and affability, tact and tact, business acumen the most difficult and most diverse aspects of happiness in the en-the most dissimilar undertakings, and finally no shadow on the life ".

Such was M. de La Sizeranne, the eminent art critic, who depicted, with a touch as pure as it was delicate, the honourable Member of Parliament

Dear.

He is, in fact, one of the most influential personalities today.
view.

Chairman of the board of directors of Visthme de Suez;
Chairman of the French Africa Committee; Chairman of the Society philanthropic; president of the encouragement society; vice-

AND IN ALGERIA 213

the Nile Valley, made us sign the spoliation of Zanzibar and prepared, directed, used the Madagascar expedition.

However, a certain unease had gripped the authors.
of this diplomatic instrument. We realize that the
The campaign was long and painful, with hours of in-certainty has kept public anxiety in check, and that a Just irritation occurred. One can clearly sense that the treaty of power to power between sovereign France and a A rebellious tribe will outrage the conscience of the country. One thinks to satisfy the very natural feeling to which it obeys public opinion.

It was then decided that it would no longer be a treaty but an act unilateral, imposed by France and signed by the Queen alone.

Therefore, on September 40, 1895, a telegram in this sense which will be sent immediately to the ge-General Duchène.

But the obstructive god Chance held the dispatch for eight days in the files at the Quai d'Orsay.

She doesn't leave until the 18th. She's getting the general! Six days after the signing of the treaty between powers which gives and recognizes to Her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar, to Kingdom of Madagascar, to the Malagasy State, existence and international figures.

And since then we have not stopped doing the same in this country
the most inconceivable policy, the most contrary to sense common good, to our interest, to our honor!

Is all this simply a game of chance? These effects are-
Are they without cause? Is it a spontaneous generation of cases?
lights repeating themselves in some unknown way, always in the Anti-French sentiment?

President of the Jockey Club; member of the boards of directors of the Orléans company and the Anzin mines; member free from the Academy of Fine Arts, the Prince of Arenberg represented—brilliantly embodies the true aristocracy, that is to say the one who dedicates herself to works of public good.

A fortunate aspiration led to his appointment as president of the council of Suez; for the English, who bow before the high-ranking officials... social actions have always shown the greatest deference for the Prince of Arenberg.

He will thus have had the merit of having contributed to maintaining V'in-French influence, so thoroughly undermined in Egypt by our powerful neighboring countries across the Channel.

914 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Certainly, they do not stem from an inspiration French.

Are these then decrees of fate? Or are they governed by an opposing will that dominates us and employs our own hands to work against us?

These are decrees of Providence, if we are to believe certain things. certain high-ranking intermediaries:

"France, they assert, has no real rights over Mada-Gascar... We cannot stop history from unfolding. A people (the Hova people) was born in the last sixty years years; still young and perhaps only half civilized, he advances in great strides, however; and it can be predicted that it will reach the level of the peoples of the West, because its civilization was born—health has the same foundations as ours: Christianity (the English Christianity, of course!) To wage war on it (to this young Hova people), to confine them to their retreats of high plateaus, prevent its expansion over the entire city, This will delay complete liberation by two hundred years. of this country, (preventing the Hovas from dominating the other peoples—Plades is preventing the country's liberation.

Even if there is a national interest, which we dispute, In conquering Madagascar, France could not forget that The humanitarian interest is superior to the first.

This is indeed about English Christianity. The author He reminds us of this in another passage:

"English Christianity... not the cult of the Virgin Mary."

Other bodies, with concurring authority, had already proclaimed:

"We are forced to acknowledge that he is happy" for the true good of Madagascar that English influence has prevailed in this country over that of France and Christianity. "Evangelicalism versus that of Rome..."

(This country can never be regarded without interest by Englishmen and especially by English Christians).

But the Chamber of Deputies, in its memorable session of Thursday, March 49, 1895, repudiating the subversive doctrines who, under the guise of humanity, but, in reality, out of passion and religious solidarity, sacrifice France to its rivals, the Chamber of Deputies maintained Madagascar in French heritage.

It was possible to believe at the time that English influence would gradually fade away to make way definitively for Tin-French influence.

AND IN ALGERIA 215

Not at all. Mr. Laroche, a Protestant, appointed The governor of Madagascar hastened to favor the English interests, because he was Protestant. He carried the disorder and neglect to such an extent that the situation was intolerable for the French on this French island.

The English acted there as absolute masters, exciting The Hovas against us.

Ultimately, Laroche had to be recalled.

He was replaced by General Gallieni.

The latter granted the Hovas religious freedom that the English missionaries, friends of our enemy, the Queen of Madagascar, had forbidden him to grant it.

They had imposed their religion as the state religion.

Religious freedom, decreed by General Gallieni resulted in a large number of conversions to the Catholic religion.

This situation deeply moved the Huguenot world both in Madagascar and in France. Disturbances broke out. There. General Gallieni deposed the Queen.

The Protestants then went to great lengths to make people believe that the English missionaries who were numerous in Madagascar, were the bravest people in the world, and that the Je-French forces and General Gallieni alone had put the falling out on the island.

This was the opinion of Pastor Lauga, who, in February 1897, He developed this thesis at the Protestant temple in Reims. before a large audience, and on March 4, 1897, at Protestant temple in Lille, in an organized meeting with Pastor Ollier and where there were officials like Mr. Lambling, professor at the Faculty of Medicine-- cinema 4)

(1) On March 3, 1997, Pastor Monod, in Bolbec, imitated Pastor Lauga, like him, dared to criticize the general's conduct! Gallieni.

What would people say if a priest were to do something similar?

216 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

You imagine that the Minister of Culles would... is moved and has written, as he had done to Cardinal Lan-brilliant for the Catholic Congress of Reims, that the temporists should not be diverted from their exclusive destination

No. The Minister didn't write anything at all. And these false-They were able to spread freely.

I tell these falsehoods because Mr. Emile Blavet, who will not be no one suspected of being Jesuit or even clerical, published a book: In the Malagasy country where one can read twenty formal evidence of the pastors' animosity glicans against France.

In March 1896, he recounts, an Anglican pastor, pre-using the resurrection of Lazarus as a text, he told the audience at the end deles gathered in the temple of Nozy-Zato, suburb of Tananarive:

"Jesus came. He lifted the stone from the tomb, and Lazarus was re-aroused.

Lazarus, that's you. Like Jesus, the English will come and They will resurrect you. You will live again and you will drive out the French people, your oppressors.

Another sermon took place on Wednesday, April 15th, at Faravohitra temple, the English quarter of Tananarive.
This time, the speaker was Reverend Barron, spiritual councilor.
ritual (!) of the queen.

Reverend Barron scorned the parable and squaredputting his foot in it:

"You claim they're protecting you," he exclaimed, "and..."
The day you are in any danger, it is up to us.
that you will come shouting: Help! Ravabazas! The
The French are hitting us. Our supply of bullets is exhausted.
see... And it would be a waste of our time to try to... stand up for yourself.

And I'm telling you: You still have bullets. For-Why don't you shoot them? You're cowards, and Your cowardice saddens me... And that is why, like the Egyptians, you will perish in great numbers.

Such were the sympathies of English Protestants to

AND IN ALGERIA 217

with regard to France. French Protestants, and in particular-how the horrible Protestants of Time found this worthy of their admiration.

In truth, it must be believed that the Protestants are continuing really the goal of dominating the world, of the Protestant-to tiser, because ultimately, if it weren't so, why Would French Protestants make common cause with English Protestants when the interests of France are defeated by the latter?

If French Protestants, established in a colony, entered into a struggle for influence with a Catholic nation
A foreign lique, he would never come to the Catholics.
French, the idea of taking sides with the Catholic nation-foreign religion, under the pretext that it is Catholic, against French Protestants under the pretext that they-Protestants.

French Protestants act quite differently. By-
In everything, they favor the interests of the na- against France foreign tions present.

Before General Gallieni's arrival in Madagascar
The English were absolutely in control. It wasn't
Mr. Laroche was in charge; it was the evangelized missions.
English groups with whom he was in the best terms as evidenced by this document:

Mr. Henri Mager communicated two photographs that show us what the entourage of the queen of Madagascar under the administration of Mr. Laroche.

In the first one, which contains 22 people, we see M=" Laroche strutting next to the queen, who is surrounded of sixteen Englishmen or Englishwomen.

In the second, we see the queen's sister surrounded by twenty-nine Englishmen or Englishwomen.

Let us add that a French pastor, Mr. Lauga, appears in good place in a group of 36 people where one notices-than our worst enemies.

However, this same Mr. Lauga, upon returning to France, undertook,
Let us repeat, an anti-French campaign against the general-

13

218 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Gallieni, whom he never forgave for having filed Queen Ranavalona.

Do you believe that General Gallieni did not act in an ad-
A firm and cautious minister? That was the opinion of the wise.
French; also, that of the English and the French Protestants
But it was something else entirely.

Especially since a plot against his life had just been discovered.

Here is the serious news that was brought to us on March 24th 1897 an English agency hardly suspected of bias in-
To General Gallieni, Reuters:

Port Louis, March 24. — News from Madagascar announced that the exile of Queen Ranaivalona to Réunion has for caused the discovery of a conspiracy against the life of the General Gallieni. The investigation continues in Tananarive.

Further arrests are likely.

Searches at the Silver Palace led to the discovery of a green with a sum of 700,000 francs in metallic cash and secret documents relating to the intervention of foreigners in the rebellion.

The Huguenots of Madagascar had complained, however—their influence being seriously threatened for the benefit of France.

And on March 13, in the House of Commons, Mr. Curzon declared that England would send representatives to France on this question which is of great importance (1).

(1) On this subject, Mr. Le Myre de Vilers posed a question to the Minister of Foreign Affairs. He expressed himself thus, Official! of the April 3, 1897:

England has the pretension of intervening in our administration colonial administration, to monitor it, to control it, to exercise a kind of protectorate over our native subjects belonging to the Protestant religion. The fact is undeniable.

Moreover, gentlemen, for the past few months, the government The British take advantage of every opportunity, when they don't... not to be born, to be particularly unpleasant and aggressive towards France. You remember the language haughty Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, declaring from the podium

AND IN ALGERIA 9219

I must admit I find that rather harsh. How so? we are established in a colony on which we We have had rights for a very long time. These rights, the The English would like to divert them for their own benefit; they do: To this end, they would invade the colony with their missionaries.

the House of Commons that England would not execute her commitments to France, that she would remain in Egypt,

Whether we liked it or not, that was the will.
such was the interest of England (Exclamations from various benches.

Today, it was Mr. Curzon who recently said before the House of Commons that the Queen's government had addressed representations to the French government.

You see, about everything and about nothing, they are performances, remonstrances, reprimands, if necessary threats. If we let England have their way, well— She would treat us like the South American republics to which it has its cruisers notify the injunctions of The queen, under threat of bombardment. (Various movements).

Mr. Hubbard. — That's perhaps a bit excessive!

— Mr. Le Myre de Vilers. — I tell you: If we let ourselves they can do it, but we won't let them.

Mr. Louis Brunet. — We let ourselves be taken advantage of too much, in Egypt on— All!

Mr. Le Myre de Vilers. — These are empty words. I I agree with you that these threats go unpunished, and for cause. But these words should not be neglected, because | They are very perfidiously interpreted against us, they have the most _ unfortunate consequences for our colonial policy. (Very

HAS

Good! Very good!

Mr. Louis Brunet. — Particularly in Siam.

Mr. Le Myre de Vilers. — This is the true cause of the difficulties the challenges we face in Asia, Africa, Oceania, and beyond points on the globe. Indeed, although the natives were disappointed still clinging to their hopes, they still believe — they have this naivety — to England's word and its promises of intervention an intervention that never happens, but which constitutes an encouragement to the resistance that these natives oppose to our most justified and moderate demands (Very Good! Very good!

Without British incentives, we would not have been forced to participate in the 1893 campaign in Siam, those of 1883 and 1895 in Madagascar; the troubles in Emyrne would not have taken on this serious character which forced us into repression severe, while our interest dictated that we treat these popu-

220 PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Protestants; but an act of force caused them to lose the they benefit from their work and they have the audacity to do representations to France?

– Our subjects had invaded you; you have
"Having been chased away, you'll agree with me," said Mr. Curzon.
to the French government.

lations with kindness and to bind them to us by services rendered (Very good! very good!)

Too often these culpable maneuvers have resulted in unnecessary losses.
ment the blood of our soldiers, of our compatriots, of our subjects and our neighbors, who only wanted to live in good agreement with us.

Don't think, gentlemen, that I'm exaggerating. I participated in these I know the strengths and weaknesses of these events. I've even learned somewhat to my detriment, the unconscious intrigues of Some English people might have incited the natives to commelin Crimes against persons. (Exclamations on various benches). I hear one of my colleagues expressing his surprise:
If he insisted, I could provide him with proof of the facts that "Advance. (Movement).

Why, at this moment when we are engaged with England in a highly complex joint operation, of the most delicate, of the most serious, in contradiction with our centuries-old traditions of protecting Eastern Christians, for:
What, I say, under these conditions, does England multiply at "Towards us, the bad treatment, the hurtful words?" (Very Good! Very good!

What is her goal? Gentlemen, in English politics
Nothing is left to chance; everything is prepared and controlled Well in advance. Do we hear our patience wearing thin? [will-] we are distancing ourselves from the populations who have placed their trust in us in the generosity of France or who submitted to its domination? It would be impossible for me to answer.

Therefore, I felt it necessary to report this intolerable situation.
able to the Minister of Foreign Affairs and to ask him to tell us what measures he has taken or intends to take to put an end to bad practices which, if they continue killed, would no longer allow us to maintain contact with the Great-

Brittany, I'm not talking about cordial relations, – friendship has somewhat lukewarm lately – but all the same less than the correct relationships that are declared necessary Maintaining world peace, (Very good! Very good!)

It remains for me to thank the Minister of Foreign Affairs
Thank you for agreeing to my question. It is necessary that

AND IN ALGERIA 221

Ah! Where are the days when one of our ambassadors could– would say to the one from that same England: Except for the lan– As a diplomatic gesture, we don't give a damn about you?

At the same time as Mr. Curzon, all the good Hugue– Notes from France and Navarre went to war to the defense of their coreligionists in Madagascar.

the country should be clear on the nature of our relations with Great Britain Brittany (Applause).

Mr. President. – The floor is now open to the Minister of Foreign Affairs.
foreign.

Mr. Minister of Foreign Affairs. –“Gentlemen, I want To respond only to the specific fact that was referred to by Mr. Le Myre of Vilers. This refers to the brief discussion that took place at the House of Commons, a few days ago regarding the pro– Indigenous testators of Madagascar.

I have only one thing to say; that is that the Government has not received and could receive no representation (Applause– (ments), no request for explanation from the British government nique, concerning the indigenous Protestants of Madagascar. (Further applause).

Mr. Le Myre de Vilers. – Very good! Very good!

Mr. Minister. – Madagascar is French territory, its inhabitants– Many natives are subjects of France. (Very good! Very good 1)

If the words to which Mr. Le Myre de Vilers alluded If they applied to this category of population, I do not hesitate to declare that no one can speak on their behalf or to hire their lawyer, that the French authorities established in Vile (Applause).

Any foreign interference would naturally be ruled out. I do not I don't think I need to say anything more. (Loud applause)

(On a large number of benches).

From this debate, there is only one point to remember, which is that Mr. Curzon 'had expressed himself well, as Mr. Le Myre de Vilers had said,' which shows how audacious England is. To our In my opinion, she would be wrong to hold back with our worthless ministers.

A few years ago, the Russian ambassador had made Proposals, if not for an alliance, at least for closer ties with Waddington, Foreign Secretary. Waddington had Nothing is more urgent than going to denounce the Russian ambassador to Germany.

However despicable this act may seem to you, you cannot to doubt it, since Bismarck recounted it in full Parle-German comment while congratulating his friend Waddington.

e

+

222 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

A confessional newspaper, Le Huguenot, as furious as the Signal, as aggressive as a hydrophobic yappy dog, barked:

"While the Protestant missionaries are all English or Norwegian, the Catholic missionaries belong, for the most part, to the French nation, to the Jesuit order. This simple statistic would suffice to She alone can explain the jealousies and hatreds that have reached their peak during the coming year to flow away.

Thus, Le Huguenot does not hesitate between the missionary French, and English or Norwegian. He tells us shamelessly preferring foreigners.

What follows is a pointed diatribe against the Jesuits, which However, this is tempered by these comforting reflections:

"It is true that things have changed a lot since then." Louis XIV. In 1789, liberty was enshrined in our laws. of conscience; moreover, we are in a Republic of- then more than a quarter of a century; what am I saying? our governments

This is a fact that must be considered in light of Lord's statement Lyons said verbatim to Mr. de Chaudordy:

"The British Ambassador has long since taken the side-time to stop discussing foreign policy issues manages with France, since the latter has entirely entrusted the "He directed his affairs to the Prussian government."

This response, Mr. de Chaudordy adds, was communicated to Mr. Flourens was not exactly a revelation for him. He admitted that upon his arrival at the ministry he had been informed of this combination, trying to demonstrate its advantages to him stages!

-With two or three documents of this kind that are valid for the name and situation of those thanks to whom they are by Venus, these are the only elements on which a writer or a serious historian can form an idea of our foreign policy, Drumont wrote.

Apart from that, you have, as we have already mentioned-taté, for a source of information other than the ministers' babbling Foreign Affairs officials occasionally rise to the podium to exclaim:

"The Chamber can be sure that France's interests are "In good hands." (Thrilling applause from the center).

AND IN ALGERIA 225

Current Nantes residents are all more or less disciples of great tribune who had inscribed on his banner: The Clericalism, that is the enemy!

Clericalism again! For these people, the clerical-IsM is not limited to Catholicism.

They go to sermons, just as we go to mass;
They are sectarian like all Reformed; this is not ap-
It's not clericalism. We are fulfilling our duties.
Religious: we are clerics. They practice theirs and they persecute us in our beliefs and in Our belief: they are sacred, tolerant, progressive liberals.
intellectuals.

Clericalism, that is the enemy, said Gambetta, this a monster with a Jewish face, which our enemies claim to represent. But you, gentlemen of the Reformed order, are you not... Protestant clerics, like your allies the Freemasons and Jews are clerics belonging to the Frankish religion Freemason and Jewish?

I know very well that you have cleverly created a diversion.
on the backs of Catholics to oppress them, you cm-to flaunt power and mask all your shameful depravity studies.

As soon as you touch these sectarians, they cry danger clerical.

Wilson – yet another honest Protestant on whom We will have the charity to say nothing, not wanting, at surplus, to sully our pen – Wilson sold the le-Legion of honor.

"There must be a punishment," said the honest people.

"Be careful," the leaves replied in chorus.
Huguenots, Freemasons and Jewish women, the reaction is the head; Wilson represents the republic. The clerical peril... threat.

– Panama has swallowed up our economies, E de brave workers ruined in this adventure. Deputies-Jewish, Freemason, and Protestant families have been affected.
A large sum to deceive us; that the law couldnisse.

224 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

– Black men are conspiring against the principles
89. Proletarians, guard your freedom which has Tasted so dearly, the clerics want to take it from you.

– Dreyfus sold out France, he deserved to die.
3' writes Fopulo with his atavistic common sense.

"He is innocent," the Huguenots proclaim, "it's the con-
the level of the sword and the holy water sprinkler that led to his condemnation.
This is a setup against human rights and the citizen, that is to say against the republic itself by the supporters of obscurantism who attack him through the Jews, while waiting for the Protestants to attack them.
Don't you see the clerical danger?

– The English flooded Madagascar with missions-Protestant leaders who incite the natives against the France and force them to convert to Protestantism
ism.

Let them be driven out and the great African island colonized.
"Caine," ask the good French.

– The Jesuits, through their actions, incited the revolt of the Malagasy people; intolerance, clericalism, that is the enemy. proclaim the Protestant newspapers, thus covering and today by that idiotic word: "clericalism" all the evil which is being fulfilled and from which France is slowly dying, as One dies of a wasting disease.

Did those Huguenots make a fuss about it?
exile of the Queen of Madagascar by the brave general Gallieni! They challenged the government, traveled France and organized conferences everywhere. All of this because their English coreligionists could no longer it was also easy to Protestantize the island in order to then pass it on to England.

On this point, their goal was not in doubt. When one If you want to conquer a colony, you start by introducing it to... to reduce their language and religion. English Protestants they did not act differently in Madagascar.

Atelle teaches that, thanks to the Protestants, for the Malagasy, Protestant meant English and Catholic meant French, and that to say which religion he belonged, the Hova replied: French, if he was Catholic and English if he was Protestant.

AND IN ALGERIA 225

The Huguenots of France were fully aware of these facts. since, moreover, two French pastors appointed Lauga and Kruger had gone to Madagascar and strive to regain the influence lost by their coreligionists.

This did not prevent them, upon their return to France, from publishing an erroneous report on this state of affairs and to take the lead in the anti-French campaign against General Gallieni, defender of our interests, working thus for the English who fought us with the most harsh energy.

Resident Laroche was the object of their admiration, the ideal resident. In his meetings, notably in Saint-Quentin, Pastor Lauga praised this administrator—a man so favorable to Protestants.

However, here is what the Journal de Saint-Quentin reported of March 14, 1897, according to one of his correspondents from Madagascar, regarding the Protestant governor Laroche:

Taking possession of the functions of Resident General allowed General Gallieni to observe that there had been no absolute They did nothing under Mr. Laroche's regime. Monuments... several requests, some months old, were waiting always their answers; a number of projects lay dormant in the boxes: none of the questions asked by the residents provincial teeth had not received a solution; in short, the The work produced during those eight months was reduced to nothing.

When we look closely at what this nefarious man has done this, we are obliged to conclude or else that He's either a traitor or reckless; I hope so. for him, this second term is the true one.

-ra

mm

This was the man to whom Lauga attributed all the - virtues.

For his part, Berthelot, a former Huguenot-supporting minister foreign affairs, never tired of chattering away in 13*

296 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Le Matin against the Jesuits. According to him, the deposition of The Queen was going to bring about a revolt on the island.

The Senate had accepted the challenge thrown in the face of the protesters. so much.

The Protestant, Mr. de Freycinet, set things in motion. He pre-Conisa in the Senate the policy of abandonment that cost us Egypt and the Suez Canal, now owned by Protestant England (4)...

After Mr. de Freycinet, we had a speech by Protestant Senator Mr. Richard Waddington on our colonics of the French Congo.

The results obtained there are very poor. We there
We spend a lot to get very little back.

The official journal of the Congo, dated January 15, 1897, we learned that the local budget amounted to 3,698,000 francs, while the colonial rapporteur of the
In the chamber, Mr. Siegfried (yet another Protestant), we spoke to him.

(1) However, one should not believe that we practice
The policy of abandonment to excess. Listen to Mr. Curzon instead.
an English statesman, who spoke thus on December 11, 1897
in Southport:

If the territory of King-Chang was ceded to France, it is because England didn't know what to do with it and the king of Siam, to whom we had offered it in 1881, had refused the offer.

The opposition sees the agreement reached with France as a sacrificing British interests, but the King of Siam, who was in London last summer, does not share this opinion, nor do the English traders who trade with Siam.

With regard to Tunis, the government's objective was to to protect the English cotton industry, which could not find in the treaty concluded with Tunis the conditions which were necessary.

In the event of annexation by France, we would have lost the benefit-application of the most favoured nation clause.

That's what needed to be avoided.

Thus, on the one hand, in Siam, a fragment is ceded to France of unusable territory to the point that Chulalongkorn himself didn't want it; on the other hand, under the guise of conceding to us something in Tunis, Great Britain signs a special treatyspecifically intended to promote the expansion of cotton mills clays.

AND IN ALGERIA 297

milk from a little over 4 million. Who is right? Quia wrong?

– Over there, as a bet out, it's bureaucracy that
"It's suffocating us," a member of parliament recently told us.
Basses-Alpes.

And this MP quoted us the name of a mayor, a councillor general of the Basses-Alpes, from Castellane if we have good memory, Mr. F: wssolles, socialist, who had been named resident someone: part on the Ivory Coast, in a post he rarely went to, but which reminded him–
It carried very large landing stages.

A compromised MP in the affairs of the south of the France, Deloncle, had obtained this nomination, for not having the general councillor in question as a concurrent in the legislative elections of 1893.

After Mr. Waddington, another Protestant, former
The minister, Senator Trarieux, came to insinuate that the current difficulties that have arisen in Madagascar could well-being was the work of the Jesuit missionaries. Had we, as well as the rumor going around, really wanted to force the Queen of Madagascar to convert to Catholicism?

We were familiar with this language. It's the one that col-
the three pastors were carried into the temples of France Protestants we have spoken of, but he was all the more
It is more imprudent to hold it in a French tribune than Nothing in that allegation was true.

The Minister of Colonies, Mr. Lebon, although protesting He too—all Protestants—understood it so well that he immediately shut Mr. Trarieux up:

"At no point do I affirm with the reports of the General Gallieni as evidence to support my statement, to
At no point did General Gallieni try to convert– Queen Ranavolo's shot (Hzlarity).

This is how the Official Journal of the session of March 48. And the minister—though a Protestant—we... let us repeat – he said again:

"Gentlemen, I beg your pardon for insisting on that point, but you understand that I am determined to try

228 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

to immediately reject insinuations that have slipped into certain newspapers.

Finally, the minister read aloud the telegram from the governor. General Gallieni explaining the measure that IT had taken and including a letter which said, among other things that it seemed impossible for him to keep for a long time—at the time the institution of the monarchy, which hindered Uapplication of its pacification program and was exploiting imposed by the enemies of French domination.

Unfortunately, the Protestant Trarieux had been very imprudent. From the Huguenot point of view! For here comes a request Question regarding Madagascar submitted to the Chamber by Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin, immediately followed the Senate incident.

And Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin expressed himself thus, (Offi-sky of April 3, 1897):

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. — Gentlemen, when I had the honor of submitting, last July, an inter-pellation on the events that had taken place in Madagascar, I had two goals; the first was to defeat the last vestiges of resistance from the offices of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs foreign to the annexation of Madagascar and to dispel the hesitations of some members of the Senate, who then doubted the advantages of this measure; the second aimed to modify political, administrative, and military leadership. Printed by the Governor General. I received a first salisfaction during the discussion itself. The minister has immediately returned to the Senate; he asked Mr. Trarieux to to submit his report. Then he obtained from the Senate an emergency and the immediate discussion.

Deviating from its usual practices and even its own regulations, the The upper house yielded to the demands of the minister, who was under pressure. he himself, through my questioning, voted during our dis-percussion the single article of the law declaring the colony French, the island of Madagascar and the islands that depend on it.

On the second point, if I did not immediately obtain satisfaction faction, the Government soon recognized the truth of my statements. Struck by the dangers brought about by disorder complete the general disorder, the absolute anarchy that it engendered the system of government employed towards the Hovas and the other tribes of the island, he gave up dividing our possession in civilian and military territories, maintained the command unit, but the governor was replaced.

AND IN ALGERIA 299

Upon his arrival, General Gallieni acquired the proof and the conviction of the danger. The supplies of all types existed for only a few days. The queen reigned and governed. In Tananarive, at the seat of the governor-general, the Hova already sought to satisfy his hatred and his revenge was directed against the French civilian and military, The insolence of the provocation. Insurrection reigned everywhere. wonderfully organized; it had a supreme leader, the queen.

It was no longer, as had been said a few days earlier—before, simple bands of Fahavalos seeking to surprise to our remote posts, that's what we call in Madagascar—because the Manalambes, the Red Lampas, that is to say the patriots, The loyalists of the Malagasy monarchy fighting while shouting: Long live independence! A vow was made to cast us back into the sea. and to restore the queen's power over the entire island.

One particular fact was reported everywhere: barbarians and cruel towards the French, the Hovas showed a good—significant attention to certain Europeans. The latter seemed to be their allies; always aware of their movements by flattering their hopes of victory, they appeared to share them and strengthen them with powerful promises interventions (1).

Shortly before the arrival of General Gallieni, a young man, the son of Mr. Garnier, who had returned to the expeditionary column of considerable services, had attempted to resupply Tananarive. Departed with an im— caravan carrying, he had arrived in Babay, only a long way from 40 kilometers from the capital of Emyrne.

Surprised and surrounded by the insurgents, he resisted for several minutes. several days later, he managed to send a letter to the governor. general.

Mr. Laroche receives this letter, a cry for help, a plea from help, and simply writes in the margin: Get information—gnements. (Laughter).

,

(1) These are the English Methodists.

It seemed absolutely reckless to dare to contradict the statements he made to everyone, which he launched to all the agencies, he repeated to the Minister, on the general security and the complete pacification of the colony.

He was an andacicux, this young man who dreamed of supplying the garrison with provisions. However, the unfortunate man struggled, waiting the response to his desperate plea; a second messenger "The black man warns General Voyron. Immediately, this officer—" ral dispatches a small column of fifty men to disperse the attackers, go and free Mr. Garnir and his friends. Unfortunately, there were 40 kilometers to cover, and the Help arrived twenty-four hours too late; Garnier was dead.

As a sign of victory, the Hovas had cut up his body in pieces, stuck his head on the end of a spear planted on The square of the small village. (Movements).

The Hovas, after looting the goods, pursued—rent the porters to Mevatanana. There, two insurgents Taken by surprise and condemned to death, they made the following confessions:

"We only act on the express orders of your queen." who preaches holy war against the vahazas (whites) and provides weapons to exterminate them. It sends emissaries leaders are the first ministers, etc.

If I have brought up this sad and painful memory, it is not not only to honor the memory of this noble and brave As a child, it's mainly to show proof of the vast conspiracy that was being organized and strengthened around Ta—Nonsense. Mr. Laroche refused to believe it. I'm not blaming not his good faith; he unconsciously made a mistake, but in conditions which deeply commit, I dare say, his moral and material responsibility.

This was the situation when General Gallieni took power. What did he do? Mr. Laroche advised him to go to greet Her Majesty Ranavalona.

"Why?" he replied. "I am at home here, I am—" Hold out the queen.

The queen arrived, preceded by the waving Hova flag. alone in his palace. The general had this flag brought in and raise our three national colors on the dominant palace Tananarive, Emyrne, Madagascar (Applause). This The first act deeply surprised the Malagasy people.

Mr. de Mahy. – And their friends here.

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. – They looked at each other and said: Who is this intruder and what does he want? The French se– Would they be masters?

Undisturbed by their murmurs, the general proclaimed the absolute freedom of conscience (Very good! Very good N

This man, above all parties, does not see favoritism. to have no denomination. He only has one religion in Madagascar. because: the defense of the French, of the flag, of the homeland, and under his guidance develop the prosperity of this new French soil (Applause).

He stated that the Malagasy people would not be admitted to a civil service only if they know French. This pa– would do something unimportant (No! No!),

Mr. de Mahy. – On the contrary.

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. – It's sad to say, but it is, Unfortunately! One of the causes of conflict in this country, due to the antagonism between schools.

I won't insist. I am convinced that everyone ap– This statement proves it. Mr. Laroche did not think so. who said: It is we who must learn Malagasy.

What a strange attitude this governor general– French ral inviting the winner to adopt the language of defeated, to assimilate to the Malagasy, not thinking of con– to peacefully seek the Hova.

By these measures, General Gallieni attracted some Violent hatreds. The struggle was silent.

Mr. de Mahy. – Over there, and especially here!

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. – And he was quite skillful to to answer no one. Consumed by his duty as a soldier and As a representative of France, he felt neither affected nor hurt by the insults, slander and provocations (Applause).

Mr. André Lebon, Minister of Colonies. – Absolutely.

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. – He demonstrated courage civilian, which, combined with its military virtues, makes man the greatest honor (Loud applause).

But if General Gailliéni said nothing, he observed. Having compared the statements of the insurgents captured at Méva-tanana of all the facts and documents everywhere re-picked. ij acquires the conviction of the rebellion of the first minister, of his role as leader and organizer of the insurrection-

932 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

tion sown everywhere, possessing ammunition, weapons, of ` cannons, having European instructors. He had it seized,

Judge, execute! He strikes the enemy in the head.

Faced with these acts, the Malagasy people and others said to themselves:

The French are indeed in control this time. Their
The flag flies, the French language is imposed, the chiefs
Malagasy people are shot |

The widespread calumnies, the published rumors about our pro-chain departure, all the repeated acts of malice in the middle Insidious excitations are thwarted by this energy.

The Hova, a simplistic people, know only force, me-taking a lenient stance, which he judges weak and powerless, and submits and bows.

But there is one party that has not yet laid down its arms; it is-count the promises constantly repeated, not by a government foreign nement, respectful of our power, of our rights and certain that we know and can defend them but by ambitious, turbulent individuals, who use his name, his prestige, his power, to hinder our civilizing action and our domination.

Mr. de Mahy. – These are vast associations that act there, as in Algeria and France.

Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin. – Dominated by them, the queen has continued to sigh, to give orders. In a small expedition led by a young captain from the Gard, Mr. De-Leuze, new evidence was acquired of the role played by the queen. Her palace was the center of the insurrection. A prisoner of these ambitious enemies of France, a prisoner-

Born into the noble caste, the queen had no other desires.
than theirs.

The minister told the Senate: This primitive people who have all the cunning of the yellow race and can only be dominated by force, has a local history that resembles that of many civilized nations.

Two parties are facing each other: the noble caste, the bourgeoisie.
The queen belongs to the first, which our arrival has de-Stripped of all her privileges, rejected by power.
stopped the abuses, injustices and squandering.

Obeying the leaders of her caste, eager to drive out the master and to regain their advantages, the queen launched-born in the revolt, television downcast, confident in its allies.

AND IN ALGERIA 933

On several occasions the Governor-General informed the Government of what was happening. I have here all the rapes ports or thereabouts; I won't read them. 11 began with try to use the queen's influence to strengthen ours. As it slipped from her grasp and turned against her
He observed it with great caution, by verifying Diplomatic table. He tried to bring the queen back by the demonstration of his own interests. All having failed,
As the danger grew, he warned the minister of the peril and of his intention. At the appointed time, he deposed the queen.
He did well (Applause).

This is not a rash act, it is a deliberate act of a di-
A skilled plomate and a far-sighted soldier. Leave her prisoner.
In Madagascar, it was about increasing one's credit, perhaps by Fau-
The source of misfortune was to remain in the midst of the insurgents.
their flag and their hope, it was to allow the slanderers deniers say: They did not dare to exile him.

Without hesitation, completing his work and his mission, the ge-General deported the queen to Réunion. All the French have
He was applauded. I admit I wouldn't have gone up to that podium.

Yes – I believe today that there has been confusion in my thought – if in the response of the Minister of Colonies to Mr. Trarieux, I had noticed a certain hesitation.
to defend this energetic man, this courageous and brave soldier who had just done his homework (Very good! Very good!)

It was with this feeling that I submitted my request for questioning.

I had the honor of seeing the Minister the following day.
I must state that he assured me that his words had were poorly reproduced by the telegraph or misunderstood.
I believe this explanation. He informed me from the very first day.
that he intended to support and defend General Gallieni. I I am only here to allow this assertion of the Government-hement in front of all of France and in front of all of Europe. And if I said a few words about the actions taken before the arrival From the general's perspective in Madagascar, it's solely to do things better.
to understand in the House how much the situation he has brought-
The region was difficult and dangerous.

The truth is that 30 or 40 kilometers from Tananarive,
The insurgents were armed, organized, disciplined, well ordered. A few more days, and we would have had to unto mourn a massacre – the word is not mine, but that of a

934 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

a man who knew the situation well – a massacre –
General of the French.

France would not have accepted this affront; it would have been forced to restart such a costly campaign in money and in men than the one who had led us to Tananarive (Very good! Very good!)

If I struggled so much after the vote for the Mada- expedition
Gascar, if I insisted so much on the annexation, the relocation
Mr. Laroche's deposition, if I ask the
the government to approve of General Gallieni's attitude, that is because in my conviction Madagascar is one of the most beautiful jewels of our colonial empire (Very good! Very GOOD ?)

On this island which can command India, Africa that, in Suez, protected as it is on all sides by the Ocean,
We have nothing to fear from an invasion by organized gangs.
who devastated Tonkin for far too long. In the country
All peoples hostile to the Hova will be, if necessary, our Allies, our auxiliaries. The Hova people themselves, happy under our civilization, will faithfully rally around the France, which brings him independence, freedom, and security
rity. =

No one, you can be sure, will dare to try to harm to our rights (Applause).

I believe I am fulfilling my duty by asking the Governor-

how to approve the energetic act of this soldier too strong—He was attacked by certain media outlets. He needs to draw on in the praise of the Government and in the vote of the Chamber the strength and courage he needs to to complete his work.

So far from their homeland, even the toughest men rarely... wind to have a moment of discouragement and failure
when the mother country does not show them its approval,
Her confidence, her encouragement. She needs to tell them:
You did the right thing.

That's the word I'm waiting for (Loud applause).

Mr. President. — The floor is now open to the Minister of Co-Jonies.

Mr. Minister of Colonies. — Gentlemen, I will not fail Certainly not to the promise I made earlier the Chamber is to be extremely brief, given that Mr. Pourquery de Boisscrin has done almost completely the

AND IN ALGERIA 235

a speech I would have given myself from this podium. (Very Good! Very good!

I would like to say here that I am grateful to Mr. Pour-Boisserin's query to provide me with the opportunity to respond from a word to unjustified attacks that were directed con-between me and the Government following the incident which took place in the Senate two weeks ago. All those those who had commented on this incident had probably neglected to read the official minutes of the meeting and did not know what questions had been asked of the minister and how he had been forced to respond to it.

The honorable Mr. Trarieux had asked me two things:
firstly, if the deposition of Queen Ranavalona had received las-prior feeling that the Government, then if the Gothe government knew the precise reasons that had determined-General Gallieni was forced to make this decision.

On the first point, I replied that the deposition
the queen's had not been ordered by the Government;
Regarding the second one, I let him know that I hadn't yet
I received a detailed report from General Gallieni, which I am unaware of.
He cited the cause of the measures he had deemed necessary to take.
I added that, when one was in the presence of a man who had given such clear evidence of political acumen, of prudence and firmness that General Gallieni, he was the duty of the government and the entire Parliament to postpone any judgment until all the elements debates were placed before their eyes.

Currently, the question is whether the government—the government gives its approval to the initiative taken by the government General Gallieni. I say this very clearly to the Chamber, — and I beg you, gentlemen, not to be disturbed by my words before I had finished my sentence — I regret, As for me, that circumstances forced the general Gallieni made this decision without having been able to receive the prior agreement of the Government, because I would have I felt it my duty to join in my responsibility to his own (Loud applause).

At this point, I will summarize with a short quote. from his latest political report the reasons that led the general to the decision he made, and I will make you aware — which is already evident from the words I have just spoken—cer — what is my feeling and that of the Government.

226 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

The report of February 26, the one dated the day before The deposition of Queen Ranaivalona ends with the con— The following observations:

"In short, the situation is good in Emyrne; but he We must not hide the fact that we are going to address a pe—a difficult period, that in which the inhabitants, having harvested their crops, will resume their usual looting.

'Some symptoms already prove to me that the leaders of bands, representatives of the noble caste, aided by the the actions of certain foreigners, still glimpse the es—for revenge against us. They use the name of the queen, while the former slaves, the defectors (laughs) (general), cannot yet understand why we gar—dons this old cog and still fear a return to the old state of affairs. I will take the necessary measures. to avert any danger and maintain good results obtained to date.

I have other, slightly more detailed reports, but all in the same direction.

These, in summary, are the reasons that led the ge—General Gallieni in Premares on February 27, the decision he has socket.

As Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin and as I can to say, the unanimous opinion of the French, the Government fully and completely approves the decision taken by the General Gallieni, and I am aware that the Chamber will want send him the encouragement he deserves in the circumstances in which he finds himself (Loud applause).

Following this session, the Protestant Trarieux was sick for three days; as for the Signal, two pastors renegades from its hateful editorial staff were afflicted with hydrophobia.

Once recovered, they continued their anti- campaign French with the help of the filthy press.

L'Estafette, a newspaper founded by the nefarious Jules Ferry – a Huguenot, too – naturally supported the English Protestants of Madagascar and, through the pen of a journalist, probably retired, Mr. Othon Guerlac, ca- the Jesuits urged to give credit to Voltaire.

If there are missionaries worthy of the most fervent admiration

AND IN ALGERIA: 237

ration, of the deepest veneration; if there is an order A religious person who embodies all the qualities, all the sacrifices heroically accepted, all the noble duties, all The virtues, those are indeed the Jesuit missionaries and in In general, all the priests of this remarkable Order.

The Jesuits, at least, were doing their duty. good Frenchmen, while the French Protestants... They know their duty as good... Englishmen.

Here is the opinion of Mr. Georges Thiébaud who absolutely confirms what we are saying:

The truth is that we will not belong to ourselves either. As long as we allow the network to develop there, we will let it develop for a long time. foreign religious societies that fight our in- influence and our authority.

England, by covering our colonies with its agents re- religious man, intends to use this as a title in the eyes of Germany, to whom she could give this assurance that at the first gesture France on the continent, it would put the colonies

French forces in the air, even Algeria, to operate a power-health diversion.

Indeed, we have not, over our colonies, so painfully conquered, but a nominal and ceremonial power. The power The real situation is in the hands of the British missions which, under their aim is to spread Christianity there, and they are especially preparing for it. elements of rebellion. They thus equip themselves with mortgage pledge to be made in favor of their country of origin, at the first move we make against England or Germany.

This is a very serious danger that we are working hard to address. to call for vigilance from the country, which understands this very well, and of the government, which, for its part, is turning a blind eye and a deaf ear, to not to turn the consistories and lodges against him, with which he mistakenly believes he has to take into account.

What does it matter to the Huguenots? Let the colonies perish! earlier than Protestantism.

Protestantism will always be the implacable enemy of French influence, if this influence threatens its religion.

938 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

In an interview with La Croix, Mr. de Mahy said also :

Mr. Blavet, in a remarkable work: "In the land of ill-" "gache," he said in very good terms, that France only has one ad- A future event to be feared on the large African island: the protests.

Tantism (4).

It was the Methodists who gave rise to fahavalism. because all the leaders of the rebellion were their creatures.

ee a

(4) Mr. Carle des Perrières, the former journalist for a time compromised in the Lebaudy affair, and who was acquitted, obtained a concession in Madagascar. He saw General Gallieni, he writes In the newspaper: | |

– You have had, General, to fight against the influence of the Clay. Was it as deeply rooted as people claim?

– To an extraordinary degree. We waged an an-

Clay: don't doubt it. Here, I'll give you an example-

In Ambatondrazaka, two Frenchmen are captured and immediately murdered. Two days later, the Fahavalos arrested an Englishman and take him prisoner. Not only do they not harm him, but, forty-eight hours later, the 'prisoner was passing-to come, to two of his compatriots who lived in Ambatondrazaka. a ticket, roughly like this: Designed:

"I am a prisoner, but I lack nothing. I was able to tell you..."
I am sending this note to let you know that the position will be attacked. Put up very obvious markings on your door.
Our nationality: you can be sure that nothing will happen to you.
do. "

I must say, added the general, that these two Englishmen had My loyalty to deliver the note to the post commander, that the The post was indeed attacked and the Fahavalos received as They deserved it. But you see how much this influence is undeniable and how urgent it was to cut things short.

– Is it a question of religion?

– Largely. There are many more Malagasy people Testators than Catholics. First, this form of religion It suited them better. From then on, the pastor became all-powerful. As for influence, I didn't really know what to oppose to the step-author. With a new people like the Malagasy, making the Secularization meant losing oneself irretrievably. I couldn't Therefore, they should be opposed by the Catholic missions.

I received a great deal of help from the Brothers of the Schools and the Sisters. who are doing excellent work here.

AND IN ALGERIA 239

It was them or their friends in Europe who deceived the government through false narratives and imposed Mr. La-rock.

Ah! If you knew as well as I do everything that's going on Over there: the intrigues, the shady dealings, the men-dreams, the fake news from this nefarious sect.

But what is more serious is that these alleged mis-Zionists have influential friends in Paris who are stirring things up and distort public opinion.

In short, France's situation will not be firm and well established in Madagascar that the day when Catholic influence will have been substituted for Protestant influence.

I am a freethinker, but over there, Catholic will be always synonymous with French and Protestant with English.

In another interview with Father Camboué, we read:

"During the first days of his government, Mr. Laroche was quite amiable. But soon the arrival of French pastors Lauga and Krüger changed the facing things.

At Ambohibarahena, the English Protestants were entre—they opened our door and wounded Casimir, our schoolmaster. They roam the countryside, garroting the students and striking the Catholic teachers.

In a village called Ankabahaba, Lutherans invaded the chapel to seize two of their elders students and beat them brutally.

Three days later, a Lutheran pastor was knocked unconscious. beatings of a Malagasy man who sent his son to Catholics.

In the temples, English pastors accused pu—literally, the French are the enemies of the Hovas.

"Don't go to the Catholics," they said, "because the English will wage war against the French. These will be Baltus and expelled from the island. So woe to their friends.

be

Near the capital itself, in a village, the governor native governor, under the influence of the pastor, threatened of a fine of three oxen and three piastres, all those who would pass by our place. Several times they have used the name of the Resident General to excite and incite to maintain a kind of terror among our members.

—

240 PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

When the English missionaries had established in a central location, a meeting of their own, the individual clients-
The genes of heresy were telling the Catholics:

– Beware, the Resident General is coming to preside
our meeting.

What were the two ministers doing during this time?
Calvinists Lauga and Krüger?

No sooner had they arrived than they were immediately showered with honors.
neurs. They were received several times by the queen, and the Official Gazette, written by the residence, does not lack-never fail to point out these signs of consideration.

They joined forces with the An- missionaries Glas who took them for a walk throughout almost the entire province of Imerina, and made them preside over all the great meetings.

In their interpretation of their sermons, the English
They made people say whatever they wanted, they conduct investigations and terrorize the Malagasy. The French, colonists and half-Literary figures don't hesitate to say it's a scandal.
and that one must be very naive not to see that by
This attitude plays perfectly into England's hands.

Because no matter what we do, we won't change this idea.
rooted in Madagascar: Catholicism means Frar-Sais, whoever says Protestant says English.

And much to Pastor Lauga's chagrin, these are the protests-
the Indians themselves who taught this formula to the Indians genes before the conquest.

Upon his return, as we have said, Lauga, made in favor of English Protestants, conferences across France.

In Bordeaux, he had the audacity to exclaim:
| e

Going back thirty years in the mission archives
English women, we are forced to acknowledge that they have not done that works of civilization and religion and that they have been reuses to make France benefit from it.

The strangest thing is that he wasn't there, a Frenchman armed with a stick.

Especially since the anti-French movement had taken hold proportions.

And Le Figaro, hardly suspected of clericalism, wrote:

A series of peculiar noises that it is our duty to record short at this moment in the political world and in the colonial world.

This would be nothing less than an Anglo-Protestant conspiracy. which would have as its aim the recall of General Gallieni.

And we note, as a curious coincidence, the attitude of Mr. Lebon at the Senate session during the interpellation Tra-rieux.

Those who note this coincidence and many other things Again, there are many.

We know that the latest measures taken by the general Gallieni in Madagascar threatens English interests, which are inseparable from Methodist interests.

And we observe that, following a slogan originating in London, French Protestants have launched a campaign against the General Gallieni, who displeased London.

This was done without any mystery.

English journalists and parliamentarians have reported in their writings, in their speeches, the new resident general to the revenge of the Protestants.

Then, that not being enough, the Methodist agents are came to France.

They were received by three former ministers who are "of religion.

Immediately, from corridor to corridor, from antechamber to ante-From room to room, complaints and threats were peddled.

"We must remember the sectarian, the enemy of, freedom of conscience. » |

This was said seriously.

The three former ministers were not laughing when they asked That. They seemed convinced. A special dinner was given at one of their houses. A ball at another's. And the third has presented to the current Minister of Colonies a delegation more that she suspects.

14

212 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Two other former ministers, also Protestants, are involved no less actively. Bargains... delicate matters... have begun. Journals have been anticipated... lists.

In short, the whole clan rose up. It was a consistory of civil servants, bankers, parliamentarians, ministers and former ministers who are rallying to this slogan of sacrifice A spell from London: Perish the colonies, perish the France, rather than the interests of the Methodists!

We repeat, this is what is being said from all sides.

Isn't that worrying, especially when you remember the history of our foreign policy in recent years born?

When England wanted to take Egypt, protests... Many French people allowed him to do so.

When the city's merchants needed Zanzibar to use it as a warehouse for their goods destined for tion of Madagascar, a French Protestant gave them Zanzibar.

When Mizon carried French trade into the Benue and was going to open up central Sudan to us, a protest-English aunt, the wife of a French statesman, declared that, in the interest of their souls, it was better that the Negroes were civilized by Protestant Englishmen rather than by French Catholics (1). And Mizon was recalled.

Four years ago, at the cost of incredible efforts, Patriots wanted to take the last part away from the English which remained to be taken into account in the telegraph network below a sailor of the globe, he is a French Protestant, who, docile-ment, delivered to the English what they needed to be definitively the masters of the world's "information". We know what superiority this gives them (2).

Many political figures are worried.
of our colonial future, bring these past events closer to those that are currently being reported and are wondering with

(1) Is this not Mrs. Ribot, a most ardent Protestant?
born?

(2) Le Figaro refers to the Huguenot Siegfried.

e AND IN ALGERIA 243

anxiety if even today the English will find among We French are blind enough to serve, under the pretext of religion, British interests at the expense of the interests of French nets.

The attempts of the French Protestant party failed in part; but it still exerts its baleful influence over there.

We are not inventing this truth – which would become a lie –; we assert that it is.

And other writers share this opinion.

About Mr. Buisson's escapade, MH Galli recalled the role of the Protestant party in all our international affairs and regarding Madagascar, he
As stated in Ze Jour of August 40, 1898:

Haven't we seen in Madagascar, for example, a party
French people openly express their sympathies for the English Methodists, our enemies, and to thwart with all his the power of the authority that was trying to eliminate or suppress them through their propaganda?

One of the more curious incidents of this resistance–
The destination was that of Pastor Shaw who, at the time, almost as much noise as Pritchard's during the reign of Louis-Philippe.

Shaw was a known spy for the English government, a a bitter enemy of France.

Admiral Pierre, then commander-in-chief in Tamatave: ordered him to be arrested and transported aboard a ship squadron bucket, under indictment for attempted poisoning-attack against several of our soldiers.

As soon as Shaw's imprisonment became known in England-earth, all of British Protestant clericalism rose up to defend it, and French Protestant clericalism took He does and causes for him with no less ardor.

Not only was Shaw released, but our government, despite protests from the press and designation of our navy, granted the spy pastor a large compensation.

Now that the incident is forgotten, the pro-clerics The testators have not given up, and, just as they defend

244 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCA

Dreyfus, they continue to defend Shaw. No later than Last year, following a complaint by Mr. Pécaut, including Mr. Buisson has just delivered the eulogy, entirely imbued with Dreyfusism, the Minister of Public Instruction has blacklisted a work of history, guilty of expressing [something] towards Shaw feelings of disapproval.

There is a Protestant orthodoxy, just as there is an orthodox Catholic doxies, also ultramontane in their own way, like this one and placing certain interests above the interests of the peer, i.e.

Has the Republic only prevailed over one in order to... To subjugate to the other? We point out the danger.

It seems I'm not the only one who believes in the Pro-Peril testing.

It's definitely going to work.

And she will walk faster than you think.
Gentlemen of the Huguenots....

*
* *

It is not only in Madagascar that Protestants and The English are working, in concert with the French Protestants, against the interests of France.

Algeria, our beautiful colony, is being invaded by these humalevolent monkeys.

But so as not to be accused of exaggerating, I am obliged to cite Official of November 10, 1881 which relates to the questioning of Mr. Saint-Germain.

Mr. President. I give the floor to Mr. Saint-Germain to develop his questioning on the actionscomments of English Methodists in Algeria.

Mr. Saint-Germain. - Gentlemen. For some Years already, English missions have descended upon Algeria, in the three departments of Algiers, Oran and from Constantine. In the department of Algiers, we let's see in Algiers, in Cherchell, in Djemmâ-Saharidj, in Azeffoun, in Akbou and in Azazga; in the department from Oran, to Tlemcen, to Mascara, to Mostaganem, and in the department of Constantine, in Constantine.

I won't talk about those that are installed at Maroe, in Tunisia, in Tripolitania.

AND IN ALGERIA 945

The oldest of these missions dates back to 1881:
'That's the one from Algiers. Those from the departments of Oran and Constantine dates back approximately twelve years.

The distribution of missionaries was done by the
the mother house which is the mission of North Africa, whose headquarters are in London. It took place on unevenly, which varied according to the importance of the po-Muslim population to be seized.

Thus, in the department of Oran, there was Some time ago, in Tlemcen, 5 deaconesses and 4 pasteur; in Mascara, 1 pastor; in Mostaganem, 4 deaco-nesse and 1 pastor.

In the department of Algiers, there were: in Algiers, 6 deaconesses, 4 pastors and th free missionaries: ; at Birkadem, 2 independent missionaries; at Cherchell, 2 deacons nesses; at Djemmââ-Saharidj, 5 deaconesses and one pas-in Akbou: 4 deaconesses, 1 pastor; in Azeffoun, 2 deaconesses, and in Azazga, 2 deaconesses.

The word "deaconesses," gentlemen, may not mean much to you... It might not be much; I'll explain. Besides the Pastor, there's always the deaconess. Why is she there? Is she there? To help the pastor in his mission, with boundless devotion. The pastors address more specifically to men; the deaconesses to women and children.

These women, by virtue of their status, can penetrate among indigenous women in the interior of the May-sounds, while this is forbidden to men, who do not can never obtain such authorization.

This is why the English missions include women. I must say that these diaco-The nuns were the most zealous auxiliaries of the mission-English women.

Initially, these missions were imposed on the popula-indigenous traditions through distributions of cakes and toys for children, medicines, clothes and even sums of money to adults. These Distributions were initially made in the village square.

246 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

amidst songs and hymns with accompaniment of barrel organs and accordions.

Mr. Gustave Rivet. – Like the Salvation Army.

Mr. Saint-Germain. – These exhibitions having often which gave rise to disturbances and noise, the mu- authority The municipal council was alarmed, and they were soon inter-say on the public road.

'The missionaries then had houses built for themselves very comfortable, with a most cheerful appearance, in the middle of very picturesque sites, and settled there. They were able to There, gentlemen, in the shadow of silence and discretion, to give free rein to their burlesque fantasies. Conferences followed by lunches were held in these premises. which were soon transformed into "schoolhouses."

Lieutenant-Colonel Guérin. – And they preach there the beauties and benefits of English administration.

Mr. Saint-Germain. – I'll get to that, my dear colleague. bequeath, and I promise to give you some on that complete information.

I was telling you, gentlemen, that the missionaries have created ecotes. And which schools?

"There, young natives are taught to hate the France and the love of England.

This has been noted several times by the authorities. municipal and academic institutions of Algeria.

Young Kabyles are taught there that the French are idolaters, godless (sic), despising all religion, being penniless (sic), never doing anything for the Kabyles, and if they suffer, it is the French people who are the cause, while on the contrary England loves them because it is a religious country, where there has a lot of money!

I'm not making this up, gentlemen, and I could even say so. The subject is to recount an incident that happened, I was told. in the presence of an honourable senator, member of the Committee of eighteen in the Senate, Mr. Combes (1), who had gone, during one of his trips to Algeria, vi- to name one of these schools, accompanied by the rector of the Academy Algiers demi-region.

(4) Combes is a former defrocked priest.

AND IN ALGERIA 947

This school was the one in Djemma-Saharidj, I believe. The visitors were never able to obtain deaconesses who run the school, communication of the notebooks of students, and for good reason.

Some time later, an academic inspector having presented before these same deaconesses was happier ct put read on the notebooks of young Kabyles phrases like this one:

Young Kabyles are eager to grow up to become a naturalized English citizen (Ezclamations).

This is what the deaconesses taught their students.

Such instruction and education should inevitably lead to quarrels and unrest among the Europeans and the Kabyles.

During the year 1892, this overexcitement of the es-
The incident occurred, and the Government had to be concerned.
See. Our ambassador in London, Mr. Waddington, was obliged to write to the head of the foreign office, Lord Salisbury, the following letter:

I have been instructed by my government to explain to you
The events that led him to desire that the missions of London was invited to refrain from being represented in our colony.

This is to prevent problems that arise too often often in Muslim countries and which have consequences religious unrest that my Government has forbidden any kind of proselytizing, even towards our own people nationals. Allow me, Marquis, to... to recall these serious reasons that compel us to oppose in an absolute manner to the development of any propagandist religious leader in Algeria. This general rule that we we have imposed on our nationals cannot, you know-will take, suffer an exception with regard to foreigners

248 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

gers. We therefore hope that the English missions will themselves take the side of recalling their representing and we will avoid the painful necessity where we we would find it necessary to prescribe that they themselves move away of our territory (Very good! very good!)

This letter stirred up storms of anger among the deaconesses and missionaries of Djemna-Sa-

Haridj. The deaconesses then exclaimed:

We will defend ourselves and we will fight despite everything.
We're leaving today, but we'll be back when Algeria will belong to England.

The deaconesses did leave, but not for

They left in August 1892, and They returned in November of the same year.
after the heatwave! Since then, they have continued
they are carrying out their work of hostility against French authority.
This work is self-evident; whoever denies it is blind.

The information that I went to gather on place, prove beyond any doubt that these English missions tend, by all possible means,
bles, to detach the Muslim populations from us.
Do you want proof? I have it right here. I
I took them either from the deliberations of the elected bodies, either in the reports drawn up by the authorities; these and those are of the most rigorous accuracy.

In Algiers, an eyewitness will tell you this what happens in the conferences that the missions an-clays have been held there for some time:

"Three years ago, three female army officers..."
Hello, they carried out their duties in a house of the Dupuch Street extended towards the pontoon barracks
niers.

These ladies received young people once a week.
Arabs, children and adults, numbering around twenty approximately, they offered them tea, cakes, money same. During those five o'clock chats, they talked about their religion and of their nation, which is the first in the world.

AND IN ALGERIA | 249

To increase the number of their listeners, the sa--lutists left Dupuch Street and settled in full Kasbah, rue du Croissant, where they rented a Moorish house.

There, they live among the natives, who con-are now born very well, and are absolutely ignored by Europeans, like the Rue du Croissant itself-even, lost deep in the Arab quarter where the police do not never sets foot there. The preachers have an oratory at the reach of their many listeners, and they all have security measures for preaching. At least, that's what I've learned.
from a local M'zabite from whom I was asking for information-information about Marshal Booth's loyal followers.

This man from Mzabite had attended several performances.
Here is what he essentially told me:

"English women are known to the Arabs as..." missionaries. They help the poor, care for the sick. Many natives go to their five o'clock where Europeans are not allowed. The English are good and rich; three-quarters of the world belong to them. hold on, France pays them a tax. If they were masters Here, the Arabs would be happier. Those who would Those working would earn between 1 and 6 francs per day in the large factories that would be established. The natives would govern themselves. we would return to the Arabs their lands and their titles from elsewhere-times.

– So, what would you do if the English tried to...
"Are you talking about Algeria?" I asked my man.

"Oh! I'm too old."

Gentlemen, I offer these final words for your consideration.
tions: Oh! I'm too old! that is to say: If I was young, I could have accepted this advice which... incite revolt and perhaps I would even revolt myself-
I !

These words certainly give us pause to reflect on the deplorable consequences of English propaganda in Algeria.

250 PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Throughout the department of Algiers, the work that I am telling you signal is being pursued.

In Cherchell, it's the city council of that city who is obliged to take it twice, in May 1894 and in November 1895, deliberations which must have been transmitted to the Governor General through the intermediarydiary of the prefect of Algiers. I will not read you these deliberations-rations, so as not to abuse your moments, but they both tend to demonstrate that the deaconesses en-clays have settled in Cherchellet "engage in a "Unbridled propaganda against France."

The house of these deaconesses is the meeting place.
tinual of many Arab children, especially of the female sex-minim, and it's not uncommon to be able to count on one single day the entry or exit of more than one hundred individuals genes. At some point, these deaconesses allow themselves-they even tried to go to the tribes to engage in it to their propaganda.

Everyone in Cherchell agrees to recon-to realize that it is time to put an end to a state of affairs Likewise, so harmful to France's authority in Algeria.

In Kabylia, gentlemen – that's where the missionaries operate to a greater extent than anywhere else
– There are three missions: the first to Moknéa, the second in Djemma-Saharidj and third in Ighil-N Zekri.

Lieutenant-Colonel Guérin. – Kabylia is the Algerian war party!

Mr. Saint-Germain. – The mayor of Mekla has often had the opportunity to complain about these missions in
* reports that were addressed to the sub-prefect of Tizi-Ouzou and that the Governor General must have had in her hands.

According to the information gathered, said the mayor of Mekla, in his report of 4892, I learned that the goal the mission of Djemma-Saharidj would be "that of converting the natives to the Protestant religion in order to better to win them over to English influence.

AND IN ALGERIA 251

English evangelists distribute free to sick natives: coffee, quinine, sugar, etc.; to
For the poor: personal effects, sugar, and coffee; for the children, toys, sweets, gandouras and chechias.
In summary, the presence of these four English girls at the middle of a Kabyle population seems to me to have to give gives rise to fears...

Lieutenant-Colonel Guérin. – These are very serious concerns!

Mr. Saint-Germain... to relatively to our influence, which we will see gradually diminish
if the Government is not careful.

In this same part of Kabylia, an a most serious incident that I must disclose to the Chambre (Speak! Speak 2.)

The case was tried more than a year ago in the Assize Court.

from Algiers, fifteen natives and three suspected colonists for having supplied ammunition to the notorious Ban- gang said Areski.

During the debates, a municipal administrator mixed, heard as a witness, was questioned by the pre-president of the assizes.

This administrator was asked what he thought of the munitions held by Areski and his companions, and if these were not of foreign origin, of of English origin in particular. The administrator responded: |

"That's perfectly correct," while the president he himself added:

"This is common knowledge, by the way."

Regarding a second question formulated as follows:

"After the attack on Tababourt, didn't we pick up..."
A number of shell casings were found at the scene of the shooting.
Made in England?

The administrator witnessed the response:

– Yes.

And finally, regarding a third question:

– Isn't there one in the vicinity of Tabacourt?

952 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

4 kilometers from this center, a mission- establishment English citizens? This establishment, a kind of fortress Isolated, does it have means of communication with the sea ?

– "That's still true," the administrator said.
less.

I found this information in the newspapers which took care of the matter when she came before the Assize Court of Algiers, and I don't know that they have ever been denied. But I can, if you If you want them, leave them aside, I have them in my file undeniable proof that the missionaries in Kabylia have supplied weapons and gunpowder to the natives. (Exclamations).

Mr. Maurice Faure. – Why the government to–
Is he reading this? We should have chased all those people away!

Mr. Saint-Germain. – Why is this tolerated? But That is precisely what I have come to ask the Governor nement, my dear colleague.

I have before me a note from which it appears that, on June 30, 1895, the aforementioned Ben Addi Aoumeur, Ben Abdeslam, Ben Sliman of Tagounit, Ben douar
Yahia (Djurjura) and Ben Addi Saïd, Ben Ismail, Ben Sliman, same place, were found at the Akfadon pass (Haut-Sebaou), holders of a quantity of powder assessed at a total of 30 kilograms and included in four bags: one of 7.4 kg; another of 6.5 kg; the 3rd of 6,500; the 4th of 16,375.

This powder was hidden under the saddles of the two donkeys.
and the mules they led. This powder was of Supposedly of English manufacture. These natives were condemned, moreover, by the court of Tizi-Ouzou.

But that's not all!

Here is another fact that I would like to point out to you and which is even more recent, it happened on April 30th:

A security inspector, seconded to Tizi-Ouzou, to arrested, on that date, aided by his agents and at the cost of very great dangers, even at the risk of his life, & Tikobaine

AND IN ALGERIA 253

(Dellys), the man named Ferhat ben Mohamed, brother of the pre-resident of the village, reported as a dangerous criminal.
After being shot twice, the inspector of the safety and his men threw themselves upon Ferhat and succeeded to disarm him. They then took him to his hut, where they found 350 grams of English gunpowder. Iron-
He was brought before the courts. He first appeared before
Mr. Deputy Public Prosecutor in Tizi-Ouzou, and what did he declare then?

When questioned about the origin of the powder found at
He made the following confession:

"I found this ammunition in my estate."
father, who died nine years ago. This powder had been given to him given by an Englishman with whom he worked Bône.

That's clear and precise. And before the court of Tizi-Ouzou, what did Ferhat answer to the questions that he were asked?

Listen, gentlemen:

– I acknowledge that these munitions were found at Me.

D. – Where did you find the powder?

R. – It was my father who brought it from Bône with a gun.

D. – Who gave this powder to your father?

R. – 4 told me that it was an Englishman who had given it to him given in Bône.

D. – Isn't it rather in Kabylia?

R. – He told me it was in Bône.

The Tizi-Ouzou criminal court has, as well
You think, retained the prevention and convicted the accused to one month in prison, a 200 franc fine and to the con-taxation of ammunition and weapons by application of Articles 1, 2, 4 and 5 of the decree of December 12, 1851.

I can contribute to the debate a letter that was sent regarding this matter, to an Algiers newspaper by the honorary 15

E

954 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Mr. Colin, Ferhat's lawyer. This letter is thus designed:

Tizi-Ouzou, May 24, 1896.

Mr. Editor-in-Chief

I read in the columns of your esteemed newspaper a article entitled: The English Menées in Kabylie.

Having defended himself before the Tizi- criminal court Ouzou, the native Saïd ben Mohamed Ferhat, I can, without betraying professional secrecy, providing you with information precise.

Mr. P..., the security inspector, who had carried out 1 ar- The accused's statement claimed to have discovered in the Ferhat's hut contained a large quantity of powder of origin English.

At the hearing, as much in the interest of my client as to satisfy a feeling of anxious patriotism, I have My client was pressed with questions on this point. After much... hesitations, which proves what a serious recommendation! He had been ordered to remain silent, he confessed that his Father had received, five years ago, from an an- missionary Glas, powder, and bullets. This admission was consistent with the statements of the honorable officer.

The convicted Ferhat was transferred to Algiers, where his The case will return to the Court of Appeal. The same statements... The same scenarios will be repeated before the magistrates.

Such serious acts are bound to outrage the consciences. All that remains for us is to turn back to the -- public authorities, to remind them of their responsibility- bility, and to tell them that any inaction would be a la- Purchased (Very good! very good!)

Please, etc.

Henry Coun,
Lawyer at the court of Tizi-Ouzou.

I would not want to take up too much of your time, gentlemen. Because it's very late. (Speak! Speak!)

Lieutenant-Colonel Guérin. – That's a question of patriotism. There is a great danger that we do not want They won't see it, and when they realize it, it will be too late: (Very good, very good I)

Mr. Saint-Germain. – I agree with you, my dear colleague, and I thank you for the words you just spoke. to pronounce, because they have particular importance in your mouth.

In Mostaganem – these are not rumors that I am bringing you here, I assure you, this is the result from a personal investigation I conducted on site, there is a little over a year – in Mostaganem, I say, there is a

an English missionary named Arthur Liley, whom we | constantly sees himself in the company of natives, going and coming to their homes, luring them into his dwelling, making distributed by his wife and distributing himself all kinds of things: clothes, medicine, sums of money, Bibles and other books to these in-Digenean. This missionary gives lectures "without never having submitted to the requirements of the 1882 law. He goes back and forth, taking photographs here and there. plans are being drawn up under the complacent gaze of our au-"Tolerated or without these authorities ever having paid attention."

However, I must truthfully say that the municipa-Mostaganem city, to which I am pleased to return tribute, repeatedly expressed her emotion at the actions Missionary Liley's comments. The police commissioner I know that the letter from Mostaganem was sent to the sub-prefect of this city, more than eighteen months ago, a very detailed information about the detestable and "anti-French" work pursued by this foreigner." This report was sent no doubt to the Governor General; but I believe that so far no action has been taken against This envoy from England. Why, I ask? II However, it has been quite some time since the situation I This signal is harsh. Isn't it time to put an end to it?

Allow me, gentlemen, to bring under your eyes a letter that was addressed to me concerning the events which I am bringing to your attention, by the Mayor of Mostaganem. I don't have the report in my hands – the one I was talking about earlier – from the police commissioner of this city, But I have the letter and I can give it to you.

The mayor of Mostaganem wrote to me on the date of June 47, 1895:

I cannot share with you the report that you asked me for—Order, the sub-prefect having kept it to himself and the commissioner possessing only a few notes from this matter. But having dealt with Mr. Liley myself, here is the information I was able to gather;

"The opinion here is general regarding him: everyone..." He is considered a spy, and this is based on his movements. and continuous comings in the vicinity, both on land than at sea... »

I'll digress for a moment here. Indeed, during the enquiry made by the police commissioner concerning Mr. Liley, We heard from Spanish fishermen who led this foreigners in the port of Mostaganem and offshore. Those—They came to declare that the missionary had questions on the depths of the sea at a first en—right, then to a second, opposite Mostaganem and to several miles, far from the shore

"...Both on land and at sea," the letter continues, "the

along the coast where he supposedly goes fishing, accompanied by Spanish fishermen. On the other hand, she was seen with a camera, taking pictures of the eastern fort, walls and gates surrounding the city, as well as the port.

According to a young man aged sixteen to seventeen, he would have | One day, at the Protestant church, I dropped some papers. in the middle of which was a plan containing the em—Port, barracks and handling facilities.

If espionage is involved, it's certain that what he did there It's not very dangerous, because all the photographers were able to to do the same. But where, in my opinion, the matter is more serious, it is in his habit of seeking to destroy lin—French influence to the benefit of England by making the indigenes comparisons obviously unfavorable to the France.

Is it acceptable, gentlemen, that we allow this to happen?

to perpetuate such actions, such attemptstives?

Mr. Marcel Habert. – What has been done against this An-Glas?

Mr. Saint-Germain. – Nothing at all, so far,
my dear colleague.

This missionary has been in Mostaganem for twelve years.
Furthermore, the letter that was addressed to me by the mayor from Mostaganem, is dated June 47, 1895, and the missionary English is still in this city.

Mr. Le Myre de Vilers. – Why haven't we got it?
Expelled?

Mr. Saint-Germain. – The mayor of Mostaganem continues in his letter:

"For this, he gives them gifts of all kinds, shirts,
gandouras, women's effects, medicines, ar-gent, etc., etc. takes great care to make them understand that England is generous and takes care of the well-being of its subjects. He reportedly showed an engraving depicting the Empress of India, surrounded almost exclusively by Hindu chiefs, pointing out to them that the Hindus reached the highest ranks. He goes from Moorish café to Moorish café, among Arab merchants and workers, the in-questioning the prices of the objects and tools they use or that they buy, offering to bring them to a better price account. He provided free medication, caring even the stubborn ones.

At the Alliance Française committee, Mr. Li-'s actions
They were reported and everyone acknowledged the influence harmful from this Methodist who, by all possible means, has sought native popularity, which he has, it must be acknowledged to be born, largely acquired at the expense of French influence çaise.

He does not limit himself to acting in Mostaganem, he travels throughout-core the surrounding tribes and the Dahra, accompanied by a another Anglican from Cassaigne: his wife slips into all the native houses, where she catechizes in her own way the women and children.

I believe I told you earlier, gentlemen, that

258 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

I had undeniable proof that the English missionary Lily always tried to attract English influence the natives of the Mostaganem region.

I have here a statement that was not made by the pre-
The first one came from these natives. It emanates from an Arab who counts among the most devoted to France, which has often given pledges of this devotion, and that the
The government recently rewarded him by appointing him Knight of the Legion of Honour.

What does this native tell me in his statement?

Only Arabs from Mostaganem and the surrounding region are came to complain to him about the pressure exerted on their consciences and their intelligences by the missionary Lily, who hunts them down on all sides, at home as well as at Moorish cafe, in their shops as well as in the open air Street.

Here is one of the passages from this statement:

Ali Ould Abou ben Aid told me that Lily spoke to him one day from India, to make him realize how much in these In this country, the indigenous people are better treated and better regarded. by the English government that the native 'Algerians' under French rule. He told her that, in the In India, the natives are so favored that they arrive to very high administrative positions and that in the In the military profession they reach the rank of colonel, while that France no longer grants anything but the rank of lieutenant to its indigenous subjects.

This statement, gentlemen, has been confirmed to me by two other certificates that were sent to me from Mostaganem and that I have here. I will allow myself to read you a of these two pieces.

Written in Arabic, I had it translated and I'm giving it to you. in its entirety. It, too, comes from a native of the most honorable, in whom I have complete confidence, The here is :

You asked me for information about Individual 1 named Liley.

AND IN ALGERIA 259

Know, dear sir, that this man gives to everyone world of books on English religion, in order to try to converting people to his religion. To some people he gives remedies to some, clothing to others, and to a few-some of the money. He praises the English government and shows an image depicting the Queen of England accompanied accompanied by two Muslim captains and behind them the other English generals.

"Look," he said to the people, "at how the English conthey are discriminatory towards Muslims: they make them their own chiefs and make them march behind the queen, in front of everyone
the rest of their fellow citizens; while the government
The French don't like you and won't let you surpass the junior officer rank.

From what I've heard, the natives relay:

"What you are telling us surprises us greatly, for here
We have been with the French for a long time and they haven't never sought to convert us, while you, since that you are in the country, you are only trying to-
to make us abandon our religion.

What would it be like if you were the masters of the country?

A voice. – Well answered.

Mr. Saint-Germain. – The second statement is to
It was designed in roughly the same terms. I won't tell you about it.
I won't read it, so as not to take advantage of your kind attention.
Attention.

I must add that the actions I have just described to allude to them has deeply moved – I say this to Phon-the press council of French Protestants in Algeria
the Mostaganem diocese and some of its members On one of my visits to this city, I was given a protest in which they strongly condemn and absolutely condemn the acts attributed to the pastor English.

I extract the following lines from this protest:

In a meeting held on June 49, 1894, the Committee of the French Alliance of Mostaganem, chaired by one of the

qr Tos

260 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Members of our church council reported certain facts serious acts of religious and anti-French propaganda attributed to Mr. Lilyy.

Respectful of the capitulations of 1830, having always prohibits all acts of proselytism; all Protestants present to the Assembly joined their colleagues to To draw the authorities' attention to these actions. Be convinced, my dear deputy, that all patriots, without dis--tincture of worship, will see you, with pleasure, provoke all the measures required to defend our French interests calluses.

The Protestants themselves, it must be said, and you too You see, they were concerned about the active propaganda being carried out against our authority in Algeria. Others have raised their complaints (1).

I was talking to you earlier about the deliberations of the municipal councils; I can add to that that of the council general of Oran, to which I have the honor of belonging.

Eighteen months ago, a member of this assembly, father of one of our honourable colleagues in the House, submitted a petition to draw the government's attention to lies about the English peril which is becoming increasingly prevalent in Algeria in a more tangible way, its agents becoming more numerous.

Mr. Viviani rightly asserted in this resolution that the English missionaries did not appear, outwardly, to focus solely on proselytizing and conversion, but that, in essence, it was a vast espionage network that would be around us and a propaganda of disaffection of our native subjects which was undertaken.

Needless to say, gentlemen, this wish has been granted.

(1) The protests of the Protestants in Algeria are far from being unanimous, if we are to believe the Tunisian Cross. The step-Reveillaud de la Coligny, whom we have already mentioned, favors all possible and imaginable Protestants; and, in the sur-Moreover, the protests Mr. St-Germain is referring to are purely form and do not change the state of affairs in any way, since the government The leader of the metropolis, a friend of the Protestants, allowed everything to proceed i Liberty to the Huguenots of all nations, warmly welcomed by the Oran General Council and referred to the administrative authority.

AND IN ALGERIA | 261

Along with this wish, the general council of O-ran issued another one about the scandal caused by the presence of an English pastor at the head of the parish Protestant woman from Mascara.

Regarding this second wish, I owe you a few things. explanations.

The English pastor of Mascara, who was paid pen-for six years using French state funds, had been placed in this parish under the express condition that he would become a naturalized citizen.

I believe-this being said in passing-that if we had searched somewhat, one could have found in France, a French pastor who reportedly agreed to go to Algeria to occupy the position that was given to this pastor English. In any case, this pastor was not a natural-realized (1).

Mr. de Mahy. - In France, there are pastors like that on the shores of the English Channel.

Mr. Saint-Germain. - "I don't dispute it," but since I'm here to talk only about facts that I I know it well, I can't discuss anything else

Mr. Marcel Habert. - They are extremely dangerous-reux. |

Mr. Saint-Germain. - I return, gentlemen, to this English pastor, whose name was Yandell.

By a decree of February 24, 1890, the Minister of The cults of the time appointed him for three years, pres-writing, as I was saying, about becoming naturalized

French during this period. The year 1893 arrived, and as

(1) Do you see this English pastor, paid by the French State. The Protestants of Algeria were careful not to protest against the treatment he was given; if, in fact, the government 'Seized by a fine zeal, he was going to remove it from him!

They are protesting, however, against the actions of this Pasteur, this cannot have serious consequences...

15°

962 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Mr. Yandell had not yet become French, our administration of religious affairs, like the good girl she is so-wind, granted him a new 3-year extension and the confirmation in its functions.

Well, gentlemen, do you know what happened, in 1896 upon expiry of this second period?

Mr. Yandell has not yet become a naturalized citizen! Rather He decided, at the last moment, that he should become French on the eve of submitting or resigning, of leaving Mascara and to retire to England, where he must assume-'It is truly remarkable to praise the benefits of French hospitality!'

Mr. Cuneo d'Ornano. - He must have gone to Madagascar.

Mr. Saint-Germain. - Perhaps he did go to our new possession! In any case, I'm going to ask how it is possible that the administration has not did not open their eyes to the facts I am reporting to you and showed such long patience towards this pastor English.

I'm coming back, gentlemen, leaving aside now Mr. Yandell, to the other missionaries.

I know, and I acknowledge, that the Algerian administration Nothing remained entirely inactive in the presence "criminal actions of pastors and deacons" "Nesses of Kabylie." I know that certain measures have been taken in this region for some time now. I know that the security police have been deployed, that in In less than a year, a security inspector was stationed in Tizi-Ouzou. who was shot at one day... operated two hundred arrests of Kabyles carrying almost all of them foreign weapons and gunpowder, that this same An inspector, disguised as a Kabyle, attended the sermons. of the missionary Cuendel, established in Djemma-Saharidj and We've heard some fine things about France. I am aware that seizures have been made in the house of this mission of Djemma-Saharidj; that of Kabyles, leaving this house on March 3, 1896, were found in possession of medication and enveloping powder lopped in English newspapers.

AND IN ALGERIA 263

"I also know that, on May 30, 1896, natives of Djemma-Saharidj went to see the mayor and the deputy from Mekla to tell them that they had received from powder from the hands of English missionaries, which an en- An inquiry was made on this subject and sent, I believe, to Mr. governor general.

You are all aware of these facts, Mr. Clerk- Government official, since on the occasion of certain among them a correspondence was exchanged between you and the British Consul General in Algiers.

But all of this, in my eyes, is nothing but me- Preventive measures! What I am asking today of the The Chamber is demanding repressive measures which These measures are suitable. These measures, gentlemen, what are they? I will tell you about them. The honorable senator, the mem- 'bre of the committee of eighteen in the Senate, to which I I was referring to earlier, Mr. Combes, in his capacity A member of this commission was in Algeria; he was there saw what I myself saw, and, in the report he has submitted to the Senate, it indicated to us a measure which could be taken immediately, but which, in my opinion, ... is the case? In my opinion, I'll tell you right now, West isn't enough radical (we laugh).

You see, sometimes we can be more radical than the radicals themselves.

In his report to the Senate on primary education natives, on page 93, the honorable Mr. Combes is expressed as follows: |

"There would be grounds for us to take some precautions" cautions against the actions of foreign missionaries Gers, English and Swiss, members of the Salvation Army and intermediaries between England and Kabylia. The rec-

A member of the Academy of Algiers suggests in this regard some measures which, without violating individual liberty rights dual, would be the safeguarding of our legitimate self-rity; it is, on the one hand, the application to members of the English missions of legal prescriptions against lexer-illegal practice of medicine and pharmacy; that is,

264 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

—

On the other hand, some changes to school laws, as far as Algeria is concerned, to surround with guarantees special arrangements for the opening of private schools.

These are precautions that can be taken. quickly by the government.

Mr. Louis Barthou, "Minister of the Interior". From-Then, Mr. Combes was Minister of Public Instruction. blique.

Mr. Saint-Germain. — And he didn't make the decision that he was proposing as a simple senator, I acknowledge. (We laugh). | ;

Since then, our honorable colleague Mr. Pourquery of Boisserin, fulfilling a patriotic duty, I say highly, in his report on the Algerian budget—the 4895 law, to rid Algeria forever of English Methodists and their deaconesses, proposed a a means that can be put into practice by the Governor general manager, by virtue of the powers he already has

My friend, Mr. Pourquery de Boisserin, told us in his report: |

"We understand that in military territory, the me-Effective measures have been taken, such as in Tunisia, Mr. Mi-The Minister of Foreign Affairs acted very cautiously. He The government absolutely must decide to expel—to serve immediately from the colony these apostles of discord and of revolt which have nothing in common with the noble and patriotic French Protestant clergy of Algeria and the metropolis. It is unacceptable that French soil continues to give asylum to those who try to create us complications and even hindering our work "African.

"Hesitating to drive them out, to strike them with our laws—
If they come back and start again, it's being co—
"Paperable and guilty without excuse!"

These lines remind me, gentlemen, of other words that you have heard as I have, and which have been pro—announced from this platform by the honourable Minister of colonies, of the current cabinet, in the session of July 41

AND IN ALGERIA 265

lastly, regarding the questioning about the cases of Madagascar.

The Minister of Colonies took this day, before the Chamber, a solemn commitment when, responding to The speaker who had preceded him at the podium exclaimed:

"Our honorable colleague having asked what would be our attitude towards certain religious denominations Regarding the gilded ones in Madagascar, I reply that we must hold the absolutely equal balance between all beliefs and among all cults.

Father Lemire, interrupting: — On the condition that France and its flag be respected.

Mr. Minister. — But if behind the confessions
Some religious groups were hiding behind political machinations.
that any... |

Mr. de Mahy. — That's the point.

Mr. Minister... those who would engage in these me- | born would be expelled from the territory, in accordance with the "Common law practiced even in civilized countries."

And the entire Chamber applauded the Minister of colonies (Very good! very good!)

Well, gentlemen, all I can do today is pray
the Government not to forget the words spoken made by one of its members, and I take the liberty of adding—swear to extend this promise that Mr. Minister of colonies made us, in his name, to all the possessions—
French unions, not forgetting Algeria.

Mr. de Mahy: — And including France.

Mr. Saint-Germain. — To allow the Chamber to clearly indicate to the government that it intends that I have the honor to have this commitment fulfilled immediately. to deposit in the hands of the President of the Chamber, an agenda which, I am sure, will rally all the votes of this assembly.

We are here on the ground where all the questions parties must step aside, where everyone, without distinction of opinions, we can walk united and hand in hand. the hand, in a joint effort (Very good! Very good!)

266 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

This is not a question of internal politics. anything that could divide us. It's about ensuring respect France's rights vis-à-vis foreign powers; this concerns to respect the national flag that we have planted 66 years ago in the Casbah of Algiers, this flag, which has since sheltered, within its folds, so many glorious feats of arms So much devotion, so many sacrifices, and under which the Algerian settlers still place and plaster always their dearest and most fervent hopes! (Loud applause).

9
* e

In turn, Mr. de Mahy went up to the tribune and ex-prima in these terms:

Mr. de Mahy. — The honorable Mr. Saint-Germain has ed That's why I told you there should be no ambiguity. Indeed, it is good that the House and the country know what is the overall action "exercised in the world by English propaganda societies."

In the very political and very beautiful speech that lho— The notable Minister of Foreign Affairs has spoken the other day, and that, for my part, I applauded... with two hands, "the honorable Minister informed us that at the beginning of these lamentable events in Armenia, were the executions of the biblical societies an-clays that fomented the insurrection in this country."

The Turks repressed it in the Turkish way. It's not that simple. less true than that repression would not have been necessary, I He repeats it, without the excitements of biblical societies.

Mr. Marcel Habert. – THAT'S ABSOLUTELY CORRECT.

Mr. de Mahy. – That is what clearly emerges from the Speech by the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

We must not allow similar events to occur again. are taking place here. Currently, "it's the insurrection—" "The Kabylie region is being prepared." (Exclamations on various benches).

If you don't believe it, gentlemen, you're wrong. Make no mistake, an "insurrection is being prepared in Kabylie, what if we had a European complication? Algeria's security would be in danger as a result of the maneuvers of the Bible societies" (Very good! very good on various benches. – Various movements).

AND IN ALGERIA 267

Lieutenant-Colonel Guérin. – You have left— perfectly reasonable.

Mr. de Mahy. – What must be done? We must, without hesitation— ter, expel them.

You all know what we owe to the engineers Representations of the English missions in Madagascar.

I don't intend to go into details, and co The file you see in my hands is not for to be communicated to you. I only have, for the moment, one word to add.

We are often told that, in colonial matters, it is necessary to... In foreign affairs, imitate the example of the great nation, our neighbor. That may have some good in it. However, I would not want to push the imitation to the point of the extreme limit; for I am going to show you how the English people treat foreign missionaries who, in the English countries are suspected of fomenting rebellion.

You know a country called Uganda; it's the best province in equatorial Africa. It had was given to France by the chiefs and inhabitants of country. We hesitated; we did not want to accept—to end this protectorate that was offered to us. We found there perhaps the solution to the Egyptian question, however complicated—a problem that is now almost unsolvable.

Thanks to the mistake we made that day,
By our refusal, the English are now masters of Uganda.

At the time we refused this protectorate, the
The English and Germans had missionaries in Uganda, each jealous of giving to their country this beautiful estate. The German missionary was the More skillful, he managed to take our place: he obtained of the Ugandan government the protectorate that we we, the others, had so strangely refused.

eme -e

. 268 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR.

He, the German explorer, obtained it, and he made it known.
trust in the English explorer, his rival, who pursued had the same object.

The Englishman, a good sport, congratulated his competitor, telling him that he had obtained a major victory there for Germany.
Magnificent. Uganda! Near the Great Lakes, on the course of the upper Nile! And he pledged to neglect nothing in order to to firmly cement its protectorate treaty.

Meanwhile, the Englishman was returning to England by the fastest routes, he showed to his gou-governor, what was happening in Uganda, and he didn't die
it was difficult to make him understand the need for a quick maneuver to prevent Germany from benefiting of the major mistake that France had just made.

English diplomacy, too clever to put the
the question of Uganda was put directly on the table, he proposed to the emperor the cession of Heligoland in exchange for certain ter-vague harbors in the interior of Africa, of which we do not did not clearly define the limits.

The precious province that controls the course of the
The upper Nile was part of it. The agreement was concluded.

Héligoland was reintegrated into the fold of the German-Magne. The trick was done. An egg for an ox.

Shortly afterwards, the German explorer arrived in Berlin.
Hand-processed. Too late!

Discontent was extreme in Germany, me-contentment that still lasts to this day, because This is the origin of the actual cooling, but not also deeper than we think, and which I advise you not to Don't trust it, between Germany and England.

I repeat, don't trust it.

The English are therefore masters of Uganda; but there had in Uganda our missionaries who had Given this country, there were the White Fathers of Cardinal La-Vigerie and a large number of natives converted by them. The White Fathers had spent a lot of money gent, they had founded vast establishments and the Supporters of France numbered in the thousands.

AND IN ALGERIA 269

The English, if you'll excuse the vulgar expression, They didn't hesitate for a second. With a shot from the Maxim cannon, they drove out the French religious; with the incendiary torch-daily, they burned their establishments, and continuing Their massacres killed 8,000 to 10,000 people in Uganda.
Digenes suspected of being favorable to France. They have set the example that the Turks should have so perfectly to be continued later in Armenia.

That's how England behaved, that's how it was done.
how she got recognition for what she considers as is his right. I'm not asking you to push the things up to this point; but I pray those of our honorrable colleagues who were taking up the cause the other day for Armenia, to think a little about the massacres of Uganda. I ask my colleagues to say with me to Government: |

Why hesitate? The English, for their part, did not hesitate to to get rid of our religious figures and our supporters by iron and fire. Do not use the same means, but hold hands with the English missionaries,
"These eternal agents of disorder" should be expelled from Algeria and also France. (Applause)

I must admit that the task is difficult; for I request your assistance in bringing this matter to a successful conclusion.
which I have already requested many times, in a pa-Triotic, in the interest of public safety, I request the competition of French Protestantism.

"I ask him to break his ties with the 80-

Bible and Missionary Societies of London.

Mr. Saint-Germain. – He broke his ties in Algeria.

Mr. de Mahy. – So much the better! But that's not enough, and that will not be enough as long as the biblical societies, evangelicals and missionaries on the other side of the Channel will be able to take advantage of their interference in France, as long as they have the support of the many branches they maintain in our country and in the- which, "unfortunately, too many French people are affiliated."

910 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

Our Evangelical Missionary Society receives from An-England receives subsidies and works for it in beautiful-country coup. The International Evangelical Alliance has a French branch that collaborates with the branch German and with the British branch, and I dare to say, without anyone being able to contradict me, that in some circumstances which I will specify if necessary, she worked with foreign branches "in a contrary interest" to the French interest."

I won't go into more detail, but I urge our Protestants of France – they know that I am not their opponent, because that is what I hold most dear in the world They belong in my family! I implore them to to break, "and to break in a definitive, square- mem, without reservation, without hesitation, any collaboration with British companies. I beg them to give up to the subsidies they receive from it."

And finally, so that the Government can go Taking into account the actions of these companies in France, I pray The Ministers of the Interior and Foreign Affairs I'm managing to want to examine this map that I gave them Have it handed over.

This is a map of Bible societies in France. Map of France shewing the districts of the British and Foreign Bible Societies, "map of France showing the provinces of the Bible Society, British and foreign-manages.

Gentlemen, we have dissolved our congregations. "They were French, however, who composed them-" "They knew!" Well then! I ask you to invite the Governor-"v" to take the most urgent measures for that English Bible societies evacuate the territory France's history. You will have no rest until this moment. And remember my last words, Mes-

"Gentlemen!" (Smiles from some of the benches).

Mr. de Mahy. – You're joking, gentlemen! You're quite right wrong, BECAUSE THE QUESTION IS BEYOND ALL OF US.

Mr. Jaurès. – Very good!

AND IN ALGERIA 271

Mr. de Mahy. – What am I? One of the humblest of you; and do you believe that it is not painful for me-Are you afraid to come and face your mockery? (No! no!
– Speak! – Applause).

Mr. Saint Germain. – We applaud you, at the con-milk!

Mr. de Mahy. – Yes, gentlemen, there is a question here of national interest, OF NATIONAL SAFETY (Very good! very GOOD !)

The misfortunes we have experienced at or "stem from the excessive, abusive influence exerted"
by Bible societies regarding our government.

I support Mr. Saint-Germain's agenda, and I recommend to the government the meditation of facts that I brought to the podium, which, if you will allow me...
I'd like to point this out to you in closing, don't ren-
There is no contradiction in this Chamber.

"They go beyond the scope of a simple politico-colonial tick (Applause).

e
* 6

It follows from this questioning that the Protestants
English, as in Macau, seek to Protestantize Algeria.

It resulted from Mr. de Mahy's intervention in the de-that, in France, they do not act differently, that they engage in relentless religious propaganda.

For our colonies, one could perhaps admit, at a stretch, that their religious propaganda aims only to serve England's influence and that, consequently, the danger is more English than Protestant; but in France, exactly the same thing is happening, said Mr. de Mahy.

We also demonstrated this in a previous chapter.

It is therefore clear that English Protestants

972 THE PROTESTANTS IN MADAGASCAR

like the French Protestants, seek to do 4 proselytizing, to Protestantize France, as I have I've already said this and will prove it later.

If that weren't the case, why would they distribute them?
Would they read Bibles and advocate for their religion?

In any case, after statements like those from Messrs. Pourquery de Boisserein, Saint-Germain and Mahy, it is no longer possible to deny the protest question.
aunt and the Protestant peril. Let us not forget, indeed, that Without the energy of General Gallieni, Madagascar would have...
It was seized by English Protestant missions,
"supported by the Protestants of France," alas, and became an English possession.

That's significant.

CHAPTER VI

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Secular and compulsory education. – Jules Ferry and
The Wicked Joys. – Buisson. – Jules Steeg. – Pe-Caution. – The intellectuals. – The Dreyfus affair again.
– Méline. – The persecutions of a moderate ministry.
– The attitude of Catholics. – Some types of persecutors. – The Calvinist invasion in the university. – Vow of Pochon, Girault and associates. –
To the General Council of Cher. – Edgar Monteil. – The Compulsory Darwinism. – Down with the University.

We have now arrived at a chapter that deals with a
One of the most pressing questions in this work: the instruction-tion and youth education.

We will show what role was played by the Protestants in the so-called "wicked" secularization laws presented by Jules Ferry on behalf of the secular state.

Once we have gone through this chapter, I believe that the
The Protestant peril will appear even more formidable.

Before the Revolution, education was provided by religious orders; there was no state education.

Documents drawn from the most authoritative sources
attest that the schools were then in proportion to the population and that secondary schools were even more numerous than today.

It was under the Empire that they were deserted because year

974 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

repeated wars. And it was under this reign that linsinstruction was completely agglomerated, particularly in the working classes.

Napoleon I nevertheless created the University, that is to say-to say that education falls directly under the purview of the State and pon of the clergy.

He took it upon himself to train you according to the "secular spirit"
and no longer according to "the Christian spirit".

The University was therefore founded in opposition to teaching religious.

That is its principle.

She remained faithful to it.

And under most of the governments that have succeeded one another ceded, notably during the reign of Louis-Philippe, when the Protestant Guizot reorganized primary education mayor, his objective was war on ca-Catholic.

It was already not enough that religious unity and Even if political unity were broken, it was still necessary to suppress prioritize the unity of teaching and education.

Thanks to the University, France has been divided in two irreconcilable parts that will never merge, including we will recognize the actions of each in all the ma-social events.

Of all Napoleon's works, the University is particularly harmful.

Even with a tolerant government, it remains imprint of this anti-Catholic deposit on which she rest.

It is in its essence that Catholics using the Gambetta's words should be said with a slight...
laughing: "The University, that's the enemy!"

Especially since, from 1850 (Falloux Law) until
At the end of the Second Empire, the academics did not support us.
not overtly hostile, today, since the laws Ferry (1880-1886), most of them are clearly under pretext of neutrality.

When Jules Ferry organized public education

-pn

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 2975

He passed the secularization laws, he affirmed this neutrality of the State in matters of religion, as if neutrality was possible, as if a government could not not to have any religion.

This supposed neutrality was a decoy, a hypo-
Crisis, a deception.

The state was only neutral in appearance: in reality it sought to replace Catholicism with Protestantism in teaching; in other words, he had for the goal of Protestantizing France through children.

After all, it was his right; the concordat does not say that the Catholic religion is the state religion; he said what is the religion of the vast majority of French.

And if the French are willing, why not...
To make someone apostatize?

This is what Jules Ferry, from a old Protestant family and married to a Protestant aunt.

There you go again, shrugging your shoulders.

You know very well, however, that I have proven so far, in citing my authors, all the facts I have put forward, if extraordinary as they seemed. Many, which is Sadly, these were revelations.

The evidence is there; it is impossible to deny as it
It will be impossible to deny what I have just stated when I will have demonstrated it.

The secularization campaign was much more religious | that policy, and, I repeat, it was conducted in favor of Protestantism and at its instigation.

The Revue des Deux-Mondes, under the signature "XXX" which hides a writer who is very knowledgeable about his subject, has published, in its issue of June 45, 1898, an intri-resentment on this subject.

Here is how the author expressed himself:

"Around 1869, three prominent men of Protestantism
The French were spreading a religious seed in Switzerland.

e

276 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Mr. Ferdinand Buisson (1), he was one of them – recalled, a few months ago, on the grave of Mr. Jules Steeg, this distant campaign of apostolate.

"It was in Neufchâtel," he recounted, "Mr. Pécaut had come there."
to support with his solemn words an attempt to extricate of traditional and ecclesiastical Christianity, what we one might call Christianity eternal, a kind of evangelical Gile makes a secular religion out of the marrow of the old gospel of the moral ideal without dogmas, without miracles, without priests.
Jules Stéeg was then a young and obscure Protestant pastor.

Obscure? No. He was already known as a freethinker. religious; he had placed himself, from the outset, at the extreme left wing of Protestant theology.

He was the one Mr. Pécaut had in mind for the leadership of the small and haraie liberal church which was organizing itself in Switzerland French. Mr. Buisson, for his part, was publishing at that time on liberal Christianity and on the teaching of history holy book, pamphlets, forgotten today: they for- They were full of deliberate boldness; and these boldnesses, resplendent through the mirror of eloquence, dazzled and displeased Orthodox pastors.

It was reserved for these three missionaries to preside over The development and implementation of our school laws: Switzerland returned all three of them to France. Mr. Buisson and Mr. Stééz took an important part in the discussion of these laws: the the first became Director of Primary Education and the east remained until the advent of the Méline cabinet; the second was successively Director of the Pedagogical Museum and of the Fontenay School, and the third, Mr. Pécaut, as Inspector General of Public Instruction, he headed the reorganization of all our Normal Schools.

There is no evidence to suggest that they have changed; such were they In 1869, they remained as they were. But between 1869 and 1898, their The field of action has become wider, and more difficult as well: In 1869, they were working in a Protestant country and on... faithful Protestants; they have since worked in a Catholic country and on a Catholic foundation.

Mr. Pécaut wrote in 1879:

"THE WORK OF MORAL SECULARIZATION THAT CA- SOCIETIES THOLICS DID NOT ACCOMPLISH IN THE 16TH CENTURY BY WAY OF RE-

+

(1) Buisson is originally from Switzerland.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 977

ECCLESIASTIC OR RELIGIOUS FORM, CATHOLIC SOCIETIES, THEY ARE ATTEMPTING TO DO IT THROUGH SCHOOL REFORM.

Those who deem such a reform insufficient, cannot refuse to participate."

It seemed that the new school policy was doing as an apology from France to the protest-Tantrism, the price of which our ancestors had failed to recognize; also, Were Mr. Pécaut and his friends generously offering their assistance?

They suffered the pain of being misunderstood. They were labeled irreligious people, as if their entire lives were devoted to service of a religious aspiration, did not rebel against a such an epithet. They were accused of endangering religion positive, and, since then, Mr. Pécaut has produced:

"To a regular and secular teaching of morality, the A positive, established religion could only lose in the to the extent that, instead of being truly religious, it would be simply ecclesiastical; where, petrified in its formulas, Its rites, its practices, its supernatural history, it would be unable to adapt to a new state of intellectual culture "Civil and social activity."

So it wasn't their fault if a church unchanging, spiritual guardian of the country they were becoming] The educators felt embarrassed or diminished by the new situation. moral instruction; and, if, unfortunately, it should happen, as Mr. Fouillée has since noted, that this innovation school belied certain optimistic hopes, it im- it was a matter of asserting in advance that the cause should not be sought in the very flaws of innovation , but in our temperament, in our traditions, in our education hereditary Catholic.

"Catholicism," wrote Mr. Pécaut, "by excluding the secularists, free from any interference in dogma and worship, by accustoming them, for centuries, to unloading on the church, that is to say, the priest, is responsible for defining the doctrine, to teach morality, to interpret the scriptures, to fulfill sacred functions, to govern the inner sanctum. laughing, they were poorly prepared to handle the "The language of matters of the soul."

And Mr. Pécaut was not making an idle degression but he was giving the logical continuation of his ideas when, in his general inspection notes, addressed to Mr. Spuller, in 4894, he expressed the wish that one day "France, under the tic, rediscovering the meaning and flavor of the ancient tradition Christian, long-standing and increasingly forgotten.

It was in an official report that Mr. Pécaut outlined this A long-standing program of religious renewal, the completion of which This pleating would crown the success of our school project secular.

It therefore became natural that the initiators of this work, they placed special trust in spirits bold individuals such as, for example, this director of a teacher training college to which Mr. Pécaut, in 1888, returned in the Revue pédagogique, a very instructive tribute.

"Mr. Goy," said Mr. Pécaut, "was supported from the very first hour of his intellectual life, to see things from the- in, or better yet, at their original source, within the whole of which they are a part, and it is through this that it has always been re-religious to the core, if being religious means rat-to stain his thoughts, his entire soul and his life, with life, with the universal thought, to God himself; but, with that, spirit free and critical above all others, incapable of alienating his freedom to a tradition, a positive dogma, no more than a definition-philosophical, fixed and official tion".

And the praise continued with a painful undertone.

Former pastor in the Gironde, like Mr. Steeg and desi- It seems that administrative trust is at stake for the few qualities of his religious temperament, Mr. Goy had formed three generations of teachers: in Algeria, in the Tarn, in Haute-Garonne.

It was becoming natural, likewise, that the supreme leaders our primary education did not do cheaply of their own religious sensitivities, in the judge-the things they believed in and about men

This is how Mr. Steeg, in 1891, in the same Review Pedagogically, it practically blacklisted Bossuet. Mr. Lanson; he denounced its "Sophisms," its "manner- ges", the "contradictions", the "esoteric doctrine" and concluded sternly:

"Such books are not meant for schoolteachers of our democracy, and it is our duty to warn them about it." Mr. Lanson was under anathema, or nearly so.

But wasn't it Mr. Steeg who, upon entering his political and educational career, he uttered these words, recalled by Mr. Buisson: "I FEEL MORE THAN EVER, A THROUGH ALL THIS AND IN ALL THIS, A PROTESTANT PASTOR.

Indeed, one could say, perhaps more truthfully, although Mr. Steeg only thought so, by the very fact of their habits of mind, the followers of liberal Protestantism-ral seemed especially predestined to organize the teaching primary government as desired by the majority of parliament ment. There was a bit of everything in this majority; from spiritualists-yourselves, positivists, materialists, and evolutionists, Freemasons for whom God was nothing more than a worthy cleric of expulsion, finally unwitting Hegelians – Taine would have called Jacobins – for whom God was the State.

And, in front of this heterogeneous audience, they multiplied, on the spirit of school laws, the most diverse declarations;
This simple truth was silenced, out of political necessity, that
"For the first time, a great and popular philosophy, in this respect differing from all those that had reigned until then the and of all the churches, logically led, inevitably-blement, to maxims in absolute contradiction with the age-old precepts.

We dared not acknowledge this philosophical insurrection, this absolute contradiction.

Mr. Ferrouillat celebrated "the God of philosophy, the God of reason, God of good people, God of the "Natural religion, the religion of the Savoyard vicar."

The conventions of the discussion led the speakers to emulate Mr. Jules Simon, to seek a fora clean mule for their spiritualist convictions, and to the to find roughly. But, on the other hand, the strange adventure of the expression "Duties towards God", excluded from the law on the
Mr. Jules Ferry's request, and reinstated in the programs out of respect for Mr. Jules Simon, attested to the inconsistency of the . innovative majority that was called upon.

Some consideration was necessary.

Mr. Ferry, after having stated on December 23, 1880, that the Most of the masters were spiritualists, he declared, no
Without paradox, on July 2, 4881, Spencer's morality had, moreover, the same conclusions as Kant or of Mr. Jules Simon, and thus justified, in advance, the insti-tutors who would break away from the old spiritualism.

Another minister, after promising neutrality eon-professional, proudly opposed its own philosophy to

280 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Christian doctrines of original sin and labor, and provoked worried questions from the pastor of Presensibile in its rationalist, perhaps anti-confessional character sional, spiritualism that would be taught in schools. In short, at the time the school laws were passed, there had been Too many words and too many silences as well, for the institutors were exactly aware of what was expected two. In the school frameworks that had just been built a a motley "concentration," the aim was to circulate a breath, to put a yie, to introduce a soul: it is This is where the educators came in.

Represented by its most intelligent followers, by men who found a higher position in the State to the one they had lost in their own church, the tenliberal Protestant dance expressed itself in a language with the rich yet vague, with undulating and soft contours, more likely to convey impressions than ideas, and more apt to translate religiosity than to define a creed: discreet and courteous language, pious enough to refute those who denounced the "Godless School," flexible enough not to no point in shocking the politicians who treated God as an enemy.

There were indeed some disappointments; Mr. Lichtenberger was charged with verifying them. Dean of the Faculty of Theology, Protestant aunt of Paris, he wrote, on the results of the new teachingA morally upright, sincere, and dissatisfied report. Intelligence French remained half-closed, and the French conscience was resistant to this deliberately vague philosophy. But, Without losing heart, Mr. Buisson and his assistants, by making They called upon a few select teachers, and continued their work.

If you read all their publications, you'll see that they have They, the secularizers of the school, were led to cast a shadow over this School, a latent but continuous hegemony of certain philosophical concepts borrowed from Protestantism liberal. We would readily say that, in our brandIn its primary form, liberal Protestantism has preserved the revanGod's horse.

Proudly displaying its "secular" status, the school was not penetrated, no doubt, but at least surroundedr  e, surrounded by a set of ideas and feelings, of insaspirations and desires that were like the legacy of a a religious minority, Protestantism, and a fraction from this minority, liberalism.

And these ideas, and these feelings, these inspirations and these aspirations, were, in our primary education, the part of the divine.

It will certainly come as no surprise that philosophers religious figures, to whom the honor fell, were greeted. as directors of conscience by the best of our schoolteachers, taken away from church at an early age, and jealous nevertheless to link to some formula, to an appearance of credo, their generous desires and their need for action morale.

Mr. Buisson, a few years ago, inaugurated in the general correspondence of primary education one a kind of consultation on "the soul of the school": an elite of Correspondents, both male and female, responded to the call. This elite deserves and obtains a certain influence; and, thanks to To her, Mr. Buisson and his collaborators became the masters of "the soul of the school", like the prefects were the teachers of the school itself.

The author adds that the success of radicals and so-

Specialists in the last elections is due to the schoolteachers - all trained at the Buisson, Steeg and Pécaut schools.

The Republic has turned the schoolteacher into an electoral agent. ral, fighting to "free the people from servitude" secular studies of superstition and ignorance, for the unchangeable laws, the old republican spirit, the peril clerical and reaction to the stakeout (1).

Therefore, in 1898, the schoolteacher who, for fifteen years, had mounted a guard around this program, did not seeing more in the professions of faith of the moderates, then that he was among the radicals, felt obliged to to take sides with the latter.

Teachers, let us repeat, are true agents electoral.

Thus those of Calvados, according to Le Gaulois of May 21, 1898, tell the toddlers that they will have seven years of service

(i) Speech by Mr. Berthelot, a Protestant, then Minister of Public Instruction, at the tomb of Mr. Paul Bert, married to a Protestant, military service to be done if their fathers vote for Mr. Delapit.

282 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

An hour later, they give the same students a lesson a moral lesson on lying.

Well! Did I exaggerate?

"The reform effort that failed in the 16th century, in France, through ecclesiastical channels, it must be accomplished by "The school route," said Mr. Pécaut.

To Protestantize the French soul surely and quietly and in the manner of the 19th century, by the negation of all faith with mysticism as opposed to positivism _pietist and sentimental atheist; thus introduce the clericalism of freethinking, Jacobin dogmatism, sectarian, with the "unchangeable laws" of the more arrogant "bloc" that the creeds of the churches, – because this "divine right" of a new genre is emerging today, in the midst of the Republic-blique, the gendarmes' rifle and the army of instructors affiliated with lodges or leagues, exercise the worst inquisitions – that is what has been observed and what it It needs to be repeated everywhere.

We said "neutral school," and we wanted to make it "school" "of Protestant dechristianization," writes La Croix.

Catholic and French dogmatism was being driven out of the race in favor of the German dogmatism of the invasion.

So many mysteries are explained!

Why do all the high-ranking public education officials... than to Protestants?

Why are teacher training colleges overflowing with pro- students testators and entire cantons where all the schoolmasters Are they Calvinists?

Why the scandalous protection of the proto- element? so much has been granted to Madagascar for so long, for example.

To serve English interests?

Why the proven sympathies of the United notables university councils and consistories to the traitor Dreyfus and his Comrade Zola, all dear to Protestant Germany?

There was a lot of outcry against the Semitic invasion, it is another equally disastrous one for national freedom.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY ags

It is no longer a king of France who, in order to maintain Punition of the country, abolishes the Edict of Nantes.

It is the foreigner who is giving us another Edict of Nantes, but backwards.

Ah! You don't believe in the Protestant peril, you don't Don't think that they want to Protestantize us.

Well then, how come all the me-certain of the persecution we have been suffering for 20 years
Were they led by Protestants?

Jules Ferry, Floquet and Ribot, married to Protestants aunts, Freycinet, Protestant, Ricard, Protestant, Boissy
d'Anglas, Protestant, Berthelot, Protestant, Guieysse, Protestant, Frédéric Passy, Protestant, Brisson, who...
a tower of Protestants, and so many others.

His are everywhere, moreover, and the Protestant invasion equal, if not exceeding, the Jewish invasion in the administrative staff.

"I have studied," said Mr. d'Hugues last, "their in-intrusion and their influence on finance; pro- finance Testante is very powerful, perhaps more powerful than Jewish finance.

All senior staff of the Ministry of Education
papb, the main office of persecution, do not con-holds that only Protestants.

Protestant, Mr. Liard, director of higher education
superior.

Protestant, Mr. Rabier, Director of Education Se-secondary.

Protestant, Mr. Bayet, Director of Education

primary.

Protestant, Mr. Steeg, Inspector General of Schools boys, died today, replaced by Mr. Gilles.

Protestant, Ms. Kergomard, general pacifist of the Schools of filles.

At the Directorate of Public Assistance, we find yet another Protestant, Mr. Monod.

Almost all teacher training colleges are run by Protestants

984 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

The Sèvres higher education school has a director who testating, Ms. Marion; the school of oriental languages, The school of political science has as its directors Protestants. The rector of the Faculty of Theology pro-Mr. Sabatier, the testator, has just been appointed Vice-President. from the University.

It is to the Protestant initiative that we owe the plu-part of our laws and our persecutory measures, it reads in the Hope of the People, of Nantes; it is to action Protestantism, which we also owe to their application, and 650,000 Protestants allied with the Freemasons and the Jews have been oppressing France for many years. Catholic.

That's the truth; high-ranking positions in education are taken over by the Huguenots; the schools where one The training program for future teachers is led by Protestants.

Let's explore the Sèvres School with Mr. Talmeyr who has published an interesting article on this subject in the Revue des Deux-Mondes, June 1, 1897:

The students are, in general, from good families, without wealth. daughters of civil servants, officers, Protestant pastors and naturally intended for modest and distinct situations fords.

Pastoral daughters have a very special inclination for the establishment and the Protestants are even in name-equal to that of Catholics. That's the house standard.

*
++

Let's now turn to the school in Fontenay-aux-Roses.

Remember that it is in these schools that training takes place.
the teachers in charge of guiding our children, and meditate the following:

The highest girls' teacher training college after the school of Sèvres is that of Fontenay-aux-Roses, where the

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 285

schoolteachers, the source from which everything flows.
of the State, in all women's minds, the sco-the area of the republic. Of recent foundation, as well as Sèvres also has about sixty students all boarders accepted in the competition and not only housed, fed, educated free of charge, but touching even every year for their travel, and their menus Expenses, 250 francs allowance.

As for the rules, they can be summed up in one word. They are free. e

Free during their studies, to work towards what they will prepare for.
were; free during recess to walk around, to to sew, to go out, to go wherever they please; free the di-they can spend their day as they wish;
free to read, within the school itself, all books and all newspapers that might tempt them.

"The school," the headmistress told me, "Ms. Saffroy, does not accept..."
Official title: only one newspaper and two magazines, but these Young ladies can bring and read in their rooms everything What they want.

– Is that all they want?

– Absolutely anything they want.

– Isn't that a bit excessive?

– And why?

– It's because things are being published today which, for the young girls...

– That's their business |

– So, in short, it's freedom?

– It's freedom, we are a fundamentally Democratic and Republican... You wouldn't want that otherwise.

The moral character of the student from Fontenay is already emerging. in this young, free-spirited girl, seasoned with certificates "essentially democratic and republican" and in education cation of which it must also be noted, even more so than at Sèvres, a strong blend of Protestantism. The regulation attached a director to the director, and this director, so far, has always been a former pastor.

One of them, Mr. Pécaut, even left a faa lesson in legend, and a very honorable legend at that. It brought together Every morning the students in a conference and their exal-

286. PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

They kept their minds on their mission as citizens and educators, their role as priestesses of Education.

Was the student from Fontenay feeling unwell from this overexposure?
quote ?

Did she lose in positive spirit what she perhaps gained?
to be in a dangerous elevation of feelings, and the spirit
Mr. Pécaut's secularism, by the very fact that he rose above-Beyond the mundane, pedagogical aspects, it no longer seemed secular.
to other minds even more secular than his own?

Nevertheless, he was replaced, but his memory is still there, and Mr. Pécaut will not die in the school.
something of the ideal that it is will remain in the house tried to make it shine like a small glimmer of dawn in his morning instructions.

– Sir, a young girl said to me, not raNt the door to a large, low-ceilinged room where chairs were lined up before the head of the agricultural goddess of the moderate Republic,
That was where Mr. Pécaut gave his morning lectures!

All the details of this school life, and the selection process to which
The student is subjected to scrutiny, and the degree to which their studies are pursued is and the exaltation that had initially inspired in him, and the scrutiny-

the powder with which it was subsequently deemed not sufficiently dosed, and the kind of practical caution that one uses to contain it in her the freethinking exuberance by the Calvinist calming agents, all This proves, in summary, the special solicitude, the predilection-particular tion and jealous love of which the Government surrounds his daughters of Fontenay.

They are his nursery of democratic vestal virgins, his reserve as zealots and, as has been said, its "Port Royal secular.

And what a perfect installation, cheerfully chosen and more more modern than in Sèvres!

What a welcoming and pretty school! Claire, on the hillside at the entrance to the small town, near the whistling railway – and completely refreshed by the Pondeur des bosquets.

It may well be Port-Royal, but we don't see the Arnould. | °

How do we prepare the student from Fontenay for the profession? @abnégation, which should be his? What are we showing him? as a symbol and as an ideal? What does she see, around of her, as sublime figures exciting to sacrifice?

Everywhere, on every wall, at every turn of the

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 287

In the hall, in the corridors, she sees the portrait of Mr. Jules Ferry! She opens a door. There's Mr. Jules Ferry, facing us. Is she pushing a second one? There's Mr. Jules Ferry in profile. Is she having a third one? Here's Mr. Jules Ferry, three-times quarters!

The school's lecturer is Mr. Melouzey.

He calls the French clergy "the priests of Christ".

= A quick look now at the Normal School of Ins-holders of the Seine, Boulevard des Batignolles:

The spirit of the school should not be displeasing to the politicians. technicians of the department and one senses certain signs there a particularly civic atmosphere. Fontenay is already more "secular" than Sèvres; but Batignolles is still more secular than Fontenay.

This is no longer the moderate Republic with its trappings rural; but the revolutionary Republic with its cockade and his cap; and his bust shows from afar his silhouette in the halls as if to recommend the house to the general or municipal councillors and well in- Sister, regarding the nuance of the establishment. Secular! Everything you cries out that it is thoroughly, in its stones, in its walls and that there is not a single stone that is not.

And this secular impression is perhaps even more pronounced in the dormitory!

You don't see a single emblem, a single image, a single sign of religion, of weakness, of memory, of a childish thing, of some kind of superstition in a only one of the 50 or 60 alcoves where all the young girls have Each had a small room. Is it the regulations that are fading away? would be affected by the slightest religious or sentimental indication tal?

Is it the fear of displeasing the authorities with a piece of Boxwood?

Had these young ladies already arrived of their own accord? And quite naturally, to perfect materialism?

We don't know. But it's bare, cold, empty like nothingness.

288 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

himself, and everything is just very clean, very neat, very waxed, very well polished. One even experiences a kind of sensation- tion of convent as well as of negation. It is the the same aspect of tyrannical regularity, of glacial symmetry, of chilling meticulousness. Only, it's the convent without Dicu, that's the red convent!

Let's continue our school review:

It was founded in Paris about fifteen years ago. in the initial stages of secularization, a society composed militant Freemasons and city councilors called: Society of Secular Free Schools. These schools without having an openly communal character, were nonetheless authorized by the city, sponsored by the municipality, and Simply explaining their regulations would already be enough for you to build. Little girls were given the day off on the day of the execution.

cut by Louis XVI and the director had orders from them to give exciting instructions on all events similar.

From the foundation, we never let the anniversary pass. of a famous guillotining without making a celebration of it for the students.

In history and literature, it was forbidden to pronounce the word "God" was replaced by the word "Nature"; and the Truce of God, in this extraordinary teaching given by teachers who were often extraordinary themselves—same, became the "Truce of Nature". j

Pierre Hermite set off on the crusade, exclaiming: "Nature wills it!" and the little fish of the fountain He no longer had to rely on "God" to "lend him life". The city councillors were inflexible on this point.

Some of the people then tasked with spreading This investigation has left them in a state of shock that still lingers. Their young pupils were only concerned with politics, despising knew their parents because they worked, and went in "monos" at the doors of churches to insult. the pre— First communicants. |

Admit it, that's not ordinary?
Yet this is where Protestant morality leads us.
this austere morality, like those English women who cheat

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 289

abominably their husbands, but who blow the lu—
They would undress in their lovers' alcove...

They wanted, "they want to take away" from the child "all Catholic faith" to replace it with a religiosity floating, an indecisive spiritualism. For this, it was necessary to wait—to attack the Catholic religion, to slander it, to mock it, dragging her through the mud, persecuting her.

Secularization was pursued to excess, "everything was subordinated to the question—"The promotion of secular education."

To better reach the child, education was decreed OBLIGATORY.

And how wicked it was!

We were careful not to say: we want to make apostates to unite the nation, to revive the movement through education religious reform that failed in the 16th century in the religious sphere.

The opposite was done to what had been done in the 16th century. key. |

So, it was in the name of the Protestant faith that... wanted to Protestantize France.

In the 20th century, it was in the name of atheism.

"God does not exist," people shouted in the official world. and in the newspapers in his pay; down with religion, down with Down with the priests, down with the Jesuits!

The parents were forced, under penalty of being dragged from— before the courts, and sometimes even in prison, to send their children at school where, more often than not, they had been taken away Christ, to throw him into garbage carts, so that the student would hear slander against religion, this which was not exactly new, but presented under another form.

And to "train" parents to populate the school of their children, we sang in every tone that it was for progress, the need for the people to be educated, we went to the point of printing, and, to the shame of the century, reprinting This nonsense, that it was the German schoolteacher who told us had won in 1870!

And the clergy and Catholics were shown as 47

290 THE PROTESTANTS RT THE UNIVERSITY

enemies of popular education and progress; they referred to them as "reactionaries," retrogrades, and supporters of "Obscurantism."

In reality, their goal was hidden under the guise of atheism; people cried out against the Catholic Church for the to be replaced by the Protestant church.

Why, indeed, this sudden enthusiasm for school?

This profusion of school palaces?

This preponderant role, this moral ascendancy given to
The schoolteacher in his community?

The thoughtful, though not very generous, gestures... that they were translated more into flattering words than by the crowns, of which he was constantly the object?

It was christened "beacon of the future," it was consecrated "read-
"first" of his country shining brightly against the obscur-the priest's rancism, which he was advised to adopt.
enemy, as well as Catholics whom he had to fight influence in all circumstances, especially during election periods.

And if Dreyfusism had been invented, Boejerson and the
The Protestants of the Century would have made him an "intellectual".

Why this vast school movement in which he participated
The entire republican and freethinking army?

You could tell there was something underneath it all.
abnormal, unexplained.

To spread education, there was no need for this fantastic and secularizing enthusiasm:

If the intention had truly been to educate the people, for-what to do, war on religious people who did not dedicate themselves than to this laborious and noble mission (1)?

It was therefore less the masses that they wanted to educate that their minds, that the brains of young children, of future generations that we wanted to mold according to the

(1) In some regions one still finds today passa-"Illiterate"; therefore, secularization was pursued more than popular education.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY. 291

views of the secular state whose ultimate goal, admitted by Pé-
The key was to bring him in little by little, gently, without violence.
lence, to Protestantism.

This is indeed in harmony with the persecution.
that we are subjected to: no violence, no brutality,
No prison.

Everything is going smoothly, kindly, hypocritically.

legally.

We don't rush the victims, letting time take its course.
care to complete the Catholic work of destruction.

And it is with the Catholics, through a refinement of extra-legal persecution, which Ferry and Pécaut between-took to: arrive at this result.

Oh! The plan was cleverly devised.

At the top of the school system, teachers were appointed Protestants tasked with training their own teachers in-teachers; these teachers were all Protestants; at those who are not have had the pro- spirit instilled in them testing.

And every year, for the past 20 years, these masters have thus shaped are widespread in normal schools, in high schools, in state colleges where they contribute to their students, the same spirit they themselves received.

It's devilishly skillful and the movement will certainly succeed if we do not react energetically.

A people cannot do without religion.
requires a belief, a creed, a faith, an ideal, a symbol bole; it's inherent in human nature.

And this point alone would suffice to prove the existence of a God, if it were necessary to prove it.

Now, when you have removed, piece by piece, to this people, their faith in the Catholic religion, it does not remain for them-
There will be nothing more of this hope which has such profound roots in the heart of the man he always hopes for,
Nevertheless, against all odds.

He will ask you for another Creed in exchange for that one that you will have taken away from him.

And that is when the work carried out will be found again.

292 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

ly by the Protestant schoolteacher who certified the certificate calf of the child with the Huguenot spirit.

The Catholic religion was a heavy burden because of its requirements; the Protestant religion is good-natured; it is easy, accommodating, and content with little!

We will go to her without difficulty to believe in something thing.

And note that it won't be very laborious.

Indeed, consider that the Catholic faith is weakening each-that day more and more in France; indifference becomes increasingly evident in many regions.

The government has so accustomed this country to irreligion, to the hatred of the church, which the people profess in its In his view, it was a true horror. Anything, for him, rather than the priest!

What brilliant light they shed on the history of these twenty

In recent years, the words of that odious Pécaut that I reproduce again, which should also be repro-duites in all Catholic manuals and engraved in all memories:

"The reform work that failed in the 14th century in France through ecclesiastical channels, it must be accomplished by "School route!"

Article 7 seems less strange when one considers that Jules Ferry was under the influence of a Calvinist woman and the subscription law presented by the moderate Ribot no longer surprises those who know he is married to a fierce Methodist, wrote our colleague Pierre Monicat in Free France, March 16, 1897.

Religious hatred is once again the reason for the downfall of the General Union, because against this Catholic bank, Léon Say and Rothschild had joined forces, aided by the protestators, masters of three-quarters of the betting banks his. | | |

The university is currently complaining about depopulation. from his colleagues. Instead of demanding, along with Mr. Fabre, the The dismissal of Catholic teachers would be better. to recognize that if his chapel is abandoned, it is that she made it too small and in the image of those three Lutheran churches with bare, chilling walls the soul and chase away the ideal.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 293

Is it surprising that state universities and high schools and secular schools are beginning to instinctively recoil from a feeling of connection to the popular soul when one considers that they were sovereignly ruled by three Protestants two of whom are still at their posts, Messrs. Rabier and Liard.

The third, Mr. Buisson, who became a professor of pedagogy-Gogie at the Sorbonne, is responsible for passing on to – the soul of the masters of youth something of this Calvinist solemnity, often austere, seemingly solitary-lies, and which is not worth the smiling devotion of Catholic schoolteachers, giving themselves joyfully to their students.

And if you now notice that the seminars Protestants from Paris and Montauban receive a large annual subsidy while all the Semi-Catholic children are the responsibility of the bishops, you see what common law was under the Third Republic-blique.

Add to all these facts so serious that the chamber actuelle counts 74 Protestants (1), think that multiple lodges like those of Annonay and Nevers have were founded or are run by reformers, and then perhaps you won't find the pa- too exaggerated roles of a freethinker like Thiébaud:

"Ultimately, political questions are just..."
"Religious questions."

If you believe in atavism and religious solidarity gieuse, will you be surprised that Mr. Ribot and the Protestant politicians are inclined to a

(1) La Libre Parole recently announced, according to Huguenot, that there were 80 Protestants in the Chamber (Croix du April 6, 1897).

294 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Too much sympathy for England and Germany?

Are they not the descendants of those famous heretics which, at the time of the religious wars, appealed English milk on our soil and received money from The foreigner?

The times we live in are truly strange.
and I don't see what the modern state gains from not being more Catholic, if its neutrality is to lead to the preponder-Protestant or Jewish leadership.

The current republican building looks very much like this 4 Egyptian temple full of mysteries, which Taine speaks of in one of his works: the traveler who enters it gazes with admiration at the gleaming marbles of the whiteness of the columns, he admires the golden sails which They hide the sanctuary; he said that a very great God must reside in such a superb place.

Then, when the priest had reverently dismissed the – magnificent tapestries, he recoils in horror, for the the god he sees is a hideous crocodile or a ser-gigantic pent devouring a man.

Each passing day lifts a corner of the veil which Freemasonry has covered its sanctuary. And we...
Let us see that its golden neutrality is merely a facade.
intended to conceal the Protestant or Jewish God, greedy Catholic holocausts...

If you think we're exaggerating, we'll defend ourselves.
we will demonstrate this accusation by placing it before your eyes,
As further evidence, an article from Le Temps, on Félix Pécaut on the occasion of his very recent death.

Mr. Félix Pécaut has a son, a Protestant, needless to say.
who is a philosophy teacher at the high school in Orléans.

We hope, for good Catholic families, to– this city, that their children are not raised in this Huguenot hideout.

But let's return to Félix Pécaut, the fiery Protestant-weaver of the French soul:

A life has just ended which, in the history of the pres

–

The first years of our Third Republic will leave more
 "Only a beautiful memory," said Time; "she will remain a seed." active virtues and lofty thoughts. What Felix has Pécaut is even better than what he has done before.

He was one of those righteous men who are the life-giving and preserving salt.
 a proponent of a society and a civilization sick with excess of wealth and culture.

However, to recognize these souls, one must stop.
 and take heed. They would not be what they are if their merit were not veiled by self-denial and humility.

Our friend, if he were still with us, would forbid us to praise him. He wanted to be, not to appear to be.

He would ask us, instead of talking about him, to: talk still of the holy cause to which he had devoted himself entirely-ment (1). But it's not our fault, it's his, if in embracing this cause of conceptual education, he had appeared to truly embody it, and if the work and the worker have become so inseparable that the best way to recommend The first thing is still to show how the second had understood and practiced it.

In terms of education, the name Pécaut is more than just a name
 From a master, there remains something like a program and an ideal (2).

It is in this vocation as an educator that unity is found.
 of his life. No doubt this vocation was not fully realized-read and only bore its ripe fruit from the foundation from the École Normale de Fontenay (3). But we can say that the
 The same concern has been addressed in various ways in both cases.
 earlier phases of his life that appear as the pre-facing the pedagogical preparation to which its name refers tera indissolubly attached.

Born in Salies de Béarn in 1828, into an old family
 Huguenot, Félix Pécaut had inherited from this origin a tem-

(1) The holy cause was that which had as its aim to protest-to tantamount to the country. Let's not forget that this is a Huguenot paper who is speaking: of Time.

(2) An ideal, I believe, is the annihilation of religion
 Catholicism, the triumph of Protestantism.

(3) The reader should refer to what we have said about the school

Protestant school in Fontenay where Protestant teachers are trained so that they, in turn, can train their students in the spirit of their religion, |

296 _PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

heroic moral permanent and an intense religious fervor tense (1). This moral heroism which later became his entire Religion was, from childhood, the mark of his individuality. His physical constitution was frail. He had an emaciated body. of an ascetic. Physical life in him always seemed reduced to a minimum, as if to better let it burst forth and trans- to reveal the inner life of the soul. This sprang forth upon- all of her deep-set eyes shone with a powerful gleam and soft.

The first period of his existence belonged to the theology and flowed within the narrow framework of Protestantism. It was filled with painful struggles of conscience and thought.

Pécaut worked for many years to free himself the chains of scholasticism and to conquer full self- the economy of his religious and moral life. A book entitled Christ and conscience, 1859, marked his break with tradition orthodox of the reformed churches and caused a scandal.

Pécaut was not only freeing himself from the authority of the Bible, he still dismissed that of Christ, which he placed in questioning divinity and even sanctity. He thus arrived at a personal religion that is exclusively moral, independent of all external forms, which he formulated in an in- brilliant, luminous, in Christian Theism (1870).

But strangely enough, this heretic appeared more and more often. more with the authority of a saint (2). Those very ones whom he what scandalized most people by his thinking could not defend themselves Upon contact with him, a feeling of veneration arises, and many... they asked if Christ today has had more disciples imbued with his spirit and more sanctified and consecrated, inter- less than the one who was accused of having blasphemed him. But even at Félix Pécaut's home, the educator had made his presence felt. under the theologian. Having freely and scrupulously renounced In the pastoral ministry, he had partnered with his friend Jules Gau- brothers, a true soulmate of his own, to open to

:1) This did not prevent him from being a rabid Dreyfusard, as well as Buisson taught us that.

(2) Not fussy about his choice of saints, the Protestant Sabatier author of this article, grotesque in places, and reproduced without doubt, for this reason, in a host of newspapers, notably in the Petite Gironde, a sectarian and basely hateful newspaper.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 997

Paris, a secondary education institution placed under the name Duplessis Mornay. His sickly condition forced him to abandon it after a few years and believing Now disabled and unfit for active tasks, he re-shot in his family home in Salines to end up there in meditation and study, a life that undoubtedly will not be pro- It wouldn't last long.

Fortunately, he was wrong. This anchorite of the cons-science, which rarely came out of retirement except to bear witness to be free of his personal faith, was drawn from it by the misfortunes of France defeated and mutilated (1) The material ruins and the moral lessons that the terrible year left behind moved painfully his heart. Patriotism revived this sickly life. It was the hour when everyone brought an offering to the wounded Fatherland what was best in him to contribute to its recovery. Pécaut brought it what he he called it "his weakness." And it was a great strength. From- They were working to give France a constitution, a army, serious finances; Pécaut had at heart the concern for the popular soul (2).

In his view, it was not only a matter of educating this nascent democracy and which, for the first time, was ap-Pelée to govern herself, but to give her a An inner moral rule, a foundation of practical reason, a reserve of moral energy, a bearing of character, all that Otherwise, there are neither free men nor free peoples.

So he began, in Time, these letters from the provinces. who didn't need a signature to betray very quickly their author and which, week after week, continued for almost nine years.

Each of them was a moral consultation. Pécaut was like an extremely caring doctor who had taken the hand of the "beloved sick woman" to feel her pulse, in count the pulses and note, day by day, the signs of

(1) A large number of Protestants, particularly those from Alsace, applauded our defeats. As for Time, it indicated it to Prussians, the march of MacMahon's army, and thus caused his defeat.

(2) The good man! He wanted that popular Hugue- soul note.

It's understandable that he had some heartache to overcome in order to succeed...

47°

00:

—

298 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Back to 4 health. If his moralistic gaze was extremely Though perceptive, his heart prevented him from ever giving in. but to pessimism. He believed in the ultimate triumph of freedom because he believed in beauty and goodness.

Also, even in the most sorrowful observations of our woes and our perils, he made a cheerful note resonate warm and comforting, a word of courage and hope for to revive all the workers of the common work and Eacroe of the recovery of the Fatherland.

"These letters from the provinces" and a school mission Two months in Italy had appointed him to the government.

Jules Ferry, who knew a thing or two about men, gave him a delegation outside the regular framework within the education inspectorate primary school and soon entrusted him with the mission of organizing and to direct the École Normale Supérieure of Fontenay (1880). The man finally found his place, and the task to which his Nature and his life seemed to have predestined him.

Fontenay will remain the work, or rather, the masterpiece de Pécaut. By putting himself entirely into it, he marked it with a indelible imprint (1). His memory and his spirit endure- will be as important as the institution itself. We have sometimes named a secular Royal Port and this rapprochement does not not only honor to Fontenay; it is and will appear more Later, even more honorable for Port Royal. The work mo- This secular and democratic system has a different scope.

Indeed, another rational solidity and will have other consequences than the work of the past (2). But that said and All reservations aside, it remains true that the resemblance is just right. With Pécaut, something of the spirit Jansenist has entered it and will probably remain there in the house his of Fontenay: spirit of independence in matters of conscience, inner religion, gentle morality and serious, reasoned, and sound. To this must be added an element—a new kind that transfigures all others, a spirit of admirable philosophical and religious tolerance

No one is better suited than this educator of young and sensitive people. consciences, did not have to a higher degree the respect of the

(1) Unfortunately.

(2) Certainly, it has other consequences: that of causing apostasy to sir France.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 299

Individual consciousness. Students are recruited through a competitive entrance exam. throughout the country. They come from all regions and from all confessions. Never has any of them made any sense—to make the slightest complaint of having been embarrassed or offended in his feelings. In moral conversations, of which some— Although specimens have recently been published, the mailer does not never touched on questions of dogma or external form laughing; her penetrating and gentle words went straight to the heart things, at the root of all moral life, at that fundamental in— time which is identical in all noble houses, under the diversity of beliefs and rites, so that all in they also benefited without ever being hurt or even surprises.

The first principle of this moral education was to ask everyone to be true, true to themselves.

This is what the master called probity of mind, the intellectual sincerity from which inner sincerity is born. When he addressed this order of consideration, or rather when he spoke of the tender and respectful love that the schoolteacher must have for the child's well-being, his words never ceased, He was afraid he had never said enough. What there was What was truly prodigious here was the effect that this word exerted on to which one did not think of adding the epithet eloquent.

Entirely charged with an intense, contained, and re— moral life Once received, it entered the souls of the listeners like a gentle breeze.

pure and fine ment fallen into the furrow to germinate there

For Pécaut, it was not a matter of making disciples, and he he did not found a school in the strict sense of the word; it was a matter of to give birth to minds, to awaken souls. That was how it was. having become, without aiming for it, a true director of consciences at to the point of sometimes feeling embarrassed and worried about a role that seems- blait excluded his method and that his moral activity im- posed. If he had lived in the Middle Ages, Pécaut would have become the founder of a religious order and would have been canonized all immediately after his death. He came into our century of free will. In his own way, he reacted with all his might against the trend that was too much natural to make Fontenay a convent and its head a master of consciences. That was his last concern; he He demonstrated it with vigor and discretion in his speech the farewell letter he addressed to the school upon leaving it (1896) and which will remain his pedagogical testament. Nevertheless, if, in two or three hundred years, some other Sainte-Beuve writes the origins

300 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

in the buildings of this new Royal Port, he will discover and sign there- will portray Félix Pécaut as a Saint-Cyran. secular, philosophical and republican.

However high and worthy the public and official work may be, In the image of the great educator, the man is not entirely present. Even more admirable was his inner life. The gathering- This was his usual attitude. No one has ever better pra- He pointed out the common saying: "Stay with yourself."

From a feeble and extraordinarily laborious life and- thinking outside the box, he knew how to perform a perpetual moral exercise and a continuous examination of conscience.

Above all, he wanted to be true; he didn't want his His words and actions went beyond his actual state of mind. rier. In both cases, he forbade himself by es- taken from moral truth, all ostentation and all rhetoric. Taut was also substantial and solid in his life. Never actions were no less false, words never rang minus them. From this pure and complete integrity came to him this kind of religious ascendancy that all those who approached him, the tallest as well as the shortest.

"One must strive," he would say familiarly, "to enter into
"To open the souls of others and let others enter into one's own."

The first part of this profound maxim is relative- It's easy, a little sympathy is all it takes.

But to accomplish the second, to leave the others at any time, on any occasion, enter our home in the se- To understand the very core of our soul, one must possess a holy candor. and to be absolutely sure that there is nothing to hide, nothing to conceal.

In his inner retreats, Félix Pécaut did not dwell on... He didn't confide in anyone. But he let everyone who came to him, to enter into his soul with affectionate solicitude held the doors open. And no one could enter. without immediately feeling like one was in a sanctuary and without being overwhelmed by to leave the profound impression that it makes on every human soul, the very appearance of goodness.

Pécaut was secular in spirit; he was convinced that in this country the non-denominational public school (4) was a con- edition and a guarantee of social peace. But it was not irre- religious and we would not have made this sketch of his phy-

(1) Non-professional in appearance, my good Mr. Sabatier,

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 301

very similar sionomy if we were not down to the deep, hidden source where its moral life and its public action.

He was thinking, with that intensity of thought that was so characteristic of him. proper, that morality had a religious basis and should have a religious soul. He rarely uttered the name of God: he even preferred to use a circumlocution to avoid the meaning commonplace, and not to sacrifice to a worldly convention.

But the altar stood in the inner faith of its con- science and worship were permanent there. He thought that in order to To stand upright and to have full truth, the moral life has need to rely on something immutable and eternal nel. He believed in a kinship, a divine destiny of The man. To properly do his duty in his place and position. which is assigned to us, even the humblest needs to know that by doing so he is in accordance with the universal order and there collaborate.

But this certain and vibrant faith is religion itself.

Thus, Pécaut, who had begun by transforming his re- childhood religion by wanting it to be exclusively moral, trans- depicted, in the end, its moral, by making it profoundly re- - religious.

This intimate fusion of two powers which, in our society, are so violently at war, were making its origin-academic identity and its inner strength.

He lived with sincerity and died peacefully because he was aware that he had, for his part, collaborated in the order universal. The Third Republic will have had more glories radiant: she had no worker who loved her better and deserved better from her.

I don't think it's useful to comment on this article. key. Such a document reveals much more than all the dissertations to which my indignation of A Catholic and fluent in French could indulge himself.

We said that Mr. Pécaut had recently died, in the first half of August. His funeral took place were celebrated in Salles-Mongiscard (Basses-Pyrénées).

At the cemetery, speeches were given by Mr. Monod, honorary dean of the faculty of theology Protestant of Montauban; Mr. Cornu, sub-prefect of Or-by Mr. Faure, Academy Inspector, and by Mr. Buisson, former director of primary education, at the Ministry land of Public Instruction.

302 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Mr. Cornu, sub-prefect of Orthez, described Mr. Pécaut "an apostle of all good and all truth." Mr. Faure, The Academy Inspector in Pau, gave a reading on the falls, from a telegram from Mr. Bourgeois, in which the The Minister of Public Instruction treated the deceased as "A great and good man."

But this great and good man was a common Drey-Fusard, like Bourgeois himself, for that matter.

It was his friend Buisson who told us this through these pa-bold roles that prove the Protestant sect has fully embraced the Traitor's cause:

Our dear friend had followed this formidable case in all his adventures with the most anxious attention, until-that at the moment when illness confined him to his sickbed—France.

But in that broken, shattered body, he retained even the last hour, not only the perfect lucidity of his thought, but the fullness of his moral strength and the security of the view of his conscience.

He wanted to be informed of everything, to follow the day-to-day events. And as they unfolded, he was keen to do what he called his duty, his whole duty.

You may have noticed in the announcement letters that Mr. Pécaut is described as a former inspector general, former Member of the High Council. Why former?

It was only very recently, last week, that he revealed—calf had his family write with the most fervent requests so that the Minister would accept his resignation from his two positions which still linked him to teaching and administration ministry.

And he did it so as not to die without having been able to join publicly his name, as his sons had already done to those of men of heart who undertook to rebuild a of the most blind, but of the most formidable currents of opinion nations that have ever led a country.

When he learned of the arrest of Lieutenant-Colonel Pi—A quarter of large tears flowed from her eyes.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 303

And from his deathbed he dictated heart-wrenching letters to those whom he had believed capable of averting a supreme warning lying; immediately freed by his resignation he ordered that one sent his subscription to the display in response to the speech of the Minister of War.

He didn't ask himself if he was going to die tomorrow: he—deemed that he still had time to act as a citizen, of a patriot, of an educator.

And further on, Mr. Buisson added:

I would be betraying his trust for the first time, and I dare not—

I would never again in my life pronounce his name, if I were standing before this tomb Openly, I held onto the truth; if I stifled it with silence... supreme cry of the dying man gathering his last strength to bear witness to the holy cause of justice

It seems to me that her soul, so pure and so tender, does not... would never forgive having vowed to "his daughters" of Fontepay and to the teachers of France, whom he never flattered but of which he never doubted, the latest example and the derthe last lesson he bequeathed to them.

She is clean, the last lesson given to the teacher-university lecture by the Huguenot Pécaut. He asks to his masters to become Dreyfusards.

This posthumous recommendation was not well received.
necessary.

The vast majority of the university and the Huguenots more or less obscure intellectuals, graduates or by-chimneys, are Dreyfusards.

Let us mention Duclaux, a member of the Academy of Sciences;
Anquetin, an ignored lawyer at the Court of Appeal; Charles Da-Rantière; Rist; Othon Goepp, law graduates; Victor; Berard; Lucien Herr, Ch. Andler; C. Bouglé; P. Lapie;
A. Métin; F. Brunot, E. Bourguet, Jean Perrin, Marotte, Vieillefond, Lebesgue, Mége, Mouton, Jarry, Cligny, Elie Halévy, Massoulier, J. Rey, Dureng, Dubreuil, Simiand, Treffel, Roques, Loeve, H. Bousquet, agrégés

.of the University.
Master Poirot, Bury, Monod, Beck, Beslais, Cettier.

304 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Duguet, Abt, Fourniols, Pernot Cazamian, Merlant, Babut,
Cans, Meslier, graduates in literature.

H. Dumas, Gauthier, Lecomte, La Brausse, Alméras, Sueur, Brunet, Maroyer, Bouzat, Esclangeon,
Aroles, Galland, graduates in science, etc., etc.

Charles Friedel member of the Institute, commander of-the Legion of Honour; Edouard Grimaux, member of the Institute, officer of the Legion of Honour; G. Sorel, an-former engineer of the Bridges and Roads, knight of the Legion of Honour; Doctor Pottevin; Doctor, A. Zuber; Delbet, hospital surgeon and associate professor at the Faculty of Medicine; Gabriel Séailles, professor at the Sorbonne; Paul Desjardins; Béhal, professor at the pharmacy school; Robert Byse, law graduate; Léon Séchet, director of the Revue des provinces de the West; Maurice Montégut, man of letters, Jean Psichari, Associate Professor at the University, Practical Director at The Practical School of Advanced Studies; Gabriel Mourey, Albéric Magnard, Pierre Valdagne, men of letters; . Charles Petit-Jean; G. Tournade, Edmond Fazy, license graduates in letters; Doctor Stapfer; René Weiss, graduate in- letters; Edouard Quet, publicist; Fernand Fau; Ar Mand Charpentier, man of letters, critic of the re- View of newspapers and books; Pascal Forthuny men of letters; Henri Brissac; Albert Bloch, licen- company of sciences professors at the polytechnic school of Buenos-Ayres, publicist; Paul Genty; J. Mormerot, li- J. Lagrosillière, graduate in law, Ugh. Thébault, Gustave Kahn, Edouard André, Revus of the two Frances; René Ghil, publicist; JL Bidault, artist; Paul Maze, lawyer at the Court, Frédéric Cazalis, lawyer at the Court; Adrien Manière, Man of letters: B. Guinaudeau, man of letters, Jacques Bouzon, lawyer at the Court; Gustave Soubèr, man of letters; J. Anglas, double licentiate in science; Paul Vibert, economist; Lucien Wahl; Jean Cresp, man of letters; George Collet, secretary of the editor of the Revue médicale; Charles Veillet

~

-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 305

Lavallée, a graduate in literature; Maurice Level, a graduate in philosophy; Pierre Lefèvre; Lucien-Victor Meunier, Knight of the Legion of Honour; Amédée Blondeau; André Honorat": Paul Desachy; Hugue Destrem. Anatole France of the French Academy, Jean Ajalbert, Paul Brulat, Raimond Koechlin, Fernand Gregh, An- Dr. Rivoire, Saint-Georges de Bouhelier, G. Lecomte, E. Letailleur, Th. Ruysen, from the peace association by law, Jack Abeille, Philippe Dubois, Marcel Huart, Pierre de Lano, Jehan Rictus, Georges Laporte, publicist; Lhermite, JM Gros, Lugné-Poë, Jacques Bizet! Daniel Halévy, Saviez, publicist; Gabriel Trarieux, Alfred Bonnet, AF Hérold, Pierre Quillard, C. Tarbouriech, professor at the College of Social Sciences, F. Fénéon, secretary of the Revue Blanche; Robert of Flers, Marcel Proust, Léon Jeatman, Louis de la Salle, Amédée Rouquès, Paul Lagarde, lawyer at the Court appeal.

Georges Clemenceau, Octave Mirbeau, Ernest Vaughan, Francis de Pressensé, Paul Adam, Gustave Geoffroi, Urbain Gohier, Reinach, Elie Reclus, Henri Bauer, Maurice Bouchor, Paul Alexis, Yves Guyot, Léon Marchand, Cyriel Buysse, Edmond Cattier, Jean Deville, Célestin Demblon, Georges Eckhoud, Léon Frédéric, Henri Fick, Yvan Gilkin, Albert Girand, Léopold Lacour, Camille Lemon-deny, Henri Leyret, Georges Marlow, Monseur, E. Muto, Emile Royer, Lucien Solvay, Laurent Tailhade, Marguerite Val de Wiele, Maurice Vaucaire, Emmanuel Debousquet, Paul Fort, Mécilas Golberg, Jules Heyne, Marc Blond, Roland de Marrès, Camille Mauclair, Eugène Montfort, Ph. Dubois, Pierre Quillard, Henri Rainaldy, Paul Sainte-Brigite, Paul Salkin, Paul Souchon, Arthur Toisoul, Marius Vallabrègues, William van de Kerkhowe, Henri van de Putte, J.-H. Levy, Robert Buchanan, David Ch. Murray,

306 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY,

G, de Grecf, Paul Janson, Ch. Letourneau, Etienne Marcel, Emile Roger.

All these brown graduates, all these bi-professors-parked, all these literary hucksters, all these Greeks of science, pompously call themselves "intellectuals".

There you have it, the pedantry, the boorishness of these... those who came from the Instruction department and who cloak themselves in their guides donkeys, Greek or Latin, to affirm the innocence of a traitor.

Note that they don't even know Dreyfus, that they don't know the slightest thing about what happened during his trial.

They heard from Jacob that Samuel had said that Moses had told Job, who repeated it to Jacob, that an irregularity had been committed.

And, buried in their stiff collars, all those pedants of bray: |

"Having learned that a procedural defect existed, we "Fimes," seized with astonishment, we "gathered" and "Protestames".

We "affirmed" Dreyfus's innocence, and we "We demanded" that he "be" tried again, in pre- the presence of the rumors that were circulating, not that we "dou- "tassions" of the good faith of the first judges, but to the his only thought was that he could very well have done that they "were deluding themselves."

Pedants, pedants, intellectuals, are you grotesque enough? ques? i

Especially since these fierce lovers of justice They are, for the most part, Republicans who support the "bloc" revolutionary, as explained by their comrade Clemenceau, and that they accept all the acts of the Revolution.

Now, reflect on respecting justice and legality. the beneficial revolution which these jokers are say the heirs.

Here is a document whose original is in the archives national. It says a lot about how the republics-

—~

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 307

citizens of that time practiced justice and respect were the legalities.

In this document, the General Security Committee sends on the date of 28 Prairial, Year II, his instructions to the tribu- revolutionary national:

Do not put the former Marquis of the on trial yet Guiche, although included in the decree of the day before yesterday, 26; but leaving Rohan-Rochefort, Saint-Maurice, Laval-Montmo-

Rency, Sombreuil and his son, the former Viscount of Pons and Noël, Embassy secretary, to be sentenced tomorrow.

The order to convict sent to the judges of the court revolutionary is dated 28 Prairial. It is therefore possible within six days, of this infamous law of 22 Prairial which "suppressed the defense".

The document we just read is, in a way, the commentary on this law. We didn't judge, we condemned and executed.

And yet this assembly of executioners took on the role of... The same judicial system, that was called a court.

Two hundred arrests were made there every day in the name of the French people!

Admittedly, they are amusing nonetheless, those dreyfusiers who approve of these crimes of the revolution and who today they come to reject the trial of a just traitor-convicted, whose trial lasted three days and who had a master lawyer to defend him!

The despicable executioners of 1793 got drunk in the blood; they condemned innocent people without trial: their admirers, their disciples, their descendants, Their heirs find it perfect. It's the Bloc; there Don't touch. A Jew who betrayed France is being tried with all desirable guarantees, he is found guilty and condemned; and these false liberals, these hypocrites, these intellectuals, these sellouts, claim without proof his innocence. They maintain his innocence and demand a review of his trial.

` 308 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Their thoughts are filled with mourning. Dreyfus may be innocent-one hundred. j

Humanity has a vested interest in its own fate.

Granted, but humanity is also interested in the fate of all the innocent. I therefore demand that action be taken. against the assassins of the revolution who guillotined thousands of innocent people. I'll go even further.

I am willing to admit for a moment that the victims of terrorists, whose grandsons are demanding a review of the Dreyfus trial, were victims of politics;

but there were some who were guillotined by mistake, such this young cook, who entered Roanne prison for bringing food to the prisoners, and which was understood in the batch to make up the numbers.

And Delong, of the parliament of Toulouse, executed without judgement !

If the band of wretches who proclaim the innocence of Dreyfus was sincere, she would also ask for the revision of Delong's trial, and of that young cook.

All in all, 'honor, the lives of these two men,'
are well worth Dreyfus's honor and life!

But he's a Jew covered in gold, sings another
air. |

And you hear, said Drumont, the noise that everyone is making These Dreyfusard Jacobins, by shifting the question: -

"Hatred of science, lack of respect for The scientists, the need to turn off the lights, that's where it is recognized that all anti-Dreyfusards are keyfascists and obscurantists. This is the struggle undertaken by the Church against this science that has emancipated the world
"Modern," say the intellectuals.

Jokers! Look at this cart! Listen to these Shouts and cries of: "To the guillotine! To the guillotine!"

It is a member of the Academy who is being led to The scaffold. It's Lavoisier!... .

But again, this is not a retrial that the scoundrels of the treason syndicate are pursuing,

(

v

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 309

It is above all the war on the army that they want to discredit.
weaken and diminish.

Their campaign is absolutely anti-French, which explains the number of Protestants one encounters there.

It is the General Staff that they want to degrade and destroy.
public opinion.

And a deputy from Paris, Mr. Millevoye, addressed to the Pré-President of the Council sent a letter in which he denounced the scandalous campaign that the country has been witnessing since twelve months. He recalled that the men who unleashed about their country these furious passions, high officials, senators or former members of parliament believe themselves to be above the law.
laws, and he asked the Government to put an end to the syndicate of treason.

It was a poor understanding of the Dreyfusards to believe that they would finally stop stirring up public opinion. Their goal was not reached. The army is still respected. The a people who trust their leaders, in the General Staff,
It was important to continue the campaign.

The Dreyfus affair, yet another stunt, is merely a pretext.
a most opportune pretext for the revolutionaries
They are enemies of the army. They are taking advantage of it.

And they are logical. Ultimately, what is the purpose of the Freemasonry?

The dismemberment of Catholic nations, the social-Universalism. It's declared, it's admitted, it's no longer discussed.

The army is still the anti-revolutionary bulwark.
'What could be more natural than for Freemasons to seek to Vabattre?

Believe me, they know what they're doing; they are not ignorant not this word – from the most illustrious of our adversaries, the Marshal Moltke:

The next war will primarily be a war
in which strategic science and command dement will have the largest share. Our campaigns and our victories have taught our enemies who have,
Like us, numbers, armament, and courage.

one

—

310 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Our strength will lie in leadership, in communication command, in the GREAT STAFF.

Thus, the Jewish, Freemason, Protestant trio has only one thought: annihilate the General Staff (4). .

It's part of revolutionary traditions.

And Jules Ferry, the author of Article 7, did not speak out. not otherwise, by a letter published on June 49 in the Réveil du Dauphiné, under his signature, Jules Ferry, and addressed to the editor-in-chief, Félix Vogeli.

Sir and dear fellow citizen,

A newly founded newspaper is a newborn of freedom;
It is natural that we greet him and celebrate him.

Yours, moreover, speaks my language and wears my dra-skin.

You are a republican and you are a decentralizer.
your program includes "necessary destruction," that is to say...
meaning that you consider it certain that Democracy and Freedom in France will only be founded on the ruins of this.
fourfold organization, military, administrative, religious and judicial system that the First Empire bequeathed to us and that it held of the old regime.

No more state clergy, no more state magistracy, no more Military caste, no more administrative caste.

This is the policy that universal suffrage carries.
within its flanks, and that the logic of things will make of it, willingly, against your will, to leave... etc.

"Just Ferry."

Thus said Jules Ferry, friend of Pécaut and of Buisson, to which we are obliged to return.
Buisson was his worthy companion when he wrote:

(1) It is now a fait accompli. Colonel Henry has committed suicide; du Paty de Clam is placed on leave, de Boisdeffre, Our Chief of the General Staff has resigned, pending the turn of others.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 311

YJ needs the mother to instill in the family from an early age the child this idea that weapons, that a sword, a rifle, a cannons are instruments that we must consider from the the same eye that we consider at Chillon Castle instruments of torture used a few centuries ago.

And when we no longer see thousands of onlookers watching at military reviews, when, instead of admiration for title and epaulette, you will have accustomed the child to saying:

A uniform is a livery, and every livery is ignominious. that of the priest and that of the soldier, that of the magistrate and that of the lackey, then you will have moved public opinion forward (4).

And similarly, to take another detail, I would like a Voltaire spent fifty years ridiculing, kings, wars and armies.

Failing a genius, I would like thousands of men of goodwill making it its duty to eradicate these vain pre-judged to be of glory and chauvinism still too deeply rooted in our mind.

Let's give an example of resistance in action, let's not be afraid not, when necessary, to step outside the current legal framework of some countries, to do things that, in Switzerland, would perfectly legal, but, who, in France, for example, we would drag them out in prison.

It is up to us to rely on our conscience and to reach that point where the conviction is strong enough to that we say to ourselves:

"I will not submit, I cannot submit."

As we can see, the academic Buisson (2) was quite desi-

(1) And it is to this man, writes Paul de Cassagnac, that the governor The government of the Republic, for fifteen years, entrusted the French youth leadership!

He will have preached to our young people contempt for the priest, for the soldier and of the magistrate, the hatred of the three human institutions, on which, as well as on three columns, every society must be based on every civilization must rely on it.

And this man still teaches, has kept a professorship and the
The youth in schools can still hear his poisonous words!

(2) It was this same Buisson who had appointed and protected
For a long time, the famous Huguenot, Robin, the man of the pigsty of Cempuis where boys and girls were raised in the promis- - cooked rabbits.

312 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

I was there to follow in the footsteps of Zola, the insulter of the army.

These words were held against the Huguenot Buisson, in the occasion of the scandalous speech he delivered on the Pécaut's tomb. But Buisson denied having them written or spoken.

fl addressed a letter to Mr. Ernest Judet, the distinguished editor-in-chief of Le Petit Journal, so patriotic and so courageous in this Dreyfus affair.

Mr. Buisson's defense is as solid as it is instructive.

tive:

"What!" he exclaimed. "Mr. Judet is quoting a monstrous sentence!"
chiseled, he said, like a dogma by this Buisson to whom a foolish favor had delivered the Directorate of going to our teaching primary education.

But, Buisson victoriously replies, "fourteen Ministers of the Republic" continued this "favor" to me
"imbecile," from Mr. Ferry to Mr. Rambaud.

Mr. Buisson continues his interesting demonstration-
tion:

Mr. Ernest Judet adds: The fact of teaching these "ne-
"Fast doctrines" would already be madness, cowardice in a any publicist; what will happen if the one who begins this propaganda of ruin is one of the most important personalities state functions, one of the most responsible civil servants sands, if he has the legal authority to imprint on consciences naive and new, the catechism of Ravachol and Vaillant

And what about Henry?

To which Mr. Buisson replied:

Mr. Judet forgot to mention the "monstrous phrase" is taken from the RECORD OF THE SPEECH DELIVERED, there is just twenty-nine years old – and where? – at one of those meetings which could not be held while, north of France, one of these "congresses" at the end of the Empire where the handful of republicans citizens who admitted to being "irreconcilable" were going to accia-

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 313

to the outlaws, those who had refused "the amnesty imposed"
"perial", Victor Hugo and Edgard Quinet, at their head.

There, we relieved ourselves by RECITING the vengeful stanzas-reses des Chdtiments, repeating the furious sarcasms of the Lantern, the one from Rochefort back then.

I was one of those young people who had decided not to lend oath to the Empire, and at twenty-six I was a professor at the modest academy of Neuchâtel in Switzerland.

I attended two of these congresses, the one in Geneva, CHAIRMAN
BY GARIBALDI, that of Lausanne, presided over by Victor Hugo.
They called themselves the "Congress for Peace and Freedom"

In Lausanne, some friends who had come from France asked me-manage to speak on behalf of the young people on the a subject that Victor Hugo had just introduced.

He was calling us all IN ADVANCE "FELLOW CITIZENS OF THE STATES-
"United of Europe," because, he said, the European Republic...
DÉRALE IS ESTABLISHED BY LAW Pending its Establishment in
DO.

"You have come," he told us, "to inform the appropriate authorities that the War is evil, human blood is precious, that Life is sacred.

Wars have all sorts of pretexts, they have no
only one cause: the army.

REMOVE THE ARMY, YOU REMOVE THE WAR.

But how do you get rid of the army? By getting rid of the despotism; abolish parasitism in all its forms;

Civil lists:

Paid laziness;

Salaried clergy;

Magistrates maintained;

'Standing armies;

Make this mark and you'll give Europe ten billion per year!...

To perpetuate the army is to perpetuate despotism.

No more army, no more kings!

That's what we want.

We want the people to live, to work, to buy, to sell, speak, love, and think freely; that there be schools doing citizens, that there be no more princes making mi-trail runners (session of September 14, 1869).

18

314 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

From the President's speech, one can judge what
THE OTHERS WERE THERE, AND IN PARTICULAR MY LM-JUVENILE PROVISATION.

Is there no one left in France who doesn't remember?
from those times and from the language we spoke,
of that beautiful dream we cherished of the United Republic-
Verselle, of the holy alliance of peoples?

Try to find, in some libraries, the speeches and articles by members of the opposition FROM THEN.

You won't find one or it won't be listed in
THE "ABOLITION OF. PERMANENT ARMIES
NENTES » from Jules Simon to Rochefort

So I was, in keeping with the prevailing tone.

The prevailing tone was lovely; and what a light it sheds on the painting of September 4th, this revelation of the Huguenot Bush !

But these words were also held against him at three times, and he offered his resignation to Jules Ferry, his master and friend. Buisson reminds Mr. Judet of this:

Mr. Ferry read my letter, summoned me, and refused my resignation and assured me that my true duty was to undergo all the reproaches that this slip of the tongue or this sin would bring me of youth, but not to abandon the work for that reason schoolwork that he had entrusted to me.

Mr. Ferry's JUDGMENT on this CASE OF CONSCIENCE must have had a particular authority over me.

He himself had attended this congress in 1869.

He had spoken after me, so he knew better than no one, what to expect.

However, he himself, a member of the Legislative Body, PLUS RESPONSE, therefore, which we young people know— How did you summarize his speech?

In four points I

"To eliminate the authoritarian and despotic element, which has too often made FRANCE THE EVIL GENIUS— HEALTH OF EUROPE, we must look at how it was established In our country, Caesarism. We had no trouble... to notice that it has become established:

THE PROTESTANTS JT UNIVERSITY 318

By Army.

By the Clergy.

By the Judiciary.

By the prefects.

These were the four factors of despotism.

French.

There you have it, he added, because the same image weighed on everyone's imaginations, that's what the four accomplices are being criticized for in immortal verses by the author of this beautiful book, which consoles, almost twenty years ago, all the honest people of Europe" (Session of September 16.)

'You may therefore agree to acknowledge that this is not "the catechism of Ravachol and Vaillant" but rather the catechism of Victor Hugo and Quinet, I'll add Jules Ferry and Paul Bert, to name just a few of the dead; this catechism has always been mine.

There you are, my poor country, in whose hands you are fall.

Because Méline, Brisson and Dupuy are the continuators of Jules Ferry. Mr. Méline, in particular, declared it urbi and orbi during his long two-year ministry which he did not even know how to take advantage of it to secure a majority of Government at the elections of May 1898!

That Mr. Méline claims to be a follower of Mr. Ferry is irrelevant. surprising. We must not forget that Mr. Méline was communard, as Mr. Destieux Junca reproached him for at the podium, in the Senate, and that he is still a Freemason-lesson. |

Here is the incident as officially reported:

"Mr. Destieux-Junca. – You were from the commune, YOU !

"Mr. President of the Council. – You're talking nonsense." (Rumors and violent protests on the left.)

"Mr. Destieux-Junca. – What are you saying? (Applause-ments).

"Mr. President of the Council. – I say that this is not True, you know that very well.

Mr. Destieux-Junca. – Ah! we know your impudence. | |

316: PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Simply recalling the facts is the best repellent.

that one can do.

L'Intransigeant reminds us of this:

MELINE ELECTED.

On the morning of March 27, 1871, the Central Committee announced that he was giving way to the newly elected members: the members of the Commune chosen by Universal Suffrage. Mr. Méline, deputy mayor of the 1st arrondissement, had been elected member of the Commune, by 7,251 votes in the elections of March 26.

Mr. Méline now alleges that he gave his resignation, but it can be proven, with the help of documents officials, that this allegation is false first of all and that it does not would then, under no circumstances, be able to absolve the responsibility of the renegade communard.

Mr. Méline nevertheless persisted in denying it; everything The case is deniable.

In any case, Mr. Méline was part of the Com-
He was a member of the commune during and after the assassination of Generals Leconte and Clément Thomas, and he even had photographed wearing a red scarf (1).

Does this mean that Mr. Mé- should not be forgiven?
Line, a youthful indiscretion?

We're not that strict.

And certainly we would prefer Mr. Méline to have com-made a thousand serious mistakes, but returned to good sense-comments, whether from Mr. Brisson or any other persistent radical down a fatal path.

But Mr. Méline, although he has softened, is by no means a model of tolerance. It is perhaps less bad than the radicals, because he lacked courage and virility- are necessary; but in reality it is hardly any better; the results

(1) See Gazette de France of December 17, 1897.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 317

the states that one obtains with it are the same as those that we obtain from radicals.

Mr. Méline is a man of good intentions, that's true;
But the road to hell is paved with it!

And besides, we don't really see the difference.
between a Brisson who is preparing a law against the congressgations and a Méline who executes it.

May the buildings of our admirable religious be sold by Bourgeois or by Méline, the congregations they don't quite understand where the difference lies

Now, Méline, with whom the right wing marched during two years, did nothing else.

Don't accuse me of being a supporter of the politics of
"at worst" since I wouldn't have any more pac-tisé with the radicals.

Since everyone in this world was Freemasonry, the duty of the catholics is not to enter with him into any kind of combination.

What needed to be practiced was a policy, not a conciliation, but opposition, a personal policy and not impersonal. And to be sectarian if necessary.
right in the presence of our masters, sectarians of the left.

A fight without truce or mercy; an eye for an eye, a tooth for tooth.

– In the heyday of the opposition, you might say, there was That's how it was, and the result was the same.

– I'm stopping you; it seemed he did so; but
It was an appearance.

The Catholics made some financial sacrifices,
but they almost never paid their dues rings.

Contacting the voter? Nonsense! During the
During the election campaign, we stayed home, draped in our dignity; they didn't even deign to give a handful of main; in short, we had no notion of the art of to wield universal suffrage.

And, at the time of May 16, under the pretext of preparing the elections, a Catholic minister, supposedly strong-willed, left Paris to go to a woman who

How can you not get beaten in these con-Editions there?

Moreover, the Catholics, at the head of this party,
they lack a sense of opposition; they have no aptitude-
They are dedicated to the struggle. They are very brave and honest.
people, too honest even, since they don't know triumph in a country of universal suffrage where the
The electorate is only too willing to be corrupted.

Give them power and France will be admirable.
governed.

I sincerely believe they will have it one day
When the current machine is worn out, they will appear at country as the supreme hope, but taking the power-See them, never.

Also, for many, Méline or a moderate like He's the ideal. They don't have to fight, they only have to vote for the ministry that fights in their place. That's not Not tiring and so convenient.

Only Méline "rolls" them, not perhaps for the wicked pleasure of deceiving these brave members of parliament who certainly do not deserve this ingratitude, but for
to be forgiven by the radicals and the Freemasons, in the hope of remaining in power, the support provided by Catholics.

So Méline has secularized to an extreme degree, and has he... publicly praised from the podium.

The discussion that gave In the Senate, Mr. Aucoin's interpellation, concerning the secularization of a religious school in Auch.

Mr. Méline stated that, for the past two years, the government-was fighting against the radical socialist municipality from Auch to secularize one of its schools where the a vacancy following the death of the congress director |
Ganiste, then he added:

What do you expect, Mr. Autoin, they're radi-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 319

caax, revisionists like you, who have judged regarding not to secularize.

I wanted, I repeat, to note that what I have said from the floor of the House is in accordance with the truth of Things: It's that we are too often overly secular. in Paris, whereas, in his department, there is a lot of complacency and driven by a genuine spirit of compromise in the application of the law.

This fact, apparently, is not an isolated, particular event. in the Gers department, he sees himself in many other departments

And Méline swore that, everywhere, he imposed secularization to these recalcitrant radical socialists.

I shout to Millerand: "Take the trouble, if you
"You dare to attack us directly."

Lavy was disconcerted by this superb:

"I would blush to dwell any longer on a pa-Reille argumentation.

"The truth is that we are the faithful observers; supporters of the 1886 law. (Very good, very good, at center.)

"We claim to apply it in its letter and, in his mind.

To the frantic switches:

"We respect the law, we apply it,"
You yourself recognize it, "as she always has was applied.

"We are applying the secularization law as it is Done. (Very good. Very good, in the center.)

Master of the position, Mr. Méline explained how he was being as outrageous as possible in the app-enforcement of the law.

If he doesn't hit harder, it's because he's running up against the insurmountable difficulties encountered by its de-Vanciers and Ferry himself, his master:

All the Ministers of Public Instruction have "found themselves facing the same difficulties; all were forced"

320 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

"to take into account, to some extent, the resistances"
"the conditions they encountered; and if we do not allow to—"
"trance, it's because it would sometimes be difficult and even
"They are in danger, and if we do it brutally, you
"You would be the first four to protest."

(Applause from the center and right.)

"Gentlemen, alongside these mandatory secularizations, which I
"I repeat, we practice it, without hesitation, every time
"that they are possible, there are, I acknowledge, the secular-
"Optional tions."

"And all the ministers who have succeeded one another in the ministry"
"of Public Instruction have made optional secularizations-
"tives under the conditions provided for by the law of 1886.

"Thus, when a municipal council requests it, the lafcl-
"The notification is always made; when he does not request it, the
"The Minister sometimes does it against the wishes of the Mu-
"national.

"All ministries were obliged to contribute, according to "Mr. Goblet's very apt expression, Your same tempera"ments in the application of the law. We apply the "Same legal precedent as our predecessors."

"Make comparisons of figures as long as you
"You will want to, and you will be forced to, recognize that the "number of optional secularizations that we have made "equal, on average, to those of Mr. Poincaré, those of "Mr. Combes himself, whom Mr. Rambaud succeeded.
"Did you question Mr. Combes to find out why he "Didn't it secularize more?" (Laughter and applause)
"center.) |

"Gentlemen, I don't want to prolong this debate too much and "especially prolonging it unnecessarily; what I am saying is "that the process of secularization is progressing steadily,
"as foreseen by the legislator of 1886, but with

"inevitable fluctuations."

"When we study the secularization movement since
"Originally, we observe that at the beginning they were named-
"Brous, and for a very simple reason: the "Municipal councils, which had prepared the secularizations"
"Before the law was passed, almost all of them requested it"
"At the same time. Later, they slowed down for good reason."
"difficulties encountered by the municipalities which "did not own the school premises; today-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 391

"Today, they resume their upward march and you
"You should congratulate yourself because every year the age of "Congregationalists eliminate them in greater numbers and that,
"Therefore, mandatory secularizations will increase"
"lying."

"They were, this year, from 1896 to 1897, 390.

"They had been 3-0 the previous year."

Mr. Méline also stated that in ten years, by the simple application of the law, without upheaval, without violence
In the end, the work of secularization will be complete.

And he finished with this air of bravery:

The House and the country know very well that we do not
We are not clerics, whatever you do for the to make believe (applause from the center). They know that we we are defenders who are just as convinced, just as resolute as you, from civil society, and as long as we are here, we will not try to attack him.

Mr. Méline was not lying. He was applying the wicked laws.
rates with the implacable ferocity of gentle men.
Listen instead to the congregations:

The religious struggle continues in Saint-James, in the Manche region;
The seizure has targeted the community's buildings.

Today, it's a field that's being taken from the poor.
nuns; tomorrow, it will be the entire building.

It was therefore through a piece of land that the public nicknamed "the field of persecution" that our plunderers will begin the war of plunder.

On the other hand, in Nancy, the tax authorities have just ordered the seizure real estate of the properties belonging to the congregation of Sisters of Compassion of Saint-Firmin.

The seized properties are: the hospice, the convent, the chapel.

+
* +

On June 15, the estate of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament of Bollene (Vaucluse) has been put up for sale.

We read in the Universe:
The recording captured a 3-hectare plot of land

322 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

60 ares, which belongs to the Augustinian Ladies of Carentan. This act has sparked outrage throughout the country and... announces that the nuns will not yield to injustice legal notice.

Telegraph from Brest:

© The Minister of Religious Affairs has just notified Mr. Abbot Fave, parish priest of Plouguerneau, to Father Janvier, parish priest of Saint-Renan, to Father Poulhazan, parish priest of Briec, and to Father Roland, vicar in Carhaix, that their treatments were removed.

The first two reportedly attended electoral meetings torales, organized last August by Father Gayraud and would have spoken. The third participated in the founding tion of the free school of the sisters, in Briec.

We write from Tulle:

The nuns of the convent of Notre-Dame, in Ussel, having refused to pay the surcharge, a bailiff was required to proceed with the seizure of part of the enclosure convent pendant.

+

+ @

The Revue de l'Ouest writes:

Following a default judgment rendered by the court of first instance of Saint-Jean d'Angely, against the Benedictine nuns of this city, the tax authorities seized and to sell their chaplaincy.

We read in the Emancipateur of Cambrai:

We have learned that Mr. Bruns, a bailiff in Roubaix, has si-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 323

signified Friday evening a constraint to the Carmelites of the street Saint Anthony, for having to pay the unjust tax of increase-ment.

The Ambert court will soon take over the case. concerning the Ursulines and the Dominicans of this city.

Following the default judgments and the seizure of assets - Consequently, the religious congregations opposed this seizure. and served a memorandum to the Administration, which answered since then by another memorandum.

The cases called at one of the last hearings of the court cases were referred to the hearing of June 7th.

From the Religious Week of Moulins:

According to seizure reports dated the 44th and on August 42nd, the au- will take place on Thursday, November 44th. dience of the public auctions of the civil court of Moulins, at the request from the registrar, to the sale of real estate belonging to the Carmelite and Visitation nuns on the starting prices of 1,500 francs for the small building of the rue de Paris and 5,000 francs for the one on the rue de Bardon.

This sale was ordered following the refusal to pay the rights of increase.

Excerpts from La Croix:

We are informed that the sale of the monastery's chaplaincy The Neuf-Château boarding school (Vosges), which was seized by the tax authorities, is set for December 16th.

324 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

THE URSULINES OF QUIMPERLE.

The lawsuit brought against the Ursulines of Quimperlé, by the registration The registration will take place on December 15th before the civil court. from Quimperlé.

THE CONGREGATION OF OUR LADY AND THE CHILD JESUS IN REIMS.

One of our correspondents in Reims writes to us that the The Chamber of Requests of the Court of Cassation has pro-declared in favor of registration in the affairs of the Congregation of Our Lady and the Child Jesus.

THE CONGREGATION OF THE URSULINE NUNS.

The Chamber of Petitions of the Court of Cassation has pro-announced the admission of the appeal submitted by the Congregation Ursuline nuns protest against a ruling by the Paris Court, validating a property seizure carried out by the property management company without authorization prior approval of the head of state.

This very important decision anticipates the admission, to short term, writes L'Espérance de Nancy of the appeal provided by the Sisters of Christian Doctrine against Varrét of the Court of Nancy, June 5th.

THE NUNS OF SAINT MARTH IN ROMANS.

The tax authorities have just seized a property located in Montmiral and bequeathed to the Community of Sainte-Marthe de Romans, by M[™]* du Viviers, its founder.

THE SISTERS OF THE PRESENTATION IN LARGENTIÈRES.

Regarding the recent ruling by the Court of Nîmes, which gave tax reasons against the Sisters of the Presentation, the Viva-Rais notes that the news of this decision has been met with strong reactions. impressed the population of Largentière.

Let us hope, said our colleague, for the honor of the Republic-republic, for the preservation of republican maxims that we will not have the pain of witnessing the execution-

tion of tax measures taken against the Presentation.
HIT SE ROSOSESCC00SSUS0SS0C0SSSS SESE

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 325

I could cite many more documents from this nature. What's the point? It wouldn't change the situation.

What I wanted was to show that Méline didn't deserve no more our affections than any other Freemason.

And, ultimately, why would he be benevolent to Regarding Catholics?

These are people whose only reason for being is because they They fight us. The day they form an alliance with us, They will be no more.

We will replace them. It's inevitable.

They can sense it.

And really, they would be too naive to give in to us their place.

There's nothing to expect from them.

If we want power, we must take it.

And for that, there is only one way: to fight with the more intense energy and to do everything possible, without a shadow of hesitation.

He who wills the end wills the means.

But Catholics have only ever used half-measures.

They are always afraid of being unpleasant to their adversaires.

Only these, even if they were Méline and Barthou, did not. They don't hold back.

And that is why Father Stanislas could write, in December 1897, to the director of the Bulletin des congregations:

NOTHING HAS CHANGED.

Certainly, nothing has changed, except that Brisson is half-nister instead of Méline (1). I still believe that he did more harm than its predecessor, because it is more practical and further removed from the influence of Catholics.

Méline, although fighting them, had, as a moderate, something of the right-handed person who only knows how to procrastinate.

{4) Brisson is replaced by Dupuy.

49

326 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Brisson is more resolute, and that's a great quality in policy.

He dismissed the prefects deemed too lukewarm. I believe that, in the interest of his party, he was absolutely right.

And if Mr. Méline had summoned all the prefects, few before the elections, if he had spoken to them in an angry manner with formal order to hold, they too, the same language to all department heads, radicals and socialists. No more than 100 lists would have entered the House.

It was so simple to tell the prefects with orders to speak the same language to civil servants:

"Either the success of my candidate, or dismissal."
and first sacrifice several of them as an example and show them that we would be firm.

Furthermore, it was necessary to train in each department and canton of committees, relying on the moderate element and conservative and not granting administrative favors than to the committee's protégés by refusing everything to the element radical, whether he was a member of parliament or a senator.

This little system, if practiced well for a year or two, would certainly change the political landscape of a department.

This is what the men of May 46th would have said to do if they had been political.

Then we would no longer be Freemasons, because We're up to our necks in it.

If you had any doubts, this document would remind you of the reality.

This is the program of Masonic action, formulated by the Lodge of Grenoble last August (1893):

Let us spread it around us, cries the author of this manifesto the festivities, the uselessness and above all the harmfulness of the dogma of all religions. And if, wanting to hasten events pro-
The clerics are trying to pass on threats to the Let's not repeat the mistakes of the past:

No, like our elders, the sans-culottes of the great Revolution, we will not leave standing, as a monument

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY | 321

of art and of any use whatsoever, cathedrals, churches, convents, etc.

Without believing we are committing sacrilege, we will bring the "iron and fire. We will crush all these nests of vermin, ceg receptacles of obscurantism. We will never find a gallows high enough to hang people from, according to a saying by Ranc. the henchmen of all the clerical scum

Alone, the flag of free thought is wide enough to sheltering under its folds lovers of freedom a few nuances to which they belong, all researchers of the verity, to whatever philosophical school they belong

We affirm that the freethinking group is the only one where, in order to enter, one does not relinquish any of one's personality its identity and its independence.

Down with religions! Long live free thought!

Is that all? Not yet. With that fine task accomplished, he
It will remain to provide French youth with an education in-integral and distinctly secular.

And, my God, this program is executed so well-as fully as possible by the current Epa power, as I showed you.

Father Jules Ferry did not think otherwise | than the Lodge of Grenoble.

And this apostle of the Protestantization of France exclaimed, at the time of the national assembly, in a Speech delivered at the Senones Town Hall:

There are three cancers devouring France: the army, the
the judiciary and the clergy.

We must not forget that Buisson, too, held the same language, as described in the preceding pages.

After all, if Catholics find that everything is
For the best, that's their business.

No, they don't have that exact idea, because iis pro~- -
they test almost as much as the Protestants.

Protesting is something Catholics don't even know how to do.
this army

338 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

- I proclaim the reign of Freemasonry, Clare the Freemason.

"I protest," cried the Catholic.

- I am driving out your religious figures and your princes.

- I protest.

- I exclude you from all jobs

– I protest.

We're gathered in the countryside, at MX's... MP Catholic; we're talking politics.

"The tax authorities seized the nuns in our town yesterday," he recounts. a guest.

– That's the Masonic program, my dear, made the MP, solemnly.

.– What scoundrels govern us, shouts a troi-sixth, when I think that my priest just had his Treatment suspended.

"Ah!" the deputy continued, "I will ask a question to the minister.

– Yes, we must protest

– I will protest. Believe me! What a filthy government! All the same, what a bunch of scoundrels, of s-fangs, of thieves.

We are in the heart of Jewry, in the heart of Freemasonry. Nonsense, right in the heart of Protestantism!

– And how do we get out of this?

A silence, during which one seems to be reflecting, then a guest :

– What shall we do tomorrow, my dear friends?

– Tomorrow, if you don't mind, gentlemen, we "We will hunt with hounds," replied the deputy! II!

In their newspapers, Catholics only make one Platonic opposition.

– Don't attack Mr. "So-and-so," they say to the director from the organ, we sometimes receive it.

And if, when he comes to visit us, he saw the If a newspaper attacks him, that would be unpleasant for us.

S0? ??

Note that this Mr. "So-and-so" also has a newspaper in which he says the worst about everything that the Catholics love and respect them.

The lowest attacks, the most hateful calls to base passions, class warfare, remind most of its columns.

If only Catholics knew how to take advantage of the elements things that are within their reach!

How many young, active, intelligent men do not-would only have to fight for this great and beautiful because, whether by temperament, ambition, or conviction.

Do you think the leaders of the Catholic party know recognize them, distinguish them, group them, launch them into before the assault on the Judeo-Masonic citadel and Protestant?

Not in the slightest. If, by chance, there are any one in their path, they make him stop in his tracks, the rats-They stunt it, they stunt it, they annihilate it!

This ultra-passive attitude of Catholics and Conservatives in general are conceived from the point of view psychological. Ultimately, they are calm, free. They are rich. They have arrived. They would have little to gain if they were in power and they probably believe that sacrifice-proud of their acquired position for the possibility of power. It's too risky for the compensation they get. would.

Look, on the contrary, at the socialists, also in the opposition.

They are in a diametrical state of mind and situation. fundamentally opposed.

And that explains their growing success.

They are poor, greedy, ambitious; they are nothing. They want to be everything. Therefore, they risk nothing by fighting. for the conquest of power.

So they fight like people who are waiting their very future depends on the outcome of the battle.

Clearly, the future belongs to the thin.

Meanwhile, we are the vanquished, a role so little
It's tempting that our troops should cross into enemy territory in groups.

I hope that the Brisson ministry, or rather the minis-
If Dupuy lives, he will stop the desertion and that one will begin, on his own behalf, a fight to the bitter end.

There is nothing like a radical ministry or a concentration, to strengthen the ties of the Catholic opposition lique.

Our friends were conciliatory towards Mr. Méline,
That is to say, they allowed themselves to be harassed.

Much better, we had reached the point where beautiful-influential conservative voters believed they obliged to appear before their respective prefect and to to seal the peace with him.

They didn't realize they were playing a game of dupes, as the elections have all too clearly demonstrated. The majority-part of the prefects were, in fact, entirely devoted to the can-radical didats.

It's not that I mercilessly blame this rapproche-Rightward movement towards Méline. I even recognize that the idea was very good.

If we had succeeded, we would have conjured it up, or at least we were delaying the hour of the revolution which, every day, | becomes more threatening.

The method was not lacking in skill.

We could succeed: that was the dream! But it was than a dream.

When we woke up we realized that we had forgotten that
The game was played with aces as allies.
cons.

But how can we hope that an iana will ever do the game of a Catholic and, with his help, will fight against Very Freemasons?

Because, you might say, the first ones were moderate, the second group of radicals, and that socialism frightened those who there, while they were walking with him.

I don't want to prolong this discussion; I'm coming
Let's get straight to the point and summarize it.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 331

What is the stated goal of Freemasonry? | Anarchist universal shit.

It contains everything.

Even if they no longer wanted to, leg Freemasons are indoctrinated, trained by their lodges and they must, willingly or by force, follow the
A plan is in place unless they resign.

If they act like that, they are nothing and we cannot to form a tacit alliance with those who are no longer with us.

I write these with the utmost impartiality.
a few lines, and also in all sincerity.

They are written without passion.

I sincerely hope that my colleagues in the Catholic press-that they will judge it thus and that they will not overwhelm me, some with the epithet of refractory, others with that of rallied.

Why these unfortunate qualifications?

Let us remove these bittersweet names of rallied and refrac-
Tatars, let's not change the beautiful name of Catholic.

Above all, it is quality that we must aim for.
tion.

In any case, the enemy advances after having jon-the number of victims, the path he has traveled, the positions that he took from us.

It is primarily through teaching without God that he is Dangerous. And look at his work:

A newspaper with little suspicion, Le Matin, gives us a This statistic is even disturbing to secularists themselves. It is a comparison between crime figures in-Fantine in 1844 and in 1891,

332 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

In 1841 In 1891

Minor suicides... 149,468

Parricide by children 4 3

Infanticide. By children. 24 SL

Vagabondage. 1094 3300

Begging. 364 1753

Homicides, assaults and injuries 2761 5101

Wolsey, <i. to to 8 to to 2 5650 15756

Customs . . . ee. yrs Wee "C8 260 183

_ Rebellion, outrages. . . +868 2562

Destruction, devastation. 418,845

Miscellaneous «6 es i 2004 5882

Total 13,593 36,484

Difference between the two totals 22,884.

So the kids of 1891 committed 22,881 crimes or more offenses than those of 1841!

Here's the summary!

That teaching without God is responsible for this the increase in juvenile crime, that's what
The following fact, which speaks for itself, is the result of this:

In France, a thousand or twelve people are imprisoned every year.
These children are in reformatories. They are children with untamed character, thieves or vicious tendencies-heavens.

Prison is the last resort, a very poor remedy indeed.
Moreover, this is what parents resort to when they are pushed to their limits,
Having tried everything, I no longer know what to do.

The Seine court was curious to see where the 1a-thousands who came to ask him to imprison their children children, had them raised.

Out of one hundred, eleven were in religious schools and eighty-nine in secular schools (4).

oo

(1) In Paris, out of a hundred children prosecuted, two are found & pain who came from a religious school.

Of one hundred children detained at La Petite Roquette, the school congre=

The public school system only provides eleven, and the secular school, eighty-seven. (Revue des Deux Mondes, January 15, p. 426).

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 333

Isn't it a sad sight? But the school Secularism produces other results.

Here are a few, chosen at random from a pile documents:

The young Alain Seillée, aged 7, and Jean Le Cras, aged 9, residing in Guisriff (Morbihan), have | caught in a quarrel while playing together. Little Seillée, after |

after being punched, he ran away to his parents' house where he was chased by his opponent who knocked him down by throwing a stone at his legs. Jean Le Cras has He then went to find a strong stick with which he he hit his comrade until he had given up the last Sigh. The former assassin who made a full confession has was placed under arrest.

Suicide of a fourteen-year-old child.

A poignant tragedy occurred at 20 rue d'Aubervilliers.
Upon returning home, his day done, Mr. Rolin found his Georges, a 14-year-old son, suffocated in the apartment.
The stove was in the middle of the room. According to the pre-initial findings made by the police commissioner of neighborhood, young Georges allegedly deliberately ended his life. What was his motive for giving in?

He was adored by his father; certainly nothing of the sort.

If we are to believe certain accounts, the young Georges, very early, would have been in despair at having been rejected by a young girl whom he loved.

Li
++

Around eight o'clock in the evening, according to the Journal du Cher of August 1898, Ms. M..., aged 27, Aubergiste, was walking along the Sens-Beaujeu road in company with the niece of her maid, Eléonore H..., aged 20, and of Ms. J..., aged 24. All three live Sancerre. At a place called Le Carroir de Marlou, they crossed four young people aged between 15 and 20. They approached. They were looking for female walkers and, without preamble, threw themselves upon Mee J..., seeking to attack her honor. The young

19"

THE

i

334 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

The woman, having managed to free herself, fled. Our ignorant characters then seized M^{re} M... and, the Throwing him to the ground, they managed to inflict upon him the most heinous violence. M^{re} H... tried to free his maid, but our three rascals, whose bestial passion was not yet satisfied, they in turn overturned her onto the ground and the young girl owed it only to her strength and resistance desperate not to succumb like her boss to violence from her attackers. This scene lasted for a while. At a certain time, the exhausted victims soon began to evacuate to snooze; the satyrs took advantage of this to leave. Returned The young women returned to Sancerre, where they They immediately made their statements to the gendarmerie. In ar- Having returned to their home, Mr. J... and Mr. H.. had to take to their beds.

Following a serious investigation opened by the gendarmerie Merie, the four young men who were responsible for have just been arrested. This criminal assault. These scoundrels who still live in Bué, at their parents' house, They were transferred Thursday evening to Sancerre prison. made full confessions; they even admitted to having attempted to abuse a fifteen-year-old shepherdess he met in the fields before tackling M^{re}* M... and J... and To Mr. H...

The young girl had started screaming very loudly, and the culprits had moved away.

Ask the village elders, they will answer you that they had never seen such things in their time, which have become classics today.

These news items are, unfortunately, indeed the kind that one can read in the newspapers every day.

Conservatives find this very unfortunate.
But they still supported Ribot. And the latter
He thanked them by giving them the law on factories.
which disrupted all the parishes. They loved Poin-an even viler square, Drumont points out, and which, son and grandson of demonstrative and zealous Catholics, has invented this subscription law intended to make disappear-to be, in a more or less extended period of time, all the orders religious.

Today, we have some who praise Jules

not

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

33%

Ferry, the fierce secularizer, and Gambetta himself-

even!...

To emphasize the role they play, it is necessary that the Freemasons get involved.

Read instead these simple comparisons which will...
will show that godless schools are breeding grounds for corruption.

of socialists.

"Neutrality is a word Meaningless. We can't to be neutral when one is not an imbecile; and, when one has an opinion, one cannot not to express it. We can.

even less so when one is tasked with teaching, because she penetrates everywhere, insinuates itself in everything, and one could not to recount a historical event without judging him, or issuing a any thought whatsoever
This opinion clearly emerges from itrelment.

That is why neutrality is a reverie... »

(Henri Maret, of the Radical Party.)

"Despite appearances" unfavorable, I hope the succession of our candidate, the ci-
I count on toyen Bailleul, I count for this purpose on young soil-data that have just come in in their homes. Because that's in the younger generation that the collectivist party finds especially members. I-this result is due to the current organization public schools.

(DELESALLE, deputy mayor)
from Lille, in a conference (Roubaix, October 19, 1896.)

The invaluable testimony of these two gentlemen, including Yun is radical and the other, a socialist, is absolutely conform of the already old word of the socialist Anselm:

Establish neutral schools and secular youth centers.
In reality, you will be multiplying the breeding grounds of socialists.

Ab! Gentlemen of the Conservative Party, you can fight against socialism on the electoral field, you. don't-
You can't do anything if you're not the school's teachers.

And today, the teachers of the secular university, supposedly neutral, these are the pro-

336 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

testators, which proves that the most valuable auxiliaries
The reformed members of socialism are the ones who have been reformed.

University is the worst solvent. Also see What results does it produce? It has gone bankrupt in every way.
his promises. The bankruptcy is admitted by Mr. Buis-
'son, this Protestant who for twenty years pursued the disastrous work of secularization. Formerly Buisson himself forming a committee in a pre-school Reservation called upon people of spirit to join this committee and religious costumes.

BANKRUPTCY IS CONFESSED by cent-dozens of OFFICIAL reports sent by inspectors primary school teachers, proclaiming that len-Moral teaching does not exist in the "KINGS, that it is no effect.

These reports, analyzed and published by Mr. Lichtenber-Ger, dean of the Protestant faculty of Paris, should to be known throughout France. We summarize them here.

NO MORAL INSTRUCTION

"Moral education does not exist in the schools in my district.
Inspector from Limoges.

"In 60% of our schools, moral education is almost zero.

Inspector from Angoulême.

NOT A DR CAPACITY AND CONVICTION

"The masters lack the ability or the conviction."
secular.

Inspectors from Poitiers, from Cosne,
from Dax, from Auxerre, from La Châtre, from Puget-Théniers.

ed
ie oe ne

'PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 337

"The teachers speak without conviction, three-quarters of them"
They ignore educational issues.

Inspector of Boussac.

WHAT IS TAUGHT INSTEAD OF CATECHISM

"We confuse morality with civility."

Inspector of Sens.

"We only teach military morality and not mo-high rumble.
Inspector of Angoulême.

"Only secondary virtues are taught, few of
Make way for the great Tertus.
Inspector of Sens.

"Moral lessons are pale imitations of Priests' sermons; they are grotesque, declamatory, banal.
Hollow, vague, awkward.

Inspector of Lons-le-Saulnier Inspector of Narbonne.

"Instruction is confused with education."

Inspector of Corbeil.

"Under the guise of moral education, we move from months spent talking about the Ministries.

Inspector of Ceret.

"We believe we teach morality by talking about the attributes
"Memoranda of the municipal councils."

Inspector of Bar-sur-Aube,

338 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

EFFECT OF SECULAR MORALITY

"My students are more unruly and mischievous, after the moral lesson as before.
Inspector of Setif.

"The children's improvement is too slow."
Inspector of Bourges.

s

~ "The children are tired and the teachers quickly become bored-your. "

Inspector of Saumur.

"Intermittent moral lessons are ineffective"

about children.
Inspector of Toul.

"The results of moral education are insignificant-

"Fiants."
Inspector of Guéret.

"Moral lessons say nothing, neither to the intellect-
"Neither in the will nor in the heart."

Inspector of Chambéry.

It is not surprising that morality is mis-known in the University; indeed, here is Mr. de Cas-Sagnac tells us what is done with it in high schools.
of the State, what is done with the students.

It's about an obscene version of Phaedrus.

After quoting the last verses of Seneca where Phaedra confesses her passion to her husband's son, M. de Cassagnac adds (July 17, 1898):

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 339

"And it is on this, on the bestial offering, that this woman made of his body, that we leave the young people.

Their last impression is of Phaedra gasping, her eye in fire, inciting Hippolytus to crime.

And we don't even say, in order to reassure them, to re-to balance, that the virtuous Hippolytus responds with indignation:

"O mighty King of Heaven, you can hear and see"
Without horror at such atrocities! For whom then are you reserving them?
"Your thunderbolts, if they rest today... etc."

All of this is removed from the version as spoiler Eroticism.

No, we offer them the provocation of incest and we don't They don't give them the energetic protest against crime, this which is at least one way of excusing him.

And this is what we do to our children, in a few bad places in the University.

We ask our correspondents in Toulouse to would you please give us the names of the bastards who have the responsibility for these obscene compositions.

We will gladly put them in the stocks of honest people."

Moreover, these Pandora's boxes contain not only-

all evils and almost all vices, but eu-
They cost taxpayers a horrendous amount.

Boys' high schools are demanding a subsidy from the State annual tion of eleven mittuations (40,963,927 francs), the Girls' high schools (2,060,000), middle schools three and a half million (3,665,784 francs) communal and We must take into account four million scholarships:
Total 20 MILLION. E

To these twenty million granted to establishments departments for an unknown number.

So we pay a fabulous price, a university, masters who are losing their youth, that is to say the France.

These impious masters, these sectarians in the pay of a power-to see Masonic, they take pleasure and consider it their duty to into feed the child anti-Catholic nonsense.

340 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

They put the harshness of a miser into it for his coins, of mastiff for its kill, calculating day by day, degree by degree, the progress of the evil they inoculate like a vi-poisoned in the blood and in the mind, if one can
So to speak, of their students.

How could it be otherwise; most of these masters are Freemasons, that is to say, enemies of God.

Listen up.

Officials at the convents of the Grand-East.

We write to the Moniteur:

I had read a certain interview published by L'Eclair du October 3rd last; but I was wondering if the figures
The information provided by the Freemason being questioned was indeed accurate.

Upon verification, they are sometimes inaccurate, but less so.

You will be able to judge this by what the person you are speaking to says. L'Eclair says of the civil servants of public education.

"Do you know," said this F.-., "that there were delegates there to the convention, fourteen teachers, four school principals?... "

I've done the math. The teachers are, in fact, in the name of:

fourteen lodges; they were delegated by two Lodges of Paris, a Lodge from Marseille, one from Toulouse, one from Havre (not that of F.-. Félix Faure), and by the Lodges unique in each country from Saint-Maur near Paris, to Agen, Baigne, (Clarente), Boulogne-sur-Mer, Châteauroux, La Réole, Saint-Geniez (Aveyron), Saint-Jean d'Angely and Tulle. But There are eight school principals, not four. They have been presented to the convention by a Lodge from Angers, one from Nantes, one from Orléans, and by the Lodges of Chte, Cognac, la Motte Bouchot (Creusot region), Sedan and Tarare.

To characterize the spirit that animates these youngest members of the Republic, I will simply note that two of them They, one in Paris, the other in the provinces, took, with a dozen FF.:., the initiative of the following wish, the urgency of which, According to them, it was obvious "on the eve of the elections". (p. 213 of the Report),

"That the bar association be invited to centralize, then to
"then make known, as widely as possible,

- ee —

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY. 3M

"to the secular world, the names and addresses of the senators and "Republican deputies, as well as public officials"
"who send their children to religious schools,
"given that the time has not only come, but
"is imperative if we want to preserve the institutions"
"liberal policies that France has adopted, to point out
- "to the wrath of universal suffrage the names of all the
"Traitors to the fatherland and the Republic."

I must say that the convent, sometimes a good opportunist, Despite his displays of principle, he did not believe he could vote these measures, which he considered impractical and even dangerous.

What the convent did not deem necessary to do in its
In our own interest, we do not hesitate to disclose it in the interest of Catholics and to amuse the spleen of the gallery. First, there is Mr. F.^o. Combes, former minister and defrocked priest who, in a Senate session on March 16 1897, committed a great crime against Mr. Méline, says La Croix, by per-to put civil servants in charge of providing education to their children by the clergy.

However, it appears from very certain notes that he had e-
to see his daughters himself at the Ursuline convent Pons, when the secular school was run by institutes trices to whom he lavished testimonies of sa-satisfaction that has generated too much discussion.

In addition, his two sons received lessons from the col-ecclesiastical council of Recouvrance, the elder, today Today, sub-prefect, as lessons from the priests! The second, André, who has since died, as a resident in-dull. He only left the day the house had to prito the services of Mr. Combes, as a doctor.

A nice line about F.-. Combes.

When he presented himself for the licensing exam in front of the Faculty of Letters in Rennes, he had already thrown his cassock with nettles.

But the faculty in Rennes was considered clerical.

What does young Combes do? He can't think of anything better.
hoping to win over the jury, rather than pulling

342 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY |

from his trunk, his ecclesiastical garment, and to put it on for the occasion.

e
* x

Gérault Richard, who requested the decommissioning of the Church of the Sacred Heart and which publicly addresses priests of crows of sinister omen, to an uncle canon in Le Mans and secretary to the bishopric. He had his nephew educated on his own account at the ecclesiastical college of Saint-Calais.
Mr. Gérault Richard, moreover, has kept the best relations with the head of this college; he takes walks with him in the streets; and this fiery anticlerical has I didn't think I should do better than to put my nephews in charge. at the college where he himself was educated.

e
ee

Jourdan, who launched such furious attacks against religious congregations, had his daughter raised at the neck-wind, and by eye please.

2
* |

Ms. Rivaud, daughter of the prefect of Lyon, (now re-called) is in Montfleury, near Grenoble, raised by Religious of the Sacred Heart of Jesus.

However, this same Rivaud was hunting down officials, placed under his orders, if they did not send their children to the secular (1).

(1) Would this Rivaud like to tell us what he was doing, in shirt, near a window, in a house on the street of the Barre in Lyon, while his henchmen continued their demonstrations festive, during the period of the National Catholic Congress of 1896? |

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 343

Girault, senator from Cher, a typical Danube peasant, whose wit is as crude as his style, has done raising his daughter with the Sisters of Saint-Maur in Montluçon. çon (Allier).

However, he gives speeches at all funerals. civilians of his district, and, in August 1898, he issued a renewed wish from Pochon, requesting that the functions public events were forbidden to school students congregants.

e
#8

Senator Joseph Fabre, who violently challenges Paris, on the clerical plots, conceals its tools maconical in his department.

And to ensure his re-election, he wrested from the bishop of Verdun, a letter, the text of which is as follows, and which the guard seals, responding to Mr. Fabre who questioned him about The clerical machinations, read, on April 2, 1897, from the tribune of the Senate:

Dear Sir, I have just read with interest your circular...
I am very grateful and thank you for sharing this information with me.
congratulates you on the ideas and feelings she expresses...

"I offer my sincerest wishes for your success.
Joan of Arc is interested in it as much as I am, and even more than I am.
I ask him to whisper something in the ear of the Senate delegates toriaux (Noise and hilarity. – Ironical applause on a large number of benches).

Mr. Minister of Justice. – This letter from the bishop from Verdun, Mr. Joseph Fabre was keen to bring it to the conbirth of his constituents. He asked the Journal to Aveyron would be willing to publish it, and other days– They reproduced it. Now, we were at the very hour of the Senatorial elections (More laughter. Mr. Joseph Fabre)

344 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

(utters a few words which are lost in the noise.)

Mr. Gard: of the Seals. – Gentlemen, yes, pushing further our investigations, and searching for the facts that the newspapers highlighted at the time of the elections senatorial minutes of January 1894, we consult the press of the Aveyron department, we see there that Mr. Vidal, the parish priest of Espalion, attended from the platform, next to from Mr. Fabre, at a conference given by him (Exclamations and laughter) and that the priest of Marcillac, having come attend a meeting of senatorial delegates provoked by Mr. Joseph Fabre, he stood up and greeted in warm terms the presence of this priest at the meeting (Ironical exclamations on the left).

I completely understand that Mr. Fabre forgot these previous (Approving laughter from the same benches).

Is this one complete?

Deputy F.: Hemon was raised free of charge by the members of the religious order in his department.

ee

In Le Havre, a Mr. Viard, Radical Socialist councilor and a staunch secularist, had his daughter raised among the Do-miniatures.

* @

Brother Clemenceau, said Mr. Boissandré in La Libre Parole, in 1890, led the wife of one of his friends, to undergo a serious and painful operation there, at the nuns of Hope, Louis-Le- passage Bishops, in Nantes. On this occasion, Mr. Clemenceau he showed himself to be full of courteous attentions and delicacy-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 345

He showed great consideration towards the sisters. One day, he would have he said to one of them, Sister Irene:

- "Oh! How deserving you are! Yes, undoubtedly,"
You expect no rewards here below. You are "Good girls!"

s o +

The Fr.*. and Huguenot of Freycinet who voted all the anti-Catholic laws, he advised his friend Lasserre to go to Lourdes to obtain a cure for an illness-die of eyes.

Here is Freycinet's letter:

My dear friend,

Your few lines pleased me, but also
'I've already said, I'm eager to see your writing.' These Last few days, on my way back from Caunterets, I passed by Lourdes (near Tarbes); I visited the famous grotto there and I learned such wonderful things about healing.
produced by its waters, mainly for diseases
I'm very serious about encouraging you to try it. If I was a Catholic, a believer, like you, and if I were sick, I wouldn't hesitate to take advantage of this opportunity. If it's true that Some patients were suddenly cured; you can hope for more.
to increase the number; and if that's not true, what do you Are there risks in trying it? I should add that I have a slight interest. personal to this experiment. If it succeeded, what an important factwhich I need to record! I would be in the presence of a miraculous event, or at least an event of which the
The witness would be above suspicion.

Goodbye, dear friend, |
DE FREYCINET.

Négrepelisse, September 14, 1892.

P.S. - It seems that it is not necessary to go to Lourdes even to take this water, and that one can get rid of it Have it sent. You just have to ask the priest of He'll send some to you from Lourdes.

3146 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

It is probably necessary to amplify certain devotions, which I I couldn't tell you; but the priest of Lourdes will inform you-gnera. Pric-le also asked to send you a small brochure to a franc, from the vicar general of Tarbes, who recounts the midthe most observed raculous ones.

Lasserre hesitated; Freycinet gave him an appointment.
He presses his friend and finally convinces him. And under the dictation of Lasserre, Freycinet wrote to the priest of Lourdes to have miraculous water.

Then he said to his friend:

"My dear Lasserre, since you are attempting directly To obtain a miracle, you must put yourself in the right conditions required, otherwise the experiment would be pointless. So do the | Necessary prayers, confess; place your soul in a proper condition; performs the devotions that religion
I command you. This, you understand, is of paramount necessity.
mordiale (4). » |

Moreover, Freycinet made a retreat to Solesmes in the goal of converting to Catholicism. He became friends with Father Dom Guéranger.

Are these freethinkers, these persecuted people, illogical?
Those who practice the Catholic religion? They want to believe, but they don't want others to believe; they want the Children of the people should not be raised by religious figures.
but their own children have the privilege of education congregationalist.

Let's move on to another one.

Like many of his peers, politicians who naked, Mr. Trouillot, former student of the Jesuit Fathers of Dôle was initially a good, pious young man.
tender, and which did not foreshadow its fall into the Freemasonry. Today, a poem from-

(1) Witnesses to my healing; Lassenne, page 355.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 347

this little gentleman who, though not of high rank-lée, however, is still better than the various lucu-
Here are the pronouncements and speeches of this temporary minister.

THE SONG OF THE LITTLE SPROUTER

I am the shy sparrow
A newborn baby whom everyone blesses:
I hardly dare, weak and without a guide,
Leaning over the edge of my nest,
The month of May saw me blossom:

I don't know anyone yet.
That the surroundings of the cradle;

But I live here happily and peacefully.®
Holy Virgin, in this asylum Protect the sparrow well.

Never a bitter pain,

Do not come to sadden me in this place,

In the morning, upon waking, my mother,
He teaches me how to pray to God.
I listen to the wind blowing across the plain
– The wind that rocks the great oak Whose shadow surrounds my cradle,
I'm learning to praise you yourself.
Holy Virgin, how he loves you!
Love the little sparrow.

Coming soon near your home
I will go and whisper my song;
I'll go rock myself at any hour
Around your house.
The zephyr's breath intoxicates me,
And I still cannot follow him
In the sky, so vast and so beautiful.
Incidentally, he invites me to flee.
Holy Virgin, please hurry!
To grow the wing of the sparrow.

a Rese es pu de

318 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

But I was told that in life,
Deprived of care and relatives,

That sweet tomorrow that I envy,
It would bring me much torment.
I was told that in his career
Many days filled with misery
They were waiting for the little bird.

Ah! If I ever lose heart,
Holy Virgin, during the storm,
Don't forget the sparrow.

Never again her innocent pen

Do not fall into the clutches of the wicked

Never again the piercing flame

It does not stop its flight and its song;

That under your kind patronage

He was happy throughout the trip.

Like in the first days of the cradle |

If, however, he must die one day,

Find a dwelling place in heaven

For your little songbird.

This picture is missing Mr. Rochefort, the insulter of our priests and of our church.

Let's hasten to nail it there. Here's a piece of verse that Rochefort, a student at the Lycée Saint-Louis, read to Bishop Sibour, successor to Bishop Affre, during a visit by the prelate to the high school thaw, after the June days:

It's a day of celebration at school.

It is also a day of celebration in heaven,

A day of peace, a day of love, a day of perfect grace.

Happy friends, savor its honey.

A holy Prelate invites you there.

Come and receive from his hand

Pure, unleavened wheat,

The bread of justice and life.

Once a revered friend,

Every year at this same table,

He offered with his charitable hand

The God he had consecrated.

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 3&9

He is no more; he has made the final sacrifice.

He has exhausted the cup to the very dregs.

For the vanquished man who fell laughing,

His eyes animated by fierce pride,

Sad yet victorious, he died praying.
Love deep in the heart, forgiveness on the lips.

Brothers, whom suffering has made seditious,
He went, for your sake, to soften the heart of a stern God,
Christ also went up to Calvary
In order to open the heavens to us.

Read the holy parable
Written in the New Testament,
You will see the symbol again.

From his glorious devotion:
Towards a death, alas! all too certain
To walk without fear and without hatred
Without listening to anything but his heart;

To his sheep that was stolen
To sacrifice even one's life,
Isn't that the good shepherd?

His grave is closed upon his great deed.
He dies, and the virtue he had so loved
He gives the rank he is leaving a worthy successor

He understands, like him, his sacred ministry
And heaven, through its voice, comes to teach the earth
Clemency is the sister of charity.

To the child of misfortune whom justice exiles
His faith finds a father again, and his heart a refuge.
He pities the guilty, and he knows their misfortunes.

Come, come to him without fear, sincere souls,
You will find bread for all kinds of misery.
Tears for all the pain.

H. pe ROCHEFORT.

He also wrote poems addressed to the Duke of Montpensier, from whom he received, as a reward, a gate a gold pencil, and he composed, in honor of Mary, the the following sonnet which we find in Floral Games of the year 1856:

/ in

350 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

SONNET TO THE VIRGIN

Regina celi.

You who dared not strike the first anathema,

You who were born in the shadows and brought us into the world,
More queenly by your heart than by your diadem,

Mother with innocence and Virgin with love;

I implore you up there as I love you down here,
For you have earned your place in the Heavenly abode,
For the blood of your son was your divine baptism
And you cried enough to reign in your turn.

You are now close to the God of light:
The bowed human race invokes you first;
Your scepter is made of rays, your crown of flowers.

Everything bows down to your name, everything is purified by your flame,
Everything sings to you, Marie... yet what a woman
Even at the cost of your glory, you would have braved your pain!

By Monsur Henni pe Rocuerorr, from Paris (sic).

Jaurès' Little Republic tells us about the marriage of Rochefort in these terms:

"Mr. Rochefort, who, in religious matters, appears to be as uncompromising as the title of his journal, we will remind her of a certain ceremony that took place at the convent of the Augustinian Nuns in Versailles, in 1872, and including Liberté and Le Figaro of November 7 and 8 of the year did they report?

Here are the words of Gaston Vassy, editor at Le Figaro, recounted this ceremony, the purpose of which was the marriage of a religious man, a fierce critic of the weaknesses of others. At his request, transmitted by Mr. Jolly, his lawyer, to the Ministry of Justice, Mr. Rochefort had been brought back from the Île de Ré in Versailles. We'll let the reporter speak for himself:

Gus, I enter five minutes past Rochefort, in the large courtyard of the convent.

—

has

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 351

"Rochefort is being led to the parlor; I see him pass by. He is extraordinarily pale, almost yellow.

"After five minutes, they come to get him for the purpose of leading him to the chapel where HE CONFESSES. THE CONFESSION DOES NOT ONLY LASTS TEN MINUTES. Rochefort emerges even paler and returns to the visiting room where his witnesses, Messrs. E. Blum, F. Victor Hugo, J. Destrem and A. Jolly.

"At nine o'clock, Mr. Rameau, the mayor of Versailles, arrives, accompanied by an employee from the marriage office and of Mr. Foligny, representative of the Minister of the Interior. Immediately after between Mr. Abbot Barbet, vicar of Saint-Louis, Father Bourgeois, who just now confessed" Rogerot, Dr. Barigny, prison physician of Versailles, Dr. Godefroy, physician to the convent, and the four witnesses of the spouses."

"Mr. Rameau performs the civil marriage, then the priest..." Barbet gives the couple the nuptial blessing. The ATTITUDE OF STUDY OF ROCHEFORT IS MOST SUITABLE.

"Throughout the religious ceremony, the four witnesses
"had remained outside the chapel, disdaining to have
"Nothing in common with the one called God."

Jaurès is the ultimate. He has gone through everything.
the colors of the political rainbow, but this free pen-
The sister had her children baptized with water from the Day-Dan, as was the Count of Chambord.

Saint Jerome Parish Church.

~ -

CERTIFICATE Toulouse (Haute-Garonne).

OF
BAPTISM

Extract from the register of baptismal records.

In the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety, on the second of the month of March, was baptized by us, the undersigned, Pradal, Parish Priest:

v
352 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Eugénie-Marie-Madeleine Jaurès, born on September 19 1889, in Paris, daughter of Mr. Jean-Auguste Jaurès, deputy of Tarn;

And of Dame Marie-Louise-Antoinette Bois, residing Place Saint-Pantaléon, 20, canonically married, residents of this parish.

Godfather, Mr. Jean-Eugène Bois, sub-prefect of Prades, dio-Bishopric of Perpignan;

Godmother, Dame Marie-Adélaïde Jaurès, née Barbaja, of the Saint-Exupère parish.

Those who signed: Pradal, Curé, Jean Jaurès, father of the enfant. – Marie Bois, Eugène Bois, Adélaïde Jaurès.

"This certificate establishes, contrary to the assertions and the reluctance of Mr. Jaurès and his entourage, not only that the daughter of the former MP from Albi was baptized, but that she received this sacrament in the presence of his father, the fierce A freethinking socialist and atheist, married "canonically." The former left-center player has, in fact, signed the next to that of Father Pradal, at the bottom of this pious document.

As for the story of the Jordan River water, it is just as accurate, however improbable and grotesque it may have seemed to "First glance," said the Intransigent.

Mr. Pradal is still the parish priest of Saint-Jérôme, and He formally declares that the water from the Jordan was provided to him. denied by the former deputy from Albi regarding the baptism of the young Jaurès.

Mr. Pradal even adds this curious detail: the water supplied by Mr. Jaurès, not being consecrated, it was necessary to mix it with the water in the church, ordinarily used for ceremonies baptismal fonts.

I could cite many other types of free thinkers. It teems with them; I stop there, being already far from the role of academics in Freemasonry, reported by Lightning and the Universal Monitor,

I'll come back to that.

Among the delegates to the last convention of the Grand In the East, there were 22 professors of various calibers.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 353

First, three professors of medicine: I'll.. F.*. de Lanessan, associate professor at the Faculty of Medicine of Paris, the one who governed Indochina after F.. Cons- tans, before F.-. Doumer, the one who, in March 1880, raising a Masonic toast to the crushing of the infamous, he added: "The infamous thing is not clericalism, it is "God" (Monde magonique, April 1880); then a certain F.-. Beauvisage, associate professor at the faculty | of Medicine in Lyon, deputy mayor; finally a

F.:. Louveau, honorary professor at the school of medicine-cinema in Rennes. |

These doctors are accompanied by a pharmacy technician.
Faculty of Sciences of Toulouse, F.-. Rouquié.

Next come thirteen high school teachers, including two agrégés (the FF.:. Dequaire-Grobel and Grescent, these celestial Masonic traditions so poorly received by the "world layperson" in the last legislative elections), several tenured professors, a few lecturers and a gymnastics instructor who boldly calls himself "pro-teacher at the high school in Vesoul.

Three delegates are teachers from communal colleges.
naux.

I also found a teacher at the "Collège Chaptal" that the Public Education directory places in a more modest, in the group of "ad- schoolteachers "joints" of the said establishment, and a "professor at the School "normal" of Dijon.

Among these academics, you know F.-. De-Quaire-Grobel, the Demosthenes of the Great East, laudator of the famous invocation to "Holy Freemasonry"; You also know F.:. Grescent, supporting, at the Convent of 1896, the vow "that the State imposes on civil and military officials are obligated to do raising their children in secular schools"; but while simultaneously professing this opportunistic theory, that it would be dangerous for Freemasonry to display too openly his impiety, for example by demanding from its members the promise never to participate

20°

3354 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Neither they, nor their children, attend any religious ceremony.

"Let's do it," said Brother Dequaire-Gro-handsome, then president of the convent, – and let's not talk about it not. "

Also opportunistic was F.:. Guillemot, who... seigne, as a lecturer, teaches literature and the grammar for students of |' "modern education" at the high school in Limoges. Above all, you have to be "skillful".

in the drafting of electoral programs, he said in essence at the 1897 convent, and not to display sincere statements that could jeopardize everything

(p. 232).

And he cited an example. In 1887, he and his friends – including another delegate present at the session, F.-. Lafond, German teacher at the college municipal council of Gaillac, – supported in Toulouse the can-Legislative dictatorship of F. Calvinhac: "What have we "asked Calvinhac? To post on all the walls of "Haute-Garonne: A profession of democratic faith"

"A socialist, as she was at heart? Absolutely"
"No! That wasn't even discussed."

This is how the University is structured!

If you would like other names, it would be easy for me to you can cite some examples.

At the high school in Bourges (Cher), Professor Vaillandé, Having been driven out of Reims, he wrote books in which he denies the existence of God.

In Avignon (Vaucluse), the Academy Inspector,
Mr. Marchand is a Protestant.

In Béziers (Hérault), Mr. Neuvielle, primary school inspector, is Protestant.

In Tarn-et-Garonne, in Montauban, the council
The school's administration board comprises four members | Protestants: Messrs. Marty, Kost, Bruston and Poujade; at girls' high school, three: Messrs. Raspide, Marty and Walnitz;
at the teacher training college, two: Messrs. Monod and Nicolas.

Finally, the agricultural director, Mr. Dubreuil, is protesting.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 355

Let me stop this nomenclature here. I I intend to remain far below the truth. However-
If you absolutely insist, I will throw in another a few names on paper.

Mr. Baudrillard, a school inspector in Paris, is married to a Protestant woman from Asnières-les-Bourges. The Huguenots, Jost, Kergomard, Malmende, Lichtenberger are school inspectors.

In the Haute-Loire region, the Puy high school contains several Protestant and Jewish professors whom I will not name now. Moreover, Protestant schoolteachers are named there. breux.

In the Lot region, in Cahors, Mr. André, primary school inspector, is Protestant.

In Caen (Calvados), Messrs. Tessier and Biville, professors at the University, they are Huguenots, so it is said; that the record of Mr. Zévort, from the Caen academy. At the Malherbe high school, We find Mr. Ménegoz, a drawing teacher.

In the Ardennes, the university "boxes" are filled with enemies of the Catholic religion.

"The school inspector is a notorious Freemason," known and listed as such.

"The headmaster is also one."

"The philosophy professor, in front of his students, a public profession of faith in impiety, rationalism and of materialism.

"His physique is in harmony with Darwin's theories" that he professes.

"The rhetoric professor is Jewish."

"The high school teacher is Jewish and affiliated with Lodges.

"A professor of literature is a fervent admirer-author of Buddhism.

"Another professor is Jewish."

"All the guards, without exception, are putting on a show." of their anti-religious sentiments and joke, on occasion-sion, the students who have the weakness to believe in God."

Mr. Chaudey is an academic inspector in the Vosges.

It is in the faculties that we must primarily look for the Protestants. I'll take one at random, the one from Mont-Pellier, because I want to avoid publishing my documents in a single book.

The Rector of the University was formerly a Protestant; He died in 1890; but he was replaced by Mr. Bizos. married to a Protestant, which is much worse.

At the medical school, the Protestant deans... have been succeeding one another for 15 years.

Since 1897, Protestant professors: Bertin, Car-Rieu, Mairet, Bucamp and their allies wage war on The fight against Catholics has taken hold this year. a particular acuity.

At law school, I discovered Mr. Charles Gide, on leave in Lausanne; Chausse; Brouilhet, etc.

Protestants, Messrs. Bonnet, son of a French pastor and professor in the Faculty of Arts. It is claimed that at the At the last conference on Dreyfus, Jaurès came down at his home.

The Huguenot gentlemen of Rouville and Sabatier are pro-science teachers. There is also Mr. de Coenink who has, It is said that this is horrifying to his fellow believers! L...

We find two Protestants at the pharmacy school: Messrs. X.... recently director, and Planchon.

The Fairy Garden itself is populated by protes-so much! !!!

If I were to venture into another department, I I would make the same observation, namely that teaching | The university is in the hands of the Protestants.

In the Hautes-Pyrénées, for example.

Mr. Ripet, school inspector (sectarian to all degrees) is Protestant.

Huguenot, Mr. Allengry, professor of philosophy at Tarbes high school.

Protestant, Ms. Floutier, director of the normal school girls from Tarbes.

The Belfort territory has 3 or 4 Protestant schoolteachers so much.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 357

In Châlons-sur-Marne, let us mention Mr. Payot, inspector of the academy, Catholic, who married a Protestant. 11 arrives from the Ardèche where he was apparently giving talks in the temples, in favor of the Dreyfus- syndicate Sardinian!

And still others whose names escape me, without to speak of a crowd of Huguenot schoolteachers who... millent in this department – Ardèche (1).

I've already given you the names of the biggest players. Protestants of the University of Paris; should we therefore be in a state of Are there others?

Protestant, Mr. Paul Berger, clinical professor surgical, member of the Academy of Medicine, 16, rue of Burgundy;

Protestant, Mr. Philippe de Clermont, preteen to the school of advanced studies, 8, boulevard Saint-Michel;

Protestant, Mr. Jacques Geotfroy Flach, professor at Collège de France, 37, rue de Berlin;

Protestant, Mr. Louis-Auguste Himly, dean of the faculty of letters, 23, avenue de l'Observatoire;

Protestants, finally, Messrs. Guillaume Jost, general inspector-General of Public Instruction, 9, rue du Val-de-Grace; – Adrien Krebs, teacher at the Alsatian school; Flammand, primary school inspector formerly in Belfort, then in the Montélimar region where he held the ministry of Pasteur.

Truly, I am pleased to be abusing your ins- so many, and I will end here a list which would be by too long, adding the Protestants Monod and Reclus, associate professors at the medical school; Scheurer-Kestner, member of the observatory council of physical astronomy in Meudon; Monod, president of the historical and philological sciences section (higher studies).

At the Faculty of Arts, we notice a Buisson, bza)

(i) See page 359.

398 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

a Litchenberger, a Hilmy and a Wadington.

At the Lycée Henri IV, we should mention Mr. Chantavoine, pro-rhetoric teacher, who must be Protestant.

The deputy head of the higher education office is Mr. Blondel; at the first desk, we find Mr. Soulès. Randomly and haphazardly, deliberately, thrown from anger, this handful of senior university officials Protestant leaders: Messrs. Maurice Vernes; L. Mariller, religious education teachers; Sabatier, professor-Christian literature specialist; Planchon, director of The Paris School of Pharmacy; Vaucher, Allier, Berger, Ehrardt, professors at the University of Paris; Ch. Friedel, professor at the Faculty of Sciences; Jean Reville and Albert Reville, professors at the École des Hautes Études studies; Paul Passy, lecturer at the school of higher studies; Menegoz and Bonet-Maury, members of the University council; Lods, tutor at the Arago school; Monod, professor at the Lycée Montaigne; l Directory of Public education for 1898 indicates a Steeg, pro- . philosophy course at the Alsatian school on the street d'Assas. He is still a Huguenot, as are Messrs. Th. Beck and Braeunig, director and deputy director of this very Protestant school.

This time, I don't want to mention any names, although... I have forgotten one of my plans, and not the least of them; for it is... We should report all Calvinist academics and this would be endless. My investigation would lead me into departments where I haven't yet shown the place occupied by our good Protestants in the university and I would go so far as to say that Mr. Lods is a secretary academic inspector in Haute-Marne; Mr. Stapffer, German teacher at the Brest high school: Mr. Reclus, professor of agriculture at the Li- Normal School Moges; Mr. Lods – yet another Lods – professor of Philosophy and history at the Semur college; M' Monod, English teacher at the teacher training college women of Carcassonne; Mr. Guitteau, teacher at the school of medicine in Poitiers; Mr. Bonnet, professor at the school of the Poitiers law, not to mention Mr. Frédéric Monod, in charge of the medical service at the Pau high school where another Monod is a pastor; Messrs. Bonnaric, an academic inspector from Gard (a converted Catholic); Jeannin, a private inspector Mayor of Gard; Darboux, headmaster at the Nîmes high school; Durand, director of the teacher training college Nîmes; Ms. Graverol, headmistress of the junior college The daughters of Nîmes are Protestants, five in total. out of six department heads; the headmaster of the Alais high school is Protestant, either in the two high schools of the Gard, two Protestant headmasters. At the Nîmes high school, 7 teachers Protestants: MM. Dalzel, Gal, Martinenche; Mazauric, Paut, Pierre, Salmon; a Jew, Crémieux. In addition, the two ladies in charge of the children's class, Ms. Vabre and Mazauric are Protestants; moreover, the two doctors, the headmaster's supervisors and the principal's secretary They are Huguenots.

In Le Vigan, secular schoolteachers are almost all Protestants: let us mention those of Aulas, Breau, Mars, Avèze, etc., etc.

The headmistress of the girls' school in Amiens is pro- . testating, as well as Mr. Vidil, primary school inspector at Privas; Gaston Giraud principal of Privas college; the headmaster of the girls' high school in Tournon.

To conclude this already lengthy list, the Protestant invasion of the University, I will... tear off the last veil that could still obscure the truth in the eyes of a certain number of unbelievers who They hide their heads so as not to see the danger.

It is to Paris that I ask the reader to return to... templer the spectacle of the Protestant and Jewish University as Stéeg, Buisson and Pécaut had dreamed for to carry out, in the field of education, the reform that failed in the 16th century in the religious sphere.

And what a collection of anti-Catholic academics!

At the secondary education directorate, we receive

360 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Mr. Roehn, head of the 2nd bureau; Mr. Wissemans, deputy head, both were Protestants.

Calvinist, Mr. Uri, deputy chief of the 3rd office

Mr. Schmit, head of the 2nd bureau at the primary education department.

Protestant, Mr. Ducrocq, of the litigation committee professor at the Faculty of Law in Paris.

Members of the Higher Council for Public Education church, the Protestants G. Perrot, member of the institute, professor at the Faculty of Arts, director of the school Normale Supérieure, 45 rue d'Ulm; Rabier, director of secondary education; Berthelot, professor at Collège de France, Permanent Secretary of the Academy of science, honorary inspector general of education senior member, section president and director at the School for Advanced Studies, honorary professor at the Paris School of Pharmacy, delegate of Collège de France, 3 rue Mazarine; Darboux, Dean of the Faculty of Sciences of the University of Paris, delegate Faculties of Science, 36 rue Gay-Lussac; Jullian, professor at the Faculty of Arts of the University of Bordeaux, delegate of the faculties of the a 5, rue Corneille.

It should be noted that these excellent can combine for the most part high-level university positions,

They are part of the permanent section of the council. superior of public education, the Protestant Darboux, Perrot and Rabier, already named.

= Members of the advisory committee on public education public, first section, higher education, the Guenot Ducrocq and the Jew Lyon Caen, protest to the Faculty of Law.

Members of the science committee of the same committee, the Calvinists Berthelot, Darboux, Perrot, Rabier and Tannery, the latter, a lecturer at the school normal upper.

Members of the letters commission are also included

of this committee and Protestants, Messrs. Himly, dean of the faculty of letters of Paris, Perrot and Rabier.

In the 2nd section, secondary education, we should mention the Protestants Bossert, Inspector General of Languages living, Roehn, Perrot, Rabier, and the Jew Manuel, Inspector General of Secondary Education (Order of letters).

Third section, primary education, M[™] Ker-Gomard, Protestant. Among the members of the committee of historical and scientific works, including, among others, Messrs. Monod and Berger, the Huguenots Perrot and Buisson, Ducroq, already mentioned; Frédéric Passy also Calvinist, member of the Institute, and the Jew S. Reinach, member of the Institute, assistant curator of the museum national antiquities of Saint-Germain-en-Laye; in-late Schlumberger, member of the Institut.

Let's continue the review of the same committee and write:
MM: Berthelot, Darboux, Himly and the Jew from Lyon-Caen.

To the Scientific Travel and Missions Committee--
In the realm of fiction and literature, we still find the Protestant.
Perrot.

Among the Protestants who make up the commission consultative of the various school or educational libraries
In terms of teaching methods, we note Messrs. Darboux, Buisson, Ms Kergomard, MM. Dreyfus-Brisac, Berthelot, Edouard Petit, a teacher at the Janson de Sailly high school, and who, it seems-
He is Jewish.

At the Collège de France, Messrs. Maurice Lévy and Berthelot, Ribot, Franck, Albert Reville, Protestants or Jews.

At the Bureau of Longitudes, in the Palace of the Institute, Mr. Stéphan; at the Paris Observatory, the Jew Lawy, the protestators Fraissinet, secretary; Darboux, member of the Observatory council; Bossert, astronomer.

Messrs. Liard and Darboux are part of the office
Central meteorological station, University Street, 176.

At the Free School of Political Science, rue Saint-Guillaume, 27: Mr. Keechlin. André Lebon, Dietz, Cart are Protestant; MM. Lévy, Funck-Brentano, Lévy-Bruhl are Jewish.

Specialized elite schools. Higher education

Messrs. Darboux; Tannery (mathematics); Berthelot (physical and chemical sciences), are Protestants, not to mention of Mr. Lippmann, a Jew.

MM. Gabriel Monod, and, it is said, M. Maspero (sciences historical and philological) are disciples of Calvin, while Mr. Henri Weil, from the same branch of teaching, is Jewish.

We'll never finish this. So, I'm going to omit some. Voluntarily.

Just think where that would lead us if I needed to to tell you that Mr. G, Monod, Guieyette, Giry, Paul Passy, Reville (historical and philological sciences) are Protestants, like Mr. Halévy, Oppert, Sylvain Levi, Israel Levi, etc., are Jewish.

At the École Normale Supérieure, whose director is As a Protestant, I find Messrs. Tannery, already named, G. Monod, whom one encounters everywhere, and Messrs. Andler, German teacher, Al. Beljame, teacher of English language.

Mr. Emile Cahen, a Jew, is a member of the French school from Athens, just as Mr. Coppinger is an inspector general for modern languages, and, naturally, Calvinist.

At the Faculty of Medicine, it is said that Messrs. Fara-Professor of Anatomy, and Paul Berger, professor from the surgical clinic, are Protestants.

There is also a Weil, assistant preparator and Jewish, and other cities elsewhere.

At the Sorbonne, the dean of the faculty of sciences, I have As mentioned above, he is Protestant; he has as his assessor a Protestant, Mr. Friedel.

Finally, a professor of physical mechanics and experimental-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 363

Rhimental, MG Koenigs is Protestant, as is
Mr. Troost, chemistry professor.

In the Faculty of Arts, in addition to Messrs. Lichtenberger, Himly, Perrot and Buisson, it is appropriate to add
Mr. Boutroux, professor of modern philosophy, Denis, Beljame, Lange, Andler, Seignabos, etc., etc.

It's very curious how the same names keep coming up.
Often. These good Protestants are everywhere, in all places.
the higher ranks, while still teaching.

A commission? They quickly slip in.

A council, a committee?

They cautiously slip in; so that by unmasking, one might say, as in the distributions price selections: Mr. So-and-so, named 3 times, 4 times, 5 times!

Lycée Louis-le-Grand

Protestant, Mr. Riemann, professor of mathematics-elementary ticks; Jews, Messrs. Lévy Brulh, professor of philosophy; Ammann and Glotz, professors of history history; Cahen and Salomon, professors of rhetoric.

Lycée Henri IV

We are asked to report Messrs. Lafont and Cart, without prejudice to Messrs. Cottler and Braun, of the Charles-Magne, or Mr. Dhombre, a Protestant, has just been appointed headmaster; Messrs. Cahen, Wahl and Jacob, Jewish professors, from the Condorcet high school, with Messrs. Ascher, Lévy-Wogue professor of rhetoric, Jewish, from the Saint-Louis high school, ot
Mr. Sirvent, a Protestant, teaches mathematics,
Mr. Bloch, a Jew, from the Janson de Sailly high school.

In the same high school, Messrs. Lang and Hartmann, professors
He speaks German and English.

At the Lycée Montaigne, we find Mr. Gibb, protest-

so much, English teacher.

At the Lycée Carnot, both Jewish and Protestant students included Messrs. Bloch, Weil, LW Cart,

364: PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

In Vanves, at the Michelet high school, there is the Jewish Bauer, the General supervisor, Galabert, Protestant.

Sainte-Barbe High School is the receptacle of a multitude of Jewish professors: Messrs. Samuel (elementary mathematics) (silences); Priest, Crehange, Rosenthal, etc., etc., not to mention the Protestants.

And now, I firmly refuse to prolong
This list. It is, I believe, more than sufficient. to show what the influence of Protestantism is in education and the danger that threatens us.
In education, Protestant teachers are a an incalculable number of times more numerous than the pro-Catholic teachers, with regard to the representative population surrounded by each of these religions.

Such is the government's academic neutrality supposedly neutral, supposedly without a state religion.

It would be cruel to insist further.

Everywhere, once again, we encounter in our administrations administrations of the nests of Huguenots, Jews or Freemasons masons, but especially within the University.

And the secular state, that is to say the Protestant state, continues its "Hypocritical war in the Catholic school which he swore to annihilate-shot.

The most militant Freemasons, the Huguenots
The most sectarian would like the public functions were closed to the students of the religious orders; for they do not hide the fact that a large number of children escape succumb to their influence.

May their desire become reality tomorrow, and it is certain that... certain that they will have deprived Pensei- of precious forces free movement and to Catholics. I believe they could-could achieve this.

Despite having a lot, Protestants believe,
Moreover, they have nothing until they have everything.

And as long as Catholics have the right to open, with their resources, free schools, educational institutions where Catholic families will be able to remove their children from Protestant influence, the

PROTESTANTS AND UNIVERSITY 365

The pastors of the consistory will not declare themselves satisfied.

Their official organ, the Signal, conveys this to the public roads. The Dijon district council having expressed the wish that all candidates for schools and government functions have fulfilled at least the last two school years in the establishments. The Signal, from the University, joins in this renewed wish. Pochon and Cocula:

However, he writes, it is appropriate to revisit what has been done in 1851 and to restrict the share then given to freedom of education, for the sole reason that this freedom has especially benefited the incorrigible opponents of freedom. Politics and religion? We are not Jacobin enough. to go that far...

The wish of the Dijon council will not moreover, even to the point of suppressing freedom of education or to close the colleges and institutions run by the religious orders religious affiliations. He only asks the State not to recruit its officials than among the candidates who have equipped themselves of a different intellectual and political standard than that of Dominicans, Marists, Eudists, or Jesuits. Reduced to these. In terms of proportions, the wish doesn't seem so anti-liberal. And if the If Father Didon or Father Olivier decides to protest, we will perhaps be to be justified in saying to him: You asked for it, Georges Dandin.

Is this a successful enough example of Protestant cockroachism? They, these good apostles, who dare to touch freedom? would allow themselves to suspect their intentions and to con- to merge with the Jacobins?

Freedom, don't we know how they practiced it? everywhere they were masters? They don't think about to eradicate by fire and sword the faith of their adversaries doctrines, they merely prevent the exercise of liberties that bother them and to reduce to Pia palesauce the competitors who resist them.

This is how Mr. Charles Dupuy expressed himself in the Gazette de France, and he's right.

366 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

*
* +

[It seems that this year there was a watchword Masonic to propose to the general councils the vote on any Pochon wish.

In 1895, the sectarians of the Isère General Council:

Chenavaz, Chion-Ducollet, Achard, Claret, Second,
Saint-Romme, Guillet, Stéphane Jay, Desmalles, Chris-Tome, Bovier-Lapierre, deputy, and Reymond, voted a wish along the same lines.

In 1898, many general councils resumed
this infamous wish: that of the Jura, the Lot, the Cher, etc.

In the Cher region, the debate has taken on real significance.
because of the individuals who opposed the vow:
Mr. Camille Rousseau, who has acquired in this department-
He attained a high position through his brilliant intelligence.
his great qualities, the soundness of his judgment and the sa-gesse of his advice; Mr. the Marquis de Vogüé, President from the powerful French farmers' society, which could not choose a more authoritative president, since our eminent compatriot can be counted among the
the most gifted men of our time, having found a way to be a farmer, chemist, artist, diplomat, historian, and having returned to his province of Berry's services, which she could never forget, such as to all of France, moreover, when, having arrived ambassador to Constantinople, the day after our misfortunes, he recovers, through his personal worth and his noble attitude, our prestige, then so strongly shaken.

With a high level of formality, the arguments
the most striking and likely to convince the most In their ignorance, they fought against the arbitrary wish presented by Senator Girault. And yet they were unable to have the reason for a meeting of sectarians and fools whose
The bed was made in advance.

"You referred to your fourth committee, & Mr. Rousseau said, the following motion submitted by Mr. Girault and several of his colleagues:

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 367

Mr. Girault's wish.

"The undersigned general councillors, considering that in bringing free institutions up to standard, and through the influence they possess, often above those of the State;

Considering that the congregational element which has taken hold of these institutions, directs the youth who follow them in a path clearly hostile to republican institutions and to the interests of France;

Considering that in exams, it often happens that The students in these schools are scandalously informed about the competitions, which gives them an unfair advantage not to mention more about the students in State Schools.

For these reasons: they express the wish that the so-called "law" Falloux's law should be repealed and no ranks or promotions should be granted. jobs in the civil and military administrations of the state than to students from the University schools.

Signed: Girault; Béguin; Pajot; Lesage; Cougny; Ménagé; Eugène Berland; Martinet; Collin; Bonnet; Arnoux, »

Speech by Mr. Camille Rousseau.

= :

"Your committee, by a vote of four to three, pro- the position of not adopting this wish.

One of the considerations in this resolution states that it happens It is often said that students are scandalously informed about The competitions had deeply moved your committee. She there had seen an allusion to a recent incident; however, it follows from an official document that the emotion that occurred had no reason to exist, as the investigation found.

In a letter from the Minister of War dated June 15, 1898, addressed to Count de Mun, President of the Board of Directors of Sainte-Geneviève School, Mr. The Minister, after explaining the reasons that led him to cancel- "Let's start with the composition," he concludes.

... "Without pointing out certain contradictions, which are, moreover, few in number." important, which occurred in this third en-quest, it resulted that on April 20th, that is to say a month and a half before the compositions and a month before the choice of one of them, this professor had indicated to his students as possible topic dictated in class, (the text exists and rules out thus all kinds of doubt) the very composition which was given on June 1st.

368 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

There was therefore an obvious coincidence, a simple effect of ha-guard, and none of the establishments can be suspected.

I'm pleased to see that.

It was also this same subject, addressed on April 20th, that was indicated May 28th to the student from the Tours high school.

"In any case, Mr. Member of Parliament, and in order to put Above all commentary, the sincerity of the trials, I have maintained the decision I made, because it seemed to me in-it is unnecessary to prove to the youth who are destined for our army that the military authority takes into very serious consideration denounce the slightest suspicion as soon as it has the appearance of a foundation; because it seemed essential to me to put a an end to the supremely unpleasant rumors, which under the name Examination Pipes accredit the most each year gross errors; because I wanted the first step done in the career by our future officers did not leave in their minds, not even the slightest trace of doubt.

"Please accept, Mr. Member of Parliament, etc."

Sign :

"General Bizcor."

"After this preliminary observation which removes all pre-text to the proposal and any value to one of its considerations rants, jentre dans la discussion du fonds.

I must note that the wish constitutes the most serious at-a shade of freedom that is most precious, most important: the freedom of conscience, that of the father of the family. He seeks to to establish a state doctrine and whoever refuses to bow to it under the new yoke, his thought or his conscience would be deprived of some of his rights as a citizen.

No one could be a magistrate or civil servant if he/she did not bow to this state doctrine.

This motion is not new: when this Pochon wish
When it was presented for the first time, it didn't make much of an impact.
figure in the world.

I raised it in the most progressive republican press contradictions, even from Mr. Ranc and others who declared-would say that this project went against the prevailing ideas of the day.

This motion did not attempt to gain traction in the par-

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 369

absolutely, where it has never been seriously discussed. None the politician did not want to take responsibility for affirming a similar inequality of citizens before the law.

The wish expressed by Mr. Girault and his colleagues makes matters even worse the Pochon proposal, by proposing, after half a century, the suppression of this, the flight of 1850.

This definitively eliminates the freedom of the brand-Secondarily, the freedom of primary education. It would force the closure of all private schools; he at-would even hold a large number of positions public school teachers who only teach with the patents they obtained in accordance with the provisions of this law.

If I then examine its financial consequences, it is necessary-would need to double the public education budget again for to create, and this cannot be done in a day, the number of teachers, the equipment of colleges, teacher training colleges, schools of all levels to receive students expelled from teaching free movement.

The consequence would be the immediate disorganization of French education.

I conclude, gentlemen, by pointing out that your this proposal goes against the new movement that is stirring youth.

It moves towards the ideas of tolerance and appeasement;
It tends to let everyone think and believe what they want.
provided that he works to usefully serve his country and to ac-
to grow the heritage of science and intellectual culture

France. "

After this speech by Mr. Rousseau, which produced a Having made a profound impression on the audience, Mr. Girault took the Words to eat the priest. He mixed Father Didon and the Bazar de la Charité, with its incoherent and grotesque sentences questions and affirmed the preponderance of the State.

Mr. de Vogüé replied to him in these terms:

Speech by Mr. de Vogué.

"I am joining the Fourth Commission for you" request to reject the wish. It contains an in-legal for a category of honorable citizens and for 21°

370 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

the army chiefs. The documents that the rapporteur
The results she has just produced prove that she is slanderous.

You won't want to be associated with it.

If we differ in opinion and doctrine, there is one point on which we have never differed until now: it is the Loyalty in discussion means respecting the army, a school of loyalty and honor.

You will not associate yourself with the words by which The Honourable Mr. Girault tried to discredit the military authorities despite the results of an official investigation cielle.

I hope you will not associate yourself any further with the system-the argument that Mr. Girault made before you. He accuses the law school of 1850 for having set back France by inaugurating an era of freedom; it is he, if he will allow me to say so to him to say, which goes back more than a century: he wants to take us back to regime of the doctrine of the State, of the absolute and infallible State.

"I am the state," said Louis XIV; he had at least to justify this excessive formula, besides the difference in time, the prestige of undisputed greatness; the doctrine of which he claimed the monopoly was at least a doctrine positive, unchanging, founded on the sanctity of traditions and the brilliance of the services.

By claiming this sovereign right, in the name of
Who are you claiming?

To whom do you want to give this absolute and exclusive power?

Where does the State reside in our democracy under sovereignty?
universal suffrage?

However, we need to agree on this point.

The State is represented today by the mo- custodians Mented by authority, summoned to power by whims of a changing majority.

Yesterday me, today you, tomorrow someone else.

Would you be willing to tell me what has become of the State doctrine?
amidst these possible and probable changes?

Will it have to comply with these changes? The mono-
The pole you dream of for her, will it have to bend to these fluctuations?
tuations, and the formidable weapon you request for her,
will it have to be handled successively by the parties?
more opposed?

The mind refuses to follow the consequences of this incoinheritance and from this confusion,

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 371

The only system applicable to the current state of our society,
That's freedom.

We are not asking for it only for ourselves,
We are asking for it for everyone. That's why we
We are men of freedom.

Mr. Girault had just given himself the same title: I
He refuses; frankness is necessary in these situations; he does not would be able to simultaneously claim Jacobin doctrines on State omnipotence and the claim of freedom.

The test of the liberal spirit is the exercise of power;
I dare say that we crossed it victoriously.

When my friends were in power, they did not, in terms of

of education and conscience, infringed upon no law freedom; they respected consciences; they maintained all the institutions that reassure them remain intact; they have not This public education budget has not been touched, which Mr. Girault would like to make an instrument of oppression and violence.

Mr. Girault seeks power with ulterior motives. different. In his hands, the budget that all contributors buables feed must exclusively serve the interests of his party.

Whether you reserve the functions for yourself, i.e., for us, We won't dispute them; but you want to shut us down The army: we protest vigorously.

Military rank is not a function, it is an occasion- sion to serve and defend his country at the rank assigned by merit and services rendered; it is a right and a duty.

And you would like to make it the reward for a submissive- sion to your arbitrary will! You would have it be re- served to those who will bow under your stamp; you would like to divide the army into two categories, those who are worthy to command and those who, according to you, are unworthy |

Will common sense and patriotism of the country be denied? It's up to you. to follow. The national army, as Mr. Girault defined it, does not know these divisions.

All factions of the country are represented and united there.

The blood they shed together cemented them strongly; we let us not claim for any of them a monopoly on patriotism. stamina and courage; they all did their duty and will do so again.

372 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

Again: but we demand this for all, without exception. of origin or education, legality of treatment, legality rights and equal respect. (Applause)".

While they were at it, these libertarians could have to demand that Catholics be forbidden from doing part of the House.

What wonderful days for check-takers!

But, to be consistent throughout, the Girault wish should also exclude religious students from State charges: taxes, etc...

Because, ultimately, if Catholics are not citizens Like everyone else, why make them pay taxes?

These proposals are more serious than we think. Perhaps; they are not an isolated case; they are leaving from above and are part of the dechristianization plan.

And there, we clearly see the hand of the Protestants.

Before the Revolution, in fact, they were excluded from public functions as heretics.

Since they are the masters today, they want to They do the same to Catholics. They are taking revenge for the long centuries of humiliations they have suffered through their own fault (1).

(1) At the last congress in Rennes, which is mentioned in The Truth of the October 7, 1898, the League of Education, founded by the minister F.*. Bourgeois. attacked, in particular, the freedom of teaching-ment; indeed, the following resolution was adopted there:

"The congress calls upon the propaganda activities of the societies" united to counter the serious attacks on the union moral and social development of France through secondary education congregationalist and brings to the government's attention the dan-to recruit its civil servants from among young people who do not "They do not leave state institutions."

This resolution, adopted unanimously, is the anti-clerical program. that is the program of Freemasonry, and of the protest-Tantism.

The exclusion in question is not limited to education. Secondary education is also being extended to primary education. so that a student from a religious school could not even no longer able to aspire to any job as a road worker. And these ideas- These projects received the approval of the representative of the Ministry of Public Instruction.

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 373

Burdeau once made the same proposal in the Chamber. tion that the General Council of Cher.

This sectarian was a Protestant, we are told; in any case
In this case, he was at least a Freemason.

He was also a Panamanian with a strong Re.

The deposition of Mr. Fontane, given under the oath of office...
ment and read at the Panama Commission of Inquiry, door this significant information, which we are reporting because of the anticlerical character, said La Croix of May 1, 1897.

Arton was tasked with securing Mr. Maret's cooperation.
to submit the report.

Approached by Arton, Mr. Maret accepted, but he refused to write the report, which he said he was unable to do to write, not being sufficiently familiar with these questions of numbers.

Arton then went to Mr. Fontanes's house and informed him of the situation.
of the situation.

Mr. Fontanes then addressed Burdeau and asked him to write the report.

Mr. Burdeau agreed. That same night, he wrote the report, and the
The next day, he gave it to Fontanes. Fontanes then gave it to Arton.
who immediately went to hand it over to Marct. In exchange,
Mr. Burdeau received seventy-five thousand francs.

Another Protestant, Edgar Monteil (1), also a

"The League," said Mr. Bayet, director of primary education, mayor is, to some extent, an assembly somewhat not very revolutionary. But I want to assure you that the administration Tration is not afraid of her, because she feels a friend in her and,
What's more, an ally. I won't argue the point of that too much.
because of the administration. What I can say is that, for
For an administrator, it's a pleasure to be in the middle friends who are freer in their thoughts and speech, who can-wind touches everything, which they do not fail to do, and which have the right, In short, to say out loud what we think quietly and that we cannot express!

"I was even thinking, just now, that if I had the right to
"If I were to speak, I might be even more revolutionary than you."

Let's not forget that Mr. Bayet is a Protestant.

(4) Edgar Monteil, who signs his newspapers as Jean de la | cynical Freemason, wrote in 1893 (L'Administration of the Republic; bookstore of the Nouvelle Revue, p. 208).

Accepting students from the Fathers and Brothers into the administrations, allowing them to have ranks in the army this is giving the enemy of modern society the strength which He needs it.

Seine, born in Vire in 1845, was in 1870 the secretary of the commune nard freemason Charles Desleschuze.

A Paris city councillor, he was not re-elected in 1887, and As a candidate for parliament in Isère, he was given a long and a large jacket.

At that moment, F. Floquet, his close friend, came to his aid and Yenvoya was sent to the Creuse region as prefect (1888). To think he flourished there! would be an exaggeration; he did not have the sympathy of the reactionaries. priests and the bishop; the Minister of the Interior, and even 'President Carnot, warned him amicably and encouraged him in its interest to "come to terms with the clergy, to be accommodating", to get along well with rich people; but as a "true republican-table", incorruptible like Robespierre, he draped himself in "his ideas" and refused.

What! Him, the author of a Civics Instruction Manual, a masterpiece of atheism and blasphemy; he, who saved the Republic, – like the geese of the Capitol of old.... in denouncing the clerical peril in his pornographic novel: The story of an ignorant brother, which earned him three years of Prison? Him? Dealing with the reactionaries? Never!

We never stopped shouting, he said, "Down with the clerics!" And the clerics, according to the F.*, are all those who are not radicals.

The rest of the story is that he was dismissed from his position. of Prefect of Creuse by F.. Constans, like the former Prefect of Haute-Marne, F.'. Joliet, was dismissed by the F.. Dupuy because he "had refused to support Bourlon de "Rouvre, the reactionary deputy against the Republican candidate."

The Brothers rewarded him by naming him Venerable of the Clemente's friendship lodge, "this rock in the middle of the ocean" as the Roc Langrois.

For four years, he held the first gavel; batteries of alle-mourning drums, mourning drums, honor drums, single and triple drums Batteries; such was the occupation of our master gunner. This did not She wasn't the only one; when you're venerable, you have to... Stir it a little.

Already in 1888, before striking the mallet in an outfit of

j PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 375

While Minister Trouillot and Senator Girault imagine taking up Cocula's vows against the freedom of education, their colleague, Mr. Bourgeois, believes that the programs are not yet sufficient loaded, and that new materials need to be introduced into it.

This is how Mr. Bourgeois addressed the rectors

He fervently desired a purge, a Clemente friendship. services, election preparation, and above all, expulsion religious orders. The purging of services means separation. "students of the Jesuits, the Dominicans, Stanislas, etc. which populate our administrations." For the elections, he wants us to "develop a common electoral program for all masonry.

After that, you say that Freemasonry doesn't do politics. The expulsion of religious orders is its main goal.

In April 1895, while the unjust law was being discussed In addition to his subscriptions, he waged a fierce campaign in the Lanterne newspaper. and disgusting towards the sisters. "The Congregation of Women is the "more terrible, more ferocious, more ignoble of all," he said.

I suppose that to speak like that, Monteil had not consulted the sick in our hospitals, the soldiers in our fields battle and our colonies.

Our sisters' wimples bother him, too bad for him! The jar- Perhaps he prefers the company of the Freemason sisters.

It's not enough to steal from the congregations, to insult them, He demands at all costs the expulsion of the Jesuits, that is to say, of all religious people as if they were not free citizens of the The French Republic, like its taboos.

On January 14, 1896, at the lodge of the Inseparables of Progress, the 45 at the Clemente friendship lodge, the first Wednesday, February 5th at the Same lodge, same formula: Expulsion of the Jesuits.

Liberty, Equality, Fraternity! Where are you? I find you in Head of all the documents and papers on Mac! .. but in the end I I almost always read: tyranny and injustice.

There is a lot of truth in that word, isn't there?
F.:. Bourgueil at the convent of 1891:

"Are we Freemasons libertarians? No, we
"We are sectarians..."

As a reward for his past sacrifices and his zeal
Mac'. Edgar Monteil was appointed by F.-. Léon Bourgeois
"General Controller of External Services at the Ministry of the Interior" while he was Patriarch Macon Emeritus of the Universal Freemasonry.

Therefore, as a French civil servant, he was required to provide

+N Ne ee ee

316 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

a circular to regulate the study of geology in high schools and colleges in France.

It's not that geological science wasn't already present in university programs, but it was limited to the study of necessary and practical things and not approach-
It wasn't melting sufficiently, it seems, the questions essential to the formation of the world and races.

It was necessary to introduce the students to philosophical problems.
phiques that the question of transformism raises beings and instill in them the doctrines of Buckner and Darwin on the origin of species and the evolution of races, if we believe Mr. Ch. Dupuy.

Le Matin , which brought us this news, described this revolutionary innovation in the University.

the good of France and to monitor the actions of Italy:
and as a Freemason representing Lemni in France, to obey blindly following an Italian and passing on his orders to the French.
It seems that the F.. reconcile the two things very well.

For Mr. Barthou, the Minister of the Interior, this seemed difficult; He also changed Edgar Monteil to appoint him director of the 42nd penitentiary division in Rennes.

Immediately, great anger erupted at the Masonic convention of September 1896. Monteil, "who does not allow him to be appointed to a position without having obtained his formal consent," he refuses.

To have invented the republic, to have given to his fellow citizens to eat Marianne's white bread instead of the leftovers of a king or emperor; to be Venerable, one of the Ten Members of the Most Serene College of Emeritus Masons of Freemasonry Universal and to see oneself thus dismissed, suspended... it is to be discovered to be enraged at being a great man.

The Freemasons wanted to console him: they bombarded him, in the last September's convention, one of the 33 of the Supreme Council of the Grand Orient order while waiting for something even better.

He is already now one of the most militant Freemasons of France, a Luciferian cardinal of Satan, like Lemmi, is the Pope; with that we'll go far.

The Republic he wants can only be a republic
Masonic, a socialist republic.

It is of this Republic above all that one can say with the F.°. Garibaldi: "Socialism, communism, republicanism are synonymous with nymes.

Let us add that Monteil has just been reappointed prefect of the Creuse by the minister Brisson,

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 317

He did not, moreover, conceal the goal that was being pursued and, under the pretext of geographical studies, what kind of enlightenment we want to introduce in high schools and colleges.

Here is the new program as summarized by
The morning:

In fifth or fourth grade (modern or classical),
The students will study the ongoing changes in the soil, the story of the torrent, the river, the mountain, the glacier. They will be told the story of the walks along the coasts at the sea, in volcanic countries. We will use the following for this purpose: drawings and photographs, sometimes projected using oxyhydrogen light.

In the second and third years, teachers will deal with the formation of soil, primary and secondary terrains, tertiary and quaternary; they will talk to the students about the animals evils, whose breed is now extinct, of the discoveries Cuvier's greens and finally the appearance of man on the planet. .

In rhetoric and philosophy, the students will be concerned of pure paleontology. Their work will focus on levo- the evolution of races over time, on the transformism of beings, in short, on the doctrines of Darwin.

Le Matin anticipated the objections and protests that will raise, on the part of families, openness, in the secondary schools, a chair of materialism and atheism.

Darwin confines himself to what he calls the study of po- representation of life's phenomena and does not claim to re- to search for the original origins of mental faculties living beings, no more than the origin of life itself- same; but his doctrine of vital competition and of Natural selection leads to the negation of principles. of a supernatural nature.

As the commentator on the circular admitted M. Bourgeois, "the history of the transformation of beings It's not meant to be seated, in the minds of young people students, religious beliefs."

We can be convinced that this innovation has no other

378 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

but to finish uprooting what may remain of Spiritualist sentiments and religious beliefs in the brains and minds of the schoolchildren delivered at the University.

It is believed that materialism has not yet sufficiently lowered character and corrupted minds; they want, by a teaching that is both theoretical and practical, given According to the systems of the materialist school, banish the idea religious and to eradicate all feeling of a creative divinity trice of beings.

It is essential that new generations not be able to

to evade and avoid the education one wants to impose on them, on the doctrines whose im-Pregnancy: Hens' materialism in the university
OBLIGATORY.

The entire program can be summarized in this formula;
the announced innovations and reforms have no other character and other purpose.

To fill it, the educators of the Judeo- rabbitry Protestant Masonic, formed by the Buisson and Pé-Caut, they're here! They'll continue, emphasizing their dirty work.
The task, already begun, with implacable absolutism which characterizes these sectarians.

What a despicable race, this race of academics, mar-science books for a year, pedants at 3000 francs who They spend their lives teaching error, corrupting hearts.
to corrupt souls, and therefore the whole of society.

I know of no scourge comparable to that one.

They are the ones who prepare the new generations.
which molds them into this petty, moody, tyrannical spirit-nic, sectarian, academic, in a word, for the purpose to eliminate God, religion, the basis of all society.

Laws were enacted against anarchists. Those who Those who launch bombs are merely instruments, that results; they are merely the arm that acts. The educatorsatheist youth leaders, beings of social malevolence, are at the forefront of it.

When the arm fails, the head is punished. These are the

PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY 319

academics that these exceptional laws should have reach.

They are the primary cause of the evil; the true enemies-put an end to social order. Almost all of them, moreover, are Jewish.
Freemasons or Protestants (1). Very few are the sincere and practicing Catholics in our high schools and State institutions.

The reason is quite simple. They have no head start.
ment.

And in the University, it is still commonly said:

"If you are Jewish, a Freemason, or a Protestant, you
"You're sure to arrive."

You must be thinking, then, what a bunch of free-thinking pen-Sisters meet there!

And this state of mind is manifested from top to bottom of the pedagogical scale, as we have demonstrated in citing the names of the Huguenot professors.

(4) It is not even Zola himself who, in the Figaro of January 17, 1887, trailed academics and Protestants with Infinite contempt.

"If the pedagogical spirit I spoke of in my study on
The students of the École Normale Supérieure are a danger to our French genius, which is n Logic and clarity, he is a more harmful, more formidable mind.
table again, the Protestant spirit which, at this hour, strives to to invade everything: our literature, our press, our politics.

This is not just a cotcria.

That is the enemy.

After three centuries, Protestantism has become a milestone, a block fallen across the road of progress.

Unchanging Catholicism has its reason for being, Protestantism like all intermediate formulas will remain crushed between the dogmas and laws that he sought to reconcile.

And what distress, what a society of pedants and hypocrites!
dress if he triumphed! You have to live a few months in a country Protestant, in Switzerland for example, to see what level the Reform is being passed over the heads of a people...

We die, in this atmosphere of perpetual penitence, in this pre- - tense free examination which inevitably leads to the negation of the human freedom.

That's the enemy, do you hear? It's our republic, above all.
which is threatened by a Protestant invasion.

380 PROTESTANTS AND THE UNIVERSITY

We also don't understand that parents Catholics have their sons educated there. What am I saying?
Catholics! These parents are not Catholic, because If they were, they would have a completely different concern for education.
cation and the future of those dear to them (4).

We have Catholic schools. And it shouldn't not having a single good family to send his children in state high schools and schools.

We would like our bishops to make a question of it.
tion of conscience; for ultimately, it is about the advent the future of France, the salvation of souls and of society.

France will live or die by its schools.

A Catholic's duty is to promote development support for Catholic schools and to fight against all its forces, by all means, universal education sitaire.

(1) Read on this subject the very vibrant discourse of Christian faith, and sound logic pronounced at the school's prize distribution Free of the Sacred Heart in Issoudun (Indre) by Canon d'Haranguier de Quincerot, Dean of the Chapter of Bourges, August 1, 1898, published by Tardy-Pigelet, Bourges, under the Title: The Christian school facing the conscience of leaders family, and from which we gladly extract the following passage;

Of masters, we only say what everyone knows. There is one.
Certainly, and many among them deserve it in every respect, esteem, confidence, recognition through their loyalty, integrity of their lives, the security of their knowledge; but alongside that, how many who both through their teaching and through their lives themselves, againstsay our most fundamental and cherished beliefs.
Freethinkers, unbelievers, Jews, Protestants, materialists, Positivists, etc... are found side by side, giving this one:
history teaching, that one: the teaching of sciences, this other: the teaching of literature, this other: the philosophical and moral principles,

"How can poor children receiving daily..."
Will these disparate and contradictory teachings ever stop?
to a symbol, to a belief that is proposed to them by a priest reduced to the role of a professor whose doctrine is at any moment and in any form called into question or failure, of a religion teacher in the service of those to whom he "Please use it?"

No truce until he's gone. Let's tear him away from everything.
His students. War, war on secularism!

To ashes, to ashes the University. May nothing remain.
not a single stone standing of these palaces where they distill de-then for a hundred years, drop by drop, the poison that carries the-mentally, but surely death throughout the body social!

And academics, let them be subjected to harsh punishments-tions; that they be subjected to harsh labor; that they
The pens, kept on leashes two by two; that they not have no contact with other men, because of leprosy the morality that covers them is highly contagious for the Company.

And when they have breathed their last, let us gives them a mass grave from which people turn away-Nera, horrified, upon reading this epitaph:

"They got away doing evil."

CHAPTER VIII

Americanism

Anglo-American enthusiasm. – The Latin races. – The Depopulation. –Disarmament. –Historical war Pan-American. – Anglo-Saxon threats. – The Father Hecker, – William II in Palestine. – The mouuniversal Protestant movement. – The nunsseignantes. – The Protestant universe.

This is the danger that threatens the Latin races that I I want to show in this chapter. They are threatened by disappear through the Anglo-Saxon element, that is to say at profit from Protestantism.

When I have established this truth, it will be concluded that a a vast movement is taking place in people's minds, they are explaining themselves

There will be many mysteries, and we will understand this enthusiasm.

in our country, for anything English or American.

We are being invaded by English words, our fashions are English, our salons are modelled on the English style;

It's chic to get your hair whitened in London.

In his speech to Stanislas M. de 7 HER ne
He didn't express himself any other way.

"We will," he said, "look outside for customs, for institutions, which clash with our character, we recommend a obscure and pretentious literature, a nuanced philosophy hopeless and devoid of hope, a music without melody and without rhythm; heavy and bland food,

AMERICANISM 383

'Add to that a concept of art, where the idea of charm is systematically banned and which, under the pretext of synthesis, even frees itself from the observation of forms real; add to this, in addition to the physical title, a number of new games calves where brutality reigns and you will have roughly the catalogue of what many French people offer to a an overly complacent imitation; all that remains is to dream of a climate change that would give us a grey nature and without sun; and this dream some have not been afraid of to formulate it, almost daring to hurl anathema at the gene- the many advantages of a territory where the vine thrived so well before the importation of some unknown virus from overseas.

Our youth only plays tennis, polo, and...
knows that the garden party, sports, only swoon in front of a piece by Wagner, this music with fluttering flon, indigestible like sauerkraut or ham Mainz.

And as if that weren't enough, a part of the Catholic aristocracy were married to German Jewish women mendes, here is the other part of the nobility married American Protestants!

In the past, marriage was only between Catholics; it pa-
It is true that today money has no religion; other Finally, abroad, people spoke our language; our influence manifested itself in multiple forms: po-political, literary, commercial, and also through this politeness.
exquisite 17th-century which made the court of Versailles
the European model to which France set the tone,

These were all outward signs of the preponderant-French, Catholic, and Latin in the world. Because,

We must not forget: at the bottom of all the issues that are stirring up nations and lead, that ethnic influences, influences of races.

The preponderance of the Latin race has greatly weakened, It is, if not in decline, at least in decline.

In the 16th century, Austria, France, and Spain ca--
The Catholics formed three rich and formidable powers

384 AMERICANISM

bles. Italy played a minor role; but it is a fact that Note: it has never been so powerful, or of less than she has ever played a bigger role, than since that it had allied itself with the Protestant states, up to until it disintegrates completely, as does Austria. She, threatened in her inner life by the elements more heterogeneous and more dissolving.

Poland no longer exists.

Only the Protestant states are experiencing full prosperity.
rity. :

Germany was formed from our misfortunes; England the earth is becoming more enterprising every day: its em--
The worst is immense.

As for America, we have just seen it in action.
in the Spanish-American War.

These three nations, it would be childish to deny, are extremely formidable.

And through the regular passage of years, without disruption of no kind, France, the only Catholic nation that still holds a prominent position in the world, is called inevitably reduced to its simplest expression.
for one major cause: depopulation.

Here is the comparative table of births by power-- sessions. | |

To establish the calculation, we used an average of a thousand legitimate couples.

Based on this average, he was born:

In Germany... - 210 children
In Scotland... its... "269"

In Belgium... + e + « . 261
In Italy. . . e + + . eæ 251
In England. e «+ . . + o 250
In Austria è . . 200
In Sweden .-. . + « e © + 240
In Switzerland . . . + + + o 236
_ In France + . « . 463

EVENT

Here is the current state of our direct population-in parallel with England.

AMERICANISM 383

Thus, it is accepted that, on both sides, the population increases per hundred people from 1811 to 1880 and we cons-tate qu'en

In France In England
: 1811 » e © oe 5 25
1821 » eoo è at 112 133
1831 » last of to 120 152
1841 » D 6! aie e 126 165
4851 » > + + oo 132 475
1861 » this weekend S 135 185
4870 » se + + 139 197
1880 » Er 142 212

In 1895, the number of deaths in our country increased of 17,000 on that of births.

This is where we stand: it's a race that's disappearing.

It will be objected that Catholic Austria and Italy-register a large number of births each year.
that Russia, an ally of France, is growing every day in number in large proportions.

So be it; but Austria and Italy, once again, are in the hands of the Protestant states.

As for Russia, it belongs to the Slavic race, which is neither Catholic nor Protestant. And if the alliance that she contracted with us is sincere, the empire of the Tsars will be able to play, in future events, a balanced role . a rating that suits him.

Today, the Emperor of Russia, Nicholas II, invites Europe to universal peace, through disarmament by-ticl.

The idea is certainly very generous; but we don't I don't really see how we'll achieve that result.

In my opinion, what will come out of this event is the war.

The idea of disarmament belongs specifically to Guillaume IT, who, on the surface, seems to want to enjoy the situation acquired by Germany.

He suggested it to Nicholas II, the only monarch who could ins-to gain enough confidence in Europe to make it happen.

22

386 AMERICANISM

in serious consideration, so that, essentially, it is Guillaume IT, who is convening Europe for a conference of Peace is what leads the world.

The generous-hearted Emperor of Russia allowed himself to be circumcised agreed upon by the Kaiser.

And the Slavic balance scale which until now had inclined towards Catholic France, inclined towards-today on the side of Protestant Germany.

This role has always been his in history and pre-weight will be found in the race struggles of the side where the Slavic element will incline.

It seems to us that, under these conditions, it is a bad-I am grateful for the service our ally provides.
`Moreover, it is utopian to want peace of the world.

Peace will never be maintained as long as there is _differences of religion, that is to say, of races.

And even if they disappeared, only one man could-might perhaps maintain peace, provided that he
The arbiter would be: the Pope.

Without this solution, wars will be inevitable;
They will always exist; one could even say that they are part of the order of things created by God.

Peoples who have reached the height of their prosperity, de-they falter and harden in vice, until the day when a lesson from Providence reminds them of their duty by a catastrophe, an unfortunate war that sti-mule and raise them by re-soaking them, for their greater well, in adversity.

Partial disarmament and peacekeeping...
This therefore seems quite problematic.

all the more so since this disarmament, this peace, will not... would not be possible without entailing some kind of sacrifices for certain nations are interested.

Has France lost all hope for its pro-Lost Vines?

If not, and she is willing to accept, what advantage would that have?
Will she withdraw from Nicholas II's proposal?

AMERICANISM 387

You will answer me: peace. Very well, but a pro-
The dispossessed owner is only at peace when the dispossession-
The bishop returned his property to him.

If so, it's still the prospect of war and the
The proposed peace becomes an illusion.

That's the gist of it.

The idea of the Emperor of Russia, if it is crowned success, however, will have this immense advantage that the Future wars will be less terrible, less deadly triers due to the very decrease in the number of fighters.

Because it would be childish to delude oneself
We will always have wars.

And Wilhelm II's secret aim was not peace. He dream, it is believed, of a powerful military Germany and of to recreate Charlemagne's empire on his own head.

If each year he increases his regiments and his army—
This is not without purpose (4). It is the sole cause Armed peace; Protestant Prussia, we want Protestantism, according to some, is the origin of militarism which ruins the people.

This is the spirit of free inquiry; does it still need to be repeated?
ter, which, breaking religious unity, ended up breaking political unity and by unleashing the revolution (2).

men

(i) The creation of 43 new battalions is planned in Germany=
Magne for next autumn.

(2) The political revolution of 1789, wrote Mr. Joseph Bon in Truth, corresponds exactly to the religious revolution of the 16th century, so that we are witnessing this disconcerting such a contradiction, of a people who armed themselves to repel religious reform, and who, without knowing for certain what he is doing, without understanding the self-contradiction, without knowing in Queique brings to light the genealogy of the ideas he acclaims and will serve, arms itself, after two centuries, to defend and propagate the reform policy, inspired by the same principle of free inquiry.

The French Revolution was essentially Protestant; it is merely the political adaptation of Protestantism and, it is the perhaps the best reason, the clearest explanation of the an intimate struggle by which one tears oneself apart, is eaten away, and becomes anemic,

»

388 AMERICANISM

However, in order to establish itself, the revolution had to employ the force. And so, as I already published in the Fapul—
The sion of the Jews, revolutionary France saw the rise of against her, and not without reason, the coalition powers.

And faced with this coalition, she had to increase the number of her soldiers, so that she alone had more that each nation considered individually.

For over a hundred years this country has remained Catholic through individual faith. often very lively and prone to sudden awakenings by the here-dité, family memories, domestic traditions, but unconsciously absorbed in his political theories and in sort public law by Protestantism, inferior form, expression incomplete Christianity, a vague formula that does not hold up against the effort of the French mind, passionate about logic, and which of increasingly restricted, insignificant and confused, eventually ends up being annu-to herself, by resolving into official atheism.

It is therefore in France that the political consequences of the Reformation: it is through France that the political revolution spread throughout the world, became international and, following a singular, but fatal destiny, ended with the advent of a European regime that diminished clouded, at the same time, the temporal force of the Catholicism, French power and guarantees of order, of justice, liberty, which gave the people Christian civilization yours.

There are three dates that stand out, so to speak, above the Modern times: 1530, 1789, 1871, the Augsburg Confession, the Declaration of Human Rights, the Treaty of Frankfurt The Augsburg Confession is the text, the original theme, of which the Declaration of the Rights of Man and the Treaty of Frankfurt, not They are merely translations and adaptations. It's a vicious cycle. historical.

Luther begins his revolt with a nasty dispute over casual expenses. indulgences: this, said Leo X, is merely a fit of jealousy "Fraternal envy"; then the quarrel rises above this The primary pretext, in the face of religious reform, was the opposition of free examination of the principle of authority,

So, the idea is set in motion, the movement is initiated, The machine is turning: the doctrine of free inquiry comes first of the purely religious order within the philosophical order: it is Descartes' methodical doubt, this insurrection of the thought against the intimate authority of evidence, the divine right of common sense, against the light that shines for every man coming into

That

AMERICANISM 389

These women, in turn, lined up other men to don't fall behind.

The events of 1870, precipitated by Bismarck in the goal of dismembering France, which he knew was not ready, increased the number of soldiers even further.

Protestantism, therefore, gave us militarism; it has cost Europe over the past thirty years, according to calculations this world: then, when the old Christian philosophy is sufficiently ruined, when one has done a psychology and a metaphysics that are, in a way, secular, separate from theology the doctrine of free inquiry is transposed from the philosophical order physics in political theory: Rousseau applies to society the same method that Descartes had applied to man: as Descartes had doubted philosophical legitimacy In affirming his being, Rousseau doubts the legitimacy existence of society, and the doctrine of free inquiry becomes the Social contract. From that moment on, she is pushed to her limits. theoretical consequences, ready to enter into practice, to pro- to manage events: the social contract will be summarized in the Declaration of Human Rights, serving as a program for Jacobinism, a perpetual topic of discussion at the Convention.

Thus, Luther's free inquiry gives rise to Descartes's. which gives rise to Rousseau's, which gives rise to the Revolution French; religious free inquiry becomes free inquiry politics, the theoretical sharing of authority, the division of sovereignty among all citizens: but then, as Anarchy would, in fact, be the consequence of such a regime, the The necessities of existence limit its extreme development. and inevitably we arrive at a tyrannical reaction, at the procla- the invention of a monstrous reason of state that puts the guillotine in The executioner's permanence and fatigue. The doctrine of free inquiry The first part of its evolution ended in 1795, and it appears very similar to Paris, in its Jacobin form, to what it had been in Geneva, in its Calvinist form, nobody resembling Calvin killing Michael Servetus more than Robes- stone that killed Danton.

Lutheran Germany provided the first element, the pre- The first idea set in motion the first destructive force... tion; but it is France that has practically implemented this idea, absorbed it, penetrated it, believed it was nourished by it, and was poisoned; it is France, with a clearer mind, more passionate- logically speaking, with a more vivid, more united, more formed passion as nition, thereby more suitable for rapid communication

Mr. Théry, FORTY-FIVE BILLION, just in budgets of the war; a decrease in productivity of four billions per year, that is, in thirty years, ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY BILLION, and economic devastation of all kinds without comp- to kill a great number of men, even in Complete peace!

This is, for Europe, the legacy of Luther and Calvin.

Today, Guillaume, who dreams of being the Pope of Protestants are terrified at the thought that millions men could, as soon as a word had been spoken- He declared, to slaughter each other on a battlefield. He wants He accepts war, but he wants it to be less cruel.

intellectual dispositions, predisposed to major movements of opinion nion, which turned this destructive force against itself, so that politically, socially – if we disregard questions of individual conscience – one could say that Luther caused far more harm to France than to Germany. Magne.

And it is not even rash to argue that Luther did truly the political greatness of Germany, not through virtue specific to his doctrine, but, on the contrary, because the conse- Practical consequences of this doctrine were occurring in France, while circumstances, social status, character and the the nature of the people's minds prevented them from occurring in Germany.

The Revolution took place in France, then spread to Europe, and what remains of this Revolution, what it leaves to peoples, which it leaves especially to Germany, after having conquered, lost, reconquered, after having trampled and trampled it, the the seed that she plants in this earth, the driving force that it delivers to this people is the principle of nationalities, der- the latest expression of the doctrine of free inquiry, moving from the domestic policy within foreign policy, transforming The French Revolution was an international revolution.

-And finally, this principle of nationalities, this last expression of the doctrine of free inquiry, successively adapted to the order religious, philosophical order, national political theory `male and international, enters into events, is realized in history through the work of Bismarck, through German unity and its corollary, Italian unity, through the lowering of the France and the fall of the Pope's temporal power, the annexation of Alsace-Lorraine and the capture of Rome.

And he asks Nicholas II, who agrees, to propose disarmament under the pretext of maintaining peace general (1).

Moreover, Russia may be as threatened as not to disappear, certainly, but from a conflict next meeting with England regarding China and the India.

And perhaps that's where we still need to look, and the because of the alliance, which was one of the greatest events elements of this century and this recent proposal for disarmament .ment and general peace, – everyone, kings and subjects being terrified at the thought of a conflagration in which so many human lives would be annihilated ties.

We could discuss and lose sight of this point and to enter into considerations that are more or less well-founded.

What is certain is that France is leaving, that the Latin races are declining. You saw what the proportion of births according to the table given above high.

The political and military consequences are easy to understand. seize the opportunity. In the aftermath of the war, France and Germany Magne had roughly the same number of conscripts (296,334 in France and 330,136 in Germany) and us we could have legitimate hope of resuming what We had lost.

Today, Germany has twice as many conscripts. (448,433) than France, which has kept its figure from other-times. Like Germany, since 1894, has twice as much

aa aa |

{1) So that the peace congress has some chance of To succeed, one must first eliminate the causes of dis- feelings that exist between the powers. The questions from Alsace-Lorraine, Egypt, the Orient and China, etc., etc., These issues must therefore be resolved amicably before the meeting of the conference. Also, according to La Croix, it is already certain that several months, perhaps several years will have passed before that it had opened its sessions, of births (1903,160) than France (908,849), it arrives will inevitably see that in 14 years she will be twice as of conscripts. So, this people who hate us reveal us—rera! The Germans say so, ours and they will do it—ront (4).

From the point of view of wealth, even: threat:

Our exports in 1867–76 amounted to, in average year—yenne, at 3306 million; in 1895, they reached 3374 million, a slight increase of 68 million lions.

Meanwhile, German exports, increased from 2974 (average of 1872–76) to 4540 millions of francs (provisional figure for 1896, lower than the (reality) representing an increase of one and a half billion. The main cause is quite simple: the number of our workers are not increasing; they can hardly produce more than they used to.

On the contrary, Germany has seen the number of its trade values increase from 41 million to 52 million, i.e. an increase of 14 million; it is quite simple that it produce more.

France, at the end of the last century, comprised the 27 0/, of the population of the major powers of Europe, and Of all of them, she was the strongest, at least numerically. of its inhabitants.

All peoples grow in strength and wealth,
And we, to this day, remain stationary; de—
Now we will do worse, we will diminish.

And in 1895, indeed, let us repeat, the excess of deaths of the births was 17,000

France's depopulation is due to multiple causes. tiples, among which we must place, notably—
Religious indifference and the inheritance system currently in force: forced sharing.

(1) German geographical maps show the Cotentin and Brittany as German countries.

Alas! Yes, France is declining in a frightening way.

And yet, a century and a half after the death of Louis XIV,
She was still the queen of nations:

The Universe sourced its supplies from Paris:

'The sovereign of the French,' wrote Bismarck, in a letter dated May 10, 1856, is currently playing such a significant role considerable in the combinations of euro- policy European, and his friendship, real or even apparent, is such-sought after by the most powerful princes, that would not only be a formal tribute to Prussia, but yet another fact of great political importance, if it aimed at the honor of visiting our august master during that the emperors of Russia and Austria are perhaps considering to come to meet him all the way to Paris, and that many Princes are only preoccupied with thinking about the means of power to follow the example of the King of Württemberg without their position suffers... »

Times have certainly changed. And one could say that at
From a material point of view, France and the Latin races seemblent condemned to be absorbed by the nations neighboring towns whose population was constantly growing then that here, once again, it remains station-naire.

In the moral and religious order, for this same reason-its: depopulation, these races are also fragmenting, and It might not be necessary to bring others documents in this debate to show the danger protestso much.

But I want to put the following before the reader's eyes:
actions of our Anglo-Saxon neighbors against the in-Latin influence.

Let's start with the Spanish-American War. We said of this war, rightly so, that it was a war of race.

It's a race war, because it's Freemasonry.
stupidity, sworn enemy of the Catholic religion, which He had it declared, and that religions are races.

In the Caribbean, lodges are just as numerous as in America. Moreover.

Two years ago, statistics noted the existence of 188 lodges and 20,000 initiates. Everything was ready for the revolution, and when it broke out, 20,000 Freemasons were among the rebels.

Who says that? Not me. It's La Croix, in a correspondence from the West Indies.

La Croix is a sacristy newspaper, the Signal, forgetting that it is itself a newspaper of temples.

However, La Croix is not alone in this opinion.

The Sun, which is not clerical, but simply Catholic, makes these reflections about the exchange letters negotiations between Marshal Blanco and the leader of the insurgents, Maximo Gomez:

"The Masonic lodges spread among these exotic peoples, who are somewhat literate, their supposed principles of dhumanitairerie.

One can imagine what a bizarre mix these absurdities are. Freemasons deal with the brutal instincts of these barbarians. i

The situation in Cuba is the same as in the Philippines.

Maximo Gomez is not Asian like Aguinaldo; The blood of the white race flows in his veins, but he has retained the way of thinking of men of primitive culture.

The letter that is being published from him, in response to certain remarks... the messages that Marshal Blanco addressed to him, is absolutely revealing of this state of mind:

"I believe in only one race: humanity."

He also speaks of a decrepit monarchy; he declares that he respects the tanned and wild Indian to legal white English and assassins; he demonstrated a high degree of impartiality towards all the religions and praised Washington and Bolivar.

One would truly think one was listening to the "orator brother" speaking of modern principles to his brothers of the Perfect sincerity or gentle friendship.

Bolivar in particular enjoys great popularity among these characters.

AMERICANISM _ 393

On several occasions, we have pointed out the influence of the lodges. in the Cuban and Philippine uprisings. However, as The Latin American republics are facing internal divisions, due to Freemasonry, it is appropriate to show the disastrous role that this association still plays.

Not content with having delivered a continent to anarchy, she still wants, out of hatred for Catholicism, to tear the mother away homeland, the few remaining remnants of the vast empire colonial, founded by the Spanish.

At this hour, alas! one can fear that with the help of Americans, she will not succeed. In any case, it is certain- It is certain that if the Spanish are definitively defeated, which, Thanks to Dicu, that's not entirely true; civilization doesn't will not benefit in any way from their defeat.

That's another point settled.

Freemasonry having wanted war and the Es- With the pagne having been defeated, it is permissible to believe that Our valiant Latin sister has been betrayed.

In any case, the attitude of its leaders was... well, let's just say it couldn't have been weirder.

Here, it's an Admiral who locks himself in a bay like Bazaine shut himself up in Metz.

There, we have a Marshal who doesn't leave Havana. and who doesn't for a single moment consider mobilizing his troops, to run to Santiago, where he knows the enemy is went down to wrap it up and throw it into the sea.

He remains motionless, says the Authority, and as if indifferent related to what is happening in another part of Vile.

And regarding the attack in Santiago, we read in the Times:

The Spanish still had enough food for six weeks. and two hundred cartridges per man. They could have destroyed half of the American troops at the time of the debauching.

Later, they could have caused General Shafter to lose a third of his men in an assault, or force him to raise the siege. They preferred to surrender.

It's inconceivable! And this daytime outing of

396 AMERICANISM

Admiral Cervera, this escape, rather, because he did not seek not even to die rushing towards the forces in-enemies!

In this disastrous war for Spain, nation Catholic, one can see the hand of the Freemasonry and the fulfillment of the Masonic program, which arrives at one of the points he has traced: "the dismemberment of the situation in certain states where Catholicism has left roots deemed too deep: France, the Empire, Paganism, Portugal."

And what do we see on the American side against disorganization?

All the Jewish, Freemason, and Huguenot notes or Huguenot-like. We found the same ones individuals who applauded Italian unity, to Prussian victories against Austria.

Their wishes were then for Prussia against Pauline cheating, also says Truth; for the pro-power Testing and its ally revolutionary Italy against the nation-Catholicism.

They applauded Son's victory and when Austria had definitively succumbed on the day of the surrender of Venetia, the Paris of Freethought, of finance, Freemasonry, hedonistic Paris and cosmopolitan illuminated, as if this victorious Prussia was not supposed to come four years later to bomb the mad city, rekindled by the fires of the Commune, other, less cheerful lanterns.

Never, if there had been a Europe, would the government Washington would not have considered giving free rein to the pro-expansion and conquest jets, which, in Cuba and the The Philippines threaten the Old World.

And there is no longer a Europe, because there is no longer a France.

Immobilized by the Alsace-Lorraine question, not being able to be a friend of Germany and not having the force of being her enemy, contained in her action by a coalition of powers superior to itself, France is reduced to doing nothing by herself, 4 not take no initiative.

AMERICANISM 397

She could do nothing for Christian Armenia, nothing for Greece could do nothing for Spain.

But his powerlessness is also that of Europe.

If it cannot do anything on its own, Europe will not France can do nothing without it. France is paralyzed. Europe is struggling. Forced to reserve itself entirely for its own safeguarding and also for the pro- claim Vines that the preliminaries of the peace of Versailles and the The Treaty of Frankfurt caused her to lose; she must attend. passively accepting of external events until the solution to the Alsace-Lorraine question restored to him its freedom of action. Germany, for its part, no longer has no other role than to observe it, than to always stand ready against her; and on both sides, the allied states, Russia on one side, Austria and Italy on the other, have not no other function than to subordinate their conduct to the law of the alliance.

So, each state abstains, and Europe remains passive. sive.

It is thanks to this forced neutrality of Europe that America was able to attack Spain and, under the pre-text of a war of emancipation, to inaugurate this poli-a process of resumption and retro-annexation which is primarily a threat to all Atlantic colonial possessions of Europe, while waiting for it to transform into politics of external conquests and that it becomes a new threat to the old world itself.

Europe allowed this cardinal error of the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine to Prussia, and main- holding it, it can no longer prevent the annexation of Cuba and of Puerto Rico in the United States; she could no longer prevent- dear to other violence, other plundering, she is not not even prepared to repel the invasion of the New World.

Might makes right, said Mr. Bismarck.

It is by virtue of this axiom that Spain today- today, it is violently stripped bare before the eyes of the world;

33 rt

r

338 AMERICANISM

It is by virtue of this same axiom that Europe succumb- perhaps one day it will fall victim to an America has become as strong as it is ambitious.

_ Another blow, why is there no more France in- today!

Is there no more France? Yes, there is a France, he replies. the F*, Maruejoul, since I am the Minister there, and I affirm France's sympathy for the "Rep- Sister Church.

However, the "Sister Republic" has just allied itself with England, which itself allied itself with Germany, all Protestant nations (1).

This was expected; because on May 24th, the Minister of Colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, in a resounding speech- sant, said that the friendship of the United States would not be paid too dearly at the price of a general war, and of on the other side of the Atlantic, the chaplain of the Senate of Washington publicly offered prayers for the union of "Speaking English", that is to say those who speak English.

A common saying among the Yankees is this:

"One language, one goal."

The Anglo-American alliance exists.

What is her goal? Who does she threaten, if not the na-
Catholic tions?

As for the consequences of the war, New York Herald introduces them to us; he asked a per-American poll if, in his opinion, the United States of-would now increase their armaments.

(1) London, September 2, 1798. - The Pall Mall Gazette announces that an Anglo-German agreement was reached this week and signed respectively by Mr. Balfour and the Count of Hatz-feldt.

This agreement would be limited to certain points, but includes-would form an offensive and defensive alliance in certain eventualities lites.

AMERICANISM. 399

"No doubt," came the reply, "from a nation of shopkeepers."
We have become a nation of warriors.

We are escaping the threat and peril of socialism, of anarchy and agrarianism, as in England escaped by a policy of colonization and conquest.

From a provincial cluster of small, held sovereignties together by a "sand rope", we climb up to dignity, to the pride of an imperial republic incomparatively larger than Rome.

It is true that we exchange domestic dangers against external dangers; but, in any case, we Let's multiply the nation's chances. We risk the cesa-rism; but Caesarism itself is preferable to lanar-Schism. We risk wars; but man has Only an hour to die. Each day brings enough suffering of its own.
In short, anything is better than the peace we had.
before these new forces enter the scene. Already the game-
The essence of this country is an excellent sap drawn from the in-fire, and today, in perspective, it has a future full of noble deeds and lofty thoughts (4).

(4) Under this title: An American program, Mr. Arvé de Barme wrote in Le Figaro on September 15, 1898.

Europe has just seen the United States put itself on the defensive, at both to the South, towards the Antilles, and to the West, across the ocean Pacifique, and she thought to herself, "What's wrong with them? What is this sudden idea of picking a fight with us, of making trouble—" "Questions at our expense? We would never have believed that of them."

We were wrong to be so surprised. It's not an idea sudden that set things in motion in the United States: it was at the con- to draw on very old ideas, since they date back half a century. The events we have just witnessed are part of a program conceived and advocated even before the war of Sé- cession, by an American statesman whom his compatriots place themselves very high, in the first rank, and which they take pleasure in maintaining keen to recall the prophetic views. The thought of this poli- a large-scale tick had been incubating since his death in the cbns- national science, silently, according to the advice he had given himself, insistently, not to rush into anything; but one He had no trouble recognizing her there when she brought to light by the war with Spain.

D's name was Seward, and he was Secretary of State during the Lincoln's presidency. Convinced that his country had a great

400 - AMERICANISM

The reader will find these confessions of a singular precision... sion. They confirm what we have said up to pre- sent from the Spanish-American War, wrote ML Ne- Godré, in La Vérité, July 26.

The United States needed this war to to occupy the country, in order to conquer new territories coveted by New York businessmen, for to test their forces against an enemy from whom they expected Exhaustion. The experiment has been conducted. The United States does not They won't stop there. They're already looking for other enemies. put to fight, other territories to take, even in Europe.

If anyone doubts this, let them read the Zérald, a newspaper which... would be in Paris.

Mr. Gordon Bennett's newsletter informs us that "The United States is determined to gain a foothold in mission & fulfillment in the world, and discerning, for his part He clearly undertook this mission, missing no opportunity to To define it, to explain it clearly to the public. It's not that he feared that America was on the wrong track and broke its promise to his destiny; but he sensed that the goal would be reached by methods he disapproved of. An enemy of the war, Seward did not He was under no illusion, however, that his gigantic dream pit to achieve without a fight. He lamented this and added magnificently, in a public letter of 1846: "We must dare our destiny.

It consists of extending civilization westward, through the Pacific, across Asia. Chance or secret law, the great Invasions throughout history have moved from East to West, The im- The American nation will resume the eternal path of humanity. Manita. She will walk towards the setting sun, as they did to you. In the past, the barbarians, the Mongols, the Arabs, the Turks. We will pass Wherever possible, we will pass: "Our population is destined to roll its irresistible waves right up to the barriers icy northern landscapes and encountering Eastern civilization on the Pacific shores. » |

We will arrive in Asia.

And then what? When they've reached Europe somewhere in Asia and closed the ring of white civilization around the globe, will they stop on such a beautiful path? Will they be able to? Will they want to?

Tu nn ns aes

AMERICANISM 401

the Mediterranean, which they dream of occupying at least Balearic Islands; that Europe can indeed oppose them with the counter-part of Monroe's doctrine, but that it will be wrong, because the United States can count on the alliance clay and that if France in particular is not reasonable- "nable, she will pay for the broken pots" (4).

(1) Compare this admission with the quarrel that England has with us sought in connection with Fashoda; think of the Anglo-American alliance caine and Anglo-German and you will logically conclude that The danger that threatens France comes from these three nations Protestants.

It is then that, if necessary, the Franco-Russian alliance will be able to to manifest itself and bear fruit.

I believe that the future war will take place between these major powers. Protestant nations against France and Russia, and that we are threatened with Anglo-Saxon reprisals. I'm very afraid that France is not ready, despite the millions it swallowed up for his army and for his navy, with the men with those who govern it, anything is possible.

Thus, in the event of war with England, we would be in a very false situation for the transmission of dispatches by the route of submarine cables, because we are dependent on English networks.

"In the event of war with our neighbors," said the Courier of that evening, at the time of the Fashoda affair, the British could prevent us from notifying our ships of the stations in a timely manner distant and to proceed with a rapid rallying of our squadrons.

This shows, the newspaper added, how regrettable it is for having let projects that had the aim of remedying such a state of affairs and what responsibility potential liability was endorsed by the Chamber which, despite the warnings, now so close to being justified, have pushed back "The establishment of the Antilles cable."

The Chamber that assumed this responsibility was that of 1887. A French company had been formed for the exploitation of this table. The minister supported the proposal of this company. It was however, it was rejected. And who caused it to be rejected? Mr. Félix Faure, at the time. a simple Anglophile member of parliament.

Listen to Mr. Félix Faure, fighting against the guarantee demanded by I am the minister for the French Cable Company of the Antilles:

"We are requesting this guarantee," he said, "because it must serve to form a society, that is what the Chamber needs to do."
"Know, and I only went up to the podium to indicate to him
"What kind of society do we want to create?"

402 AMERICANISM

And this is printed gracefully in Paris, on the avenue of The Opera.

Europe doesn't want to see the Anglo-Saxon threat. will believe it like Spain, that is to say, a little late.

I cannot stress this enough, the Anglo-Saxons want to invade us, to Protestantize us. A real danger menace the Latin races whose lodges have sworn to annihilate him-sowing.

To prove this fact, I have a hundred documents between the hands as if to prove everything I'm saying in order to arrive at my conclusion: the Protestant léril.

In a partially opened folder, I found this article from the Correspondence from the East, from Vienna (Austria).

Examining the dangers that threatened Spain, the Eastern Correspondence expressed itself thus:

Enough has been said and preached to Catholics all over the world, that it was a Catholic power unjustly attacked caused by the bad faith of the Jewish and Protestant Lodges from North America.

In other times, a crusade would have been organized. against the Lodges who only know how to demolish and plunder. We have— would have done quests in the interconnected world to help Volunteers reportedly rushed to the Spanish treasury. From all sides. Today, nothing...

Austria, Spain, and France are threatened; these the last bastions of the Catholic faith are under attack more violently more than ever with all the fury of hell and Lodges. We see the American bandits seizing the possessions

"The names of the members," he said, "are as follows: Mr. Veuillot "(Eugène), editor of L'Univers; Desquers (Stanislas), admi-
"Nislraleur of the same newspaper (Interruptions); Mrs. Eugène
"Veuillot, née d'Aquin; Mr. Veuillot (Pierre), editor of "the Universe; Schmitz; Fridich; Aquinas, Desquers. (Session of
February 12 |

The listing of these Catholic names made the seclaires of the Chamber. And the French interest was sacrificed to English monopoly project; and, in case of war with England— On Earth, our means of communication could be disrupted. thanks to Mr. Félix Faure, now the chief magistrate of the republic.

AMERICANISM 493

Spanish sessions, the Pan-Germanists and the Honorable Lodges large Jewish women openly conspire to tear each other apart and the the dismemberment of Austria, radicalism prepares to crush France.

I don't know if Spain is threatened by a Masonic plot-
"Nic and Jewish": undoubtedly, Freemasons and Jews will pounce on her after her defeat; but, strictly speaking,
The Yankees' desires are enough to explain this heinous war.

However, the maneuvers directed against Austria and France proceeds from the same plan and falls directly under Jewish and German lodges. I remember that he
Two years ago, I was deeply struck by what I-I was going to tell the Jews of Hungary and Berlin during a extended stay that I made in these two capitals.

We were exasperated by Mr. Lueger's successes in Austria, no less than the evolution of the French Republic towards moderate ideas.

"In ten years," they said, "we will have an Austria"
an emancipated and a clerical France that will unite their hands in that of Russia: the work of 1866 and 1870 will be de-trout. It takes a big hit to stun the re- reaction nascent | »

A little later, a joyful shiver ran through the
the entire Masonic world. They had found for the Au-cheating in the "languages" affair, the obstructionist system of the Liberal and Prussian party and the entire campaign plan being carried out right now. For France, we had built from scratch, the "Panama of the army."

Towards the end of the summer of 1896, a French politician, which I will not name, and which has many narrow ties with the Jews of Austria came to deliver the instructions.

He toured the Jewish editorial offices in the capital and... was in the main provincial cities. And I heard repeat from all sides:

"You don't know, MX... is here; it seems there will be Something new is coming soon to your home!

What is it really about? They themselves say so:
to strengthen the work of 1866 and 1870, that is to say, to consolidate the dictatorship of Jewish Freemasonry in the countries that the Prussia opened it to him through its victories and that it helps to govern to oversee for his own account.

If you doubted this fact, I would remind you of these steps. roles told to Mr. Chaudordy by Lord Lyons that I already have printed somewhere in this book:

"What's the point of discussing any issue with the Minister of Foreign Affairs of France, since For a long time you have burdened Germany with your interests.

Do we see the danger here? It is at our doorstep.

*
ee

In a book: The Life of Father Hecker – a study, on Americanism – Father Klein shows us the reform to be fulfilled in the Catholic Church, for Catholics to legalize America. To that end, he advises, in a way, to make concessions on religious matters, "of shorten the distance between the protesting and us.

Here is how his biographer puts it:

"Father Hecker believed that the Latin race gloriously crowned his work by the Vatican Council and that the The time has come to call upon the Teutonic race to develop its strengths in the inner life of the Church" (Page 407).

What is the cause of this decline of the race? time? It's the excessive emphasis placed on the virtues of passives and respect for custom and authority among the Latins. Father Félix Klein tells us this in the preface:

"Respect for custom, which was a cause of supremacy" priority, and almost a virtue, has become, in many ways points, a weakness, a flaw, a category of delay and decadence; the passive virtues, which were the honor of a era when one only had to go with the flow, must par-to retreat from these active virtues, without which nothing no longer holds up" (Page 11).

Let us add that Father Hecker is a Protestant. green and undoubtedly still tinged with the liberalism of this religion.

Father Klein's book gave rise to a
Mr. Charles Maignen's answer: Is Father Hecker
A saint?

Naturally, the authors do not agree on the
a way to de-Catholicize America and the Protestant world;
One wants certain reforms in the true church; the other doesn't want any of them; but there is one point on which they they meet: it is on the danger that threatens the races tines.

The Catholic University of Washington, says Ch. Maignen, of which MJ Keane was rector, is attacked by the Protestant propaganda. This one boasts of having already has claimed more victims among the clergy in eighteen years than the P. Hecker did not gather any disciples in his community in 40 years.

It is to a Catholic newspaper in the United States that we Let us borrow these details, which he publishes from a journal Protestant.

Excerpt from the Review of January 27, 1898.

A Protestant mission for Catholics.

I saw the following information in a recent issue of the Democratic Globe. If the fact were verified, what irony this would like to see the boulevard of Catholicism in the United States to become the pedestal of Protestantism! The Protestant mission Auntie might succeed if they arrive, as they boast, to take the place of Bishop Schroeder (1).

Here is the information we are referring to:

"We are about to establish a mission in Washington."
Protestant to work among Roman Catholics.
The men who are leading this mission are converts from Catholicism, some of whom were re-students at the Catholic University of Washington.
Lily has a similar mission to New York City. She has ten-

(1) The eminent prelate has since been forced, despite the Holy See,

to leave the University!

23°

406 THE AMERICAN SME

eight years of existence and during that time it has received in within its ranks are fifty-four Roman Catholic priests, including nine are now active members of the Protestant clergy.

The mission has, since its founding, advocated conversion of 3,600 Roman Catholics, who accepted his teaching—personal matter and its influence. These converts are, naturally really, in the Presbyterian denominational churches rien, Methodist and Baptist. The head of the mission of

In New York, Rev. James O'Connor is a Presbyterian.

The work in Washington will be similar to that which has been undertaken in New York City, during the eighteen years past. The mission will begin as soon as it can.

ensure proper installation.

The material and financial aspects are taken care of.

— What do our “liberal” organs say about this?

» BEZIMIE »

We have not learned that the “liberal bodies”

Americans have answered this question, he adds

Mr. Maignen.

In any case, without seeking to determine responsibilities—

Regarding the affiliations of the parties, we only consider the facts.

While this furious assault is being waged against the Church,

while our age-old enemies boast of counting among us are allies who would remain in the Church to to carry out a reform within Catholicism; that is to such a troubled time that Catholics cry out:

“We must lower the drawbridges, abolish customs,”

“Open the Church to all dissidents!”

And Mr. Maignen concludes: |

“Today, after the exam we just finished—focus on the pieces collected in this volume and which are a small part of those that could be gathered, it is allowed us to consider Americanism as one of the most “Great dangers that threaten the Church.”

Father Hecker acknowledges this danger; he declares it without detour.

And this is the point towards which our demonstration tends.
tion. |

AMERICANISM | 407

After explaining his reform system in
The Catholic Church, Father Hecker adds:

"The central idea of this presentation is the ardent, sincere and confident in the means to avoid the double catastrophe that threatens the world, namely: the extermination of Catholicism by the Saxons and the apostasy of Christianity by the Latins.

That's clear, and it cannot give rise to any equivocate.

+
es

If you don't mind, I won't abuse the... so much anymore.
documents. You must trust what I write.
since I provided you with so much evidence of the facts advances.

But I see the Huguenots of the Century and of Time where Mr. Hébrard's throne (1,450,000 francs) which are already growing cries of triumph, saying that this is a precautionary measure oratorical presentation which simply proves that I no longer have plus one fact to support my argument.

Never mind that, gentlemen who judge yourselves so harshly opponents by measuring them against the scale of your hypothesis and your lies.

I'm going to show you Guillaume IT, emperor of the -Protestant Germany working to ruin in the East the centuries-old influence of Catholic France. I do not cease-I would like to repeat it: a vast plan is in place to protest-to tantalize the world.

Adinettez, indeed, that tomorrow our influence in

The East falls into the hands of heretical Germany.

What will remain of Catholicism?

I know that the word exaggeration will come to mind. lips of those who do not want to see and who compose the numerous army of oculos habent; but what im-door, I am aware of my duty and I write the truth.
rite.

408 AMERICANISM

Moreover, I rely not on assertions which are personal matters, but based on public facts that Everyone can check, because I cite my authors.

One of the most important external issues of the current moment is, without question, the journey of empe-
Father of Germany to the Holy Places.

Regarding this trip, a character in a situation to be well informed, he wrote from Jerusalem to the Truth of August 29, 1898, a long account from which we detach-
Let's look at the essential passages:

"The arrival of Wilhelm II in Palestine, announced since nearly a year, prepared public opinion and gave to this imperial pilgrimage – for it is a pilgrimage – all the im-significance of a politico-religious demonstration of a gra-exceptional speed.

In France, the press, more or less annoyed by the succession aids struck to draw general attention to this travel, experiences the agitation of a sick person to whom one applies flashes of fire. Since the initial announcement of this trip,
We were concerned about our protectorate in the East.

The press has finally realized that it is annihilated, almost despised.

Emperor William II comes as summus episcopus of Lutheranism; his entourage is composed mainly of Lutheran ministers; he comes to inaugurate a Lutheran temple and the day of this ceremony is the anniversary of the Con-
Augsburg conference, October 31, day of the triumph of the lute-Rianism in Germany.

The cause of religion is threatened from all sides parts in the East.

Politics, the excessive rebounding, has supplanted in external action, the religious principle that was supposed to do everything undermine.

The French protectorate has lost its influence over action

The defining characteristic of this trip, a particularly noteworthy hostile to the Catholic religion as much as favorable to pro-Testamentary law imposes a course of action on the emperor. full of reserve, if he wants to achieve full success in his targets on the East. One could discuss endlessly the plans of Wilhelm II. What is clearest is that The emperor's exaggerated religiosity seems to be an optical illusion, which conceals more or less political designs less arrested, but harmful to the French protectorate in East.

AMERICANISM 409

Members and pastors of all evangelical churches were invited to come or be represented on day of the temple's inauguration by the emperor.

One of the principal Lutheran ministers was tasked by the emperor to prepare, in view of his journey, a work special report on the search for the true Golgotha and the true tomb of Christ.

This is quite clear, given that the Lutheran Church has little faith in Christian tradition: the emperor, if it were otherwise, would not have had to request a study allowing him to as- to follow one's own conviction.

However, Protestants are currently hesitating between three or four supposedly authentic sites.

In Germany, there is a strong preference for the tomb of Gordan, so named after the famous English captain who...

He popularized this sanctuary. According to him, the hill located above the cave of Jeremiah, north of the city, having From a distance, it bears a certain resemblance to a skull, it must be the Golgotha; in fact, the true Holy Sepulchre must be at its foot.

Indeed, one and several tombs have been discovered:

So... the proof is conclusive.

If Wilhelm II were to express his preference for one or the other of the sites whose antiquity is being contested Between the sects, he will act as a religious leader, which falls within quite in his way of acting, and consequently he will refrain good to reduce the influence of his personal approach

may have an effect on his fellow believers.

A visit to the traditional Holy Sepulchre would renew all the divergent opinions and the emperor seeks to unify proudly displaying all the evangelical churches under his influence.

The French newspapers are terrified by this trip; he have finally realized that the consequences of this pilgrimage can erase our protectorate, which is already nothing more than an old one title (1).

(1) Leo XIII, in a letter of September 1898, which has for France has a considerable interest, officially recognizing the France, the protectorate of Catholics in the East, which Germany-Magne is challenging us. It's a direct hit to the Protestant Emperor.

r

410 AMERICANISM

Does Wilhelm II claim to the reality of the thing in us? leaving the title? Or does he want to remove the title altogether?

while he can take it himself, or have it done for him given by his faithful friend the sultan? Time will tell.

+
xy

Along the same lines, here is what Mr. Louis Teste wrote in Le Gaulois on August 27, 1898:

One day Prince Napoleon said to a small circle of dilantes: "Between us, none of us are Catholic?"

"Excuse me, Your Grace," replied Mr. Emile de Girardin, There's me!

– For example, my dear Girardin, you are indeed the The last person from whom I was expecting this answer.

– Yes, Your Grace, I am Catholic as I am French, and since my name is Girardin, and if I were to blush the name of the nationality or religion that I received at My birth is part of my personality, it's part of myself. that I would blush.

William II was not ashamed of it, and that is what is most important. commendable.

But if William II went to Jerusalem to the tomb of the... Christ, out of pure religious sentiment, he would not have himself pre- to thus yield from all the trumpets of fame, for Jesus said:

"When you pray, you will not be like children." hypocrisies who like to pray standing up in synagogues in public places, in order to be seen by men. Truly, I tell you, they have received their reward...

"Enter your room and with the door closed, pray your | Father in secret; and your Father who sees in secret, you will do it.

And Jesus drives out of the temple even the merchants of these doves that are offered as a burnt offering to his Father.

So much for William; it is also proof of the Protestant peril. And the France will always have to be grateful to this great Pope who I love you so much, and you will leave behind such a beautiful doctrinal page!

AMERICANISM Garlic

No, William's pilgrimage is not a simple pilgrimage– Rinse.

It is also and above all a political journey, but a journey political than his piety, or at least the feeling of his duty to his religion, his empire and his The country made him do it. Mr. Félix Faure, on the contrary, would not do it. not because he blushes, and it's because he blushes and his predecessors blushed, that the French influence which has for The cause and purpose of protecting Christians, so greatly diminished-clouded in the Ottoman Empire that Emperor William could Today, we must work to remove him and take his place.

When the twelve Apostles of Jesus went to bring to the peoples the teachings of their master, the "intellectuals" from Jerusalem, seeing as far as the end of their noses, like the "intellectuals" of all times, did not fail not to accompany them with their sarcasm.

However, the society formed by these illiterate men and crude, the Christian world in a word, is, in the year 1898, more powerful than ever before, and it dominates the globe. But There are divisions and groupings in the Christian world.
Here.

The three major Catholic powers are France, Austria-Hungary and Italy, and the head of their Church is prisoner in the Vatican, and prisoner of one of them; and the three major Protestant powers that have nothing in common between them that their union against this Church are: the Alle-Magne, England and the United States.

The Christian world thus leans, not through tradition, the glory, doctrine, morality, virtues, apostolate, genius, not even by number, but by the weight of power temporal towards what I will call its "Left," in em-borrowing the word from parliamentary language.

Emperor William skillfully took advantage of this.

After having become the protector of the Ottoman Empire, he will to become almost the master of it in Jerusalem by involving the pope and France in second place and Russia in third.

As our protectorate was more nominal than real ever since the Republicans came to power, because they blush for their religion and that everything that touches on the religion finds them ashamed, worried, hostile, whatever these are the moral, political and material interests that They always find behind religion and whose religion

,

412 AMERICANISM

is the expression and the driving force, perhaps the Christians, subjects of the sultan, although almost none of them were Lutherans,

Will they hope to be better protected by Emperor William?
who visit them only through the French republic, which neglects them.

MJ-J. Weis, that brilliant and free spirit, who was I believe
From the Augsburg confession, he told me twenty times: `

"Although I am Protestant, and because I am French, I am,"
for France's foreign policy, also Catholic Your bishops, as Catholic as the Pope.

"France is Catholic, and whatever happens, it remains—Catholic republic. In the eyes of the whole world, it is a well.
Catholic faith. Its foreign policy must be Catholic. strongly Catholic, boldly Catholic. Otherwise the France will no longer appear as France.

"And I, a Protestant, am a supporter, even of the government."
temporal of the Pope". 2

MJ-J. Weiss repeated all of this to me a few months before her dead. .

But both externally and internally, the republic follows a contrary policy, an anti-Catholic policy. And
"This state of mind," this illness of the spirit, is all the more It's strange that most of these men, in private, for them and theirs, do not differ very significantly from others, that they marry in church, that they be buried in the church, that they go there whenever propriety dictates explain their presence, and sometimes even, but more rarely, for their own benefit; that they have their children baptized children, that they make them take their first communion, that they put their daughters at the Sacred Heart and their sons at the Je-sequels and that they would be very angry or at least very in-quiet if their wives didn't perform better than them even their religious duties.

However, Emperor William made use of religion which they do not use, he employs forces that they do not—
They do not bend, he takes from them ground that they do not defend;
In short, he's playing politics, which is the art of self-interest, at the best possible State interests, elements that are available without to ask if we would have chosen them or if we would have chosen some Others, and they do the exact opposite. Through this sort of high suzerainty that he wants to claim over the Ottoman Empire and over Jerusalem. on the Christian subjects of this empire and on everything the East of their dependence, it gives to industry and to German trade: not a colony, but an outlet.

a market, a customer, and a most significant customer at that.
for weapons, ammunition and war materiel, for railways, telegraphs and telephones and for all the products that we and other powers,
we provide to this client and that henceforth we no longer provide to him,
We will either provide more or less to him.

That's the immediate advantage.

The other, less immediate, but more important advantages so many and that Emperor William pursued with the high his idea of his duty as sovereign of a great empire worse, and the passionate love he has for her, will be to dispossess us—the end of our protectorate in the East and to raise it in—core within Christendom, which he aspires to dominate. We We will descend from all that Emperor William will rise, and this shift will be felt in Germany and in France, from top to bottom of both countries and in the opposite direction, and our peasants and our workers themselves will suffer from it even in their salaries. Anticlericalism is beginning to bear bitter fruit.

The independent press was unanimous in reporting 1st
a danger that threatens our influence in the East.

Mr. de Cassagnac expressed himself thus in the Authority of the August 26, 1898:

The German emperor wants to take advantage of the abandonment where Catholicism is found as a result of the victory of the Franks—
Freemasonry in France, to ruin its influence in the East.
French and give precedence to the Protestants even in Jerusalem—
ism on Catholicism.

There is no rashness in assuming this thought to be well—
ted at the court of the German emperor.

He tried this in China and he will try it in Palestine.

One of his dreams, we can sense it in all his actions, is to attribute—to Germany the protection of Christians who until present belonged to France.

This dream will come true without much difficulty, because the Catholic—Licism, oppressed in France by freethinkers, can no longer to be strong enough to show dominance outside.

The religious persecution that Freemasonry and the Jewish communities are leading against Catholic propaganda, which will have this natural consequence of substituting German influence for French influence throughout the Orient.

Palestine was French land. It will become land German thanks to the hateful imbecility of the government of the Republic.

This government of malevolent brutes will not understand Indeed, Catholicism and France have never been linked. that one and that it is impossible to lower one without lowering the other one.

And La Croix of August 7th highlighted the danger by this The Vienna correspondence is a revelation.

The German emperor addressed the dignitaries of the Austro-Hungarian Reformed Church, an invitation to take part of his journey to the Orient in order to attend the ceremony inauguration of the German Protestant Church of Jerusalem Salem.

This strange act, this audacious intrusion into the domain from others, must have caused some surprise to the Germans. themselves, since the Germania of Berlin wonders "if the archbishops of Cologne of Gnesen would not judge `appropriate to decline such an invitation in the case where the Emperor of Austria would invite them to a ceremony Catholic having the same character as the ceremony is "Aunt of next autumn."

It would seem that the example of the German newspaper makes To the Austrians, a little of that courage which is abandoning them as soon as it comes to judging the actions of Germany and its ` emperor.

The Eastern Correspondent writes on this subject:

"Out of delicacy, silence was maintained in Vienna." about this whole affair.

But, as a Berlin newspaper has just put it on The carpet, we can see that indeed the invitation produced a distressing impression in Austria. Jerusalem where the different-Rents and confessions live side by side, without without a doubt the character of an exclusively Catholic city, but even less so that of a Protestant city. The efforts to make it, in a way, the Protestant Mecca, no— They won't have a great chance of success.

This honorable protest says it all in two lines misery of Sadowa's Austria.

AMERICANISM 415

At first, we didn't dare speak, but since a Ber— newspaper Lin, by setting an example, also gives permission, one She finally raises her voice, but with such timidity! Then, The Correspondence doesn't even dare to ask the question like that that it presents itself with such obviousness.

Under the pretext that he was a Protestant sovereign, William II does he have the right to create a kind of hierarchical link? gieux between his throne and the Protestant ministers of Austria?

Is it permissible for him to establish a kind of patronage? supreme power of the German emperor over the Protestant states neighbors and claims Protestants worldwide as its spiritual subordinates?

Isn't this a threat to Austria?
Hungary?

This is what the poor Austrians think, but don't dare to say.
say.

This threat comes at an especially inopportune time.
The Prussian party of Austria proclaims as the first article part of his program was the reunion with the German Empire and as Article two, the struggle against Rome and the transition to pro—antiseism.

The Gustave-Adolphe Society, a Germanization society by Protestantism and Protestantization through Germanism, counts 78,000 members in Austria.

Mr. Dehn, a sort of Prussian scout sent to relieve the positions, he cites in his book, Germany towards the East, the testimony of Hungarian Protestants who declare themselves "in—thrilled by Germany's victories which resulted in "This represents the decline of Roman clericalism."

The invitation from Wilhelm II is a recognition of all these Prussian-like tendencies of Protestantism: she encourages them , which is, in the end, quite unnecessary. because the love of Austro-Hungarian Protestantism for the Luther's homeland and his hatred of Catholic Austria are such that no encouragement could make them more ardent.

The Protestants of France, with a few honorable exceptions, present, as a whole, vis-à-vis Germany the same attitude as the Protestants of Austria.

It follows from all these facts that the world Catholicism is threatened by a vast Protestant conspiracy

416 AMERICANISM

aunt whose recognized leader is William II. His invite-
The association with the reformers of Austria is quite significant.

His aim in going to Jerusalem was to replace the Protestant influence to the French influence, in order to be by the East, the master of the Christian world.

In light of these revelations, one then thinks of hundreds of thousands of Catholics massacred in Lins- promotion of Protestant England, by order of the Sultan, friend of William; to the inconceivable silence of the France and the preponderant influence of the Kaiser exercised influence within the European concert in favor of the executioner Turkish.

Soon new facts will emerge to support our
- to shed a more frightening light on the events and the danger we are pointing out.

Meanwhile, William went to the Holy Land with the high dignitaries of the heresy, supported by a powerful He left our country and he plans to go to Jerusalem. new times.

The Protestants invented in Jerusalem in our si- their own Calvary, on the caves of Jeremiah, whose configuration corresponds quite well to the paintings of the artists; the tomb of Saint Stephen discovered at the foot of the Cal- Vaire is their holy sepulchre.

They also planted an olive grove. William
Therefore, we hope to establish, outside of our sacred memories, a new Jerusalem on the ruins of Rome and Byzantium |

The Protestant movement is, one might say, international. nationally, it does not, except in rare cases, have a specific character religious. It seems that secret societies are pursuing the goal of destroying the Catholic Church without proposing, a another church to replace it.

It's not about any religion, we're fighting alonethat of the true God.

AMERICANISM 417

It is 14, which is the skill of the tactic.

When we have torn away the people's consoling faith-trice, we will replace it with another one that they accept-will do it without even realizing it, and all the easier-she lies, saying that she is not demanding, that she is easy to to practice: the Protestant faith.

This is the danger that must be denounced tirelessly.

In Switzerland, Protestants are displaying unprecedented zeal. They boldly attack Catholics, it is written of Lausanne to the Truth of August 1st, while we gar-donations, in their own cantons, a reserve that we we have already allowed ourselves to describe it as overly cautious.

Formerly the Bishop of Sion believed he should preemptively... politically his people of Valais against the traps of Heresy; now it is the bishop in charge of the administration the administration of the canton of Ticino, which finds itself obliged to address, with the same aim, a pastoral letter to the faithful of this Italian region, once subject to the see of Saint Ambroise and of Saint Charles Borromeo.

The danger is grave, and the prelate is compelled to negotiate, at The heart of the matter is the question. He particularly emphasizes the absence of the character of holiness in the so-called reformed religion who denies the uselessness of good works, "so much so," he says Bishop Molo, that a Protestant who does something Well, don't do it according to the doctrines of the sect.
but despite them.

Protestant propaganda in Catholic countries
This is all the more detestable because they are doing a work purely revolutionary and truly anti-religious, having nothing but nothingness, in terms of dogmas to give from whose souls they manage to wrest the true faith.

However, not only do their newspapers support them, but they mock us to the point of criticizing us. Our bishops dare to defend their flock in this way.

—

418 AMERICANISM

In Alsace, it was Pastor Hoffet who wrote, in the newspaper he runs, in Strasbourg:

Count Hornsbroech requests that Protestant influence remains predominant in Prussia. Do we have fewer rights to demand the same thing in Alsace-Lorraine? Is this country truly Catholic, as some officials claim?

No !

A country inhabited by four-fifths Catholics, is not a Catholic country. Protestantism has dominated in Alsace-Lorraine, despite the counter-reform which digitized it. It has weakened considerably. It will still need to dominate in the future for the good of the country, for the good of those who, without the will, they want to, and benefit from its strength.

We all belong to this race of dominators, we in whose veins flows the pure Protestant blood of the Alsace, we feel our power.

That is why we demand of Germany and the embassy. He's a worse evangelical than we think; he owes us a debt of honor. That the kings Louis and I, in their sad aftermath, weakened, thanks to the Germany's weakness at that time must be reinforced. noting that Germany is powerful. We do not accept the advice given to us by officials terrified by the clerical sheets. We will not be satisfied with General statements on tolerance and equality.

We also want tolerance and equality, but we want under the protective wings of a Protestantism that strong scent and who alone can and wants to introduce them into our country.

In France, it's M[™] d'Adhémar and M[™] Marie du Sa-

Cré-Cœur, a converted Protestant who brings her
A pickaxe blow against the Catholic building. It seems, Indeed, it is cracking on all sides under the blows deaf, repeated, but hitherto ignored by the Protestantism.

It is with the aim of demonstrating this in action that I have en-

AMERICANISM 419

I picked up this work which, I have a feeling, will attract me so much So much antipathy, so much hatred, so many insults. And for-
So much so, I write the truth...

A difficult and sometimes unpleasant role!

I will be given this justice, given everything I say is based on facts, on documents which I indicate the source in all honesty.

This is L'Éclair from the second half of July 1898.
which tells us a fantastic, unbelievable story,
But unfortunately, it's all too true. It relates to the reiigious teachers.

Here is the article from L'Eclair.

French Catholics are being asked to help right now.
to contribute to the founding of a teacher training college for the teaching nuns.

The work was born from the collaboration of the abbots Frémont and Naudet, with Miss the Viscountess of Adhémar and M^{re} Marie of the Sacred Heart, nun of the Congregation-tion of Notre-Dame d'Issoire, presents itself with such patronages that at first glance one might think all
The clergy united behind this work: Cardinal Sourrieu, Archbishop of Rouen, Mgr Sueur, Archbishop of Avi-Monsignor Renou, Archbishop of Tours, the bishops from Agen, from Angoulême, from Bayonne, from La Rochelle, from Le Puy, from Nîmes, from Nice, from Cahors, from Amiers, from Séze, Evreux, Digne and Rodez; Messrs. Coppée, Brunetière, Thureau-Dangin, of the French Academy;
P. Bureau and de Lapparent, professors at the Catholic Institute delic, Abbot Lemire, deputy, Etienne Leroy, former deputé, Vabbé Bretonnier, professor at the Sta- college Nielas, etc., etc., gave their support and came to support the founders' efforts.

However, if one is informed that the entire episcopate

French and all those who, in any capacity whatsoever, occupy-
They are facing a situation that is becoming increasingly apparent in the Catholic world.
Having been approached, one is soon more struck by the prominent and authorized names that do not appear on the list of those who are registered there.

420 AMERICANISM

A careful reading of both works: The short story education of women in the educated classes, by M^{me} the Viscountess d'Adhémar, and the teaching nuns gnantes and the necessities of the Apostolate, by M^{me}* Marie of the Sacred Heart, in the world M^{me} Laroche, where ex-
He would explain, having laid out the goal and program of the work, apparently, these abstentions.

This is a rather curious innovation and is the subject of bitter controversies in the religious world.

The ultramontanes denounce the teaching that we proposes to create something like a variety of America-feminine nism, and go so far as to utter the swear word
- "late 19th-century convent" or "late 19th-century nuns"
to". | |

So what exactly does this new teaching consist of?
The pure among the Catholics denounce as devoid-viewed from a purely orthodox perspective, notwithstanding the approvals of So many high-ranking Church officials?

One of the protesters will tell us who is doing this the echo of his group.

The complaints of a Catholic.

As a method of renovation and new principles-calves in the education of young girls, M^{me}° d'Adhémar suggest having them read excerpts from your works de Musset, Balzac, George Sand, Michelet, and the Life of Jesus of Renan; then from the sixteenth year of their to teach the "dogmatics of love".

Starting from this debatable point at least, that "ligno- .
"Rance does not guarantee innocence," she writes:

Innocence must be enlightened if it is to remain incorruptible.
When we impose it by force, masking all the ho-

'Rizes, we are happily bringing, perhaps, the young girl up until the wedding day: but what happens after that?..... The interests of offspring and preparation for the mission love wants, even among the most angelic young girls, a broad and deep education...

AMERICANISM 421

Preventing deviations in young girls possible consequences for the young woman by overturning the high wall which separates the two phases of life is – today, in Due to customs and traditions, the only way to succeed...
Easy complacency, easy capitulations do not...
They come to the woman no more after marriage than before....

That's true, but they still suit one A little less so for young girls. How, in any case, can their to "foreshadow the reservations that normal constraints"
Do the senses dictate Christian marriage?

This is a task that will not be easy for the re-nuns, or semi-nuns, who will leave the Institute of Notre-Dame.

The exercise of the senses

Let's continue:

Education... must overturn, stone by stone, the high mu-the irony that custom usually places between the life of the young daughter and the young woman's life.

It needs to be replaced with a transparent grid.
which will gradually reveal itself... something of the in-a viable future.....

The normal exercise of the senses is not a sin, it is a function.

Provided that the function is exercised legitimately, that is to say-
To speak according to the rules established by God is to obey morality.
But for the law to prevail, it must be known and We will have a duty to make it known honestly...

While the honest man believes in the necessity of a ignorance of everything reminiscent of sex and the senses, the libertine, he desires it like a wild and tasty fruit, of which He's saving the treat for himself.

The only thought that the noble openings of the sign-Christian lies can cause an impassable abyss between his fantasy and the defenseless prey he covets, outrage and revolt; he dreads this cry of unconscious conscience illuminated: not allowed!

24

422 = AMERICANISM

It is quite unwise to entrust the completion of education to someone else. feminine union to the husband.

Mr. d'Adhémar adds:

The husband will find it more advantageous to receive, from our hands a woman completely raised.

This has not been proven; it is to be feared that a plenary biscite on the question does not take a position in favor of small non-licet of the Notre-Dame Institute.

Allow me to quote again:

Yes, dear teachers, never blaspheme love human.

Educated and skillful whenever you encounter them the beautiful reflection in men, or in poetry, or in the arts, remember that it comes from heaven, and offer-to him Incense for your hearts.

Let's not forget, this lyrical appeal is addressed to... nuns. Care is taken, it is true, to exempt them from a vow of chastity; they will be able to marry after leaving The order. The precaution is prudent.

Religious teaching houses.

We ask: isn't this a way of bringing back families towards modernized religious education. Didn't Bishop Sueur write:

Our religious houses of women dedicated to the teachings— They are in a state of inferiority that cannot be denied.

Mer Turinaz, Bishop of Nancy, replied: —

It is absolutely inaccurate that the teaching congregations women's groups see the number of their members and the number of students in their boarding schools and schools will decrease. The opposite is true.

AMERICANISM 42%

The work that one wants to found already exists in the form of different forms. In Paris, for example, there is the Institute of Jacob Street; in the provinces, the scholasticates of the great or. teachers, who never refuse to admit other nuns from smaller congregations and finally convents, the organizations that take charge of placing the Catholic schoolteachers.

Another "Americanism",

No, no, you see, it really is a reform of religious life and modification of programs. It's the Americanism of women. Ms. Adhémar, a Protestant convert, and her friends want to innovate in the education of young Catholic girls, like the followers of Father Hecker, a converted Protestant, They are trying to change things from another angle. They are the same trends and often the same people.

In America, writes Mw Marie of the Sacred Heart, where the Principles always work to their ultimate consequences.

the egalitarian system is carried out to the point of complete identity education of both sexes.....

Would the French nun have an independent moral temperament? inferior to that of the young American Protestant?.....Better than geared towards the struggle, more vibrant, more modern, we can— Let us laugh at rescuing many poor souls from these catastrophes... —do we know what is stopping them?

“I will never have the courage,” one of them told us, to renounce the joys of intelligence...»

Why not establish a current in our monasteries of things of the mind, a life of intelligence... Our thoughts powered by higher sources would give our so— The city has an incomparable charm.

The turn-of-the-century convent, the last monastery, where one because with five o'clock tea, and caviar sandwiches, for days of abstinence, inhabited by nuns of the cloister.

In the perhaps near future, everything points to it, more than one convent will be expected to bring about major changes adaptations to cloistered life...

As for the Little Sister of the Poor and the Sister of charity, M^{me}* Marie du Sacré-Cœur believes that they do an anti-social work:

And perhaps, some say, they will, substituting the religious devotion of an association to the most important duties sacred to the family and the individual, further aggravating the displeasure— family and social gation... The place of this wife of

This mother was near the bedside of this sick man... yes, but he There is a nun there with tireless devotion... To this

What remains of the family, of its sacred duties?

his intimate relationships?

Sad pages penned by a nun, especially if their purpose is to ask that "I sympathize"
"practices" do not only go to "humanitarian works"
nitaires.

AMERICANISM 425

– There are open protests around the world
religious ?

– Perfectly. Father Coubé replied in a few Words to describe these new features, one could not say it better

Speaking to the nuns of the Congregation of Our-Lady in Paris, during the celebrations of the canonization of Saint Pierre Fourier, their founder, the scholar and eloquent Jesuit exclaimed:

These days, we hear a lot about our needs.
calves... Wouldn't the new need for the schoolteacher be... not to draw inspiration from the ideas of simplicity that Pierre Fourier preached to his daughters, instead of studying and teaching a psychology and physiology, the ignorance of which, until the
The wedding day did not prevent our grandmothers and our mothers to beautifully understand their duties during-
What time had come?

It goes without saying that we leave it to our interlocutor, usually very well informed, the responsibility of his
Our readers will be the critics and commentators.
theirs as they see fit. One fact stands out from this conversation:
the reform, approved by the bishops and the majority of the clergy, of the teaching given at the convent.

"One must be of one's time" is Marie du's motto.
Sacred Heart. It has its good points and was often that of the Church. It is understandable, however, that Catholics grumble about it.
"Relics of the past."

Fortunately, Lightning was tricked in the way the most complete by saying that the reform was "approved-raised by the bishops and the majority of the clergy."

But this reform, advocated by prominent figures that L'Éclair noted nonetheless indicates a state of es-took some very worrying turns.

Here again we see the encroachment of Americanism,
the spirit of novelty, always dangerous.

This trend of ideas, of modern liberalism, comes from the New World.

It's a symptom.

But the contemporary error is liberalism. Jug-

24%

426 AMERICANISM

that here, the Catholic religion was not permeated by it.

The day when, under the pretext of removing the truth's as-Catholicism has been made more accessible through various means.
would fall within the views of the innovators, would follow the ten-dances of this doctrinal liberalism, dear to the English Saxons, there would no longer be a Catholic Church, but a Protestant church.

This is the goal towards which all of its efforts are directed.
enemies.

And they are blind or unconscious, duped or complicit,
those who lend their support to what has been agreed to call the "search for progress in religious matters"
"Gious."

The Court of Rome, moreover, will always condemn these reckless acts, these undertakings, these culpable boldnesses.

Faithful and sovereign guardian of truth, supreme bulwark of faith, she could not pronounce in their faveur. (1)

But the rising tide of impiety, liberalism men-
'eur, deceitful, hypocritical, the spirit of novelty and nithese developments nonetheless threaten the Catholic world.
ic, concealing Protestant activities. I believe having demonstrated enough.

Protestantism is at our doorstep

Let us be vigilant.

(4) Rome has just condemned Americanism and the book of Mmo Marie du Sacré-Cœur.

CHAPTER IX

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

All high positions to the Huguenots. – The step-
Mr. Lecoat. –Through the departments. – In Paris.
– In the colonies. – The work of Protestantism.

The Protestants want to Protestantize us, that's not not doubtful (1).

The most curious thing is that these attempts to protest-
The tantamount to the Catholic nations is happening in full 20th century, at a time when faith was not very strong, Alas! And those who, in France in particular, see from a the plans of the German emperor viewed favorably, For example, they are, for the most part, people who...
a conflict between freethinkers and enemies of superstition religious, fanatical, etc.

They are not fanatics when it comes to the Catholic religion, but they immediately become clerics determined to promote the expansion of protesting.

To be honest, it's perhaps less the Protestant religion-aunt that Protestantism or the Protestant spirit, which constitutes a danger.

(1) Among the many Protestant works in France, we Let us note the Comiré pe LA FRANCE PROTESTANT, a significant title, pre-seated by Mr. de Schickler, 17, Place Vendôme.

428. THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

The Protestant religion as a religion is taking shape more and more each day; practitioners are becoming increasingly...
in addition to being rarer; it no longer has any of its primary principles.
Mordiaux; everything that was its reason for being is crumbling away,
It disintegrates, it vanishes. Nothing remains but a
A vague religiosity ranging from ritualism to rationalism.
This is precisely what makes Protestantism: more re-doubtful. And how precious it is to him to know how to adaptable to all variations!

If Protestantism were what it was in the 16th century, 'a false religion, a heresy, yes, but a religion with symbols, a faith, a Creed, it would be by this a time of indifference, also hated by the masses popular than the Catholic religion.

If he had openly entered into a struggle against Catholicism... he would not have succeeded in introducing, in sneaking in, licism _ everywhere his creatures, and the anti-Catholic movement of which he is the soul would have completely failed.

Protestantism had initially tried to do this average, some twenty years ago. You have to read about the current mission of French Protestantism the article enthusiastic article published in 1878 in the Revue chrétienne by Mr. Edmond Stapfer, still a professor today theology in Paris.

The thesis is very simple: Catholicism, The implacable enemy of modern freedoms is lost. On the other hand, atheistic positivism is still frightening. only destroys what is replaced; it is therefore up to the protest- Tantism will be the refugee camp from Rome.

"So it's a good game for Protestantism in at this moment. Already, he has his share of influence in the government-acclaimed member who is liberal or parliamentary... We begins to appreciate it, to feel that it can be, that it is truly a power. Who knows if the time for "Great conquests in our country will not be announced?" (Christian Review 1878, pages 330-345).

So they immediately set to work, according to the Studies. nuns of July 20, 1898. Three names sum up this large deployment of forces to attack Catholicism from all sides at once.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 429

The economic and social aspects of the issue were discussed. written by a Belgian publicist, Mr. de Laveleye, of whom we disseminated the publications profusely in France: luti-litarianism replaced religion.

And Mr. Francisque Sarcey declared that the only thing The thing to do was to embrace Protestantism (Christian Review)

(This appears to be a fragment from a larger text, possibly a fragment from another text, Philosophy also had its apostle, Mr. Renouvier.

And Mr. de Pressensé expressed his full sympathy for auxiliaries who represented "the demand of "Conscience versus infallibility."

But it was necessary to act on the masses.

Another defector, Eugène Reveillaud, took charge work. Soon he was attending conferences popular throughout France, his passion as a tribune and of a renegade.

A sensationalist pamphlet, "The Good War," was launched.
to teach France that it was thirsty for pro-Testantism and proposing a crusade to him, the author of which would be Peter the Hermit:

"I visited more than one department, I spoke with everyone"
men of all conditions and all opinions,

I can affirm that, in most provinces, the liberal minds, bourgeois, workers, peasants. He does not shy away from would in no way be linked to Protestantism.

What is needed, therefore, is to call all these people to the "good"
new"; it's going to the crossroads; it's doing the good religious democracy; it is, in a word, to provoke a general and simultaneous movement of conversions, of memberships.

I propose the formation of a society of good men will, Protestants by faith and Protestants by reason, which would be the heralds of the appeal to consciences.

Moreover, with astonishing nonchalance, he

(1) We understand that "the uncle" has strong ties Huguenots.

430 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

wove that the new Protestantism imposed no dogma, neither faith in God, nor belief in an afterlife.
Unbelievers and atheists would feel at home there. Exit of Catholicism and declaring "the good war" against it was enough.

A good Muslim would have found that to be too little.
Caivin would have lit the pyre.

The shame of present-day Protestantism was to welcome to
With open arms, such an ally, to shower him with honors, to delegate it often to the unofficial synods of ortho-Doxie: her name even appears among the members of the Bible commission.

Editor of Signal, he is still today one of the great leaders of the Protestant campaign (1).

(1) "A Protestant," said Heine, "is a Catholic who leaves
Trinitarian Idolatry to move towards Jewish monotheism.

This definition is absolutely accurate.

The Protestants are, in fact, merely a tool in the hands of...
Jews who use it to ensure their domination in the world. The Jews pursue one goal: universal religion.
They become philosophers, liberals, freethinkers, and draw closer from a certain Protestant school and use it as a bridge, for, after having wrested all belief from the Catholics and in all faith, to make them accept a hesitant religiosity where cha-Each will believe what they please to believe, and will render to the divinity the worship that it will be appropriate for him to render.

"Each person, according to their conscience, will retain the practices of the worship rendered to the one and immaterial God, or will reform them according to the principles of a liberal and humanist Israelism
"Silence."

Thanks to the extent of this "practical freedom... progress will spring forth and universal religion will emerge without any conscience was truly disturbed" (Arch, Isr. II, p. 448-119, year 1868).

Modern Protestant philosophers seem to have the same ideal: universal religion, union in Christ, as they say.

Here is another characteristic word, and one that sheds light on 18
Israel's thinking and the goal it pursues, says the Religious Weekly
From Cambrai, September 24, 1898: "Universal religion."
The universal religion is the Catholic religion. In truth

However, the campaign failed miserably on this point.
The ground. The method wasn't good.

We changed our approach.

And instead of openly causing a stir by fa-
In the face of Protestantism, a muted tone was adopted, an affected Instead of being tolerant, they tried to make themselves invisible, but instead of... filter everywhere, slowly, methodically, in the functions of the State.

Once inside the citadel, we would be its master.

PP I FETE AN,

Catholicism, "liberal and humanitarian Israelism" can subs-to establish a Catholic religion in one's own way, where everyone will be able to enter and where everyone will get along, because she will not impose any dogma. "It is especially essential to se-clearly distinguish the morality that belongs to everyone. of the dogma re-religious practice specific to each belief. (Arch. isi' XI, p. 504, (Ann. 1867).

"The Universal Israelite Alliance does not stop at our While not a religion in itself, it addresses all religions. It wants to re-enter in all religions, as it permeates all the countries... That enlightened men, without distinction of religion, unite in this universal Israelite association, of which the
But it is so noble and so broadly civilizing. To recognize that all religions whose basis is morality, of which God is the summit, are sisters and should be friends with each other; to do Breaking down the barriers that separate what should be united?
day: this is the beautiful, the great mission of our Israel- alliance universal lit. Let us march firm and resolutely on the path that is traced for us. (Arch. Isr. XXV, pp. 514-520, 600, 651, (Ann. 1861)

They simply want to annihilate the Catholic religion by This universal religion. That is the goal of the alliance. And all the enemies of the church, Protestants, Freemasons and Jews gather around the banner of the United Israeli Association Verselle. And the Cambrai Weekly adds:

These are the ideas of Jews today. These are their projects, presented by themselves, and that it is not necessary Moreover, to see written in the publications made by them: and for them. You just have to open your eyes to what's been happening since a century and especially for the last twenty years, in the political world and in the world of ideas, to see the immense effort that is being made to abolish all traces of faith in institutions and in the souls. ;

432 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

Such was the new Protestant tactic, still in vigor.

And you will see later that, in this area, she has It worked perfectly.

To achieve his goals, it was important to allocate the most profound indifference in religious matters. And, again once, if Protestantism does not provoke any attack, There was no animosity in the lower classes, that's because... has strived to go unnoticed, silently, and also because its followers have resolutely taken sides with the persecutors of the Catholic religion.

By blaspheming, insulting, persecuting the ca- The Catholics, the Protestants, misled the public who saw in them, not what they truly are, sectarians, preaching only for their own benefit, pulling at They get all the coverage, but free thinkers, ad- branches of the true church. From then on, they could do everything to try, to dare everything, to infiltrate everywhere, stealthily, sur- noise, masked by the clerical specter they acted- were standing before the crowd.

In this chapter, I will show you them occupying the highest positions in the State in proportions considerable, considering their number. And to give To the complete satisfaction of the incredulous reader, I will quote and the names and the positions held by these Huguenots.

We will have no choice but to believe when we have seen. :

Because, I readily admit, people refuse to accept, even the multiple pieces of evidence I have presented in this debate, to prove that the policy that leads Europe tends to Protestantize it; but note that it is a provisional concession that I am making to you, because I am adding im- mediation: | |

If the Protestants didn't want to Protestantize us How can we explain that there are so many of them in all public sector jobs in France, which we deal with more specifically. It's not possible that chance

This was intentionally done, since the same fact is observed by-

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 433

Everything. Therefore, it must be a system, and the State, the power, protects Protestants at the expense of the Catholics.

Why this Protestant propaganda about everything?
the country's points, propaganda reported in one of the pre-
The first chapters of this work? The result is not Negative, believe me.

Protestantism, writes Le Figaro, has taken away from Catholicism:
Mr. Rosseuw Saint-Hilaire, during his lifetime a member of the Ins-
Professor and teacher at the Sorbonne; Count Jules Delaborde; Doctors de Valcourt and Lamouroux: Mr. Victor de Pres-sensible, Mr. Francis de Pressensé's own grandfather;
Mr. Monnier, who was president of the General Council of the Meurthe and nephew of Marshal Ney; Mr. Guignard, sub-military quartermaster, subjected to disciplinary action for his excessive zeal of a novice; Commander Gætschy, qu; supported a high-profile lawsuit against the parents of his woman, deceased, whom they wanted, for religious reasons, to remove his guardianship of his children; Mr. Jules Favre; Mr. Léon Pilatte, the fiery publicist of the Mediterranean coast;
Mr. Bourgeois, Doctor of Law, now a pastor in the Ardèche; Mr. Paul Bouchard, mayor of Beaune, the most old friend of the late President Carnot; Mr. Ledoux, professor-sister at the School of Mines; Mr. Frédéric Passy and his family; Mr. Faucher, Inspector General of Powders and Saltpeter in retirement; Mr. Renouvier, the director of the Philosophical Critique-phique; Mr. Alfred Leroux, archivist of Haute-Vienne;
Mr. Turquei, former Minister of Fine Arts, who returned to Catholicism, but left to Protestantism its two girls. Finally, the most recent, Mr. Laroche, resident generalral of Madagascar, and M^{mo} Laroche.

The synagogue does not make proselytes, but it does...
nit... She gave to Protestantism:

Other members of the Pereire and Fould families: Achille
Fould, Minister of Finance under the Empire; M^{me}* Thurneys-Sen, daughter of Isaac Pereire, and Mr. Henri Pereire; the families d'Eichthal and Erlanger; the engineer and the artillery captain Flraenkel; part of the Halévy family, the one to which belongs to Ludovic Halévy.

All these names together, each with its own value, show

434 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

that beneath the apparent indifference of minds to which we
 As we witness, the religious problem continues to torment the consciences and sometimes brings them to that precise point where they are forced to say with Michelet: "Tradition is my Mother: Freedom is me.

And you saw how much the Huguenots, our masters,
 are solvents.

Do we need to remind you of their role in Madagascar, in All our colonies, in the Dreyfus affair? I don't know—
 I have no more dangerous disruptors of the social order.
 cial.

It is, moreover, the 16th-century Reformation that is the
 the cause of all our ills.

The Revolution of 1789, Bismarck once said, was the tail of the Reformation.

Nothing could be more brutally true.

By discussing religion, by establishing the principle of Free inquiry destroyed religious unity; then we discussed the political authority, which itself did not delay to sink; that's what needs to be repeated again and again.

And so, the door was open to all passions.
 to all the most subversive theories. And we are reached the point of having no respect for authority whatsoever Either we discuss it, we contest it, that is to say, we diminishes it and it ceases to be the authority.

Such a state of affairs is called anarchy.

France is in this state. The chambers control justice and the army, like the convention of old.

They themselves are under pressure from other parties.
 of the multitude. There is nothing left, no religious conviction.
 . gious, neither family, nor Fatherland, nor property, nor magistrate-ture qui scit respected.

No political or social institution to defend.
Society is under threat.

They cried: Down with God! And in the distance, a voice replied: Long live dynamite!

But God is immutable and his religion, despite the se-

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 435

the most terrifying curves, is still standing in the middle ruins piled up by those who made him war.

This is a precious consolation for Catholics,
But it does not follow that they must remain inactive.

We will always be, because our faith is divine;
So be it; but we can be diminished, lessened, per-Stalked, tyrannized.

We can be treated as outlaws or as a quan-negligible tity, with which one can do anything-to put; they can make life very difficult for us, we exclude from all important public jobs in favor of of intriguing minorities.

This is what is happening today, and this is what will remain will emerge from this chapter.

+
+ ©

In Cazvanos, there are approximately 3,000 Protestants, including nearly 800 in Condé-sur-Noireau. There are also some in Cabourg and Epron.

Among Protestant or Protestant- officials tisant, let us quote Mr. Zévort, sub-prefect of Vire, son of Mr. Zévort, Rector of the University of Caen.

The Protestant politicians are: Mr. Conrad de Witt, Member of Parliament; Le Gost, District Councillor; _ Arthur Lemaitre, borough councillor.

'Two editors of the Journal de Caen are protest-
'tants: Mr. Galland, former history professor, de-dying at 21 rue Sainte-Anne, and Mr. Magdelaine, rue de Arquette, 6.

– Are these all the senior officials of Calva-Backs, you might say? In truth, there aren't very many of them.

So you want to force me to tell you that Messrs. Tessier and Biville, professors at the University of Caen, are equally Protestants, as well as Mr. Osmont de Courtisigny, advisor to the court of Caen!

436 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

*
++

In the Seve-Intérieure, Mr. Ricard, deputy, Messrs. Sieg-Fried and Waddington, senators, are Protestants.

Mr. Daniel, married to a Lutheran, Ms. Vogelge-Sang, is a prosecutor in Rouen.

e
e @

In the year 1896, there was an academic inspector.
Démie, Mr. Habert, married to a militant Protestant who had turned his living room into a proselytizing center active, to such an extent that this propaganda invades-Health had been the subject of a discussion at the council
general. |

The district of Gex is infested with Protestants.
spiteful.

In Bourg, the Protestants of Geneva have just come to cons-to build a temple that cost them 120,000 francs; they do relentless propaganda.

The president of the civil court, Mr. Coularou, is protestating (1). He married, M^{lle}: Ausset, daughter of a pastor and Mr. Ausset's brother, a Protestant and advisor to the Court from Amiens, although relatively young.

These good people are all related and encourage each other to Who better than Aou in the upper echelons of the civil service?
while Catholics are excluded from it to a certain extent equal.

Let us add that Mr. Morellet, senator for Ain, would be Protestant.

s
+ e

In the Azuer, the prefect, Mr. Diény, is Protestant.

(1) He has just been appointed advisor to the Court of Chambéry.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 437

` In Lor-ET-Cner, Messrs. de Coutouly, treasurer Paymaster General, and Petit, Inspector of Children in Care are Protestants.

In the Jura, Mr. Stromeyer, a Protestant, is under-Prefect of Poligny.

Mr. Emmanuel Bouquet is the public prosecutor in Lons-le-Saulnier.

*
+.

The department of Sems-s1-Marxe has a prefect Huguenot, Mr. Bægner.

&
* ©

There's also a Mr. Teissandier somewhere, good Protestant and treasurer-paymaster general.

His son-in-law, Mr. Castaing, also a Huguenot, is Public Prosecutor in Orléans.

As everywhere else, the Jews, the Freemasons and Protestants reign in the Loiret, particularly in capital. l

The prefect, Mr. Boegner, who has just been appointed to the Seine-et-Marne, is a militant Protestant.

Through his wife he is allied to the de Pressensé family, whose that name caused such a stir.

His Lutheran fervor, however, could not save him
Mr. Rabier, Radical-Socialist MP, was furious. of Orléans.

Mr. Boegner, who had occupied [the position] for about twelve years
The Loiret prefecture, too, had to follow its own path in the reshuffling of prefects that took place in July 1898.

438 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

While Mr. Boegner is considered moderate in politics, he does not Pest hardly from a religious point of view.

In Orléans, he surreptitiously monitored the functions-Catholic naysayers, and his favors always went to the renegades.

On Sundays, the Prefect held catechism classes at the temple.
schism to Protestant children.

We're not criticizing, but if you want to know
Mr. Boegner's opinion on Catholic civil servants
Here is the one that would dare to do the same:

One day, a very independent person of character
he said to Mr. Boegner:

– You make them recite the Protestant catechism little children of your coreligionists; I do not find it Not bad.

But what would you say if a Catholic civil servant would go, like you, on Sunday, at the same time, to do to recite the catechism to the young children belonging to Catholic families?

"It's not the same thing," the coldly replied.
Prefect, with his usual sly look. You Others, Catholics, you cannot practice religion
gion without engaging in politics, and hostile politics;
For us Protestants, it's completely different.

That's impressive! It was the same thing as always.
At all times: he who wants to drown his dog accuses it of rabies.
– With ideas like that, we wouldn't even be able to anymore to recite Ave Maria without resorting to hostile politics...

Ms. Bægner, for her part, could not stand Catholics.
Having learned that a young woman she saw quite she had often placed her daughter in a religious boarding school
He ceased all social relations with this young woman.

In contrast, M[™] Boegner was very closely linked with the Girerd, then treasurer-paymaster general in Orléans, whose woman, M^{*} Duvernet, from La Châtre (Indre), student of George Sand had her children baptized because Baptism "is nothing but nonsense, since it is not inflicted than to unconscious people," but did not make them do

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 439

their first communion, because at that time, they were in age to understand and to say what they wanted to do...

It is true that every time one of his daughters was proposed to (she married two) the family of the demanding future, these young girls then hastened to make their first communion in Pau and return then get married in the cathedral. Oh! the convictions of Those people!...

This greatly annoyed Mr. Beegner, who had vainly-ment sought to bring these freethinkers to the protest-Tantrism; but the Catholicism of the Girerds had a the tint was so superficial that it was tolerated.

It was a curious sight, to see so recently again, at the time of the Protestant Bagner in Orléans, the Protestant Fousset, an individual without a mandate, -his
His only quality, if it can be called that, is being the brother of the se-Professor Fousset (also a Huguenot), - go every mornings at the prefecture.

From Ia he went to the office of the central commissioner, Mr. Anglès, his relative, Calvinist like him; then he cluttered the courtroom with his restless presence
Mr. Castaing, Public Prosecutor.

What was this short, stout man with the ter- face going to do?
reuse, walking with a toad-like gait?

It was said that he was going to recommend his coreligions-naires.

And that's how Mr. Emile Fousset, who denies the "in-Dugences," he constantly asked for for his family...

This man, a retired former grocer, who is nothing to Orléans, not even a municipal councilor, knew how, thanks to the complacency of his coreligionists, to create in this locality has a certain influence and playing the character-Swimming. And he continues.

440 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

$
L &.

There is also in Orléans, a woman well known by her Lutheran intolerance, M^{me} Le Beau, daughter of fire Mr. Devade, former deputy of Loiret, and widow of Lan-former president of the court.

She, too, meddles in everything with such zeal ardent, that she was nicknamed "the evangelist".

It was enthroned in the Prefecture during the time of the Boegniers.

It still sits there today under Prefect Hum-Pert, a radical who wants to become a Protestant.

M^{me} The Beautiful pushes this one, pushes that one aside. By the prefect and by the Fousset family, she held and still holds office a kind of proconsulship.

One day, Prefect Boegner told him:

– I would like to have our coreligion decorated-MX naire... court advisor before another magistrate who has a much longer service record that he, who publishes books and collaborates on the principal-main judicial collections, which constitutes for him exceptional securities.

I desire it all the more as I am on the eve of marry my daughter and that MX., with whom I am in-The timely connection must serve as a witness. With a ribbon It would be much more decorative worn in a buttonhole.

"It's very kind of you to hold back," he replied.
M = The Beautiful. His competitor is Catholic, therefore he is not a republican.

That should be enough for you to try to get him removed from the picture.

He readily obeyed the advice of his muse, Prefect Boegner, despite the word he had given to the two heads of the Court, fought, in below, the magistrate they presented in the first online, in order to help his fellow believer succeed... who doesn't was no less defeated. The prefect then hastened to address Congratulations to the decorated magistrate!

And M"? Boegner was married to a witness whose The buttonhole was not adorned with the much-desired ribbon.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 44i

It will be noted: these brave parpauits occupy all the most beautiful places, those that are and honori-fictional and handsomely paid.

I would add that I could cite many other names of Protestant civil servants in the departments that I just reviewed.

I don't want to, not being a police officer, and I don't not wanting this nomenclature to have the character of a denunciation that the individus on whose backs I exercise my right as a writer.

This is not a proscription list; it is simply-a number of names, a minimum number mum of high-ranking positions held by Protestants, that I'm training.

My sole aim is to establish the disproportion between Protestant and Catholic civil servants, relative-ment among the followers of each of these religions gions.

When I established, through the names and functions of Gentlemen, the Huguenots, how they are filled with privileges! laws to the detriment of Catholics; when I established, per department, which, proportionally, amounts to 10 a 30 '/', more numerous in high-level public functions I'll stop my statistics on religious issues, rather than Catholic ones. keeping the other Huguenot names behind my back-siers to use them later.

*
* *

Let's continue our journey across France.

In Lor, Mr. Serr (1), sub-prefect of Gourdon, is Protestant; Mr. André, primary school inspector in Cahors east too.

(1) Today in Saint-Affrique.
| | 25°

442 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

Mr. Serr favors, and we understand why, the schemes Protestants with all her power.

One curious fact to note is that for some time now Over time, the sub-prefects who succeeded one another in Gourdon were all Protestants, such as Messrs. de Selves, Turk, and finally Serr.

Mr. André has been in Cahors for about a year. He does not It didn't take much more for him to make himself known through his animosity against the students of the congregation in the examinations mens.

If you wish, we will move on to another department, unless you'd like to know that Mr. Coueslant, director of the Journal du Lot, is protested so much.

Mr. Coueslant bought it a little over a year ago, the Layton printing works, one of the most important in the region, and the Journal du Lot which depended on it. From this a very moderate republican newspaper, it has created an organ radical and anticlerical.

Mr. Coueslant was recently appointed secretary of the radical committee.

®
* ©

In Finistère, Mr. Arnaud, the prefect, is all he is There are more Protestants. He married a Protestant woman whose... The father is a winegrower in the Gard region.

In Limoges, in the Haute-Vienne department, one of the high-Republican officials once said:

"The persecution laws are the work of the Protestants." who have only pushed the Freethinkers without to put myself forward personally.

Their influence in Haute-Vienne is relatively restricted, given their isolation. However, plu-Several major porcelain manufacturers are Protestants.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 443

In their year, Mr. Haviland, married to Mr. Tra-'s daughter Rieux, lets his children be raised in the religion of their mother and became a Protestant by inclination and of ideas. He was a Catholic by birth. Mr. Trarieux comes to Limoges often.

The Attorney General, Mr. Auzière, and the prosecutor of The Republic is Protestant.

In a large part of the Bellac district,
The Protestants are numerous and enter into conflict.
lontiers with the parish priests. Some communes, in Catholic majority, tolerate an entire municipality | Protestant and sectarian.

i A Balledent, by Rançon, to V... and to T..., the pastors are supported by an evangelical society, supposedly French. They are not paid by the State, their Cults are merely tolerated.

The Protestant subjects, like everywhere else, want to doto undermine into tyrants those who have the misfortune to live alongside alongside them, and even if they were only the minority.

In Balledent, there are about 80 of them compared to 500; despite That, they have always been masters in administration.
municipal tion.

The mayor is a devout Protestant and civilly married.
with a Protestant woman.

Like almost everywhere else, they are not Protestant.
Out of conviction; they are, above all, hateful. Everything, rather than Catholicism.

The former council of Balledent, composed largely of...
A community of Protestants had a project drawn up in 1889.
school construction in the priest's garden; the project,
Stopped for a long time, is now running again.

It's primarily a nuisance, and all the more so more revolting than the old rectory and the garden have were bought back by the first priest of Balledent, in 1849.
Having been an episcopal estate until 1888, these the goods became the property of the State, which sold them 50 francs to the commune for the use of the priest, obviously-

444 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

...ment; but the Protestants took advantage of the fact that it was communal property, to request the declassification of the
for the most part, knowing very well that the situation of the
The priest's position would become even more precarious.

At Y....., where Protestants are the majority: 500, against 150, processions are prohibited.

Do I need to, in order to complete the Haute-Vienne, tell you cites another Protestant official?

-© Then read Mr. Leroux, archivist and librarian, a austere and an activist.

Organizes conferences on Sundays in a hall where distributions are made and where feedback is given to the audience various types of services, it seems

Let us add that the architect-inspector of dio- buildings Césains was a Protestant, Mr. Geay. He has just moved-to laugh in the best feelings of fervor, after having given throughout his life, an example of great ver-tu.

He had frequent and cordial relations with them.
with all the clergymen.

It is likely that Mr. Geay's son will succeed him father.

*
+.

In Tours, the new mayor, a Huguenot, appointed Cosson has just banned the outdoor ceremonies of the cult. Wherever they are masters, these vile bald-nists are harassing Catholics.

That's the rule with them.

An English historian, an opponent of traditional ideas, Bickle has already noted this: it was precisely at the time when they were treated better than any Protestants showed the highest pretensions, the most acute intolerance, er!- Mr. Urbain Guérin said this in La Vérité on June 19, 1898.

One of the first steps they took was to demarlast, in a large assembly gathered after the death of Henry IV in Saumur, the banning of Catholic processions

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 445

in the towns, squares or castles where protestators. They opposed the Catholic priests They would go to administer the last rites to the dying. Wouldn't you believe, upon reading these claims from two centuries ago, that they originate from a radical of our time?

La Rochelle was the holy city of the Huguenots; they did there- They were undermining without question. Therefore, they were able to give free rein. They give free rein to their feelings. Having nothing to spare, they do not did not want to leave the use of a single one to the Catholics church. In 1619, the general assembly of the clergy, in Loudun, decided that no Jesuit, nor indeed any other A cleric authorized by a bishop could not preach in a Protestant town.

Pastors forbid their followers from attending any baptism, marriage or funeral celebrated by a priest Catholic. The sacraments were refused to parents whose The children were marrying into Catholic families. Intolerance was pushed so far that Louis XIII, during his Visit to Pau in 1620, did not find a single church in in which he could perform his devotions.

Even the government itself was not immune to their post-crisis criticisms. ticks, to their insatiable desire for domination. They gathered in 1615 in Grenoble and Nîmes. The government was supposed to refusing to recognize the Council of Trent, which however they were not looking at them, and at the same time they were ordering their leaders opposed the king's marriage to a princess Spanish cease. Although having obtained a more favorable treaty- It was something they could never have imagined, they continued their relentless war of libels and pamphlets against leg Catholics.

An assembly gathered in December 1620 in La Rochelle voted the confiscation of all property belonging to churches Catholics. More than half a century later, the Assembly constituant realized it; it is one of the first articles of the program of our current rulers, among whom finds such a large number of Protestants.

Despite this attitude, the royal government did not depart- He did not abandon his policy of tolerance. He continued to respect Pedestrian petition by which Henry IV had wanted to seal the end of the Religious wars. Even after the siege of La Rochelle, Richelieu pursued the same policy. He did not wear any attack on religious freedom.

446 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

In the war waged against God, the Protestant element has played a very active role. This is also the opinion that Dru- Mont emits in Jewish France.

This role was sometimes clearly acknowledged, as with the Ferry, the Berts, the Ribots, sometimes cautious and sly. From the very beginning of the Republic, the Protestant-Frenchism allied itself with the Jewish community, including Wading- Your party went to support the interests at the Congress of Berlin. 'It was in order. We noted it twenty times,' he added. . profound thinker, the close connection that exists between the Jewish and Protestant.

In 1882, the Protestants began with the decrees to persecute Catholics wherever they can- were going.

Who doesn't remember that unfortunate young girl? Anna Féral, held captive by the Protestants despite the rulings of the Court of Toulouse ordering that the child was returned to her grandfather, Barboteau. Mad about doubt, this old man wrote to the Minister of Justice, the March 42, 1884, so that his granddaughter could be returned to him. This It was in vain.

While engaging in proselytizing, the Protestants, without going as far as the Jews who were more common- men and bolder than them, applied themselves vigorously- to dishonor and persecute the religion of majority of French people.

Their agent in the campaign undertaken to destroy in the soul of the new generations every feeling raised, with full respect for the great traditions of our ancestors, was the man named Steeg, a pastor, a fiery insulter of the Catholics, elected deputy for Bordeaux with the support of Freemasonry and author of one of the manuals condemned. That one worked conscientiously.

Born German like Spuller (4), he was never na-

(1) Vapereau, always so measured and so prudent, confirms this.

The son of a craftsman, a Prussian subject, in June 1877, he...

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 441

customized and rendered a service to its true part by corrupting-pant French youth (1).

There was something about this choice that added a bit of spice to it. left wing in which all patriotic sentiment is dead, and who loves the stranger with the hatred she bears everything French; also, in February 1836, Was this Prussian appointed by acclamation as president of the left-wing union group.

Some Protestants, whose hearts were filled with disgust,

he appealed to the Versailles court, without success, a judge- In a declaratory statement of his French identity, he asserted that he had completed the necessary formalities in Strasbourg in 1857, formerly Ytès, whose traces were destroyed by the bombardment of 1870.

The Versailles Courier, gave an article on this Prussian, who had become schoolteacher of French youth, a few very important points precise.

Mr. Jules Steeg was born in Versailles on February 21, 1836. His father, Jean Steeg, a Prussian subject, held the position of concierge in addition to the shoemaker profession.

In 1877, Pastor Steeg, whom everyone considered as foreigner, filed a case before the Versailles court, so that, by a judgment, the quality of French citizenship-

His claim was recognized. In support of his request, Mr. Steeg argued of a declaration of nationality that he had made, he said, in 1857.

The court requested an extract from the municipal register on to which this declaration must have been recorded.

"This register," replied Mr. Steeg, "was burned during the Siege of Strasbourg. A reporting judge was then appointed.

Unfortunately for Mr. Steeg, the reporting judge had been... formerly attached to the Strasbourg prosecutor's office and he had exercised these functions during the sitge. [1] was therefore better than anyone else in measure to know what happened in Strasbourg in 1870.

It seems that what he knew didn't fit with the pre-Mr. Steeg's tensions.

The fact is that the pastor's request was rejected.

The judgment therefore contains an implicit proclamation of the Mr. Steeg, the fisherman, a member of parliament, is of Prussian nationality. Gironde.

(1) This Jules Steeg is the same one we showed in the chapter: Protestants and the University, in the company of Buisson and Pécaut.

448 'THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST'

In their enjoyment of this spectacle, they were content to exercise a regrettable pressure on parents to force them to put the Compayré manual into the hands of children who was also condemned by the Court of Rome.

Prefect Monod stood out among these (4); he em-literally poisoned the department of Calvados, with Compayré manuals that he sent to the municipalities platitudes with his business card. He did more, he dared, he protesting, supporting Catholics that a manual, put to The index did not violate school neutrality. Following from a ridiculous letter, published by Monod on this subject, a The Norman newspaper noted this misplaced zeal in terms which, Although somewhat sharp, they were certainly deserved; at the same time, he recalled the scandals that occur They knew in Paris, thanks to the support given to the forgers through Freemasonry.

If we want to allow ourselves a comparison, he said vulgar, Mr. Monod appears to us here as one of those em-public poisoners, who are euphemistically called by the name of a wine merchant. A scientific analysis proves it.

that some random tavern owner doesn't give you, in fact, wine, than a mixture of vile drugs, which has no name in no language, and they tell you: do not drink of this, it is poison. But the tavern keeper Monod rebels and you "demonstrates," in his words, that it is perfectly harmless. He might even argue that it's more than just harmless.
Pure Château-Margaux from 1811, the year of the comet!

(1) It was this Monod who tolerated, if he did not encourage, the disturbances that occurred in 1884, in Caen, on Sunday of the Passion.

A wretch holding a copy of La Lanterne in his hand entered St. Peter's Church and insulted Father Delorme.
American, who was in the pulpit. The thugs who were waiting on the they tried to break down the church door and overwhelmed insults were hurled at the faithful as they left the service. They spread then through the city and went to shout and utter threats death beneath the windows of Catholic residents. The auto-Tités didn't move all evening.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 449

+
ee

One man stood out above all for his odious brutality.
which is not completely forgotten, although, after having Having gone through so much shame, we must have been a little jaded.
I named Winckam, who violated the home of the poor nuns.

Rarely, perhaps, has justice been more brazen outraged. The law here was clear, indisputable. The maihis house located at number 14 on Rue de la Lune, had been given, in 1693, by Ms. Louvet, widow of Robert Louvet, sal-ordinary priest of the King, at the Institute for the daughters of the chapel rite, in order to establish a school there, provided that those which served the school and would fulfill certain commitments, would have certain prayers said, morning and evening. To these prayers, M^{me} Louvet, in his will, had asked that the De profundis be added.

It was therefore a true reciprocal contract.
The fulfillment of the conditions was closely linked to the ownership of the building. It was necessary to either accept and fulfill the commitments, or give up the house. Ima-

Get ready, indeed, the academy is seizing the money
Mr. Monthyonet not distributing the prizes to which He allocated that money.

Herold himself said that nothing was wrong
nefrayait, had recoiled from the blatant illegality.
In its session of June 16, 1879, the advisory committee of the Seine prefecture, composed of Messrs. Cléry, of Chegoïn, Dombey, Baupré, Durier, Fournier, Lacan, Le Berquier, Rigault, Templier, Beaumé, Maurice Picard and Ardiot, secretary, based on what the obligation imposed on the sisters to recite certain prayers to "their poor little schoolgirls" was incompatible with the secularization of schools, declared secularization illegalscabies and dangerous (1).

(1) Gazette des tribunaux of October 7, 1882, p. 970.

450 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

He said:

"Considering, moreover, and in abundance, that the execution-tion of the aforementioned clause, very regular, and very easy in an establishment run by the Sisters, would be absolutely incompatible with the system of a coramunal school, or-green to all children in the same neighborhood, regardless of their financial situation and their religious beliefs.

Floquet came; some money was probably distributed.
and, sadly, the same men, with few ex-reception nearby, who had declared the measure unjust
On June 46, 1879, they declared it just 3 years later. On the 43rd March 1882, the advisory committee, composed of Messrs. Tem-to fold, Corbelet, Bétolaud, Carré, Cléry, de Chégoïn, Beaupré, du Buit, Durier, Fournier, Le Berquier, Lioutown, Rigault, Beaumé, Maurice Picard and Le Coaren, with Mr. Du Buit as rapporteur, and Mr. Du Buit as president Mr. Templier, acting as secretary, Le Coaren issued an opinion favorable to the prefect's claims.

This prostitution of this sacred thing, which Ton Named after the law, it is one of the most painful spectacles of the present.

It remained to implement this strange decision.
The mayor of the 2nd arrondissement, Mr. Carcenac, gave his...

mission, so as not to become complicit in such a crime misdeed. Winckam offered himself for the repugnant task.
to all. On September 27, 1882, accompanied by the too fa-Dulac, he picked the locks on the doors which resisted for a while-for five-quarters of an hour, and despite the protests courageous of Mr. Lefébure, he forced his way into 1 building and expelled the Sisters from the school that belonged to themheld.

The whole street, in a frenzy, booed the wretch who, just moments before Crimson, sometimes pale, he seemed, despite his cynicism, to be ashamed of himself; freethinkers too
They hurled insults at him. It was the first times, in fact, that force was used against the Sisters of charity, the first time also that a citizen has taken charge of

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 451

voluntarily took on a task that the po- agents
they performed it only reluctantly and with apologies.
speaking aloud about the orders received.

Therefore, the astonishment was profound when, at the meeting for the consistorial elections, in February 1883, Winckam dared to come and boast of his evil deed, recounted his exploits in the style of a hernia repairman and was appointed a member of the consistory along with MM. Mirabaud and Steiner-Dolfus.

This election was harshly criticized by Protestants.
foreigners. No doubt, one understands the desire to sell the animating force that drives certain spiteful beings in minor-rites that were once oppressed; but is it not It's cowardly to attack women, nuns of Saint Vincent de Paul who have never done anything but Well, everywhere they've been? Let a party help itself.
men like Winckam, even if it meant putting them back in the saddle.
following a few funds to go and hide their shame at The foreigner, that's understandable; but to let in a door-picker in a consistory, now that's what surpasses the imagination and gives an idea of the degree where French Protestantism fell from it.

Everywhere, the Protestants abused force, which their gave their alliance with the Jews, to outrage the Catholics in their most cherished beliefs. A Mor-In Nac, a small town in the Charente region, one of them dared, in 1882, something that had not yet been dared; he persecuted in death to those who did not think like him; he had the sad honor to precede those who, a few months later Later, they were supposed to break the crosses in the cemeteries.

This episode is worth recounting at some length, because it shows what, deep down, the feelings of these men who cry out so loudly that their fathers were persecuted, In the past. If these fathers had been the strongest, they would have been certainly more cruel oppressors than the Catholics.

Here is the account of the facts, according to a document from that time.

Tna -

452 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

which is not lacking in drama or color in its voluntary sobriety.

Mornac has two cemeteries: the Catholic cemetery, which is, by virtue of authentic deeds, the particular property-the Fabrique churchyard, and the Protestant cemetery, which is the communal property. The two were separated only by a hedge and a ditch located on the Catholic cemetery, of which They were consequently the property.

Things had been this way since 1807, and there was no difficulty had never presented herself. But the Mayor of Mornac has wanted to change all of that, and on June 9, 1882, relying on a new law, he issued a decree by which he declared combined the two cemeteries; at the same time, he declared that The burials would now only take place one after the other. of the others, "with the exception, however," the decree stated, of those who would have acquired concessions.

This seemed to be a clear recognition of the right, for the Islands Catholics who own burial plots, to be buried in their cemetery? Well, no! despite the terms of his The mayor, having been arrested, initially prevented the burial of a child. in the Catholic cemetery, where the parents had a transfer; the cemetery gate remained closed when the priest who was accompanying the coffin introduced himself.

The mayor stood there, assisted by the rural constable, who declared that, by virtue of his decree, no one would enter. However—

At least, faced with the clamor of the crowd, the mayor had to give in:
He issued a formal complaint against the priest, but the burial took place without incident new incident.

However, a few days later, things were not supposed to not to happen so quietly. On September 10, another A child died in the commune of L'Eguille. The father had He had lost his wife a few months earlier; she was buried in the Catholic cemetery of Mornac, and a place had was reserved next to hers. On the 11th, the father obtained, and the con-transfer of the Mornac factory, and the burial permit from the mayor of L'Eguille. At the same time, a dispatch from the
The sub-prefecture of Marennes authorized the transport of the body.
from Eguille to Mornac.

The mayor of Mornac refused to allow the body into the Catholic cemetery and ordered the grave to be filled in which had been prepared by the father. The latter, aided by Two of his friends then re-dug the pit, despite orders.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 453

from the mayor, and asked the priest to come and bury the child.
Whereupon, the said mayor sent a requisition order to The customs lieutenant had the pit filled in again, and waited at the entrance to the cemetery, wearing his scarf, assisted from his deputy, the game warden and the customs officers having
The bayonet fixed to the end of the rifle, the arrival of the procession.

The parish priest of Mornac soon appeared with the body, and followed by the entire Catholic population. The mayor stepped forward towards him, saying: "Father, you will not enter
"No!" and, suiting the action to the word, he put his hands on the priest's chest to repel him.

The crowd, fearing that their priest would be brutalized, had a forward movement. The customs officers wanted to oppose it by crossing rifles, and there, a scene of disorder and scanning—
The cross was thrown to the ground, the coffin was rushed under the feet of the onlookers, and the father fell from—up, wanting to protect him; the crowd, in a state of high agitation, overturned one of the customs officers. Then, the priest was pushed into the cemetery, where he proceeded with the burial, after the grave had been at a new trench dug by the child's father, under the watchful eyes of the entire population.

Following this scandal, there was audacity to prosecute to the unfortunate culprits of having wanted to bury their child. A sixteen-year-old boy was included in the pursuit |

Before the court in Marennes, the prosecutor of the Republic, Mr. Vivien, who above all wanted to obtain a condemnation to which Freemasonry of Paris cared a great deal, had a brilliant idea: he-NACA, the witnesses, to have them arrested if they testified in favor of the accused.

Despite a talented lawyer, Mr. Querenet, the accused, the material offense having been proven, were condemned born to sentences ranging from fifteen to ten days in prison.

Have you read The Tears of Pineton de Chambrun? This book, admired excessively by Michelet, is moving and More than one passage made us cry in the past over fate French Protestants. If Pineton had been the master,

454. THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

would probably have acted like the mayor of Mornac and thrown in the mud the coffin of those who were not of his commune.

&
+ »

|

In the South, in particular, the Protestants were Outrageous. In Montauban, they held the majority. in the city council although they do not represent in the city that one-ninth of the population; they pro-. they set off to go and crochet at the Villebourbon school which belonged to the Brothers; they removed the crucifix of schools.

In Nîmes, they began by banning trials sions, then, in July 14882, they tore down the crucifix placed in a room of the hospice recently inaugurated.

A touching scene took place.

All the sick people who could stand up... They accompanied the crucifix, which the weeping sisters... they carried in procession into a small chapel, while the administrators sneered and blasphemedwere. The patients unanimously refused to lie down in the new room.

When the day of punishment arrives for the middle-
The norm that allows such acts, you will hear these men, so crude in success, so flat when the Their luck has turned, they've started bleating their speeches again on tolerance.

Isn't it interesting, in any case, sadly interesting-
It is true, it is frustrating to see the Protestants, who have Starting by hating the Church, to come to hate Christ.
to overturn his image everywhere, to forbid that one teach the children his name?

However painful it may be in our eyes, this evolution
Wen is no less logical. The current era has, from

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 455

less so, this advantage of dispelling all ambiguities, to bring to fruition all that is germinating deep within things. Protestantism goes where it was meant to go, it finds the goal he had to find by following the path he had taken; he seals his alliance with the Jew in denial of the Cross, in this spittle thrown in the face of the Divine Master, which was the act of initiation in Freemasonry-Templar order, ancestor and source of Freemasonry-today's nonsense

+
e

To avoid ignoring Ause, let's quote the se-Secretary General of the Prefecture, Protestant.

There are others, but we want to be afu-below of the truth.

*
se

In the Cotgs-pu-Norp, Protestantism did not pre-feel that in the form of Anglo-Saxon infiltration, especially on the coastal part of the department.

Morlaix is assigned a pastor named Juikins.

This character is of English origin and, without power
To say so, I don't believe he is naturalized.

Trémel also has a Huguenot pastor of the highest order.
odious, Mr. Lecoat, head of the evangelizing mission Breton lique, agent of the Lon- Bible Society
dress. | |

This sorry character makes common cause with the radicals in the region, and he writes in the Democrat, official record of defamation against priests,
in the Côtes-du-Nord department.

Lecoat is from that country. They say so, but I don't
I don't know exactly to what extent that's true, that its
A family in need would have entrusted him, at a very young age, to...
English Protestants; these finding in the child of ex-

456 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

These provisions would have given him instruction-tion quite carefully and directed with a view to action on the working-class and Breton-speaking environment.

Lecoat speaks and writes Breton well, composed in prose and verse, which constitutes a superiority in the land of the Bards; he is a surveyor and instructor tutor, and this gives him a certain advantage over the rural people.

He receives money from the English and makes no secret of it.

His newspaper, Le Trémelois, mentions the names of an-Glas of all his benefactors.

Mr. Le Corfec, of Breton Independence, from Saint-Brieuc, discovered and published the exact figure of the sub-annual grant awarded to Trémel by the Bi- Company
blique (24,000 fr.). |

Protestant propaganda is primarily promoted by the growing disorganization of the Breton-speaking community, the work of a very anti-Breton administration to all the degrees.

Pastor Lecoat has an extremely clear conscience.

large. And his coreligionists themselves consider him very severely.

We will, moreover, give an idea of what it is the individual.

A few months ago, I conducted an investigation across the France, to obtain the information contained in this chapter.

A letter I addressed to someone from Trémel, where Lecoat lives, was delivered to him by the postman. following an error that was not clearly explained.

A questionnaire was attached to this letter.

Do you know what Lecoat did?

He copied both the letter and the questionnaire, then he published in the newspaper Le Démocrate de Lannion.

In turn, Signal, then Siècle, seized it insulting me like louts.

And the document circulated widely in the Protestant press. from independent of Cambrai to the Petite

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 457

Gironde, passing through Petit Manceau, and through a multitude of other sheets of more or less good faith doubtful.

The Protestant newspapers of Switzerland and England They seized it, and everywhere I was dragged through the mud with an austerity and gravity quite typical of Hugh-note.

However, the corrections came thick and fast. hail, and these good slanderers had to admit that they had gone astray.

Because the letter and questionnaire were copied and sent to These newspapers, amplified by the hideous Lecoat, had been published. by himself.

This wretch had simply committed a forgery so that it would be easier to slander me.

Thus, he had not simply copied a letter and a questionnaire, which had been given to him under the guise of... sealed envelope, due to a mistake by the postman; he had added to the letter, and especially to the questionnaire, this question, with the aim of damaging my reputation:

"Do you know of any facts concerning Protestants?"
nature to compromise them or to incite them against them.
Public opinion?

If I had asked this question to my correspondents,
I would have been an infamous, ignoble, vile being, not even di-
It's a shame to make a low-level spy.

Lecoat believed he had enough aptitude to be
All of that. And he wrote the entire sentence while I was reading it.
attributing paternity!

If Lecoat wants to sue me, I will prove it.
these facts.

It doesn't matter, the Lecoat is clean. Do you see this protesting, this man of austere religion; you see this pastor, this minister of a church, who violates secrecy letters, and what's more, revealing this secret to the public by adding a fake one!

Ah! How I understand that the inventors of the pro-
Testamentary practices have abolished confession.

26

458. THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

Luther and Calvin were familiar with the world of pastors.
And they knew they were capable of exploiting any confession.
of all the most serious secrets.

It would be fun, indeed, if rascals like Lecoat confessed the faithful!

I'm eager to move on to another department, to unless the reader is keen to know that the prefect of Côtes-du-Nord, Mr. de Luze is Protestant, and belongs to a Huguenot family from the south, from Bordeaux, pa-would he.

B
e #

In the Cantar, I will not quote you, as a Protestant, that Mr. Savre, departmental professor of agriculture.

There is also Mr. Boudet, sub-prefect of Saint-Flour who is Protestant; but I dare not give him to you; he is a single and returning, and I wouldn't want to make him of the pain.

As for Pastor Boret-Brun, from Aurillac, it is said that he is Swiss and not naturalized.

+
es

The Vaucluse department, like the Gard, four-a thousand Huguenots and truly for these regions, it was there is no merit in pointing them out.

11. Simply stamping the ground with your foot is enough to make it to get out of the Protestants.

Protestants, Messrs. Boissières, prosecutor of the Republic church in Avignon; Coulondre, judge; Caladou, councilor of the prefecture; Marchand, academic inspector; Gund Théophile, administrator of the Avi- hospices gnon; Ernest Verdet, president of the Chamber of Commerce merce, who, moreover, replaced his cousin, Mr. Verdet Gabriel, whose son, Verdet Théodore, was substitute-Tut in court!

Let us also mention Mr. Bernard Abel, deputy for Apt; Alric,

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 459

Justice of the Peace for the southern canton of Avignon; Fayan, conductor-head of bridges and roads; Jac, receiver of the registration office registration.

Note that it would be easy for me to list other names of Protestant civil servants in all departments.

Not again, I don't want that. I'm content. to establish that they have invaded us, that they are, in proportion-tion, much more numerous than the Catholics.

I am not engaging in denunciation, either said once again, it is a social study on the peril

Protestant.

I repeat, I have no grievance against any of these functions. Huguenot tionaries; I simply prove com- well they are favored by those in power at the expense of Catholics, in a supposedly religionless country of the State.

And I stop my list when I think I have convinced the reader that this invasion, this danger Protestantism is not a myth.

*
ee

I will only mention Havte-Loire for the record.

There, I'll leave the Huguenot bigwigs in peace. to tell you that several teachers at the Lycée, many schoolteachers and tabacconist postmasters are Protestants.

They are the protégés of a former general councillor Protestant, president of the departmental commission, who has just been blackballed, much to the delight of the true fans liberals of the department.

+
++

The Secretary-General of the Prefecture of Nièvre, Mr. Steck is a Protestant. The Masonic lodge of Nevers was founded by a

430 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST.

David Lévy, a Jew, and a Protestant, named Bernard

Another Protestant, Mr. Nadeff, was a court clerk. Commerce.

He is a very cantankerous gentleman, and much more in-Terrified, which is interesting.

s

In Havre-Garonne, the number of civil servants
Protestants are very respectable.

But what's the point of listing them? It will suffice to indicate the most Highest placed above all others, the one who has the upper hand over the department, the Protestant Viguié, prefect of Haute-Garonne and brother of Mr. Viguié of the Paris police.

*
* k

In Montdidier, in the Souxs, there is a Huguenot lawyer-not who aims to be mayor; some time ago, he was led to believe that two cherubs sculpted on the facade of the new hotel
The city was filled with angels, and he moved heaven and earth to Should we break their wings?

We laughed so hard! The sectarian coldness is no less dangerous.

This lawyer must know Mr. Ausset, consoles, quite well.
at the Court of Amiens and son of a Protestant pastor, thus that Mr. Lefébure, sub-prefect of Montdidier.

| *
ee

In Havts-Marne, I don't see the need for to report other Protestant officials than the pre-fet, Mr. Bougouin.

Test at the head of the department; it's more valuable to knowing that if there were twenty small Huguenot officials.

* +

I will refrain from publishing the names of all the functions-
Protestant brothers of the Droms.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST ` 464

There are no fewer than a hundred of them, and in the jobs more important.

Such as: Messrs. Maurice Faure; Blanc, deputies; Combier, treasurer-general; Chalamet, mayor of Valence; Huguenel, commander of the sapper battalion-firefighters; Verdier, prison director; Viazac, administrator of the Hospice; Roche, president of the tri-civil bureau, etc., etc., it's raining.

One senator, two members of parliament, many directors of schools, two journalists attached to republican newspapers important clerics, etc., etc. |

By the way, I'd like to say that on many functions Huguenot tionaries, it would be easy for me to publish unpleasant stories that would put them in a co-furious era and which would have for the author of this book the advantage of ensuring it a very big success in bookstores.

I find it repugnant to hurl insults or engage in... scandal.

It's too easy, really.

The Protestant Peril is not a collection of defamation tion; it is a sincere, loyal work, based on facts, based on real-life, serious and impartial documents.

I hope the Protestant organizations will be grateful to me. of this loyalty, this propriety, and that in their newspapers will offer them courteous criticism.

Especially since I make it my duty not to exaggerating the truth.

Thus, in the Cuarentss, Protestants are named breux, notably in Pons, Saint-Bonnet and Matha.

I would miss my point by listing all the functions-nares, each one well aware that this department, like The Gard region is a haven for Huguenots.

26°

462 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

Nothing seems more natural than the following functions: reformed men are numerous there.

Therefore, I will only publish the small menu, two or only three.

Dr. Chevalier, general councillor, the deputy of La Rochelle, Mr. Charruyer, are Protestants.

The latter replaced Mr. Delmas, also protestant that much, which is an indication of their strength in that radius.

The Maritime Prefect is married to a Protestant; he replaced Admiral Puech, also a Protestant.

Finally, Senators Barbedette and Calvet passed for Protestants.

A defrocked priest, named Bonhomme – a villain Good man – insults the church he served, like a The lackey insults and slanders his masters who have just... to expel him for infidelity, in Hugue- conferences notes that he organizes with Pastor Robert, from Pons.

He was a priest in the vicinity of Pons, in Saint-Palais de Philin and Carmelite missionary in Brazil. He had, well at Wrong, no doubt, is the reputation of taking the shortest steps before to celebrate Mass. He is married and the father of three children.

He is always looking for corpses, like the hyenas.

And he strives to have it witnessed that such or Tel expressed the wish to be buried by Mr. Bon-man.

The incident occurred near Saint-Palais de Philin.

Pastor Robert is involved in the same trade. In the month In August 1897, an old woman named Renou was approached by Protestants, affixes a cross to the bottom of a paper where she pledged to be buried by the step-author.

A few months later, she retracted her commitment. Then she dies.

The curt is called,

The funeral ceremony took place without incident.

But... Pastor Robert had been warned!

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 463

Fl hopped on his bicycle... and he arrived full of projets and anxieties, & Neuillac.

After being briefed on the matter, he prepared himself sent to the widow Renou's son, seemed to reproach him-dear to his conduct, in such amiable terms (?) that the
The door was shown to him more or less forcefully!

Isn't this pastor odious enough?

Finally, another defrocked priest, Corneloup, lives in Pons.

He was an Oblate of Mary Immaculate, and made at-Today, like Bonhomme, protest conferences aunts.

They both have the title of evangelists.

*
++

In Corsica, Mr. Mathivet, sub-prefect of Calvi, is protesting.

THE

*
++

Among other Huguenot officials, we should mention Mr. Azui-

Lora, a recently naturalized Spaniard and advisor to Savors prefecture.

Se

In Haure-Savors, we should note the chief engineer,
Mr. Schoendoerffer, convinced Protestant.

There was still recently a sub-prefect named Huguenot, Mr. Léon Leleux, son of a Genevan painter, pro-
The late Le Royer and André Lebon.

Mr. Leleux has been appointed to the office of Mr. Ch. Blanc, Prefect of Police in Paris.

Finally, a Huguenot journalist, editor at Léman, and originally from Nîmes, named Raffin, has just left this department to take refuge in a pure- newspaper agricultural ment.

e
+ @

Although the Vennée was the scene of great battles in the early days of Protestantism, however apart

e
-

464 | THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

the canton of Chantonay, in the district of La In Roche-sur-Yon, the Protestant spirit is less militant throughout the department. Chantonay had provided, in the penultimate election (1893), a deputy Mr. Marchegay was a Protestant, but he failed in the election. of May 8, 1898.

However, since he is young, rich, and well-connected at court, he It is very possible that he will return to the water.

The Vendée region harbors some high-ranking pro-testers that I keep, for another time.

Let us simply mention the mayor of a municipality in the canton of Chantonay.

There are also many Protestants in the canton from Pouzauges.

e
@ e

In the Gironpe, Protestants are everywhere.

There are two kinds of Protestants in Bordeaux; the most A large part represents the wealthy class of Bordeaux, the Chartrons, major wine merchants.

Generally conservative and quite tolerant.

There is another category of Protestants represented by those who practice more or less, and some of whom—Some are types of invaders and hoarders: Conat; Messrs. Gounouilhou, father and son, Directors of the Petite Gironde and Gironde, opportune newspapers Nards are Protestants.

The son, despite his Protestantism, sings in the Catholic churches and the concerts organized there.

Mr. Trarieux, senator, converted to Protestantism for to marry a Protestant, Ms. Faure.

A few Huguenots, chosen at random:

MM. Valler, substitute in Bordeaux; Haffner, prosecutor General; AX., Court Counselor; Mamès, Director from the Higher School of Commerce; Stapier and Gebelin, professors at the Faculty of Arts.

Fly has another Jew, Walty, a professor at the same

P

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 463

faculty and a Hadamard, a Jew, professor at the faculty of sciences, and so many other Jews and Huguenots that one in He loses his memory!

Finally, Mr. Cazalet, president of the Federation of Gymnastics societies, is Protestant, as well as

Mr. Allegre, tax collector.

*

* x

In Vienng, the prefectural secretary general, Mr. T:igant-Geneste is Protestant, even bi—Mr. Lievre, former librarian of the city of Poitiers, pastor.

+

We have already said that we are less attached to raise Protestant civil servants in the departments areas where their coreligionists are numerous.

Their presence is logical; he is more curious, he tells us seems to show them well settled in the regions where Calvin's followers are reduced to just a few.

Thus, in Mayenne, there are not 60 Protestants. However, Mr. Denis, senator for this department, is protest-so much.

One out of every two senators in the Mayenne |...

That's not all, Mr. Bonhoure, a Protestant, is very-general paymaster.

In the Tary-get-Garonng, there is a swarm of protest-so much.

According to their own statistics, which are exaggerated, Protestants number barely 3100 out of 30000 souls in Montauban.

Throughout the entire department, they number barely 10,000 out of 200,000 inhabitants.

They considered Montauban as a fiefdom of their belonging, as well as certain municipalities where they they still have temples.

466 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

First, the rural parishes surrounding Montauban, then the center of Negrepelisse, and Saint-Antonin. In These centers, they sometimes try successfully to establish themselves as masters.

Due to deaths or changes made since a few years, and also following certain elections do a little research on this topic, the Protestants of Montaubans have decreased somewhat in admitted situations administrative.

However, in the prefecture, there is: a head of division Zion, MD, Jewish; a Protestant office manager; MY; two assistant chiefs, Messrs. Viguié and Meister; one Clerk of the Council, Mr. Garrisson.

In the committees appointed by the administration, The Protestants always try to sneak in in large numbers.

In prison, apart from the Protestant chaplain and the doctor, Mr. Lacaze, the schoolteacher, Mr. Lafont, are Protestants; Moreover, the head warden is Protestant and his wife would be from Cologne.

At the Tribunal, two out of three judges are Protestant. one of whom, Mr. Nicolas, is in charge of the investigation.

Of the two justices of the peace, one is Protestant, Mr. Viguié. as well as two alternates, Messrs. Père and Gardès.

To the governing boards of the boys' high school, 4 Protestant members; MM. Marty East, Bruston, Poujade; at the girls' high school, three, Messrs. Raspide, Marty and Wabnitz; at the teacher training college, two: Messrs. Monod and Nicolas; to the cantonal delegations, four: Messrs. Berges, Lagude, Capdepic and Marty.

At the Bank, two out of three censors and two administrators _ historians out of five. |

At the Catholic hospice, founded by Catholics, three Protestant administrators, MM. Capdepic, Bergès, and Langlade.

Mr. Bergès, the pharmacy inspector, was a Protestant.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 467

Protestant, the professor of agriculture, Mr. Dubreuilh.

At the horticulture commission, five Protestants, Messrs. Marty, Guiraud, Vidal, Bezy and Teyssier.

Five Protestants & the Viticulture Commission: Messrs. Moutet, Guiraud, Bun, Dubreuilh and Mialhe,

At the general council, the same disproportion exists, to the advantage Protestants; two out of twenty-four: Messrs. Foissac and Montrison.

At the city council, in a city where there is 27,000 Catholics and 3,000 Protestants, 14 councilors. They are Protestants, with the mayor at their head.

In the town hall offices, three Protestants, including the secretary general, Mr. Gaubel.

At the charity office, four: Messrs. Mieulet, Foissac, P. Larroque and Vidal.

In the library, two: MM. Capdepic and Guiraud.

The Protestant question in Montauban has long been... time, the counterpart to the Jewish question.

A tiny minority, but one that once possessed wealth, The Protestants claimed to be everything here and to to restore the supremacy they had in the 17th century.

These claims have stirred up hatred and protests. tions that have emerged, and, like the city, to the point of political view is divided into equal parts, the protests— These things can only be maintained with the Freemasons. and the freethinkers.

But on that side, there was revolt and a split; so that on several occasions, the Conservatives have taken up the power.

The question is, moreover, very complex and entirely... wedge and would require lengthy developments to be treated properly.

And what! you will say, in this Huguenot stronghold, there is no Not even a Protestant prefect?

No, but there is the sub-prefect of Moissac, Mr. Blachon.

468 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

e

The Mevrre—er—Mosezze is infested with Protestants, almost all Dreyfus supporters.

In terms of civil servants, let's note the sub-prefect Combes, son of the ineffable public education minister—republic and great protector of the Ré— candidacy Veillaud, director of Le Signal, in Saint-Jean d'Angély.

A judge in court goes by the Jewish name of Job.

Finally, the president of the Eclairteur Committee, newspaper Opportunist is Protestant and has been a naturalized French citizen since eight months.

+
: @ «+

The Tarn department is fairly evenly divided.

The Tarn has three senators; two, Messrs. Barbey and Bernard-Lavergne are Protestants.

Mr. Reverdin, Public Prosecutor in Albi,
Mr. Galup, judge, and Mr. Estrabaud, substitute judge at the trial...
The Albi cantonal authorities were said to be Protestants. It is said that a Mr. Com-Payré, a judge in Albi, was also a Protestant.

Mr. Jolibois, head of division at the Tarn Prefecture is the brother of the Protestant pastor of Albi.

There are many low-level Protestant civil servants
in the Tarn region, especially in the Castres district, thanks to Mr. Barbey.

*
* &

In the Mancug, we are identified as Protestants.
Mr. Osmont de Courtisigny, Public Prosecutor in Avranches, son of Mr. de Courtisigny, councilor to the Court of Caen and who married her cousin, M^{re} de Cour-Tisigny, also Protestant.

On occasion, he praises the Jews. Well-mannered, he He converses amiably and discusses easily, although dry-silence.

Let us also mention Mr. Crégut, children's inspector assisted.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 459

The actions of the Protestants are evident in Cherbourg, in particular, through relentless propaganda.

The English Methodists come from Jersey, and do genuine campaigns in this country, campaigns as much political as well as religious.

They have taken over several municipalities surrounding the city, a quarrying region where there are hundreds of workers Bretons.

'We listen to them in order to get help.

Here, as elsewhere, pro- Protestant pastors
They make radical ideas in politics.

Just recently, Pastor Braud presented to Lockroy, at the prefecture, delivered a speech in which He supported his policy!

+
e +

The Douss sees Protestant gravity flourish in the person of Mr. Pataille, advisor to the Court of Besancon.

The Izce-er-Vicains has the good fortune to possess as pro-
.testing Mr. Gros Claude (1), sub-prefect of Fougères;
His father was Swiss, it is said, and his mother Belgian.

He is a very insignificant boy; his great merit is to be the brother of Mr. Gros Claude, editor at P Echo of Paris (2). |

The president of the Fougères court is the nephew of Mr. Guieysse, former minister.

(1) Today in Gourdon.

(2) Mr. Gros Claude is an independent and patriotic Protestant.

Regarding the events in Madagascar, he is among those who consider that his coreligionists, by making "common cause" common with the enemies of France,/have the greatest difficulty @ their country as well as their cause." (See Le Figaro, (No. of March 22, 1897).

The nephew's religion is that of the uncle from whom one con-
Protestant ties were born.

Our Guieysse only became a PRE in Fougères due to its inadequacy.

+
"e

Mr. Roux, judge at the Marvejols court, in the Lozère is Protestant. It seems he's not the only one to this court; the president, Mr. Dautheville-Rolland, would be also Calvinist.

9
ee

If we pass through Maine-et-Loire, we will encounter-among others Protestants, Mr. Forquet of Dorne, First president of the Court of Appeal of Angers.

He lives very secluded.
Another magistrate, Mr. Jeanvrot, advisor to the Court is a member of the Grand Orient Council. He has just been decorated.

L
THE |

In Lot-et-Garonne, there are quite a few Protestants.
numerous in the cantons of Nérac, Tonneins and Cas-Telmoron.

Everywhere, they oppress Catholics.

In Tonneins, the processions were TERE ES by the actions led by a pastor, since 1880.

The pastor advocates secular schools and the 3,500 Huguet
The people who inhabit this region practice, as par-everything, anticlericalism against Catholics.

We go to mass, we are clerical; we go to the temple,
We are not clerical.

It is by this means that, throughout the Eee they are

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST AT 1

who became the masters: by dividing the Catholics with the help of the clerical spectrum.

In Clairac, where Protestants make up only a third of the population, the entire municipal council is protesting so much.

In Tonneins, where the Protestants are only the fifth... The quinième of the inhabitants, 17 councillors, including the mayor, out of 23 are Protestants.

The mayor of Tonneins, Mr. Galup, is also... general bailiff and straw man for the pastors.

Finally, in Tonneins, the newspaper correspondents: The Petite Gironde, Southwest France and the Désin, all three are Protestants.

| +
+. +

Mr. Roche, Public Prosecutor in Briançon, in the Havwres-Azpss and some high school teachers are Protestants.

Pee

In the Vosges, Mr. Moll, director of the postal service at Epinal is Protestant; it is said to be very closely linked with Scheurer-Kestner.

Protestants are relatively numerous in this 'department; that is no doubt why Messrs. the con-General seillers, Ledelin, Luny, Gautier, Bresson, etc. are Protestant or married to Protestant women.

The school inspector, Mr. Chaudey, I had to tell him-gnaler in the chapter: Protestants and the University is also part of the sect.

And I had nothing to do with Mr. Guérin's marriage. Prefect of the Vosges, with a Protestant woman!

The mayor of Epinal is Protestant, but tolerant, ex-a concept that confirms the rule.

L
++

In the Cots-p'Or, Protestants are few in number.

\

412 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

In Dijon, they had a temple built, in the hybrid and insipid style of Protestants, on a terrain that the sectarian municipality granted them, while it refused, at the creation of a Catholic parish, even legal recognition.

Dijon is grieved by one pastor, Arnal, and what's more, of his wife, an activist who distinguished herself in the attention for its advertisements displayed in the train cars and in train stations, in order to attract people to his sectarian organization, young girls travelling without protection.

La Nouvelle Bourgogne reported on these actions.

There is, strictly speaking, no daytime in Dijon. Protestants.

The Burgundian soil is somewhat resistant to everything these heretics, although it is covered with their successes—Danes, the Freemasons, Judeo-Opportunists.

It is for their use that the two bad ones are printed Newspapers: Le Progrès, written by a Protestant, Henri Maigne, and the Petit Bourguignon, whose editor—The radical leader had his child buried by the 'minister' Arnal.

2
se

The Pyrenees-Ormnals, without prejudice to some Huguenot officials have a pastor named Araud Achilles, originally from Languedoc, and a former priest—friar, alternately Lazarist and vicar of a parish

the area around Paris.

*
++

In the Inpre, Mr. Lem (1), prefect, is Protestant; Mr. de Beauregard often criticized him in L'Indépendant du Blanc, his abuses of power.

This is how he delayed sending the parts to the religious affairs administration, for repair from the church of Preuilly-la-Vilie.

(1) Brisson recently appointed him in the Channel.

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST 473

Let us add two other Protestants: Messrs. Barrell, pro-English teacher at the high school, and Girard, justice of the peace of Chateauroux.

+
* +.

9

The Ornz region has taken in few Protestants. They are confined in the cantons of Flers and Athis.

There are perhaps 700 or 800 of them, almost all farmers well-off.

Despite their small number, they have a great influence in municipalities and cantonal elections.

One of them, Mr. Vardon, is the mayor of Athis and con-district seiller.

The neighbouring commune, Sainte-Honorine-la-Chardonne of which all the councilors, except one, are Catholic, has He chose that one for mayor.

The Boucaes-pu-Ruone department is divided like the other departments from a Huguenot point of view.

But instead, for a change of pace, we will tell a story- A slightly amusing story.

Mr. Peyron is a general councillor for the canton of Saintes-Sea Marys.

His father owns a superb vineyard in the surrounding area. rons d'Arles.

He's a rabid Salvation Army member, always wearing the suit of the Salvation Army.

Mr. Peyron is so fanatical that, under the pretext of... converting to Protestantism, he employs people in his domain, ex-convicts and somewhat girls lightweight.

Rumors suggest he pays them less dear and that the catechumens of Mas de la Ville have not not such a well-established reputation for austerity as that of Brisson.

474 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

The first deputy mayor of Arles, Mr. Daumas, is! Protestant.

He is a hateful sectarian, hating Catholics and doing his best to harass them.

Let us add that Dr. Flaissières, mayor from Marseille is a Huguenot sympathizer. He took care was taken to place most of his coreligionists in the town hall. naires.

The Garp is teeming with reinforced Huguenots, and I am I had to prove it because the Huguenots of the Century and The Signal would dispute it, so bad are they. faith.

Three out of four senators were Protestant; Messrs. Cazot, Silhol and Desmons.

Three out of six Protestant deputies; Messrs. Delon-Sou-Beiran, Doumergue and Pastre.

Mr. Devèze, deputy for Alais, is a seminarian who... froqué.

The general council is predominantly Protestant.

The city council also: 23 Protestants out of 36 councillors, Mayor Reinaud and 3 out of 4 deputy mayors are Protestants.

Of all the departments, this is the one that understood the largest Protestant population.

There are approximately 118,480 ET in the Gard department. 420,130 Catholics, hence the proportion of 282 for a thousand, more than a quarter, but less than a third.

In Nîmes, all sworn doctors are protesters.
tants: MM. Dussaud; Bonnes, Cauvy.

In Uzès, D" Rancurel; Le Vigan, D" Puech.

Dr. Nègre, in charge of the vaccination service in Nîmes
The nation is Protestant.

There are a whole bunch of them.

In Alais, Mr. Dombre, substitute judge, the prosecutor of

THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST ATÒ

the Republic, Mr. de Forcrand, and Mr. Gauger, judge substitutes are Protestants, i.e., 3 out of 6 Protestants.
clerks comprising the court.

Here is the list of Protestant magistrates of the court
du Vigan:

Mr. Cavalier, judge; Yon, substitute judge; Lafont, judge substitute; Sauze, public prosecutor, or 4 out of 6 magistrates were Protestants.

MM. Salles, the clerk, Cambecedès and Vassas, clerks Clerks are also Protestants.

To conclude our discussion of this sub-prefecture, let us add that The district's road agent is Protestant, and quau bureau post et telegraphe a on note (August 1898) 40 Protestants out of 43 employees!

The Uzès court includes Messrs. Abram, ne d'ins-instruction, Jewish; Penchinat, judge, and Bonifas, prosecutor of the Republic, Protestants.

At the civil court of Nîmes, it is noted, at the pre-
First Chamber, Mr. Abauzit, Judge, Quai Fontaine,

No. 7, Mr. Tissier, investigating judge, 17 rue Séguier, two Protestants.

At the prosecutor's office, the Protestant Liénard, deputy prosecutor, rue Guizot, 9.

At the Court of Appeal of Nîmes, First Chamber, we Let us note the Protestants, Fernand, president, rue Char-Lemagne 27; Teulon, councillor, Lesplanade Square, 9;
de la Marche, councillor, rue Bernard Aton, 13; Galzin, Councillor, 2 rue Sainte-Félicité; Guibal, Councillor, avenue Feuchères, 9; i.e. 5 Protestants out of 9 members.

In the second chamber, we should mention the Protestants Cabrol, Cambon and Lavondès.

Messrs. Poulle, Dumény, Roger, justices of the peace, are protestators, as well as Messrs. Grill Léon and Laget, alternates of the justice of the peace.

The Nîmes Chamber of Commerce is thus com-
Question posed by: Mr. Causse, President; Mr. Benoit Germain, Secretary Treasurer; Francezon; Martel-Teulon; Thibal; La-Mouroux; Guérin; Roussel; Tur, members, all pro--

476 THE PROTESTANT CONQUEST

testants, that is to say that out of eleven members, we find These 9 Protestants...

The departmental hygiene committee comprises 8 protestators and 2 Catholics out of ten members. The doctors
